I have to say first that the Educational Association's resolution, although so stated, was not directed against laws prohibiting the proper teaching of scientific subjects, as the writer of the reply to my article assumes, but was directed specifically against anti-evolution legislation, as the ex cathedra remarks of Dr. W. E. Hogan clearly indicate. The Association knows, and Brother Bazzel should know, that no legislation has ever been, and never will be, enacted against the proper teaching of scientific subjects; but legislation against the teaching of evolution as a scientific subject, which it is not, will continue to be enacted, despite the objections of professed scholars and liberalistic preachers. I am in full agreement with Brother Bazzel in his opposition to legislation prohibiting the teaching of scientific subjects; but the possibility of such legislation is a hallucination of the brains of educational associations and professed scholars, who are in sympathy with the materialistic theory of evolution. However, when it comes to the enactment of laws prohibiting the teaching of evolution, I must part company with Brother Bazzel. If he wants his children taught the unscientific theory of evolution I have no objection, except in so far as my interest goes in the future destiny of his children; bnt I do object to my children being taught a theory which has made atheists of its proponents and wrecked the faith of scores of men and women. I also object to paying taxes to support schools wherein such unscientific and faith-wrecking instruction is given.

My brother engages himself in a labored argumentative effort to establish his contention that in the adoption of its resolution the Educational Association was not speaking officially for the whole church. I have to say that whether the Association intended to speak for the church or not the very name of the Association clothes it with the influence and power of Southern Methodism, and the resolution had the same effect upon the minds of the masses of the people as it would have had if the Association had had the intention of speaking for the church. The members of other denominations so understoood it, and the press of the nation so interpreted it. So far as the results are concerned, the Association might as well have intended to speak for the church, for the whole church has been irreparably hurt in the public mind by the action of the Association, and my heart grieves over the reproach which the Association has brought on my church —the church to which I have given my life and which I love.

When my friend uses the phrase, "Make it a felony to teach anything contrary to our literal sixday interpretation of Genesis," he should not have used quotation marks, since neither I nor any one else, so far as I recall, has said anything in this discussion about the "six-day interpretation of Genesis;" yet I challenge him to prove it otherwise than six days of twenty-four hours each. When he quotes, "The whole plan of salvation hinges on the Genesis account of the creation and fall of man," he locates the spot on which I stand with both feet, and stated the situation precisely. If the Genesis history (not account) of man's creation by the direct act of God, without the intervention of evolutionary processes, and the fall of man by sin, is not true, man does not need a Savior, the whole redemptive scheme is a fable of old women, and to speak of the atonement of Jesus on the cross is a hollow mockery.

Brother Bazzel should know that the chronology given in the King James' translation of the Bible is not a part of the divine revelation, being man's invention; and he should also know that the 6,000 years, about which he writes so volubly, is also man's estimate. Yet again I challenge him to prove that the time periods given by the chronologist do not approximate with at least some degree of accuracy the correct calculation of the years covering the interim between the creation and the present. If he can prove it otherwise than by mythical geological assumptions or mathematical jugglery, let him do so, and win for himself the applause and approval of the scientific world.

Brother Bazzell makes an enquiry, "Why not cease our raging against the theories and findings of science and teach our children the Bible is of divine origin and contains a revelation of God's will?" So far as I know, no one is raging against the theories and findings of science. If I am raging it is against an unproved and an unprovable theory, not of science, but of pseudo-science. I have no apology to offer for uot teaching my children that the Bible contains a revelation of God's will, and teaching them instead that the Bible is the revelation of God's will. I regret, too, to see my friend adopting the ambiguous phraseology of the modernist.

My brother writes learnedly about the nebular hypothesis, Einstein's theory of relativity, the eternal rocks, astronomy, and geology; but I would like to enquire if he is aware of the fact that recent discoveries by Christian scientists, who are interested in ascertaining the truth rather than accepting the unsubstantiated theories of so-called science, have altogether discredited the accuracy of the estimates of some geologists concerning the great age of the earth, and their ability to calculate the time priods of the earth's formation by rock strata? Professor George McCready Price, in a recent number of an American journal, gives an interesting report of his trip of exploration and research in Switzerland among the Alps. In all his travels he observed the geology of the country, noted the various strata of the earth's formation in the valleys and among the Alpine heights; and his observations confirmed his discoveries in other parts of the world, namely, that in no place are the fossiliferous strata arranged in the serial order in the geological works of the advocates of uniformism and evolution. Space forbids my citing the instances which he gives in proof of his contention or position that the arrangement of rock strata tells nothing concerning the age of the world, despite the contentions of atheistic geologists. No wonder, then, that Professor Price says that geological evolutionists have " a faith that is able to move mountains."

I am in perfect agreement with Brother Bazzell when he says, "I feel no apprehension in behalf of the Bible." No; the Bible does not merely "contain" the word of God, but is the word of God; and if it has stood the attacks of infidels and false scientists in the past, it will certainly survive the assaults of modernists and liberalistic preachers.

HOW WE PUT OVER THE ADVOCATE AT IUKA.

I gathered my people together on Sunday morning, March 27, and preached as forcefully and cogently as I could on "Religious Journalism."

First, I went into the history of journalism and showed them what a great and heroic role the press had played in the affairs of man. Then I showed them how indispensable the public press was to-day and what a mighty influence it exercised upon public opinion and how like a giant it stirred up great peoples to undertake the impossible and to drive through to victory. Then I told them something about the material prosperity of secular journalism. I mentioned to them something about the value of a newspaper or magazine as an investment. I pointed out to them how G. A. Munsey had made over $40,000,000 in journalism.

Then with this presentation, this question was asked them:

"Why is it, I ask you, that secular journalism is such a giant, reaching out to the ends of the earth, while religious journalism is but a babe stunted in growth, suffering from anemia and malnutrition, as well as infantile paralysis? Why doesn't our religious press play the great role in the church, that the secular press does in the nation?"

Then I went ahead and tried to show them their duty as regards our own Conference paper; at the close of the messsage subscription slips were passed out and many signed up. This was followed by a personal canvass by the pastor, with the result fifty-one were tied up to our church publication.

By following practically the same methods last year, fifty subscribers were secured, which is the largest number that we have had for some years.

It takes hard, strenuous work to put the Advocate over, but it can be done if the sponsor of the paper has a genuine belief in the mission of the church press and is willing to back up his conviction with strenuous labor.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DAY IN THE GREENVILLE DISTRICT.

As District Superintendent, I have sent out literature and endeavored to keep the matter of Sunday School Day before the schools of the district. At present there are thirty-eight active schools in the district, and to date twenty-eight of these schools have ordered and had sent to them Sunday School Day programs. We are confidently expecting the order from the other ten schools in the near future. Several of the schools that have not ordered the programs always observe the day, and will, I am sure, do so this year. We are making an effort to have the district be one hundred per cent in the observance of Sunday School Day. During the month of April is usually the best time to observe this day. The month of May is usually occupied by public school exercises, and in June every one relaxes and scatters. However, each church will have to be governed by local conditions. Remember this, that you have not fully observed the day until the offering has been sent to H. P. Lewis, treasurer of the Board, at Ruleville. When the program has been rendered and the offering taken and sent to the treasurer, that school has covered one point in the program of work. The day fittingly observed will do much to strengthen the Sunday school work in the local church.

R. G. LORD,
Greenville District Superintendent.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DAY IN THE COLUMBUS DISTRICT.

Dear Advocate: Brother R. H. B. Gladney asked me as our Conference Superintendent of Sunday School Work to report to your paper for publication names of Sunday schools that had ordered Sunday School Day programs from me. Here is the list: Ackerman, Weir, Artesia, Sheaffers, Brooksville, Columbus, First Church; High Point, Center Ridge, Owen Chapel, Macedonia, Kosciusko, Prairie; Salem, Macon circuit; Centerpoint, Soule's Chapel, Pope's Chapel, McCool, Shuqualak, Cooksville, Centerhill, West Point; Salem, Chester circuit.

With ninety churches in the Columbus District, you see we are a long way from 100 per cent in the observance of Sunday School Day. I wish that each superintendent would order his programs now—I mean at once. As District Superintendent, I want to report at our district conference, which convenes the 19th of April, that every school in this district has ordered programs. Will each pastor in this district write me at once, giving list of churches that have a Sunday school?

C. A. NORTHINGTON,
District Superintendent, Columbus District.

WHITWORTH AS A JUNIOR COLLEGE.

Dear Brother Carley: I want to approve the action of the trustees and the president of Whitworth College in taking temporary rating as a standard Junior College. The key word in education to-day is "standard," whether it refers to high schools, colleges, or universities. Whatever school announces to the world that the work done therein meets the requirements of the standardizing agencies, will have no difficulty in filling its class rooms with students.

I believe that Whitworth is strategically situated in location, history, and equipment to render large service to the church as a junior college. One of the amazing developments in the field of education in the last few years has been the increase in the number of such institutions. I am fairly well acquainted with a number of them, and none that I know can be made so efficient as Whitworth can. None have the equipment, few have the location, and almost none of them have the long and honorable history that this institution can offer to the world. There is no reason that I know why we cannot make Whitworth the leading junior college of the South.

Let that fact once be known and Whitworth will take the place among junior colleges now occupied by Randolph-Macon and others of that type among senior institutions. Nothing, they say, succeeds like success. Not only will students come in ever-increasing numbers, but men will take pride in endowing a growing and popular school much more readily than one struggling for its very existence.

The beauty of the situation, as I see it, is that we may go in any direction. Having established the school on a firm foundation as a standard institution, we may make it the leader in that field of service, we may make it a part of a State-wide correlated system of Methodist colleges, or we may make it what all of us have desired to see, namely, a standard senior college efficiently serving the Methodism of the Mississippi Conference in the development of Christian womanhood.

Yours for a greater Whitworth,

J. B. CAIN.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Brookhaven District Conference will meet at Wesson, Miss., April 20-22. Rev. E. H. Cooley, pastor of McComb, La Branch Street, will preach the opening sermon at 7:30 p. m., April 20. The members of the conference are urged to be present at this opening service. The pastors are requested to send the names of their delegates to me and to Rev. A. S. Oliver. Please attend to this at once.

The following committees have been appointed:

License to Preach—C. W. Crisler, E. H. Cooley, J. E. J. Ferguson.

Admission—P. D. Hardin, T. B. Cottrell, H. S. Westbrook.

Orders—J. M. Lewis, T. W. Ainsworth, H. L. Norton.

Local Preachers—C. C. Evans, J. T. Abney, L. J. Snelgrove.

Other committees will be announced at the opening of the conference. Let us pray earnestly for the manifestation of the presence of the Holy Spirit in all of our deliberations, and in the preaching of the Gospel. May it be a season of spiritual blessing to all who may attend.

W. H. LEWIS, P. E.

COAHOMA CHURCH DEDICATION POSTPONED.

For unavoidable reasons, the church dedication and home-coming service at Coahoma has been indefinitely postponed. Announcement of these services will be made later.

SOME RAMBLINGS ON ROOMS.

By Mrs. Laura M. White.

How one's room is an index to one's nature! From the bare orderly system of the military man to "my lady's" boudoir, a close observer can sit in a room and pretty nearly sum up the essential qualities of mind and heart that belong to its daily occupant.

Go with me into this room. You at once feel at ease and welcome. There is no evidence of carelessness, yet no such painful cleanlinesss and orderliness that you become conscious of the possibility of causing any disarrangement of fixed ideas. The pictures upon the walls are few, but each is individual, whether a bit of landscape or a photograph, or perhaps some engraving of spirit and beauty. They are not all somber, nor are they all brilliant in tone—they are restful and give one something to think about. There by the window, with an easily adjustable reading lamp, is the reading table, with writing materials just in reach. Ah, what are the books? After all, the surest index to character is to be found in what one really reads. Yes, there is the Bible, with some reference books; there are many small copies of various classics, suitable for use in the school-room. Then our friend must be a teacher, and she occupies much time with preparation for her work. She evidently teaches something by way of English; and she is not bound entirely by prescribed lines in her manner of handling her subject. You can judge this by the variety of "helps" she uses. There is a well-worn copy of Shakespeare's plays in one volume—she must look to this master a great deal. And oh, here is "Miss Minerva;" and, will you believe it, also a copy of "Old-fashioned Girl?" Then she knows real humor and pathos when she meets them, and the sweetness of real girlhood when she meets it—she'll do to trust youngsters to.

Somehow she has managed to place her chairs at such an angle that they invite one to sit; and the couch looks as if one might really rest if tired. The toilet articles are not many or "fixy," but dainty and tasteful and of real use for neatness and sweetness. You can respect a woman who understands for what toilet articles are really designed.

Say, this is a comfortable room, one that bids you linger awhile, with no fear that you may be intruding; one that bids you come again and makes you long to be a welcome visitor.

I once visited the rooms of a mother and daughter, with the width of the hall between, and no words were needed to tell me the story of that home.

The daughter, a girl of seventeen, had a large, airy room, with an eastern exposure, the morning sun coming each day to call her afresh to life's joys. The walls were covered with a wonderfully lovely Dresden paper, with the daintiest of chintz and dotted swiss hangings. The brass bed and bird's eye maple dressing table, with all its exquisite appurtenances for the toilet, bespoke petted and exacting youth, while blue and white rugs on the polished floor appealed to the sense of beauty and comfort. Everything was in beautiful order, and the books on the writing table cried aloud of the age of romance and the eager seeking for the fulfillment of self-centered dreams.

Across the hall the other room had but one window, looking toward the northwest, and the papering was distinctly nondescript in pattern and color. The furniture was of walnut, too old to look bright and fresh, too modern to suggest the heirloom. There was one medium-sized ingrain rug upon the floor, which had long since forgotten its original color or pattern. The open grate was surmounted by a mantel, on which rested many evidences that the children of the family made mother's room a place to leave whatever might be in their hands on entering there. In one corner by the fire, under a wall light, was a low rocking-chair, by which there stood a darning basket, overflowing with stockings of every size and color, from the socks of the "littlest one" to the pale silken ones of the seventeen-year-old daughter. On a table on the other side of the chair there rested a worn Bible and the daily paper, but no other book or magazine. A child's chair stood just by the rocking-chair, and the rug underneath was worn almost threadbare. On the bureau, one of the fashion that had little brackets on either side of the mirror, there were two photographs, one of a man garbed in the style of twenty years back, while the other was of a girl, seemingly in her first real pretty dress. There were no pictures on the walls, and the only suggestion of brightness and color came from a calendar near the table, carrying verses from the Bible and scenes from the life of Jesus. There was neither dirt nor trash upon the floor; only bareness was proclaimed from every line of wall and furniture; and there was an indefinable air about the room that told you the occupant had to carry unaided the burden of a family—to eke out with small economies a pittance of an income.

"Well, wait, don't open it until we get to mother's room; she'll want to see it, too."

It is a box of flowers that the daughter of the house had just received, and she is speaking to two chums who are calling. So they all proceed to "Mothers room."

This is a big room with three large windows. Between two of these there stands a very old-fashioned dressing table, with quiet, but dainty, belongings upon it. An inviting open fireplace gives forth warmth and cheer from a wood-fire. On one side of the fire there stands a roomy couch, so placed that it may have both the warmth and the light from the third window; and there hangs over this couch a softly-shaded light, so that the one who rests there may read, and at the foot is thrown a wonderful thing of beauty in an Indian blanket. Several comfortable chairs about the room bid you welcome, while a table in front of the couch holds a small Bible, with other books and magazines, also a small work basket containing a piece of embroidery and some darning utensils. About the floor are warm, soft-colored rugs, deep and velvety, while the windows are hung with plain, but exquisitely fresh, scrim curtains.

You will note that two of the chairs are drawn up quite close to the couch, where they seem to have the habit of staying, and on the couch are numbers of soft "comfy" pillows. Back of the couch there hangs a bit of landscape showing the summer sun upon a field of ripening wheat, and across on the other wall there is a copy of Millet's group, with grandmother teaching the child to knit. Some photographs of historic buildings are the only other pictures. Standing by the open fire is a wonderful old brass fire-set, evidently an heirloom of priceless value; and on the other side of the couch is a table with the tea service.

Just to look into this room you would expect to find lying upon that couch the tender face, with a bit of drawn expression between the eyes, indicating controlled suffering; but oh. such a smile upon the lips and in those eyes! It is a face that sheds radiance upon all about her, and you would understand at once why the daughter's first thought was to take all things at once to "Mother's room" to share with that companion the very first of every pleasure; you would know that to this couch were brought all the joys, all the problems, of both sons and daughters, to meet counsel and prayer, and that nothing but love was allowed to enter there; while from that spot the family life drew its inspiration.

ONE IN EIGHT.

In the alley there was daily strife. Seven or eight nationalities were trying to live together without having learned how. Silent contempt and suspicion changed often to noisy beratings, for they could no more comprehend each other's viewpoints than they could pronounce each other's names.

Now there was a kindergarten in this alley. Every morning the large, cheerful room was crowded with the little sons and daughters of this heterogeneous population, but here discord was reduced to a minimum. The children played and sang together like one happy family. They smiled ingratiatingly at one another. They helped each other in their tasks, showing genuine sympathy when one met with a difficulty. They learned each other's names, too. It was really hard to be cross. To begin with, Miss Roberts didn't like it. Then there were so many lovely flowers, and the little goldfishes were so beautiful as they scudded about in the sparkling water. Best of all, there were so many wonderful things to do.

And were all the little children of the alley here? Alas, no. Had the parents objected to sending them, or didn't the children want to go? Most of the parents wanted very much to send them, and some of the children cried to go, but —there wasn't room. In the United States only one child in eight may go to kindergarten.—Florence J. Ovens, in Junior Home Missions.

AN INTERRUPTION.

Beryl sat down to draw her map for the fourth time. The laundress was ill and mother was in the basement doing the big family wash. Beryl had to stay home from school to mind the baby and to attend to the door and telephone. Between interruptions she was trying to draw the map which she knew they would be drawing at school that morning. It had to be handed in at the end of the week. Her pencil was halfway down a river when the phone rang again.

"I am not going to answer it!" she said impatiently.

But a moment after she was speaking in a most jubilant tone: "Oh, yes, I'm sure mother would! I'll ask her. Thanks so much for thinking of us."

It was Mrs. Nelles saying that they were gowing out of town. She offered to send down her laundress for the day.

"There is time yet for me to get to school by recess," thought Beryl. "The sports are on this afternoon, and to think that I almost let that phone call go unanswered! Blessed be interruptions."—Queen's Gardens.

GIVE THE SUPERANNUATE A CHANCE.

By Rev. W. J. Carpenter.

He has never had prior consideration. He is entitled to even more than an equal opportunity. For years he has had to take what was left. After other interests have been well provided for, our leaders turned to him. It is time his friends should speak plainly, and even bluntly, in his behalf. Diplomatic language is not needed at this juncture. The "old man" is entitled to a fair hearing before the church. I have no apologies to make for what I am saying.

I have fully made up my mind to do my "dead level best" to get every cent that is due from my charge. If any claim has to suffer, it will not be this one. I am headed toward the full amount.

The "old preacher" was put aside by our leaders till other important matters were cared for. He was put at the foot of the class. The Centenary came first—it was worthy. Then a "drive" was put on for our educational work—and our schools were in need. At the last when the church was pretty well loaded down with two funds, and before a score of local congregations had paid out, the Superannuate Endowment was given attention. He had to face a large unpaid subscription before he could get a bite. He came to a church which had already had enough "drives." But he must take what was left. The men who built the church and made possible the success of the two great movements, must stand aside till missions and education had their day, then he might "gather up the fragments."

Evidently these old men were not considered worthy to have their interests put in the same class with other worthy causes. If any one should be denied, let it be the "old preacher." He had been so used to it that it would not hurt him very much. Why was not his claim bracketed with other interests? Why was not education put last? Why was not missions put at the foot of the class? Well, why?

Now, we have March, April and May set apart for collecting the Endowment Fund. But just remember that March, April and May come after January and February. There it is again, the poor old man must glean a field that has been reaped. So it goes. "Why," thousands of people are saying, "we have just given to one cause, and here is another. Will it never cease?" Of course all such talk is wrong. Our missionary interests are pressing. The "old man" can wait till later—his necessities need cause no special hurry.

I am wondering why these men of God have to be placed in such a condition as to face the growing unkindness toward "drives" upon the part of the people? Why not allow the missionary work to exchange places with the superannuate?

Brethren, let us join together and see to it that the Superannuate Endowment Fund is secured in full. It can be done. It must be done.

Yes, I have followed the program of the church in the months of January and February. We got a good collection. So far as reports now show we led the district.

ALARMING INCREASE OF DIVORCES.

By Hon. D. W. Heidelberg.

In recent years there has been a very large increase in the number of divorces in this country. During the past ten years divorces have increased 75 per cent in the United States. In the year 1905 there were 68,000 divorces in this country; in 1924 there were 170,867, or one divorce to every 6.9 marriages. In Clarke County, Miss., the home of the writer, there were only four divorces granted in 1882. In 1925 there were forty-eight, though the population of the county increased from 15,021, in 1882, to only 17,927 in 1925.

In Japan, there is one divorce to every eight marriages; in France, one to every twenty-one marriages; in Germany, one to every twenty-four; in Switzerland, one to every sixteen; in Norway, one to every thirty; in Great Britain, one to every ninety-six; in Canada, one to every 161. Thus it will be seen that the proportion of divorces to marriages in the United States is much greater than in any of the above named countries. In 1924, in the State of Nevada, there were 1,097 marriages and 1,037 divorces; or nearly as many divorces as marriages. However, only a few people go to Nevada to get married, but, on account of the ease with which divorces can be procured in that State, many go there for the purpose of procuring a divorce.

There are four women who sue for a divorce to where there is one man. This large excess of the number of women over men who sue for a divorce is largely due to the fact that women are no longer so much dependent on their husbands for a support. Formerly, women had no way of earning a livelihood, and necessity restrained her from deserting her husband and suing for a divorce.

The constant decrease in the number of children born in the home contributes to the increase in the number of divorces. There is no stronger tie that binds husband and wife together than the existence of children in the home. Parents hesitate to incur the disgrace that follows, both to them and their children, as a result of obtaining a divorce. There are no children in many of the homes of this country, and the number of children in the home is alarmingly and constantly on the decrease. The advocates of birth control are largely responsible for this great evil. Husband and wife are being taught that they have a moral right to control the number of children in the home. Such conduct is not only highly reprehensible, but is made criminal in the State of Mississippi by virtue of the provisions of Section 1293 of the Mississippi Code of 1906, and is doubtless a crime in many of the other States of the Union. A young married cople never made a greater mistake than to prevent the birth of children in the home, and sooner or later they will regret their folly. Old age is devoid of happiness without children or grandchildren to comfort our declining years.

One cause for the increase of divorces in Mississippi, if not in other States, is the slight evidence upon which divorces are granted by the chancellors. The writer remembers that on the trial of his first divorce case he offered in evidence the deposition of the person suing for the divorce, and the chancellor, one of the most eminent in the State declined to let the deposition be read, holding that the testimony of the person suing for a divorce was not competent evidence, notwithstanding the statute as then written was the same as at the present time. Now, some of the chancellors are granting divorces on the uncorroborated evidence of the complainant alone. While the learned chancellor was doubtless in error, yet, in the opinion of the writer, it is erroneous to grant a divorce on the uncorroborative evidence of the complainant, except in rare cases where the nature of the case is such as to make it impossible for the complainant to corroborate his testimony with other evidence. My observation has been that more divorces are granted by the courts where no corroborative evidence is required than by those where such evidence is demanded.

A contributing cause to the large number of divorces is the diversity of grounds for obtaining divorces in the different States. In one of the States there is only one legal cause for a divorce, while in Mississippi there are eleven grounds. A person who is denied the right to a divorce under the laws of the State of his residence often moves temporarily to another State where the causes for divorce are many and divorces easily procured.

In a future article I hope to discuss some of the remedies which, in my opinion, will check if not diminish the number of divorces.

A STATEMENT CONCERNING THE MEMPHIS RESOLUTIONS.

By John Caswell Roper.

In the closing hours of the Memphis Educational Conference the resolutions touching the teaching of science in State institutions (signed by fourteen prominent members of the Association, including several college presidents and one bishop) were presented. Considering the reduced size of the body at that time, and the personnel of the signers of the resolutions, it was obvious that opposition could avail nothing and therefore could serve no good purpose; the passage of the resolutions seemed inevitable—the weight of the influence of the signers and the opportuness of the hour conspired to make it so.

As Dr. E. M. Glenn, of Alabama, in his communication to the Christian Advocate of March 11 stated, he and the writer "expressed disapproval." It may be added that this disapproval was expressed at the time without reservation and without quibbling.

As Secretary of Education and as chairman of the Conference Board of Education for the Upper South Carolina Conference, the writer felt constrained to register his convictions then. He made it clear that while he had great deference for the men who had brought in the resolutions, that while he had high regard for science and for scholarship, he still thought the action unwise, susceptible of being misunderstood, and that it should not have been taken. He knew at the time that without explanation or interpolation the word "science" was capable of being construed by many in such a way as not to meet the approval of our church. Moreover, the conference, which was in session to consider the subject of education as it affected our church schools, was going outside of its territory, intruding where it had no business, and meddling where it had no authority, especially in view of the fact that the motion related to State institutions.

It should be noted that when the writer arose to register his convictions that a blunder was being made, he little dreamed of being quoted in the press throughout the South, and especiallly in such a way as for it to appear that he was one of the leading exponents of the resolutions. His object was to keep faith with himself and with his constituency. Those present understood perfectly his position. Often when part of what one says is quoted, and not all, an erroneous impression is made. Surprised by the account in the afternoon paper, and realizing that a fuller statement was necessary, a brief synopsis of the writer's remarks at the conference, after being censored by two members of the Association, was given to a representative of the paper for publication.

The discussion which has followed as a consequence of these resolutions has only confirmed the feeling of the writer at the time of their adoption that a reaction would come swift and sure, and work detriment to our church institutions.

NOTICE.

All who expect to attend the Columbus District Conference, which convenes in Ackerman, Miss., on April 19, 20, 21, will please notify me at once. Will you be kind enough to state whether you will come in your car or not? Brother pastor, please give this matter your prompt attention.

The Home Circle

HOUSES AND HOMES.

The walls of a house may be builded of wood,
Its foundations of brick or stone;
But a genuine home is an exquisite thing,
For it's builded of heart throbs alone.

The price of a house may be reckoned at once
And paid with a handful of gold;
But the price of a home very few can compute,
And that price they have never yet told.

The rooms of a house may be stately and grand,
Their adornment, a triumph of art;
But the beauty of home is the final result
Of the toil of an unselfish heart.

A house may be burned, may be sold or exchanged,
Nor the loss of one's peace interfere;
But the loss of a home—how it crushes the heart!
For our homes we all love and revere.

Of houses a man may possess many scores.
Yet his poverty lead to despair;
But an honorable man in a home of his own,
Must be counted a true millionaire.

TED'S THRESHING DINNER.

Ted had no idea what threshing day meant on his uncle's big farm, for it was the first time he had ever been in the country, except just to drive along the road in automobile or a train and see the fields and houses fly by. "I'm a little bit afraid to have Ted go to Uncle Frank," said Ted's mother. "He may eat too much and get sick."

"Why, mother, I never eat too much, do I?" asked Ted.

"No, but this is different," said his mother.

Everything moved so fast that morning that Ted could scarcely believe his eyes. A big puffing engine turned in the farm gate with a big machine that he did not know the name of hitched behind, and then back of that a wagon of some sort. The man had to be careful not to tear down the big gate-posts; then half a dozen teams drove up and in a few minutes the ripe grain was rushed out of a kind of trough and men were quickly sacking it in big grain sacks to be hauled away, emptied, and the sacks brought back.

"Come, we've got to go to the house," said his cousin Tom. "Hurry up! There will be more grain when you get back."

Ted was not anxious to go, but Lottie and Tom and all the children who had come with the mothers, who were now helping Aunt Jane to cook, rushed off to the kitchen door, and he had to follow.

"Are you getting hungry?" asked Aunt Jane, seeing the litle crowd at her kitchen door. "We've been expecting you."

She went back to the kitchen and presently came out with a big tin pan filled with backs and necks of chicken. A lady followed her with a big pile of bread and butter sandwiches.

"Now, wash your hands clean," said Aunt Jane, "and then help yourselves."

"I didn't know dinner came this early," said Ted.

"This isn't dinner!" cried all the children. "This is a piece. We always get a piece everywhere when we go threshing."

Almost before the children had picked the bones clean and handed them over to old Bruce, the lazy dog, the engine tooted three times and the men began to come to the house to wash up for dinner. The big, long table was quickly filled, and through the kitchen door the children could see the ladies hurrying back and forth with heaping dishes of food. Then came the clearing away and the dish-washing, and after what seemed ages the children were called to eat with the cooks.

There was more chicken and vegetables and pie and cake and so many good things that Ted had to unbutton his belt, as all the others did. He forgot all about what his mother had said about eating too much and filled himself up with the good hot food.

"Now, I think that will last till supper time," said Ted, sliding down from his chair. "I couldn't hold another bite."

"It won't have to last," said Lottie. "There will be another piece this afternoon."

It was late at night before Ted got home, and, sleepy as he was, he had to tell his mother about the wonderful day. "I had three big dinners and one supper," he said, "but with all that, I'm as hollow as a log. I counld drink a glass of milk right now. I tell you, mother, threshing is awful hard work."

"It must be," said his mother, going to get the milk. "I used to eat their dinners on threshing day myself, so I know how it goes."—Richmond Christian Advocate.

MISTS.

"Hurry, Ellen; I want to show you the San Venito Valley from the cliff this morning."

Ellen fastened the last buckle on her mountain boot and jumped up. "All ready, Molly," she said. "Where are Edith and Kathryn?"

"They aren't coming," said Molly flushing, and seeing Ellen's surprised look, she added shortly: "They acted perfectly horrid last night, and—well, we had a quarrel and I don't want them along now."

"I see," said Ellen thoughtfully, as they set off.

The four girls had come up the mountain the evening before to spend a few days at Liveoak Camp. It was Ellen's first trip, and the other girls had taken her at once to the edge of the cliff in order that she might see the lights of the valley and of their own little city spread out below. It was a beautiful sight, and she had been eager to see the valley in the morning sunshine. But as they walked along she was not thinking of the beautiful scene which would soon lie before her, nor even of the grandeur of the rugged scenery about her.

"If I had gone to bed early, perhaps I might have prevented the quarrel," she was thinking unhappily. "But I was so tired; I'm not much used to mountain climbing yet. And they were tired, too, and probably quarreled over some little unimportant thing, and now it will spoil their good time."

Her thoughts were interrupted by an exclamation from Molly. "Oh, dear! there's a mist over the valley."

"So there is!" said Ellen. "How queer it seems to be up here in the sunshine and see the clouds piled up in drifts down there."

"A mist is a wretched thing, isn't it?" said Molly dolefully. "I did so want you to see the valley. It's just lovely in the morning sunshine. And now this old mist had to spoil everything."

"Look, Molly!" cried Ellen suddenly. "It's beginning to break up. The sun seems determined to send it flying."

As the girls stood watching the mist slowly dispersed and presently the valley, with its green fields and orchards, its ranch houses and little towns and cities, lay spread out before them.

"Isn't it beautiful!" said Molly, looking at her companion. "Why, Ellen, what are you smiling at?"

"I was just thinking," replied Ellen, "that if sunshine can do that to a mist, why can't the sunshine of friendliness and good humor break up a little misunderstanding between friends, which is nothing but a mist, after all."

Molly stood looking stubbornly before her for a moment, and then, suddenly a smile broke through and she turned and ran off down the path.

A few moments later Ellen heard gay voices and laughter, and soon Molly, Edith and Kathryn appeared round the bend in the path.

"The view is wonderful this morning," Molly was saying as she flashed a smile at Ellen. "There was a mist, but the sunshine sent it flying."—Girls' World.

THE TWO APPLE TREES.

By Clara J. Denton.

"I have been looking at these two trees, boys," said Mr. Moore one bright Saturday morning, "and as there seems to be about the same amount of apples on each one, I have decided that if you want to gather and market them for yourselves, you may do so."

"And have the money for ourselves?" they asked eagerly, and in unison.

"Yes, and may also take old Billy and the light wagon to draw them to town."

Before he had ceased speaking, John, the elder boy, had begun to climb one of the trees, and Mr. Moore, without further comment, walked away.

The other boy also walked away, but in a different direction.

John meanwhile secured a good foothold in the center of the tree, and was giving it a vigorous shaking, which sent the apples to the ground in showers.

Presently the brother returned, carrying a ladder and a basket.

"Oh, ho," cried John, "you don't mean to say that you intend to pick those apples off the tree? This is the way to do it," and he gave his tree another energetic shaking. "Why, don't you know," he went on, "if you stop to pick those apples off it will take you all day long?"

"Can't help it," was the answer, "that is the way they are coming off, and the only way."

"But you'll not be ready to go with me to town this afternoon."

"Then I'll go some other afternoon."

"But you can't stay away from school."

"I can be examined Monday at noon. Don't worry, I'll find some way to get my apples to market, and they'll bring me a good price when they do get there."

John continued his protestation, but his brother persisted in doing his work in his own way. Therefore, it was nearly sundown, and John had been gone several hours, when the brother took the last apple from the tree.

When John returned from town soon after, he jingled his coins in his hands merrily and asked with a laugh: "Don't you wish you had some?"

"How much did you get a bushel?" asked his brother.

A few minutes later, when they entered the barn together, where the brother's apples were carefully stowed in baskets, John exclaimed:

"What in the world did you do to those apples? They look as if they had been polished."

"Oh, just a cloth and a little rubbing did the job," was the answer.

"Who would believe that the trees which bore these apples and John's were exactly alike?" said Mr. Moore, coming into the barn at this moment.

John looked grave.

"But what's the use of all that trouble? They'll not bring you any more," he said scornfully.

"Wait and see," said the brother.

On Monday evening, when the younger brother returned from the village, he counted out his money, and he had received just double the amount John had been paid for his apples.

"I did not know," said John, "that taking a little trouble would make so great a difference about the very same thing."—Herald of Gospel Liberty.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

A REQUEST OF DISTRICT CONFERENCE SECRETARIES.

The editor of the Advocate will appreciate it very greatly if the secretaries of district conferences will furnish a report of the proceedings for publication as soon after adjournment as possible. We trust that in every case the names of those elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference will be given.

A LITTLE METHODIST LAW.

This is, perhaps, as good time as any for Methodists in particular and other people generally to learn a little Methodist law. The law is this: The General Conference is the only body that can officially commit the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to any position.

Some of those who are not in sympathy with the resolution passed by the Educational Association at its recent meeting in Memphis concerning the teaching of science, seem to think that the Association undertook to speak—and, in effect did speak—for the whole church. There may be some excuse for non-Methodists to misunderstand the significance of the action of the Educational Association; but even a moderately well informed layman, to say nothing of a preacher, ought to know very well that no subsidiary body can speak for the whole church.

If any body of the church except the General Conference could commit the whole church to a position or course of action, it wuld seem that the Colleg of Bishops would be such a body. In the "late unpleasantness" in connection with unification, a majority of the College of Bishops favored the adoption of the propsed plan of unification—but the church was not bound by the views of that majority.

That the reporters of secular newspapers misunderstood the significance of the action of the Educational Association, is not to be wondered at—it is not the first time such reporters have gone wrong in their interpretation of ecclesiastical actions; but it is strange that Methodists themselves, who are supposed to know the law, should fall into the same error.

It is our opinion that the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was entirely within its rights in adopting the resolution under discussion—and we think it was a wise action—but the Association is not the General Conference.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Sunday School Day was observed by the Methodist church at Pascagoula, Miss., last Sunday, with an offering of $12.

Mr. W. D. Sawtelle, father of Mrs. R. H. Wynn, of Lake Charles, La., celebrated his ninety-fourth birthday on March 16. Blessings upon him!

Rev. Dan Kelley, general evangelist, is assisting the pastor, Rev. B. W. Lewis, in a meeting at Bude, Miss. Large congregations indicate a growing interest.

Rev. J. V. Bennett, of Belzoni, Miss., formerly of the Mississippi Conference, is assisting Rev. J. M. Lewis in a meeting at Tylertown, Miss., the meeting having begun last Sunday.

Rev. James T. Harris, our pastor at Rochelle, La., is "still happy" in the work, having the joy of seeing things move forward. The mission special was well taken care of at Rochelle.

Things are moving along nicely with Rev. W. W. Nelson on the Vancleave charge, Mississippi Conference. He and his family have been the recipients of many kindnesses since their arrival.

The condition of the editor's father, Rev. Lyman Carley, has been very discouraging for a week. The warm weather has not produced the result hoped for. He remains in a very weakened condition.

Let the Methodists of Louisiana and Mississippi remember the needs of the orphans on Easter Sunday and make liberal contributions for the support of the church's institutions that are ministering to their need.

Rev. Carroll Varner is conducting a pre-Easter revival meeting in the First Methodist Church, Water Valley, Miss., doing the preaching himself, and having Charlie Tillman, of Atlanta, Ga., to lead the singing.

Rev. W. R. Harvell is having a successful pastorate at Hammond, La. Concerning the mission special, Brother Harvell says: "Our missionary special was raised easily, $250 being the amount this church gave."

Rev. H. D. Suydam, pastor of the Arcola and Murphy charge, North Mississippi Conference, will preach each night during the week preceding Easter at Murphy. His general theme will be, "The God Man Needs."

Miss Blanche Mills, of Edgewood, Tex., was winner of first place in the "Know Methodism" oratorical contest sponsored by the Epworth League, and Miss Ruth Richardson, of Chattanooga, Tenn., was winner of the second place.

Rev. F. B. Hill, pastor at Merryville, La., will hold services each night during the week preceding Easter, studying the events of the last week in the Master's life. The local Baptist pastor, Rev. H. Ferguson, will conduct one of the services.

Rev. Tom Priddy, general evangelist, of Princeton, W. Va., has an open date beginning April 24, caused by a cancellation, which is open for engagement. Rev. G. P. Comer is associated with him as song leader and director of young people's work.

Rev. T. J. Holladay, pastor of the Ringgold charge, Louisiana Conference, has received several adult members by baptism since Conference, these coming through the regular preaching services. There are signs of advancement throughout the charge.

Miss Belle Llewellyn, who has been a member of the family of Dr. R. H. Wynn, of Lake Charles La., for fifteen years, and a member of the family of Mrs. Wynn's father for nearly seventy years, passed away on Sunday afternoon, March 27. She was 81 years old.

Rev. H. N. Brown, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, and Rev. O. L. Tucker, pastor of Keener Memorial Church, Baton Rouge, were visitors in New Orleans on Monday of this week. They attended the noonday service at the Scottish Rite Cathedral.

Rev. Percy Vaughan, our pastor at Ellisville, Miss., requests us to say that Mr. Harmon Lee Smith, of Ellisville, is available as a leader of singing in revival meetings throughout the summer, and that he can furnish splendid references concerning his work.

Rev. Seamon Rhea, of Brooksville, Miss., in sending a list of subscribers on the special proposition, says: "This is our third year at Brooksville, and the work of the charge is going forward in a satisfactory way. We have raised $234 on the mission special."

Dr. R. H. Bennett, of the Virginia Conference, has been elected president of Lander College, Greenwood, S. C. Dr. Bennett is one of the best known men of our church, and Lander College is one of our oldest and best schools for girls. Dr. Bennett will enter upon his new duties on June 1.

Rev. G. E. Allan, pastor of the West Laurel Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., is advertising an envelope that he has used with great success in meeting the financial obligations in revival meetings. Those interested in securing these envelopes should communicate with Brother Allan.

Rev. Joseph A. Smith, pastor of the Main Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., is with Rev. P. D. Hardin in a meeting at Brookhaven; Miss. Mrs. Smith, a gifted musician, is rendering aid in the meeting. Well attended cottage prayer meetings were held preparatory to the revival services.

Mr. Glenn C. Rutledge, Associated Press editor of the Daily Herald, of Gulfport, Miss., underwent an operation for appendicitis at the King's Daughters' Hospital, Gulfport, Miss., on Sunday night, March 27. He stood the operation well. Mr. Rutledge is the son of Rev. J. S. Rutledge, of Greensburg, La.

Rev. Jasper L. Smith, our pastor at Fayette, Miss., writes: "Have just completed round in interest of the circulation of the Advocate. The enclosed list of subscribers numbers more than fifty per cent of the families represented in my church. I take pleasure in securing subscribers for the Advocate."

The many friends of Rev. and Mrs. W. M. Williams, of Magee, Miss., recently presented them with a brand-new Chevrolet landau. The Magee Courier, commmenting on the event, says: "Brother and Mrs. Williams are dearly beloved by all who know them, and all feel that it was a gift worthily bestowed."

A correspondent from Elizabeth, La., in sending a list of subscriptions on the special proposition, speaks very highly of the pastor, Rev. H. B. Hines, and the work he is doing. The Culpepper evangelistic party will begin a meeting at Elizabeth on April 24, and request is made for prayer in behalf of the work.

The Fayetteville, Ark., Real Estate Board is "boosting" Fayetteville, calling it the "Athens of the Ozarks," and inviting communications from those interested in making a home there. Fayetteville is of special interest to Methodists in that it is the home of the Western Methodist Assembly, located on Mount Sequoyah.

Rev. D. E. Vickers, pastor of the Ocean Springs and Handsboro charge, Mississippi Conference, writes: "We have accepted the special offer for the Advocate and have it over at both churches. We have paid our mission special in full. A few more days' work on the annex to our church at Handsboro, and the work will be completed."

Ellisville, Miss., Rev. Percy Vaughan, pastor, has sent in $150 on the mission special. The work generally moves along well. The Epworth League will have the Millsaps College girls' quartet for a concert on the evening of April 7. Rev. Claude P. Jones, Conference evangelist, will assist the pastor in a meeting, beginning on April 20.

Rev. W. R. Goudelock, our pastor at Merigold, Miss., writes: "We have just closed a fine meeting in our new $50,000 church. Rev. H. I. Glass, presiding elder of the Elizabeth City District, North Carolina Conference, did the preaching. He is a fine expositor of the Word. The church has new life, and twenty-five gave their names for membership as a result of the meeting."

After a thorough investigation, the Greenville Methodists have decided to build a Sunday school annex to the Frist Methodist Church, rather than buy the sanitarium building. The contract for the new building will be let when fifty per cent of the cost is in hand or immediately available. A movement is also under way at Greenville to provide a more suitable parsonage for First Church.

Rev. T. B. Thrower, pastor of the Evansville and Dubbs charge, North Mississippi Conference, writes: "Brother W. L. Atkins, pastor of our church at Artesia, did the preaching for us in a splendid revival at Evansville recently. We are in the midst of a revival at Dubbs now. Brother Shed Hill Caffey, pastor of our church at Oxford, is preaching for us. We are expecting great things of the Lord."

"The Circuit Rider," weekly bulletin of the "Church with the Amber Lights," Pascagoula, Miss., speaking of the preaching of Bishop Candler at the recent district conference, says: "It was a great privilege for this church and this city to have the pleasure of hearing Bishop Candler. His preaching will bear fruit in the days to me in the lives of his hearers, and will spread into many a corner of the State."

It might be worth while to the reader to look over the advertisement of E. L. Shettles, appearing elsewhere in this issue of the Advocate. Brother Shettles is a superannuate member of the Texas Conference. He is an indefatigable student of Southern history and a persistent collector of material bearing on the subject. When in New Orleans in search of material, he always pays the Advocate office an appreciated call.

We take from the Chronicle-Star, of Pascagoula, Miss., the following list of delegates elected to the Annual Conference by the Seashore District Conference: Mrs. Mark Davis, H. B. Rush, Mrs. W. J. Ferguson, Horace Hinds, H. H. Hinton, H. D. Cudabac, D. C. Camp, Mrs. A. W. Jenkins, E. E. O'Neal, C. L. Hawthorn, D. R. Weston, H. L. Daniels; alternates: Mrs. W. F. Hopkins, J. C. Ross, Mrs. M. E. Gales, Mrs. C. A. Carrier, Miss Tillie Swan, C. H. Wood.

Practically all the Methodist churches of New Orleans are holding pre-Easter services. Dr. T. D. Ellis, General Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, is preaching daily at 12:15 o'clock in the Scottish Rite Cathedral, on Carondelet Street, formerly Caronelet Street Methodist Church, and services are being held each evening in the various churches. Dr. Ellis delivered forceful messages on Monday and Tuesday mornings of this week, the only services held before the Advocate went to press.

Rev. J. Loyd Decell, presiding elder of the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference, authorizes the Advocate to announce that Rev. L. A. Comfort, on account of ill health, has been released from the work on the Yazoo circuit, and Bishop Candler has appointed Rev. Robert Lee Walton, a student in the Senior class at Millsaps College, to that charge. Brother Comfort had begun a good year and his people greatly regret this forced retirement. He will be at Sanatorium, Miss., for the next few months. Brother Walton and his family will move into the Lintonia parsonage about April 5.

We learn from the Discoverer, of Columbus, Miss., that the meeting recently held in the First Methodist Church, in which the pastor, Rev. R. A. Tucker, was assisted by Rev. Alonzo Monk, Jr., and his party, consisting of Messrs. William Sisserson and Robert J. Kennedy, was far-reaching in its results. Services were held each day at 10 o'clock at the First Methodist Church, and at 1:10 p. m. at the Central Methodist Church for the special benefit of the college girls, with services from time to time in the public schools. The evening service was held at the First Methodist Church. The meeting continued for three weeks, closing on Sunday night, March 27.

Brother B. G. Grenfell, one of our general evangelistic singers, who is associated with Rev. E. R. Smoot, general evangelist, writes concerning the meeting recently held at Forest, Miss., with Rev. T. A. Ferrguson, that the attendance was fine and the interest at a high pitch. There was a young people's "Booster League," with two hundred members, and a choir of sixty voices. The preaching of Brother Smoot appealed to the whole community, congregations of other churches attending the Sunday services. He is with Brother Smoot in a meeting at Morton, Miss., now, at the close of which they will go to Muskogee, Okla., for a meeting beginning on Easter Sunday.

CALL TO PRAYER FOR CHINA.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is requested to join with the other churches in observing Wednesday, April 13, as a day for special prayer for China.

All our people are urged to observe this day. In family devotion, in the Wednesday night prayer service, and wherever possible in special prayer groups, let supplication be made for China, Chinese missionaries and the foreigners in China.

O. E. GODDARD.

THE MEETING OF THE JACKSON EPWORTH LEAGUE INSTITUTE—SOUTHERN GROUP.

The Southern group of the Jackson District Epworth League Institute met in the Capitol Street Church, Jackson, at 9:30 a. m., Saturday, April 2, with Mrs. Stewart Dunning, of Canton, presiding. Rev. T. M. Brownlee, pastor of the Capitol Street Church, led in the devotions. After the opening prayer by Rev. H. J. Moore, pastor of the Bolton charge, Brother Brownlee brought a soul-stirring message, taking as his theme the Parable of the Talents.

Miss Berta Nall, of Hattiesburg, rendered an interesting discussion on "The Devotional Meeting Leader." The next on the delightful program was Miss Maggie May Jones, Conference Elementary Superintendent, who brought a helpful message on "The Social Service Leader."

Miss Lucy Mae McMullen led the Institute in singing a number of League songs, after which Mrs. W. H. Bradley discussed "The Missionary Leader" in a very interesting and thoughtful manner.

A delicious lunch was served by the ladies of the Capitol Street Church, which was obviously enjoyed by all present.

Miss Mamie J. Candler, deaconess of the Galloway Memorial Church, was the first on the afternoon program, with a splendid discussion of "The Recreational Leader," followed by Hon. Stewart Dunning, of Canton, who took as his subject, "The Chapter Leader, or President," which he handled in a very pleasing way.

The reports of the committees were read; a hymn, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds Our Hearts in Christian Love," was sung, and the institute adjourned with the League benediction.

The following Leagues were represented: Bolton; Capitol Street; Clinton; Florence; Galloway Memorial; Grace; Madison; Mendenhall; Millsaps Memorial, and Pelahatchie.

The following pastors were present: S. B. Watkins, J. B. Shearer, T. O. Prewitt, H. J. Moore, T. M. Brownlee, H. C. Castles, V. G. Clifford, H. S. Spragins, and M. H. McCormack. Rev. Claude P. Jones, Conference evangelist, was also present.

There was a large attendance, and we all had a good time. Mrs. Dunning makes an exceptional president, and is due much credit for the excellent program which she prepared. We anxiously look forward to the next meeting of the institute next year.

LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

All who expect to attend the Lake Charles District Conference at Abbeville, La., April 26, 1927, please write me at the earliest date possible, so we can arrange for entertainment. Preachers and delegates will meet at the Methodist church. We have two trains east—10 a. m. and 4 p. m.

J. R. ROY, P. C.

I feel strongly that the greatest need in the church to-day is the opportunity for thorough discussion. When men have thoroughly discussed any topic it is easy for them to vote quickly as well as wisely. . . . If we had more discussion and therefore more light we might not need so much legislation.—Bishop Herman Page, of Detroit.

I attach a great deal less importance to what men say than what they do. Pardon this expression from a dead man who witnessed the passing of his own funeral.—Georges Clemenceau.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

ALFRED R. WELLS, 5210 Parry Ave., Dallas, Texas, singer and utility man, helping pastors in revivals has open date May 2nd to June 18th, and limited number later. Will be in Mansfield, La., June 19th to July 3rd. Third time to have been with Brother Childress. Now in First Church, Jacksonville, Texas.

RESOLUTION BY THE SUNDAY SCHOOL OF FRANKLINTON, LA.

Whereas, God, in his wisdom, has seen fit to remove our friend and brother, S. K. COZINE, from his earthly abode, and transferred him to his heavenly home, and knowing the loss the Sunday school has sustained, we, the Sunday school of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Franklinton, La., offer the following resolution:

Be it resolved, That we feel the loss we have sustained by the removal of Brother Cozine from our ranks, and we miss his kind and encouraging words.

Be it further resolved, That the Sunday school extends to the family their sympathy, feeling the loss they have sustained in the death of Brother Cozine.

IN MEMORIAM.

It has been wisely said that "It matters not at what hour the righteous fall asleep, death cannot come untimely to him who is fit to die. The less of this cold world, the more of heaven; the briefer life, the earlier immortality."

The hearts and home of Mr. L. L. and Mrs. Ida Stampley Mercier were made the sadder when, on Feb. 15, 1927, the spirit of their youngest daughter, Ella Augusta, took its flight. The passing was quietly made, and certainly a beautiful close to days of intense suffering. Ella was only about ten years of age, but had developed very rapidly in mind and character. She was ambitious to learn, and applied herself studiously, thus winning the confidence and respect of teachers and classmates. She was truly a child of Nature's noblest work. She loved all things animate and inanimate—the flowers, trees, birds and all that is attractive and beautiful in nature. She was loved by all who knew her. Many and many were the tangible expressions of appreciation of her during her long illness. Messages and tokens came almost every day; for during the many weeks all seemed to realize that she would not be spared to unfold in full bloom her life on earth. But her passing did not cause others to forget her at once, for she was still remembered in so many beautiful ways.

The teachers of A. H. S. and other friends made for her a beautiful robe, delicate in color, dainty in design, so appropriate that when placed over the earthly form of the child a beautiful picture she appeared. The tiny rosebuds, so daintily fashioned, were in harmony with her whose life itself had only reached the budding stage. Just a fragile flower, but exhibiting some qualities that made her more fit for heaven than for earth.

She took delight in diffusing pleasure and inspiring joy. Always cheerful, she found an inspiration in the happiness of those around her. The world is better for her having lived.

Our hearts beat in deepest sympathy for her sorrowing parents and relatives. Their loss is our loss, but Ella's gain. Gone from our midst, but she has left herself so enshrined in our hearts that we can never forget her.

There seems no more appropriate sentiment here than that embodied in the words of the poet, written relative to his young and favorite sister who was taken just as she was in the midst of her beautiful childhood:

"And yet, dear heart! remembering of thee,
Am I not richer than of old?
Safe in thy immortality,
What gold chance can mar the pearl and
Thy love hath left in trust with me?

"And while in life's late afternoon,
Where cool and long the shadows grow,
I walk to meet the night that soon
Shall shape and shadow overflow.
I cannot feel that thou art far,
Since near at need the angels are;
And when the sunset gates unbar,
Shall I not see thee waiting, stand,
And white against the evening star
The welcome of thy beckoning hand?

"Yet where are those who hath not learned in hours of faith
The truth to sense and flesh unknown,
That life is ever lord of death
And love can never lose its own?"

A FRIEND.

FROM REV. E. M. SHAW.

Cruger and Sidon charge have delighful people. They have been lovely to the pastor and family. The Woman's Missionary Society is a thing of joy. The congregations at the church services and prayer meeting are pleasing. Ten to forty faithful, prayerful attendants with Bibles meet at Cruger church Wednesday nights. Both the Sunday schools are active and trying to improve their efficiency.

Miss Virginia Thomas, Conference Elementary Superintendent, started a Training Class Monday with nineteen enrolled. Tuesday, despite much rain up to class period, eighteen were there. The Sidon school is co-operating beautifully. We believe in Miss Thomas.

There is much to be done, but the loyalty of members and workers to their church gives encouragement that urges us forward. They are responding to the church's programs. The free-will offering for missions is successfully over; and may God bless the Superannuates' cause, during April and May. The Advocate is fine. I wish each family in the church could read and appreciate it as we have for over twenty-five years.

Miss Virginia Thomas, Conference Elementary Suprintendent, is with the Cruger and Sidon Sunday schools this week. The co-operation and spirit are fine. Nineteen enrolled in the class. We are delighted with the Training Class, and her consecrated life has been an inspiration to us all.

COLUMBUS DISTRICT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Columbus District Conference will meet in Ackerman, Miss., April 19, 20 and 21, beginning at 7:30 p. m., April 19.

The opening sermon will be preached by Dr. W. M. McIntosh, followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

Let pastors who have not already done so, have delegates elected by the church conference right away, and send names to Rev. C. A. Northington, Ackerman, and to the presiding elder at Columbus, Miss. Charge Lay Leaders are members.

Local preachers are expected to be present and report their work, but let written reports be sent to the presiding elder by all who cannot be present, also a request for renewal of license.

Pastors are urged to send in the final reports at once on the Missionary Special, and send checks to Mr. H. C. Campbell, treasurer, West Point, Miss.

Let special effort now be made for full quotas on the Superannuate Endowment. We shall expect some good reports on this at the district conference.

The following committees are appointed for the district conference:

License to Preach: E. Nash Broyles, C. A. Northington, W. W. Milligan.

Admission on Trial: V. C. Curtis, W. S. Selman, Seamon Rhea.

Deacon's Orders: R. A. Tucker, W. M. Langley, R. P. Neblett.

Elder's Orders: W. N. Duncan, T. H. Lipscomb, Del Longgrear.

The other committees will be provided for at the opening of the conference.

Every pastor, local preacher, lay leader, and delegate expected to attend.

Please notify Rev. C. A. Northington when to expect you, and how you are to come, whether on train or in car.

The editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate has a special invitation to attend.

TO OUR GRACIOUS HOSTESSES OF SHREVEPORT.

We are completely overwhelmed by the unprecedented opportunity you have offered the representatives of the various auxiliaries throughout the Conference. It was just like Shreveport to do this generous, thoughtful kindness, but we cannot refrain from marveling at your abounding hospitality and grace, mindful continually of every item tending to our comfort.

We know of nothing but a deep consecration to the task of spreading the Good News could have constrained you to attempt such a stupendous undertaking. We, therefore, desire to pledge you our loyal service in using the information and inspiration we have received to the best possible advantage.

We thank you from the depths of our hearts and pray that his grace may abound unto you yet more and more.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

ANNUAL MEETING AT MANSFIELD.

Committee on Resolutions.

We feel the inspiration of this meeting more, perhaps, because of its being on the eve of the Council, which larger gathering we expect to attend in Shreveport. We do feel, however, that this has been a splendid meeting, and those who have been in attendance are indebted to the leaders and those who have taken part on the program for the great inspiration to undertake greater things in the Master's name.

We especially appreciate the presence and messages of our own Julia Reid and Ora Hooper on Young People's night.

We appreciate very much the splendid service rendered by the Glee Club of our Mansfield College, and Dr. D. B. Raulins, the efficient president, for his excellent address, his tribute to womanhood, as well as his constant attentions throughout the sessions. We recognize that Brother W. C. Childress, our pastor here, has all the qualities of the true Methodist preacher in his kindness and attentions to us all.

Especially do we wish to express our appreciation to the hospitable city of Mansfield, the city of conventions.

For all these courtesies and pleasures we are thankful, ever mindful that every good and perfect gift cometh from the Father above, and in the words of Tiny Tim, "we pray God to bless you every one."

MRS. R. H. HARPER,
Chairman.

ZONE MEETING AT HOMER, LA.

Zone No. 1, Ruston District, chose for their first meeting in 1927 the fifth Sunday in January. Place, Homer; time, 2:30 p. m.

With this announcement came the urgent invitation that we bring our husbands, to which quite a number of said husbands responded. One of them afterwards remarked that he enjoyed the program very much, and made favorable comments on our work being so well organized.

Number of delegates and visitors, eighty.

Our leader, Mrs. Dawson, of Haynesville, led the devotional, using twenty-fourth Psalm, which was read responsively, the leader afterward making comments on same.

A mixed quartet of Homer folks gave us an enjoyable number.

"Being True to Our Task, Our College Youths," by Mrs. J. L. Ferguson, of Homer, gave us inspiration for thought and action in regard to our keeping in touch with the religious life of our college boys and girls.

Miss Nellie Gill, of Homer, sang with much feeling and interpretation, "The Ninety and Nine."

Mrs. Floyd Valentine, of Athens, told us of the "Importance of winning the disinterested women," the outstanding points being the magnitude of the work to be done, the relatively small number to do it, and the broadening effect of the work on the lives of those who are engaged in it.

Interesting and enjoyable "Readings" were then given by Misses Opal Joiner and Eloise Nickelson, of Athens.

"The Importance of Bible and Mission Study," by Mrs. Green, of Haynesville, was ably presented, the leading thought being that we so saturate our minds with the teachings of the Bible that it is echoed in our daily living. She said, in part, that the object of Mission Study is missionary cultivation and information.

A ladies' quartet from Haynesville gave us a lovely number.

The activities of each auxiliary were given by their respective presidents—for Haynesville, Mrs. Baucum; Homer, Mrs. Moreland; Wesley, Mrs. Garrett; Athens, Mrs. Pittman.

Our District Secretary, Mrs. V. H. Spinks, of Ruston, was present, and talked to us about our State meeting at Mansfield, and our Council meeting at Shreveport.

Our leader then gave us an interesting paper on the various characteristics of Christian work.

After two years of faithful zone work Mrs. Dawson felt that others should share in the leadership, and an election was held, resulting in: For leader, Mrs. W. A. McKenzie, Homer; secretary, Mrs. J. H. Pittman, Athens; treasurer, Mrs. Korton, Haynesville, this election, of course, being sanctioned or ratified by the District Secretary.

Our next place of meeting is Wesley, and we look forward with happy anticipation to a meeting with this our new auxiliary.

MRS. J. H. PITTMAN,
Secretary.

A WARM OVERCOAT FOR FORTY YEARS.

By Rev. Robert S. Satterfield, D.D.

"Not in a spirit of self-praise, but because this story preaches better than I can, I want to give you a bit of my own life," said the preacher I heard this morning. His theme was: "Parents—Why Honor Them?"

"I was working in a railroad office at $60 a month. I was anxious to make and save enough money to go to college. The saving account grew slowly, despite the fact that I denied myself of most luxuries.

"It was with concern that I observed that Pa's overcoat was getting old and worn and slick. Mind you, it was 'Pa;' not 'Dad.' The latter would not have fitted him. He was Pa, my Pa. I told Pa one day that there was an overcoat down at a certain clothing store that I was thinking about buying, and that I wanted him to go with me and look at it and tell me what he thought of it. Pa seemed to be pleased. If he thought I planned buying the overcoat for myself, that was his affair, and I did not deem it my duty to enlighten him or tell him of his mistake.

"We went to see the coat. Pa examined it carefully, feeling of the cloth and rubbing it against his cheek. He pronounced it fine material that would be warm and would last well.

"I told Pa that I wanted to see the coat on somebody, and I suggested that he put it on. It fitted him as if it had been tailor-made for him. He buttoned it up, stood before the glass, one of those combination glasses that made it possible for him to see the coat from every angle. I asked him if he liked it. He said he did. I told him just to keep it on.

"Pa looked at me, a look that I shall never forget. He wanted to say something, but it was plain that he was too full to say it. He turned and walked out of the store and up the street. From that day to this Pa has never mentioned that overcoat, and I know why. He could not trust himself to say what was in his heart.

"That was forty years ago. I have bought lots of clothes since then. I have two or three overcoats now. But no other garment I ever purchased has so warmed my hearts as has that overcoat all these two score years."

What Are You Doing For Your Puny Child?

One Boy Gained 11 Pounds in 7 Weeks and is Now Strong and Healthy.

For weak, frail, under-developed children—and especially those that have rickets, and need a sure builder that promotes the growth of teeth and bones, cod liver oil is the one medicine supreme—nothing helps like it.

But it is nasty and repulsive and evil smelling and nearly always upsets children's stomachs—so now up-to-date chemists advise McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets.

Children love them as they do candy, because they are sugar coated and easy to take. One boy gained 11½ pounds in sever weeks, and is now healthy and happy—thousands of other children have grown strong and robust.

Sixty tablets for 60 cents at all druggists—but be sure and insist on McCoy's—the original and genuine.

Give them to the sickly, frail child for 30 days, and if they don't help—wonderfully, your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them.

Sunday School

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The eleventh annual session of the State-wide Sunday school meeting was the largest and best in our history, and it is with deep gratitude that we listen to the pleasing echoes from all sides, and we wish to express our appreciation for the splendid co-operation that went to make the meeting such a success.

The 1928 conference goes to Alexandria, in the heart of Louisiana. Alexandria sent up nearly a hundred delegates, all of whom were enthusiastic at the prospect of receiving the conference next year.

Some of the outstanding features of the conference were the gracious hospitality of the good folk at Monroe and West Monroe; the Bible messages of Dr. Parker; the Parent-Teacher and home messages of Mrs. Rice; the splendid address of Dr. Lee on Wednesday night; the group conferences prepared and presided over by the conference staff, including the elementary group by Mrs. Holmes; the Parent-Teacher group by Mrs. Smith; the adolescent group by Mr. Taylor; the administration work by Mr. Holloman; the adult group by Dean Smith and Mr. McReynolds; the Teacher-Training group by Dr. Lutz, and so forth.

The two banquets were well attended, especially the Young People's banquet, with President Raulins, from Mansfield, and Dr. J. B. Mitchell as speakers. At the Superintendents' supper, Mr. T. W. Holloman presided, and there were many interestiing and instructive talks by various general and departmental leaders.

One evening of the conference was given over to Evangelism. The speakers on this occasion were Dr. B. P. Taylor, of Baton Rouge; Mrs. J. A. Rice, of Oklahoma, and Dr. W. W. Drake, of Ruston. Many considered this one of the greatest services of the conference.

The sunrise prayer meeting, the good music under the leadership of Mr. Grambling, the consecration service at the noon hour, led by our beloved Brother Johns, all contributed largely to the enrichment of the conference program.

RELIEVE CONSTIPATION, LIVER, KIDNEY AND STOMACH TROUBLES—OR NO PAY

Eddy's Herb Pill Co., located at No. 1227 Walnut St., Milwaukee, Wis., Manufacturers, Wholesalers and Retailers, have prepared a combination of pure, picked, old-time herbs made into a chocolate coated tablet in pill form, a true and tried remedy for all the ailments the body is heir to. We have placed so much confidence in our Eddy's Pure Herb Pills that we will forward to every person who writes, three boxes by mail, for $1.25, providing you are satisfied after you tried them out for ten days. If not satisfied return the three boxes and no charge will be made for the ten days' use. This remedy has proved its value in different ways. Will relieve headaches, pain in joints, and limbs, rheumatism, all female troubles, weak bladder, backache, pimples, boils, dizziness, sleepy feeling, gallstones, choking spells, skin effects, gastric stomach, and all sickness arising from impure blood. Breaks up a cold and cough instantly. Guaranteed never to fail. They will prevent sickness. Good for young and all ages. Cut out and mail this clipping. Attach your correct address.

The new officers elected for 1928 are: Mr. K. I. Bean, of Bogalusa, president; Mr. J. H. Cain, of De Ridder, vice president; Mrs. E. M. Vennable, of Shreveport, secretary; Mr. T. M. Sayman, Jr., of Alexandria, president of the Wesley Bible Class Federation, with Mrs. Jessie Sadler, of Monroe, as secretary. This is a fine group of leaders, and we can be assured of the same splendid progress we have made in the past.

North Louisiana was well represented at the conference, having some one from the majority of its schools. Central and South Louisiana came larger than in the past, with special mention of the large delegations from Alexandria, Opelousas and Baton Rouge. We noted the presence of the following District Secretaries: Mr. C. W. Scates, from the Monroe District; Mr. Edgar Gill, from the Ruston District; Dr. F. C. Wren, from the Minden District; Prof. Raulins, from the Shreveport District; Mr. B. D. Tally, from the Baton Rouge District; while Mr. Mayo, of the Lake Charles District, and Mr. Rickey, of the Alexandria District, sent in their regrets. Mr. Carter was not present from the New Orleans Ditsrict, but Mrs. Carter was a welcome representative. All of the presiding elders of the eight districts were present except Dr. Harper, of the New Orleans District, and Dr. Joyner, of the Monroe District. Dr. Joyner was engaged in a Standard Training School at Marshall, and we understand that Dr. Harper was on the sick list.

The month of April will be full of district Sunday school meetings . At Rayville, April 10, at 3 p. m., Mr. C. W. Scates, of the Monroe District, has called a council meeting. We are to attend the Shreveport, Minden, and Lake Charles district conferences in April.

The Opelousas Standard Training School issued forty-seven credits recently. The next School scheduled in Louisiana is at Lafayette, May 1-6. The faculty is: Mrs. R. E. Smith, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., Rev. F. D. Dawson, of Jacksonville, Tex., and Rev. A. K. McLellan.

It was announced at Monroe that Mr. Clem Baker, of Little Rock, and Dean Smith would be members of the faculty in the Minden Ditsrict Standard School at Rochelle, June 26-July 1.

Conference Superintendent.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Last week Miss Virginia Thomas and I taught in a non-standard school at Winona. Organization and Administration of the Sunday School and Pupil Study were given; nineteen were enrolled in two classses. Rev. Mellville Johnson, pastor, preached every evening. The threefold aim of the Sunday school was harmoniously and successfully carried out in these services—that of teaching, worship, and service, all with the evangelistic purpose. The teaching function of the church was extended so as to include the church paper; the worship services were genuinely spiritual; the activities included stewardship as a concrete type of consecration. The result of such work as this pastor is doing is not spectacular, but it will surely abide.

The Standard Training Schools for Greenville, April 3-8; Clarksdale, April 10-15; Ruleville, April 17-22, have been duly advertised, and we are expecting a good attendance upon these schools. Our hope for thoroughly Christianizing the church and in saving the people in touch with the church is through sound religious instruction, training in worship, and enlisting in service.

The following courses will be offered in our Conference-wide school to be held in Grenada College, June 6-11:

"Beginner Department Administration," Mrs. W. W. Adams, instructor.

"Primary Department Administration," Miss Lynda Ramey, insructor.

"Junior Department Administration," a study of early and middle adolescence, Dr. N. E. Richardson, instructor.

"Rural Sunday School Management," Rev. A. W. Martin, instructor.

"Bible" (Life of Christ by St. Mark), Rev. Albert E. Barnett, instructor.

"The Christian Religion," Dr. J. M. Culbreth, instructor.

"Evangelism," Dr. E. B. Chappell, instructor.

"Rural Sunday School Management" is sponsored by the Conference Board of Missions, the "Christian Religion, by the General Board of Education. In the study of early and middle adolescent group we will use about 2,000 actual life-problems gathered from the high schools of the State in the form of questionnaires that have been filled out by boys and girls in these schools. No piece of work like this has been done by any Sunday School Board to help our teachers to lead the youth of to-day in the right way of living. It will be worth a great deal to all of us if you will drop me a card stating the course you expect to take. If you want to be sure of a room at the college, it will save trouble if you send Dr. J. R. Countiss one dollar asking for reservation. From present indications we believe we will have the largest school in our history of training schools.

Rev. H. D. Suydam recently taught a class at Ashland, using as a text, "A Methodist Church and Its Work." Six passed with high grades. He has taught a class at Arcola and has one in progress at Murphy. This man has caught a vision of the coming kingdom. May his tribe increase until every teacher in the Conference catches the same vision.

OPELOUSAS TRAINING SCHOOL.

The Opelousas Sunday School Training School closed Friday night, March 25, with the record of forty-six taking credits, under the following teachers: Mrs. R. E. Smith, Mrs. R. H. Harper, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., and Rev. A. K. McLellan.

The meeting began Sunday night, when the weather was inclement but the attendance was splendid. The interest increased each night, and was larger the last night than any.

The largest attendance was, of course, from Opelousas, but the nearby Sunday schools co-operated.

I do not think that I have ever attended a more interesting Training School. The local forces caught the enthusiasm of the consecrated pastor, Rev. D. B. Boddie, and stirred themselves to do the fine thing in every way.

REVIVAL AT STARKVILLE, MISS.

Mr. Editor: On last Sunday evening, March 27, we closed a very successful revival meeting which had been in progress for two weeks. Rev. E. Nash Broyles, our pastor at West Point, came to us on Monday of the first week and remained through the last service. It was a very great pleasure to the writer, and his many friends in town and on the Agricultural and Mechanical campus, to have Brother Broyles lead in these services. He graduated from the Agricultural and Mechanical College in 1903. During his senior year he was the ranking officer of the student military organization, which was a distinction that was well merited. He served as a member of the faculty one year after his graduation.

His sermons were lucid expositions of the Scriptures and strong presentations of Gospel truth. His application of this truth was frequently unique and had a freshness that gripped the attention of his hearers and held it till he had finished. He never came to the pulpit with unbeaten oil.

Brother Broyles is especially gifted in leading young people. He conducted services for this group each afternoon of the meeting, excepting Sundays, with an average attendance of one hundred and fifty.

The attendance on all the services was good. There were no high pressure methods used, and no special "stunts" resorted to, but the interest in the services steadily increased from the beginning till the meeting had closed. While there was no great demonstration at any time during the services, the consensus of opinion is that it was one the best meetings ever held in Starkville. A number gave their names for church membership in other denominations, and we received thirty-five into our church on profession of faith, whose ages ranged from 70 down to 8.

The splendid choir, under the direction of Mr. William Munday, our local choir director, made a large contribution to the success of the meeting.

Epworth League

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NEWS.

A New League at Handsboro.

We've been meaning to mention this for several weeks. Rev. D. E. Vickers, pastor of the Handsboro League, tells us there are eighteen active members of this League. It is newly organized, but we welcome them into our Conference. We know that they will succeed, because we met them at the Gulf Coast Union meeting at Gulfport. Harry Evans is president of this League.

Broad Street League Presents "Golden Youth."

The first report of the Anniversary Day program to reach the editor was from Broad Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg. This chapter presented the pageant, "The Golden Youth," Sunday, March 27. On account of bad weather the crowd was small and the offering likewise, being a little over $5. This League will present the pageant at State Teachers' College next Sunday evening, April 3.

Hattiesburg District Will Hold Several Institutes.

On Sunday, April 3, Mr. Harrell, District Secretary, plans to hold an Institute at Mount Olive. On the following Sunday he will hold one at Ellisville. On the Sunday after Easter the District Institute will be held in Hattiesburg.

Mr. Chas. Cook, Winner of Conference Oratorical Contest.

Mr. Chas. Cook, McComb City, was our Conference winner in the Oratorical Contest and represented our Conference in the Regional Contest at Birmingham. The contestant from North Mississippi Conference was the winner of the Regional Contest.

The Golden Cross Enrollment.

The editor wishes again to call your attention to the Golden Cross Enrollment drive, May 8-15. The Epworth League has a part in this work, and we do not wish to lose sight of this, in our other work.

The Golden Cross Society is the Methodist church expressing itself in the ministry of healing. It is not a society requiring formal meetings in the local church. It is simply an annual enrollment which is carried out during Hospital Week, May 8-15. The money pledged for this is paid annually, and the Golden Cross button is given to each member on the payment of the amount named for the grade of membership taken.

These grades of membership are as follows:

Adult members	1.00
Active members	5.00
Supporting members	10.00
Sustaining members	25.00
Service members	50.00
Comrade of the Golden Cross	100.00
Life members	500.00

We can't all be Life members, but, Leaguers, we can be Adult members, and as loyal Leaguers we should be at least an Adult member of the Golden Cross Society.

OWN A HOME IN THE OZARKS

To raise funds for further improvements, the Western Methodist Assembly, whose home is on beautiful Mt. Sequoyah in the city of Fayetteville, Arkansas, offers the reader of this publication an opportunity to purchase a home site in the Ozarks at a price which is most reasonable. The Assembly, which has acquired property worth $200,000 in the past four years, is placing on the market the remainder of its beautiful residence lots, some 60 in number. The lots range in price from $250 to $850. They have connection with Fayetteville's phone, light, water, and sewer systems. Aside from their proximity to the plant of the Western Methodist Assembly, their location with reference to Fayetteville proper, makes them extremely desirable as an investment.

RESOLUTIONS CONCERNING ACTION OF EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

Whereas, there appeared in the Memphis papers of Feb. 10, an article stating that the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, had condemned and repudiated any act of legislation that would forbid the teaching of evolution in the schools and colleges; and,

Whereas, this article is misleading to a vast number of laymen and others who are not familiar with the government of the Methodist church, in that it leaves the impression that this is a representative gathering of our church; and,

Whereas, we feel that the language of the resolution is misleading in that its declaration states, "We hereby put ourselves on record as opposed to all legislation that would interfere with the proper teaching of scientific subjects in American schools and colleges;" and,

Whereas, there is no legislation advocated, as far as we know, against any scientific teaching save that of evolution; and,

Whereas, we believe that the teaching of evolution is detrimental to the faith and belief of the Scriptural account of the creation of man, as well as destructive to the faith in the Virgin Birth and physical resurrection of Jesus Christ; and,

Whereas, this action and opinion of the Eductional Association does not represent the will, wish or even the sentiment of the Friars Point-Lyon Methodist churches; be it therefore,

Resolved, first, That this quarterly conference hereby repudiate and condemn the action of the Educational Association in this matter; and,

Second, That we withdraw our support from any Methodist school or college that teaches or permits to be taught any scientific subject which is contrary to the teaching of the Holy Scriptures; and,

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this quarterly conference, and copies sent to each of the Memphis papers, also to the Nashville Christian Advocate and the New Orleans Christian Advocate, for publication.

Signed:

JOHN W. ROBERTSON,
Pastors in Charge.)

FROM LOGANSPORT, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: Please find my check enclosed for forty dollars to pay for thirty-two subscriptions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The names and addresses are also enclosed. The list of names is more than one-half of the families of the Logansport church.

As a news item, will say that my charge paid fifty cents per member on the special offering for missions in February.

Rev. Leland Clegg, of DeWitt, Ark., a former pastor of this charge, has been engaged to conduct revival services at Logansport, July 18-31.

The De Soto Parish Epworth League Union met at Logansport, March 27. This Union consists of the Leagues of Mansfield, Logansport, Longstreet, Bethel, Grand Cane, and Stonewall. The Union holds monthly meetings, and a banner is awarded to the League that has the largest attendance. Grand Cane received the banner at the March meeting, Bethel was second in attendance, and Mansfield brought up the rear.

The Logansport church has lost two very prominent members by death recently—Mr. N. J. Carraway and Mrs. Nannie E. Carraway. Both were valuable members to Methodism.

Fraternally,

R. S. WALTON.

NOBODY AT HOME.

By W. L. Y. Davis.

Down the Santa Monica way on the Pacific Coast for many years stood a movie village. It was not a real community—just a make-believe for filming pictures.

There were houses in it; but they were just fronts supported by scaffolding behind—they were shells just one wall deep. Vines clambered up over the houses; but they had no roots. They were freshly festooned up over the gables for each picture.

If you entered a door, you found no room, no hearthstone, no family gathered around the flickering flames. No children prattled their prayers at the knee of any mother.

A romantic chapel lifted its steeple above the sea; but it whipped no waves into place by its devotions. When you went into the church, you were on a shelf of rock above the beach. It was an institution with a one-board deep purpose. No pulpit fronted the pews with truths—indeed, there were no pews, no people.

Everything was just one board deep. Everything was in the shop window. All the religion was on the outside of the place of worship.

The world is full of picturesque personalities and institutions. Many of them are impressive upon first appearance, and yet they do not wear. Their character so-called is but skin deep.

They are turgid and blustery; but you soon strike bottom. They clatter with shallowness.

If you enter the front door, you are at once in the back yard.—Exchange.

REV. G. E. ALLAN, LAUREL, MISS.

GO FORWARD.

By L. F. Sensabaugh, Superintendent Church School Administration.

Moses had begun the journey with the children of Israel and had gotten to the shores of the Red Sea when the news came that Pharaoh and his hosts were preparing to follow them and take them back into captivity. When the people heard these rumors, they began to complain against Moses for having begun the journey. Then it was that Moses received a message from God in these words: "And Jehovah said unto Moses, speak to the children of Israel that they go forward." The General Sunday School Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has issued a clarion call to he pastors, Sunday school workers, and all other Methodists, to join in a great membership campaign durnig the months of April, May, and June, 1927. We are needing a quarter of a million new members in our Methodist Sunday schools, and they can easily be enlisted if those whom the Lord has called to lead the hosts of Israel will set their hearts and hands to this great task. The campaign ought to succeed. There are millions of children, young people and adults in Southern territory who are not enrolled in any Sunday school. These are truly our responsibility as are the children of China, Japan, Korea or Mexico. They need religious education. Methodism has a splendid program of religious education, fine types of organizaton, splendid literature, thousands of consecrated officers and teachers. These ought to be made available for the millions here in our own territory who are not in Sunday school. If "the Sunday school lesson of to-day is the code of morals for to-morrow," we must see to it that these millions of children are provided with a code of morals.

The campaign will not succeed unless it secures the whole-hearted, intelligent and enthusiastic co-operation of all the pastors, superintendents, teachers and pupils in our Sunday schools. A membership increase cannot be secured by merely giving it our hearty support. It cannot be made to succeed by merely making announcements. Good resolutions will be effective only when we carry them out. Urging the workers to participate in the drive will not get results. Leading the workers will insure success. Scolding and complaining will get us nowhere. To assume that we know everybody in the community, and that every one who will go to Sunday school is going, is a sure way to defeat the plan. It can be done if the pastor will assume his full share of responsibility. If the superintendent will join hands with the pastor in laying plans for the undertaking; if these two lead out and call for help and the Sunday school officers and teachers respond, and then altogether a definite organizatoin is perfected, a time is set, and the interest and attention of the whole school is focused upon this one thing, our Sunday school must grow, designating the months of April, May, and June for a special effort, that Sunday school will grow.

The General Sunday School Board has prepared a leaflet which is to be sent to every pastor and superintendent throughout the church, setting forth definite plans for carrying out the membership increase campaign. The title of this leaflet is, "How to Increase the Membership of the Methodist Sunday Schools—a Manual of Suggestions." The manual is prepared in a series of suggestive steps as follows:

Step 1. Who is responsible?
Step 2. The Workers' Council.
Step 3. Organizing for membership increase.
Step 4. Selecting a time.
Step 5. Setting a goal.
Step 6. Preparing publicity.
Step 7. Making survey.
Step 8. Study the Sunday school roll.
Step 9. Study the church roll.
Step 10. Surveying the homes.
Step 11. Preparing a general list.
Step 12. Making a community survey.
Step 13. Following up the campaign.
Step 14. Making them feel at home.
Step 15. The ultimate aim.

Our Methodist Sunday schools must grow. Will you, brother pastor, superintendent, teacher, or reader of this paper, join with the General Board in a united effort to increase the membership of our Methodist Sunday schools by at least a quarter of a million during the year 1927, placing special emphasis upon the months of April, May and June?

IN THE LAND OF EVANGELINE.

By Dr. Elmer T. Clark.

Wrapped in the romance and mystery of a bygone day, on the banks of the winding Bayou Teche, stands the little town of St. Martinville, La., in the heart of the "Land of Evangeline."

Here in this quaint little French town, nestled beneath the shade of the mighty Southern live oaks, festooned with Spanish moss, in this town rich in song and story of the beauty and tragedy of Evangeline's romance, live the descendants of those Arcadian families exiled so long ago, and here one still hears the old Arcadian speech, the language of Evangeline, unmodified by time.

On the banks of Bayou Teche (meaning in the Indian tongue "Snake Bayou"), which winds in and out like a snake between the stately trees that line its banks, one still finds standing the historic "Evangeline Oak," marking the spot, it is said, where the Arcadians landed in 1765, and where Evangeline met her faithless Gabriel (Louis Arceneaux), or according to another story, under which the Arcadian maiden slept while her lover, whom she was seeking, floated past.

Within the town of St. Martinville stands the St. Martin Catholic church, one of the oldest churches in the State of Louisiana, established in 1766 by a Capuchin priest and missionary, which to-day remains just as it was when it was built some 160 years ago. Near the left wing of this church lie the remains of Evangeline herself (Emmerline Labiche) with Spanish daggers, which grow in wild profusion here, standing like sentinels over her grave. Within this Catholic cemetery, where more people lie buried than live in the town to-day, one finds old slabs which bear the names of people of many different nationalities, with dates running far back into colonial times.

About one and one-half miles from St. Martinville is the famous pine and oak alley over one and one-fourth miles in length. It is formed by gigantic forest trees planted over 100 years ago by slave labor, which to-day form a complete arch over the roadway, making a tunnel of living green. Some nine miles away is Catahoula Lake, formerly sacred to the Attakapas Indian tribe, but to-day a well known summer resort.

The old courthouse in St. Martinville also belongs to the days of slave labor, and is as hoary as the moss-covered live oak that shelters it. Some of the records found therein bear the date of 1750.

To the north of the town of St. Martinville has been selected the site for the proposed Longfellow-Evangeline memorial park, which the Longfellow-Evangeline Memorial Association is planning to set aside and beautify in memory of one of America's greatest love stories and the poet who immortalized it. The Association has already secured from the State of Louisiana $10,000, and is asking the Government of the United States for $100,000 to be used for the park.

In the midst of the hoary live oaks and the age-old buildings in St. Martinville is the new little Evangeline Methodist church, ministering to the nine Protestant families in that town of 1,500 souls. It is the hope of the pastor, the Rev. A. M. Martin, and of the faithful members that soon it will be possible to begin a great evangelistic campaign among the vast French populace of this section. The need for such a work, says Mr. Martin, is an urgent necessity, and it would seem best that it should be carried on by great tent meetings, such as the old-time Methodists used to have, particularly in many of these communities, where there is a solid mass of Romish ignorance.

Pecan Island, which belongs to this same charge, is a kind of shell ridge about sixteen miles long, bordering the Gulf. It is said there are more than tweny-two Indian mounds on this island. There has been a Methodist church here for some time.

"In the three parishes (or counties) where our work extends," says Mr. Martin, "we find that our Methodist church is the only Protestant denomination that owns houses of worship for the French people."

INDIGESTION

North Carolina Lady Says She Had An Awful Time With Indigestion, Till She Took Black-Draught.

Pilot Mountain, N. C.—"For several years I suffered with a bad case of chronic indigestion," says Mrs. Sam C. Inman, of this place. "I had bad spells with my stomach. At times I had severe pains in my right side. My stomach would get upset and I would have an awful time. It seemed like everything I ate disagreed with me. I was in pretty bad shape.

"My husband had been using Thedford's Black-Draught for some time for indigestion. He had spells of it too, so he suggested that I try Black-Draught. I took some from his box, just to see if it would help me, and I found it was the very thing for my trouble. It did me a great deal of good. My condition was brought on by a chronic case of constipation and, by getting relief from this, I found my general health was much better.

"We keep Black-Draught in the house all the time. Whenever I find I need it, I take several doses and thus avert a bad spell of indigestion. It is a splendid medicine and I am glad to say so."

WEIGHED ONLY 98 POUNDS

Helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Cleveland, Ohio.—"I have really had all kinds of trouble. After having my first baby, I lost weight, no matter what I did. Then a doctor told me I would be better if I had another baby, which I did. But I got worse, was always sickly and went down to 98 pounds. My neighbor told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it helped her very much, so I tried it. After taking four bottles, I weigh 116 pounds. It has just done wonders for me and I can do my housework now without one bit of trouble." —Mrs. M. Riessinger, 10004 Nelson Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

If some good fairy should appear and offer to grant your heart's desire, what would you choose?

Wealth? It's a transient thing that brings it's own cares.

Happiness? It's an elusive thing which we keep by giving away.

Health? That's the best gift. Health is riches that gold cannot buy and surely health is cause enough for happiness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound may be the good fairy who offers you the priceless gift of better health.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

Mother! It's Cruel to "Physic" Your Child

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even if the child is chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens or upsets the most delicate system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN

FROM MERRYVILLE, LA.

We have just concluded a two weeks revival service conducted by the Rev. W. M. Bowden evangelistic party, of Dallas, Tex. A consensus of opinion gathered from various sources agrees that it was the most helpful and beneficial series of services ever held in this community. Forty-six were added to the Methodist and the Baptist churches, and one to the Christian church. A choir of children and adults, one hundred and fifty in number, with twelve musical instruments in the orchestra, gave us hearty singing.

After the first Sunday night service it was apparent that our church would not hold the crowd, so for two weeks the services were held in the local picture show, gratuitously placed at our disposal by the mayor, Mr. V. Fuller, who is also a steward of our church and a member of the church orchestra. Mr. Fuller owns the picture show, but does not run it on prayer meeting night or on Sundays. It has a seating capacity of over 400 seats, and this building was filled every night. The tradesmen closed their stores from 10 a. m. to 11 a. m. every day, except Saturday, which helped considerably to furnish a good morning attendance.

Brother Bowden's family is very musical—each member plays some instrument—and Brother Bowden is a wonderfully good soloist, a great organizer and crowd getter.

The pastor prefers a brother minister, as a rule, to conduct his revival services in preference to an evangelist, but occasions arise when one has to eliminate personal tastes and preferences. Some of the best people in the town have been added to our church. To God be all the glory.

The parsonage is to be remodeled and rebuilt, and the outlook in all departments of church life and work is good.

In preparing for a missionary pageant, the pastor missed a step coming out of the building a few weeks ago, slipped, and broke a ligament in his right knee. He is now on the road to recovery, but it has been a slow and painful process. It is the first accident of his life, but has not interfered with the conduct of the church service.

THE POWER OF THE RESURRECTION.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

The return of Easter calls not alone for the joyous celebration of our Lord's resurrection as the greatest event of the past, but also for the triumphant experience of the power of his resurrection in personal life in the present.

His victory over death and the grave is not an isolated marvel without relation to human life and without influence upon it. It is the source of all spiritual vitality because from it issues the transforming force which operates in renegeration and persists in sustaining the renewed life of the soul begotten in the new birth. Because Christ lives, the Christian lives also.

This is the transcendent truth concerning which St. Paul wrote to the Ephesians that regeneration was the result of "the mighty power which God wrought in Christ when he raised him from the dead, and set him at his own right hand in the heavenlies, far above all principality and power, and might and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come" (Ephesians 1:20 and 21).

It was from this superhuman source he informed the Galatians his own spiritual life derived its existence, saying: "I am crucified with Christ: neverehtless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me" (Galatians ii:20).

To the Philippians he expressed in fervent words his abiding aspiration to know Christ "and the power of his resurrection" (Philippians iii:10).

This earnest desire of St. Paul to know the power of Christ's resurrection does not signify that until he wrote the Epistle to the Philippians (written from his prison in Rome when the end of his life was near) he had no knowledge of that supernal power. It implies that he already had knowledge of it, and that he yearned for the continued and increased force of it at the center of his being.

We are not to conceive that the power of Christ's resurrection is a coercive force, constraining the soul and nullifying its freedom. It is power that operates in the realm of the spiritual world in harmony with the laws of that world even as in accordance with the nature of the physical world it effectuated the bodily resurrection of the crucified Redeemer.

Its consequences in the spiritual world, however, are not less real and wonderful. It effects a mighty renewal and exaltation of moral life analogous to nothing else so much as to the raising of Jesus from the dead. It does not coerce, but it converts the soul; and conversion is no small change. Jesus described it as nothing less than being "born again"—"born from above" (John iii:3). It is such a union with the risen and ever living Saviour as justifies the great Apostle in saying: "If any man be in Christ, he is a new creation: old things are passed away: behold all things are become new" (II Corinthians v:17). In the Epistle to the Colossians it is set forth as that "deliverance from the power of the darkness and translation into the Kingdom of God's dear Son" which makes one "meet to be a partaker of the inheritance of the saints in light" (Colossians i:12 and 13). On it rests the Apostolic ehortation to the Colossians: "If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth. For ye are dead, and your life is hid with Christ in God" (Colossians iii:1-3).

Other Apostles speak of its superhuman character and unearthly origin in terms not less impressive than the language with which St. Paul describes this super-mundane life.

St. Peter exclaims exultantly about it, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead" (I Peter i:3).

St. John describes it as "passing from death unto life (I John iii:4), and says further: "This is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life" (I John v:11 and 12).

Unless we are prepared to say that in all these utterances Jesus and the Apostles indulged meaningless metaphors and the wildest extravagance of speech, we must believe that there is a reality of spiritual life which arises from the resurrection of Jesus and partakes of the nature of his risen and exalted existence. Nothing less does justice to the terms in which they express it.

Christian life, therefore, is not an earth-born and commonplace thing. It arises from the great miracle of the resurrection repeated in the human soul.

They do greatly err who would have us believe that Jesus knew no bodily resurrection, and that belief in his resurrection is not necessary to Christian life. His resurrection was very real, and when it is reduced to a mere phantom, the source of Christian life is evaporated and it becomes a shadowy and impotent mist of unreality.

The great facts of the incarnation, the Virgin Birth of Jesus and his bodily resurrection, are the foundations of the Christian faith and the perennial springs of Christian life. Men need to-day, and will need forever, the incarnation, as truly as did the men of the first century. It is no transient and sterile spectacle utterly unrelated to Christian experience.

Johann Schefler wrote in perfect truth the beautiful lines,

"Though Christ a thousand times in Bethlehem be born,
If he's not born in thee, thy soul is still forlorn."

Paul, the great Apostle to the Gentiles, wrote to the Corinthians with even greater force and by divine inspiration, "If Christ is not raised, your faith is vain; ye are yet in your sins" (I Corinthians xv:17).

The obstacles to Christian life are too great to be overcome by a feeble faith; and the proper elevation of it is too lofty to be attained by an unmiraculous religion. It is reached and retained by "the power of the resurrection." No less force is equal to its initial production and perpetual promotion.

Wherefore on the glad Easter morning let us remember in grateful consecration "that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in likeness of his resurrection" (Romans vi:5).

His resurrection is the source of the power of Christian life in this world and the ground of its confident faith in the life eternal. "Christ in us" is the basis of "our hope of glory" (Colossians i:27). The heaven begun makes the heaven to come credible.

"Beloved, now are we the sons of God; and it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is" (I John iii:2).

"Blest be the everlasting God,
The Father of our Lord;
Be his abounding mercy praised,
His majesty adored.

"When from the dead he raised his Son,
And called him to the sky,
He gave our souls a lively hope
That they should never die.

"There's an inheritance divine,
Reserved against that day,
'Tis uncorrupted, undefiled,
And cannot pass away.

"Saints by the power of God are kept,
Till the salvation come;
We walk by faith, as strangers here,
Till Christ shall take us home."

More good judgment is needed in changing an opinion than in forming one.—Bert Moses.

My experience of life has taught me that if there were no pain it would be necessary to invent it.—James Douglas.

THE RESURRECTION OF CHRIST.

By Rev. J. L. Decell.

Death is but a door.

The fact that Jesus Christ of Nazareth lived and died in an historical certainty. It was at the time of the Jewish Passover that he was crucified and rose again from the dead.

From the beginning, Sunday, the Lord's Day, has been a weekly recognition of his Resurrection. The fact being accepted from the first, the annual observance of the time when "Christ became our Passover" (I Cor. 5:7) was not permanently agreed upon until the Council of Nice, 325 A. D. Hence for more than sixteen centuries the Sunday following the first full moon after the spring equinox, Christians have come face to face with the place where the Holy Dead lay. So, again we approach the tomb in the garden of Joseph, where the Saviour's body was laid to rest.

Sentinels at the Gate of Death.

Well-armed soldiers were placed around the tomb to seal and guard it. Startled by that which they could not prevent, nor their blinded eyes comprehend, after counselling with the elders, for pelf, they fabricated a fraud, saying: "His disciples came and stole him away while we slept."

These soldier left progeny, not a few. The ingenious and futile theories as to how the body of the Saviour was removed from the tomb likewise have proven to be nothing more than distorted conceptions or malicious sophistry. If theories of "myths," "enthsiasms," "fanaticisms," "delusions," or "fanciful expedients" could account for the Resurrection-Faith, then it is an instance without a parallel; and any historical certainty becomes a vagary.

None of these tenuous hypotheses have produced within their proponents themselves even a "vision" of the dead body of the Crucified Lord. Had that body been left in the tomb or anywhere else on this earth, it would have been exhibited.

The age-long comrades of these "sleeping (?) soldiers," proud doubters, who for pride of opinion, or wishing to be classed with presumed to be superior persons, or clinging to some damaging sin, wielding the carnal weapons of unbelief and conjectural criticism, will stack arms with the despairing battalions of a hopeless crusade. "The foundation of God standeth sure."

Angels also guarded that pathway to the prison house of death. Their number we do not know—probably legions of them crowded the holy place. They were doubtless there as an escort for the Risen King, though their manifestations, made to different persons at different times, identified them as messengers of him "who maketh his angels ministering spirits." They ministered comfort, direction, and assurance to sorrowing disciples.

Disciples were also on duty. With angelic assurances (Matt. 28:6) Mary Magdalene "did run to bring his disciples word." And from then on, the good news spread until there was none of them left to disbelieve.

There were ten post-resurrection appearances: To one disciple, then groups of two, three, seven, ten, eleven and on until upwards of five hundred saw and heard him on the mountain in Galilee (I Cor. 15:6).

Apostolic sentinels guard the truth of the Resurrection-Faith. They saw, heard and touched their Risen Lord. These confirmatory senses give force to their indubitable testimony. In addition, their Resurrection-Faith was sufficient to inspire these men and women with a moral courage which lifted their lives into correspondence with the lofty ideals they proclaimed. We have not only documentary, but also the experimental proof of the best people who lived around the time of the First Easter. There were no better people to be found.

Charge such people as them with "delusion," "hysteria," and "fraud!" Such could gain them nothing but torture, envy and martyrdom. Of course it were possible for some person to become the overwrought victim of an hysterical hallucination. But it is absurd and out of harmony with both the facts of psychology and history to suppose that all the apostles, and various groups of disciples, even upward of five hundred, should have been all seized with the same "delusion" or "intent to fraud" within the exact six weeks period.

These Apostles, living in an atmosphere which only knew of the re-awakening of the dead, and believed but in the continued existence of the soul beyond the grave, when Jesus "shewed himself alive after his passing, by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days and speaking of the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God" (Acts 1:3), sent forth saying: "The Lord is risen indeed." And it was while Calvary was yet crimson that they began preaching "Jesus and the Resurrection." Not in remote sections, for "this thing was not done in a corner" (Acts 26:23, 26), but right in Jerusalem where Christ was crucified and the "portals of the grave opened and the bonds of death were broken." It was before the multitudes and in the presence of judges and princes that this gospel of an empty tomb proved to be the "power of God unto salvation unto every one that believeth" (Acts 2:24, 32, 41).

The Empty Tomb a Solid Foundation.

Upon the fact of an empty tomb the citadel of the King's Empire has been built. Keim pays unintentional tribute to truth when he says: "It is upon an empty tomb that the Christian church is founded." Here against this fortress has unbelief made its most savage attacks. But the impregnable truth of the Resurrection abiding upon the secure foundation of the empty tomb sustains and upholds the living structure of the Christian religion. Even the Cross is bathed in the splendor of resurrection light: "* * * Jesus our Lord * * * who was delivered for our offences and was raised again for our justification" (Rom. 4:24-5).

The Resurrection-Faith is the foundation idea of the gospel. Denney says: "The Resurrection was believed, preached, propagated, and produced its effect in the new phenomenon of the Christian church long before any of the gospels were ever written. Not one of them would ever have been written but for the Resurrection." And Fairbairn: "The Resurrection created the church. The Risen Christ made Christianity, and even now it stands or falls with him. If it be proved that no living Christ ever issued from the tomb of Joseph, then that tomb becomes the grave not only of a man, but of a religion with all of the hopes built upon it and all the splendid enthusiasm it has inspired."

The empty tomb is the sure foundation of the New Testament Scriptures, the Christian church, and of our lives and hopes because of the continued presence and interest of the living and triumphant Lord who vacated that tomb.

Changed in Body, Closer in Presence.

"It is raised a spiritual body."

The Resurrection body of Christ was not like a formless ether diffused throughout space. In the very nature of the case, if there were to be a Resurrection, it must have been of the body. His body and spirit were integral elements in his complete experience here; and there is no reason to question that his immortality was with embodiment in the next world. The whole Christ is immortal.

There is no inherent improbability in the spirit's having a suitable body in the life to come. Mr. Lodge says: "Christianity clearly supplements the mere survival of a discarnate spirit, a homeless wanderer or a melancholy ghost, with the warm and comfortable clothing of something that may be spoken of as a body. That is to say, it postulates a normally invisible and tangible vehicle, fitted to subserve the needs of future existence, as the present body subserves the needs of terrestrial life."

The Anastasis of Jesus Christ was not to a disembodied existence, or mere resuscitation—a re-union of the old body with the undying spirit after a brief separation—but it was the assumption of the changed body of his glory which was a fit instrument of his exalted Person.

The changed body lifted up into a higher realm of existence did not take him further away, but brought him closer to his friends.

Those appearances and disappearances of the Saviour during these eventful forty days were full of purpose. They taught his followers to know him as a Spiritual Presence. Though exalted into a life "untrammelled by time, place, or distance," he was still theirs and with them. And even now he is not waiting in solemn state in the untroubled heights of Heaven "until his enemies become his footstool," but he is down on the dusty highway with his people. "For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them" (Matt. 18:20).

The fact is, when Jesus was "declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness by the resurrection from the dead" (Rom. 1:4), it was not a display, but it was an essential and sublime step toward the redemption of the world. He said: "It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away the Comforter will not come to you; but if I depart I will send him unto you" (John 16:7).

Professor Milligan, of Aberdeen, states: "The Lord in his human nature as well as divine interpenetrates the Spirit," and, "The truth seems to be that the Spirit while divine was not sufficiently human to penetrate with calm persistent force into the human heart."

The Holy Spirit has always been in the world, but only after the Resurrection and Ascension of Christ did he, the Holy Spirit, possess affinity for taking up his abode within the heart of believers. "I will pray the Father and he shall give you * * * the Spirit of Truth whom the world cannot receive because it seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you and shall be in you" (John 14:16-17). Now that Jesus has risen upon high with man's nature, the Holy Spirit proceeding through him likewise taketh upon himself "the likeness of man" (Phil. 2:7) and he is now available for dwelling within the believer's heart, to complete the re-creation of the image of God. "Lo I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

The presence of the Resurrected Christ means more than the perpetuation of his influence and the continuing worth of his teachings. It means that through the "Spirit of Christ" there is an active divine agent within the heart of the people of his church that is destined to make conquest of the world.

Risen to Reign, Rises to Receive.

There on the Galilean mountain side the exalted Master, robed in the Resurrection power of the King of kings, announces the most collossal claims and issues the most widely extended commission ever known to man (Matt. 28:16-20). Though centuries had waited, prior to his Resurrection such would have been out of place. Now as, Having all authority; Giver of moral law for all ages; to have disciples among all nations; and the ultimate conquest of the whole world, seem but natural. He is now the universal and regal Lord.

"Lead on, O King Eternal,
The day of march has come."

The two dispensations, Preparation for the Coming of Christ (Incarnation), and Provision of the Agencies to accomplish Redemption, had closed. The Imperial Lord now sets his followers to the task, in this present dispensation of appropriation and realization—the actual establishment of the Kingdom of Heaven in the heart and in the whole world.

Then Augustus was on his throne and Christian civilization scarcely had a corner in the earth, but the successive maps of the world reveal the conquests of the Reigning Christ, and the charmed circle of his influence has widened until it has become "Daybreak Everywhere." Unlike Mohammed, who forced his faith by fire and sword, the Uplifted Lord, though through a small and feeble band of Apostles, soon "turned the world upside down" and planted the Cross on the throne of the Caesars, with none other weapons save the force of truth and the beauty of love. And as the pathway of the centuries continues to be traversed by the standard of the Conquering Cross, the stones—the very tomb-stones of the mighty dead—join in with the living and cry out, "Hosanna to the Son of David," who "must rule until all enemies are put under his feet" and the kingdoms of this world are delivered up to God the Father.

Lest we be swallowed up in the Reigning Lord's sway over nations and worlds, we remember while he is risen to reign, he rises to receive. He does not lose us in the multitude. Dying, Stephen cried: "Behold I see the heavens opened and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God" (Acts 7:56). The crowned King rises when the lowly saint enters. "I go to prepare a place for you." The Easter message not only gives us the world vision, but it also brings our Lord near to our individual hearts, and provides such spiritual power as we should be mastered by the consciousness of, and live in the joy of the fact that Christ is with us now. "Because I live ye shall live also," inspires the individual with the blessed assurance that the redeemed person shall come forth in the Resurrection with a spiritual body to be the fit instrument of his best self; free from all fleshly impulses; with no carnal desires to be gratified, and no animal passions to be restrained, but a body incorruptible, undefiled, suited to the soul's noblest purpose, and adequate to its largest capacity. Such is the hope set before us in the Gospel of the Resurrection. "I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved and shall go in and out and find pasture" (John10:9).

Christians are the living witnesses of his Resurrection and we should show forth his triumph. "While we can't beg of Pilate our Lord's corpse, we can entreat the sinful for whom he died to yield him their hearts. If we can't lay our hands on the crucified form, we can lend a helping hand to the poor, aimless and despairing. We can't offer him a tomb, but we can consecrate to him a heart and a home."

Not by mere logical argument, but in the practice of the Presence of Christ, with more use of the earthly and conquering weapons of "towel and bason" (John 13:4-5) will the world be made to "know him in the power of his resurrection and in the fellowship of his suffering."

WHY IS IT?

By Rev. Carroll Varner.

One of the very hardest things for me to try to reason through is, why our great church has neglected and continues to neglect its superannuated preachers and their dependents as it has done and is doing. I have considered it from every angle, discussed it again and again, read much from others on the question, but it still remains a mystery to me. The pathetic plight that many of these worthy men and their families have been in has been brought to the attention of the church again and again in recent years; our Conferences have been moved to tears in their behalf; we have resolved with great enthusiasm that we would try to atone for our past neglect by doing something worth while immediately for them; we have brought them to the front at the sessions of the Conference and proclaimed them our most worthy heroes, but it seems that the enthusiasm died with the reading of the appointments, and the resolutions were mere scraps of paper. Several years ago our great church frankly acknowledged its sin of omission with regard to its worn-out preachers and their dependents, and declared then and there that it would raise a sum of money sufficient to guarantee them a fairly comfortable living for the rest of their days, and it seems to have met with enthusiastic approval from preachers and laymen; but those years have come and gone and we haven't made much more than a fair beginning toward the realization of that resolve.

When the "Centenary" effort was launched, it was discovered, to the great disappointment of a host of us, that the "Forgotten Man" was not included in the allotments of this large sum of money. He was set aside, but with the assurance that an effort would be put forth in his behalf right soon. Next came the raising of a huge sum of money for Christian Education, and once more our worthy superannuates were held off with the promise that after this cause was well under way the church would then set itself to the task of raising a sum sufficient to keep the wolf from the door of their humble homes. Finally, the time came when with a great flourish of trumpets and much noise we set out to raise $10,000,000 as an endowment fund for our retired preachers and their families. It was a splendid sum and the plans for the raising and distribution of it were almost ideal, but it was like asking for the crumbs which should fall from the table, for about all the extra money that could be gotten out of the church at large had been eagerly seized and applied to the aforesaid causes. But we all knew it would not be very difficult money to raise if the claims of these worthy men could only be gotten before the membership of our churches, and so the General Conference at Memphis ordered that this quadrennium be given to the finishing up of the task and that it be given the right of way. So with high hopes we took a fresh start; but before anything could be done a Missionary "Special" was switched in ahead of it and orders came down the line that this be given right of way, and every effort be put forth to raise a million dollars at least, and that instanter; and once more the poor superannuates find themselves waiting on the siding! It looks like our great church is going to make a fiasco of the whole thing. One wonders if the church really meant it when it orated so eloquently in the behalf of its veterans and climaxed it all by declaring that it would raise a sum sufficient to take care of them in their hour of need. This goes without saying, that if it had trifled with all its other interests as it has with this particular one, it would have gone out of business ere this!

We have no cause more deserving, more urgent, and none which can be put over on its merits more easily than this one. Let the bishops, presiding elders and preachers get behind it with even half the zeal they did with the "Centenary" and the Missionary "Special," and it will go over with a shout! It is about the easiest money I ever tried to raise. Just give it a chance on its merits and see how readily people will give to this cause as compared with the others.

And how can we say anything is more urgent than this? Consider the average which our church is paying to these noble men and their wives; consider along with that what it costs nowadays for a family to live even frugally, and you will find yourself asking the question, How do they keep body and soul together? I for one, in spite of all the cries of alarm, have never been able to see how a Mission "Special." or anything else, can be considered more urgent than this cause.

Some time back I talked with one of these men, a man who is a positive benediction to the town where he lives; he had gone into the Methodist ministry at a great sacrifice, as I happened to know; after many years of service, faithful and conscientious, on hard circuits, he was retired. I asked him about a little farm which he had owned; he told me he had to sell it to live. In the course of further conversation along this line I found out that he was entirely dependent on the Conference appropriation, $450—less this year than last—for a living. He has a noble boy who came to him with reference to going to college this year after having finished high school, an ambitious boy, and he was forced to say to him: "Son, I am very sorry, but I can't do a thing for you; I just haven't even a dollar I can give you." He never in the whole of the conversation complained; he is bearing his lot with splendid fortitude and he only told me these facts after I had picked them out of him. He would give anything to preach somewhere. He is eager to tell the story, but his church doesn't need him any longer!

I know a certain presiding elder who was a member of the Holston Conference who fairly wore himself out in the service of the church; when his health failed they had to retire him and put another man on his district. When he returned home after the session of the Conference he walked slowly up the walk to his home, sat down upon the steps, and with head in his hands sobbed out these despairing words: "Health gone, job gone, home gone!"

Instances like these can be duplicated over and over throughout our church. Why is it our great, aggressive church does not do something!!

TO THE PASTORS AND SUNDAY SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS, CORINTH DISTRICT.

As you doubtless know, there is a contest on among the districts of the North Mississippi Conference to see which district will lead in the observance of Sunday School Day. Two points will be considered: (1) The district holding the largest number, and (2) the district sending in the largest offering. If the pastors and superintendents will get behind this movement, there is no reason why our district shouldn't win in this contest.

I have been asked to act as District Superintendent of Sunday School Day work in our district, and the Publishing House has sent me a quantity of programs for distribution. Let me have your orders and I will see that programs are sent at once.

The followiing have already ordered their supply of programs: G. T. Barley, New Hope church, Blue Mountain charge; J. L. Hallmark, Belmont church; W. H. Fairless, Tishomingo; J. A. Barnes, Mooreville charge; Mrs. M. C. Oakley, Oak Grove church, Wheeler charge; L. H. Coffey, Mrytle; O. B. Gwyn, Corinth circuit; G. C. Schwartz, Iuka; Mrs. Fred Bostic, Belmont charge; W. C. McKay, Wheeler charge; J. A. George, Ripley.

A. T. McILWAIN.

Corinth, Miss.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Sunday School Day programs for this year are very interesting, and if put on as planned will be of real help to all schools. As Secretary of the Aberdeen District, I have been sending the programs to the Sunday school superintendents who have written me asking for them. So far, thirty-four churches have ordered the programs. The program for the small school is a little play to be put on by adults. It is real good. Order right away.

W. R. LOTT,
District Superintendent.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

No sir reebob! You can't have my Canadian quarter. I told the jitney driver in Greenville, S. C., who refused to accept it when I offered it, not knowing that it was Canadian, that he was making a mistake. It has the head of a king on it, I said. "We have no use for kings down here," he said. I gave him one of Uncle Sam's quarters, and kept the Canadian coin for luck money, and it has brought me some fine good fortune. I haven't got the prejudice against kings, good ones, like King David and King Alfred, and queens, like Victoria, that the Palmetto lad has. The fact is, I sometimes wish old King George had not been such a fool, and forced the Colonials to declare their independence. We have not made much improvement on the type of imperial democracy that prevails in the British Empire. I am pro-English. Maybe that is why the effigy of King Edward on my luck coin works so well.

Among other things recently it brought me from a gentleman I never met, who lives in Alabama, a beautiful copy of "The Recollections and Letters of General R. E. Lee," a valuable contribution to my Confederate library. Everything about General Lee interests me, and this book is indispensable to a full knowledge of the great man. And then here is another book from my dear friend, Rev. Frank B. Hill, of Merryville, La., "Damaged Souls," by Gamaliel Bradford, a book I have been anxious to read, for Bradford is a favorite author with me. His list of damaged souls includes such men as Benedict Arnold. Thomas Paine, Aaron Burr, John Brown, and others. He won't go so far as to say these souls were "damned," as I reckon most of them were, if anybody is damned, but he calls them "damaged souls." Some of them were so badly "damaged" that I don't see what the Lord could do but let them "eat the fruit of their own way, and be filled with their own devices."

I love books, good ones, and whoever gives me a real book is my friend. I hardly know which department of knowledge I prefer. I enjoy them all—theology, philosophy, history, biography, poetry, travels, science. I'm not much on the sort of fiction they send out now. I sometimes remember grim old Carlyle's remark to a popular novelist of his day when he met him at some social gathering. The man had written a score of novels, and Carlyle said to him, "Mon, when are you going to write a sure enough book?" Yet fiction seems to lead all the rest, both in the number of novels written and their popularity. An enormous stream of new books is flowing from the press, and some works of fiction, like "Elmer Gantry," are like a rotten carcass floating by on the flood. They poison the very atmosphere and spread a deadly moral contagion as they pass. They make money for the writers; so does violating the law make money for the bootlegger. But a man is mighty low down who will vomit the bile of his depravity, like Lewis, and peddle it around for so much a sip! Of course, none but fools will indulge in the sickening stuff; but the world is full of fools.

But back to my luck coin—here it is: A big, old-fashioned pound-cake all the way from Pulaski, Va.! Mr. W. H. Shuff, of the Pulaski Flour Mill, saw in some paper I wrote that I was fond of old-fashioned pound-cake, and made me one. Wasn't that clever? A lady over in Tennessee tried to make me one, but her stove wouldn't bake it, and milady says that there is as much in the baking as in the mixing, and frankly confesses she can't make pound-cake. In the case of the Tennessee lady I took the will for the deed, and sent her my compliments. A lady also in Mississippi tried her hand, and her husband wrote me that he had to feed it to the puppies! But the Virginia lady made it all right, and I am enjoying it immensely. I think one reason I don't like these modern cakes, and especially the bakery sort, is that they are too economical with their sugar. I have a sweet tooth—the same one I had seventy years ago! And not one, but the whole set, good yet, and this Virginia pound-cake tastes fine. No, sir, you can't get that coin.

THE OPERATION.

By Dr. C. M. Chapman.

"The operation was a success, but the patient died," may be true in fact. The Memphis resolutions cannot help the cause of education. The legislators and voters will resent the action. It is not a church fight at all. There is no law against the church teaching whatever it pleases concerning evolution. It was a Christian yeomanry that put those laws on the statute books and the fathers and mothers with children to rear will keep them there.

The protecting resolutions can but embarrass the loyal pastors who are leading the church in financial programs for better equipped higher institutions. No leader objects to university students being taught all the theories—true or untrue, in science, but thousands upon thousands of little children had to be protected and are by the laws of Tennessee and Mississippi, protected against matter that should not be in the public schools.

Our Memphis meeting of educators seems to have sensed danger that passed the General Conference which met in Memphis last May and two meetings of the General Board of Education since the enactment of those laws in Mississippi and Tennessee against teachings that would deny Moses' account of the origin of man. Have they not taken themselves too seriously in protesting against so composite bodies as the State Legislature of Mississippi or Tennesseee?

The statement in discussion, that we should leave the teaching to the educators in choosing leaders, is not logical in Methodist polity. All leaders in church are under the same "Standards of Doctrine." The "Canonical books" for the college president includes Genesis as well as "Keep our rules," etc., and to "Be subject to the powers" that be.

We trust our leaders. May they spend no time with matters of no concern of the church as an institution.

SCHOLARSHIPS AND ENDOWMENTS.

The cause of education in the North and East has enlisted much help in the form of endowed scholarships and general endowments. Some of the colleges there have scores and scores of scholarships and fellowships. The alumni of wealthy schools, like Harvard, include in their budget of expenses for the year a sum for Alma Mater just as they do for church and budget.

In this connection it should be mentioned, too, that the gift of money through life insurance to institutions of learning is practiced in some sections, and is recommended highly. Sometimes when a bequest is made through a will there is a long delay, and sometimes several years pass before the college secures the donation, and sometimes it is never realized in full; but when a bequest is made through the life insurance plan there is no delay, and oftentimes within seven days from the death of the benefactor the institution receives the money. This plan is especially advisable in Mississippi, where the law does not allow bequests through a will. Such bequests can be made through life insurance. Sometimes a friend of the cause is anxious to assist a college, but has not the cash in a large amount, but through life insurance a large amount can be bought and paid for in small installments.

LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Lake Charles District Conference will convene at Abbeville, La., at 2:30 p. m., on Tuesday, April 26, instead of 3:30, as first announced. This is because of change in train schedule that makes it impossible for delegates coming via New Iberia to reach Abbeville until 4 p. m. Many will come in cars, and some will come on the morning train via Midland. Those who come on the train via Midland will reach Abbeville at 10 a. m. Those who come in their own cars can reach Abbeville from the remotest part of the district by 2:30 p. m. We must have an afternoon session on the 26th in order to complete the business of the conference on the 27th if possible.

Those who come from the northern section of the district can make connections at Lake Charles in the morning by taking the early K. C. S. train arriving in Lake Charles at 7:30 a. m. The Southern Pacific going east leaves Lake Charles at 7:45 a. m. This train connects at Midland for train to Abbeville, arriving at 10 a. m. Southern Pacific train leaving Lake Charles at 11:40 a. m. going east, connects at New Iberia for Abbeville, reaching there at 4 p. m. Bus leaves De Ridder at 8 a. m., arriving at Lake Charles at 10 a. m.

Pastors will please notify Brother Roy who are expected to attend the conference from their charges. All those who have different interests to present to the conference are requested to be on hand during the second day. As far as possible, everybody will be heard and every cause presented. There will be no set program. There will be preaching on Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Committees will be announced at the conference.

BOARD OF MISSIONS TENT FOR RENT.

The Board of Missions will be glad to rent the gospel tent that it owns to any of the ministers who want to hold revivals from July 8 to Oct. 1. The tent has been engaged from February up to July 7. For further information write J. G. Snelling, 815 Washington Avenue, New Orleans, La.

J. G. SNELLING.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

This body will convene at Cleveland May 10-11. Pastors will elect their delegates in ample time to send in all names to the pastor at Cleveland, so that he will know how many homes to secure, and also send names of delegates to me, so that I may complete my roll. The forenoon of the second day will be given to the laymen and lay activities.

We want pastors and laymen to come prepared to make a real contribution to the occasion.

L. M. LIPSCOMB, P. E.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Vicksburg District Conference will convene in the Methodist church at Gloster, Miss., on May 3. The conference will open in business session at 8:30 a. m.

Rev. J. E. Williams will preach the opening sermon at 11 a. m., May 3. The pastors of the district are requested to notify their local preachers that they will be expected to make written reports to the conference.

The following committees have been appointed to serve for the conference:

License to Preach—G. P. McKeown, H. Mellard, W. L. Blackwell.

Admission on Trial—G. H. Thompson, Otto Porter, J. E. Gray.

Local Preachers—O. S. Lewis, J. T. Weems, J. E. Williams.

The pastors of the district are urged to forward names of their delegates to Rev. B. M. Hunt, Gloster, Miss., and to me at Vicksburg, Miss., at least one week before the conference is scheduled to open.

IF OUR CHURCH WOULD NOW PAY TO SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT THE SALARY DEFICIT SUFFERED BY HER PREACHERS DURING THE LAST 25 YEARS, THE SUM WOULD AMOUNT TO OVER $10,000,000

By LUTHER E. TODD, Secretary of the Board of Finance

The circuit walkers have gone to heaven, and most of the circuit horseback riders yet abiding will soon be there to greet them. The trudging footstep and the neighing horse have been supplanted by the chug-chug of the automobile and the clickety-click of the railroad train. But the spirit of Francis Asbury does not change. Itinerant Methodism keeps on itinerating. The sons of Wesley are still at it; some of them go in boats, and some in railroad trains, and some in automobiles,—but, thank the Lord, they are all going. And when all these means of itinerating have grown weary of such persistent use and have found surcease on the junk pile, our preacher sons, undaunted, will finish the work in aeroplanes.

O, men and women of the Church, there is nothing in all the earth more beautiful, helpful, and inspiring, than the faithful work being done by the preachers. They give themselves without stint to the task of bringing this troubled world under the dominion of Jesus Christ. Through them the spirit and genius of Methodism goes on conquering. If the employees of secular corporations are thought worthy to be pensioned when old age creeps upon them, should the preachers of the Gospel be left uncared for? If the owners of great packing plants sufficiently appreciate the faithful service of their laborers, who butcher cattle and swine, to provide for them a comfortable old age, should not a great and rich Church make ample provision for the retirement of her preachers who teach men and women the way of life?

EVEN OUR LIVING 1000 SUPERANNUATED PREACHERS SUFFERED WHILE IN ACTIVE SERVICE A SALARY DEFICIT OF $3,000,000—PAY THE DEBT IN APRIL AND MAY

ACTION OF THE SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE CONCERNING THE SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

To the Bishop and Members of Seashore District Conference Assembled in Pascagoula, Miss., March 30 and 31, 1927.

Dear Brethren: Your committee appointed to recommend suitable action for the district conference in regard to Seashore Camp Ground respectfully submits the following as its conclusion, and recommends that it be adopted as the expressed will of this Conference.

(Signed) J. L. SELLS, President.
H. M. ELLIS, Secretary.

Seashore Camp Ground.

Whereas, Seashore Camp Ground lies wholly within the Seashore District and its use for the church, or the disposal of it by sale or otherwise will more seriously affect the work of our church in this immediate section for help or hindrance than it will any other; and,

Whereas, this Seashore District was formerly joint owner with the Mobile District, of the Alabama Conference, and the New Orleans District, of the Louisiana Conference, of said Seashore Camp Ground, and with these districts was led to transfer its rights in and control over said property to the Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana Annual Conferences, without any monetary consideration whatever, but with the sole and fully-declared purpose of thus enlarging its clientele and increasing its resources for adequate support, that it might be properly developed and equipped for the largest possible service in the educational and spiritual work of our church; and,

Whereas, These Annual Conferences having for some reason failed to make such development and to succcessfully use the property for the purpose contemplated in the transfer, two of them—the Louisiana and Alabama Conferences—remote from the grounds and with other interests therein now clamoring for funds, are now demanding a division or sale of said property, each with the purpose of giving the money thus accruing to it to its other institutions afar from this section, and having no sort of claim on the sacred trusts and untold possibilities of power for the church represented in the property; and,

Whereas, these commodious and beautiful grounds, so ideally located, offer the finest opportunity for the establishment of a great Assembly ground for our church, where the institutes, schools, conferences, conventions, etc., of our church, and perhaps others, for a large contiguous territory could be invited to hold their sessions both in summer and winter; and for the building thereon a soundly orthodox and thoroughly evangelistic Bible and Training School, not merely for preachers, but for all church workers and others anxious for better acquaintance with God's inspired word and for better preparation for the kingdom's tasks; and also a school of outstanding ability and efficiency, especially adapted to serve such of our young preachers as lack early educational opportunities; and all this work will be the logical fulfillment, greatly enlarged, of the high purpose in the minds of the fine Methodist leaders, now gone to their reward, who originally bought and consecrated Seashore Camp Ground to the special work of edifying the saints and saving the lost through the ministry of our church; and,

Whereas, our Mississippi seacoast has in the last few years been brought into conspicuous notice by its delightful climate, beautiful scenery and many desirable features, and is attracting as never before tens of thousands of visitors in both winter and summer from all over the nation, many of whom are becoming permanent citizens; and there are building up everywhere throughout it great hotels and playgrounds under the management of corporations and individuals, many of whom ignore Christianity and morals and, in many cases, even federal and State law, and seek only to make money for themselves out of visitors to our coast for pleasure or health, thereby greatly augmenting the spirit of worldliness and recklessness in this section, imperiling the spiritual welfare of our own people and revealing the dire spiritual needs of many of these visitors; and,

Whereas, our Methodist people generally, more especially those from neighboring States, who visit the Mississippi coast in great numbers, drawn by its many physical attractions, will of necessity fall under the influence of the godless atmosphere and worldly spirit of these hotels to which they are now obliged to go for entertainment; and,

Whereas, the usual services of our coast churches, simple, quiet, in inconspicuous places and at far-separated hours and conducted by preachers of such ability as are found in all towns of similar size, are not likely to arouse the interest and attract the attention of the great mass of coast visitors, while such programs as would be presented by each of the institutes, schools, conferences, etc., of a great Assembly ground, with carefully picked instructors and preachers of recognized superiority, would enable Southern Methodism to launch and maintain such a progressive campaign of spiritual instruction and evangelistic fervor as would make its influence most effective for the good of all; and,

Whereas, though we candidly concede that this proposed program for the use of Seashore Camp Ground presents difficult problems and imposes large and complex tasks, we remind the Board of Trustees and the Annual Conferences that Southern Methodism has not achieved its glorious history by confessing incapacity to solve its problems or by running away from onerous responsibilities; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the members of Seashore District Conference, assembled in session at Pascagoula, Miss., this the 31st day of March, 1927, most respectfully and fraternally, but with utmost earnestness, hereby call the attention of the Board of Trustees and the three Annual Conferences to which has been entrusted for a definitely stated purpose, the splendid property known as Seashore Camp Ground to the fact that, so far as the sale of Seashore Camp Ground and the alienation of the funds from this section is concerned, they are absolutely without any moral right or authority whatsoever since they can but realize that Seashore District never would have transferred its right of title and control to said Conferences had it been ever suspected that there was any such prospect as the course two of these Conferences now propose and demand.

Resovled, That we most earnestly call upon these Annual Conferences and the Board of Trustees to proceed promptly to carry out the purpose and condition of the transfer of title and control, and that they, as early as possible, announce their fixed determination to make Seashore Camp Ground a great Assembly ground for every kind of Methodist gathering, and of establishing and maintaining thereon an orthodox, evangelistic Bible and Training School for all persons desiring its help, and of conducting a first-class preparatory school, providing particularly for our preachers who missed early educational equipment.

Resolved further, That we urge these Annual Conferences to call their men of clearest, largest vision and widest business experience from any section of their territory to this challenging task, that the ability and record for success of those on whom the responsibility has been placed may be the initial guanrantee of its success.

Resolved yet again, That we hereby assure the Board of Trustees and the Annual Conferences that Seashore District stands ready, gladly and enthusiastically, to co-operate in this work in every way possible, and to pay even more than its full share of the necessary expense for its happiest achievement.

Resolved finally, That should the three Annual Conferences still confess unwillingness to deal with the problems involved and accomplish the purpose for which the property was committed to their hands, we do most courteously, but most positively, insist that the only moral alternative open to them is return Seashore Camp Ground to the three districts which a few years ago entrusted it to their hands, or by some other means make sure that the original purpose for which it was committed to them is successfully accomplished.

WHAT THE BENEVOLENCE DOLLAR DOES.

1. It preaches and teaches the Word of Life in eleven mission lands and in many languages, and administers the balm of healing to the bodies of many heathen.

2. It carries the gospel to Indians, mountaineers, miners, cotton mill operatives, and to many needy sections in the homeland.

3. It tells the old, old story to immigrants who have come to be neighbors and fellow-citizens with our native population.

4. It covers bread-and-meat maintenance for about one-half of our general missionary work.

5. It gives aid to weak Conferences on the border.

6. It promotes training schools for pastors and Christian workers.

7. It fosters and encourages evangelism throughout the connection.

8. It helps to support pastors who are serving struggling mission charges.

9. It goes to feed and clothe superannuate preachers, their widows, and orphans.

10. It spreads the knowledge of the Bible and promotes the religious instruction and training of children, youth, and adults.

11. It makes possible the building of houses of worship by needy, homeless congregations and parsonages for homeless pastors.

12. It provides for the salary and traveling expenses of our chief pastors.

13. It nourishes Christian schools, colleges and universities, and fosters a favorable atmosphere in which to educate our ministers and missionaries and train laymen for Christian service.

14. It pays the expenses of the lawmaking body of our church.

15. It manifests a fraternal attitude toward our colored brethren, extends them a helping hand, and assists them in training Christian leaders.

16. It translates, prints, and circulates the Bible at cost on five continents and makes possible the free distribution of thousands of copies and portions of the Word.

17. It develops our young people in Christian fellowship, worship, works of charity and help, recreational, social service, and missionary activities.

18. It assists in mobilizing the man power of our church for personal evangelism, lay speaking, fellowship and brotherhood, Christian stewardship, and a more active part in all phases of Christian work.

19. It forwards the cause of temperance and seeks to apply the gospel remedy to social as well as individual ills.

20. It ministers to hundreds of sick in our hospitals.

Therefore pay the asssessment for the benevolences in full.

GENERAL BOARD OF LAY ACTIVITIES, M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH, DEPARTMENT OF STEWARDSHIP.

War is foolish and destructive. If the same energy were turned toward the arts of peace and industry this world could be a fine place for all manner of people and there would be no such thing as poverty. You can assure the world that Krupp steel works will never again be used in the service of the god of war.—Baron George Krupp, now a student at Harvard.

The Home Circle

PUT-OFF TOWN.

Did you ever go to Put-off Town,
Where the houses are old and tumble-down,
And everything tarries and everything drags,
With dirty streets and people in rags?

On the street called Slow lives old man Wait,
And his two little boys named Linger and Late,
With unclean hands and tousled hair,
And a naughty sister named Don't Care.

Did you ever go to Put-off Town
To play with the little girls, Fret and Frown?
Or go to the home of old man Wait
And whistle for his boys to come to the gate,

To play ball all day on Tarry Street,
Leaving your errands for other feet?
To stop, or shirk, or linger, or frown,
Is the nearest way to this Put-off Town.

A ROMANCE OF OUR CABIN DAYS.

"Papoose heap sick," said a harsh, guttural voice, and Mrs. Tarbox turned quickly from the fireplace to see a tall blanketed Indian standing in the cabin doorway. He was looking at her daughter Polly, who had been spinning and was now bending over her wheel with one hand on the distaff. "Heap sick. No come, must sure die. Bad—much bad, Ugh!"

"Polly can't go," said Mrs. Tarbox decidedly but with her face blanching as she recognized the Indian. "She sprained her ankle yesterday an' can hardly step. I—I'm very sorry for you, Wassamon."

"Heap sick," the Indian repeated earnestly. "Cure squaw no come, must die. Most sure die. If save, no more fight. All prisoner go free."

"But she can't go, I tell you, Wassamon," insisted Mrs. Tarbox. "She isn's able."

"S'pose carry?"

Polly shivered. The Indian camp was three miles away across swamps and ravines, and it was already growing dark. She shook her head.

"Papoose die," he said drearily. "Only one—some day big chief, like father."

They listened to his footsteps until they were lost in the soughing of the pine forest, then glanced at each other with the same anxious foreboding.

Wassamon was an avowed enemy of the whites, although open hostilities had not commenced. He was vindictive and discontented, and his tribe was the most turbulent and mischievous in the whole valley. If a home was burned or a settler murdered, the deed was almost sure to be traced to his tribe. When questioned he would neither admit nor deny, but always refused to give up the suspected. And the whites were too few in number to enforce their demand. Several men had disappeared during the past year, and among them George Benton, a young trader and the betrothed of Sally Tarbox, Polly's sister. No clue to their fate had been left, but it was generally admitted that some of Wassamon's tribe had murdered them, the more especially as since then he had allowed no white man to visit the camp.

Mrs. Tarbox and Polly were thinking of the same thing as they listened to the footsteps dying away into the soft murmur of the pines. Would the refusal to accompany Wassamon hasten the impending outbreak?

Two winters before there had been much sickness among the Indians, and Polly had gone among them and effected many cures, winning for herself the name of Cure Squaw. But Wassamon himself had held aloof and regarded her presence with manifest discontent. This made his present visit seem more ominous. It was the first time they had ever heard of his asking a favor from a paleface, and they knew it was only the peril of his son and heir that could have wrung from him this concession. If the baby died, would it not mean all the horrors of an Indian war for their beautiful valley?

"I wish my ankle had been strong enough for me to go," said Polly regretfully.

Mrs. Tarbox shook her head. "There are the three miles of dark woods to go through and bears and panthers and all sorts of wild varmints liable to meet you any time and Wassamon worse than any of 'em. No, you couldn't go."

Over in one corner of the room there had been a steady thud, thud, thud, only pausing for brief intervals during the visit of Wassamon and the conversation between Mrs. Tarbox and Polly. Now it ceased altogether.

"There, I guess that corn's pounded enough, mother," said a clear voice, and a pretty, quick-eyed girl of 16 or 17 stepped out into the glow of the fireplace. "Now, I'll go and cure that Injun baby."

"Sally Tarbox!"

"Yes'm, Sally Tarbox, that's me," said 'he girl composedly. "I went with Polly when she dosed the papooses and know almost as much as she, and anyway Injun babies generally have colds or measles, and I know what to do for them. Now, mother, don't you be fretted. Father would do the same if he were here, and so would George if he were alive."

The girl's voice faltered a little and a mistiness came into her brave eyes.

Mrs. Tarbox was about to protest again when a look from Polly stayed her.

"Sally's right, mother. We mustn't think of personal danger at a time like this. I would go myself if I could, but I can't. However, Sally knows the way perfectly. She's pretty young, but I don't believe there'll be such awful danger."

But as she saw her sister leave the cabin and heard her footsteps move away in the direction taken by Wassamon a short time before she concealed her face behind the spinning wheel so her mother might not see the fear it expressed.

Five minutes passed, then there came the clear, shrill hoot of an owl thrice repeated. "That's her signal," cried Polly, her voice wavering between laughing and sobs. "She's crossing the brook and just entering the woods. That means she's all right, and a brave girl she is, too."

Five minutes later came another "T'hoot," sounding very faint and far away. After that there was silence, save for the occasional howl of a maurauding panther.

All night long they waited, listening and trembling, hoping and fearing, and only when the light of a new day began to creep through the oil paper window did they hear the returning footsteps. Both of them were at the door when Sally entered, wet, tired, and with hands and face scratched by the briars of the swamps she had passed through, and then both stepped back involuntarily with blanched, questioning faces, for behind Sally was a strong-looking figure, but with face emaciated from long confinement—a man risen from the dead.

"George Benton!" ejaculated Mrs. Tarbox.

"Yes, George Benton," the man answered in a weak voice. "Sally rescued me. Tell them about it, Sally."

"It's all right, mother," Sally said happily. "The papoose was doubled up and wheezing, but I dosed and coddled him till he got better and then told his mother what to do. I didn't come away till he was out of danger."

"Did you see Wassamon?" inquired Polly.

"Didn't I, though," Sally replied lugubriously. "He stopped me when I was coming away and made me squat down and smoke a pipe of peace with him. He said that my friends should be his friends and that I should always be to him as one of his own family. Then he released all his prisoners, five of them. The other four went to their homes, and George came with me. Ugh! that nasty pipe! I smoked like a regular Injun, but it was awful. I'm afraid I can't ever get the horrid taste out of my mouth. Ugh!"—F. H. Sweet, in the Telescope.

A PARABLE.

By Rev. B. C. Taylor.

Behold a certain young man went down from the town of Ambition to the city of Opportunity to take a position. As he journeyed along he fell among strangers who were bound for the same place. Now it so happened that one of these men had come from the village of Make-Believe, and was honored and respected there as a Christian gentleman. The other two men were from the suburbs of Scofferville and General Complaint, respectively.

As they traveled along, by chance, the conversation drifted to religion and the church. The honored gentleman from Make-Believe naively commented that in his opinion the church had about served its day and that religion was nothing more than an impractical dream. The man from Scofferville admitted as much, and furthermore stated that he disliked to go to church because they were always crying about money for Sunday school buildings, the preacher's salary, and missions! Whereupon, the gentleman from General Complaint remarked that he had absented himself from the church because the minister seemed to make him the "bull's eye" in one of his sermons on "Laziness and Self-Indulgence;" then, too, he did not like the way the soprano soloist tried to "show off," and those white gowns the choir wore were nauseating. In the light of these comments the young chap from the town of Ambition resolved to quit everything connected with the church, for these older men ought to know what they were talking about.

The train whistle blew at this juncture, telling them they were pulling into the city of Opportunity. Each man grabbed his baggage and made for the door. On the outside, the young fellow was surprised to see that no one spoke to him or even gave him a friendly glance. He hurried to his boarding place, which had been arranged for in advance. Next morning he appeared at the office to begin work. The manager greeted him in a matter of fact way, showed him what would be expected, and hurried back to his desk. The week wore slowly away, and finally Sunday came. It was one of those wonderful spring mornings when all nature seemed to be praising God. The young man remembered his resolution on the way down, but something seemed to tell him he was acting unwisely. Upon inquiry, he found that Goodwill Methodist Church was the most convenient, and he purposed to attend the services. At 9:30 he appeared at the church and was met at the door by a young man from the "Fellowship" Bible Class. He was given a formal introduction and the class received him cordially. The 11 o'clock service was well attended, and he noted a harmonious feeling about the worship that induced thought and reflection. When the service was over many people greeted him with a friendly smile and a glad hand.

A feeling of relief possessed him as he left the building. He immediately planned to attend the League service. He found a fine group of young people present when he came in that night. They were using the theme, "Friendship," for the devotional service. He saw where the program might be strengthened, but there was a seriousness about it that attracted him. It was a surprise to see so many young people attend the church service that evening. The pastor preached on "Sowing Seed." It warmed his heart and challenged his faith, and he left the church determined to improve his life.

On reaching his room he reflected a long time on the events of the day. He contrasted the services with the criticisms he had heard. He made up his mind to live by the name of his home town, Ambition. Just before going to sleep that night, he remembered the words of the Psalmist: "Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my redeemer," and they brought him comfort and peace.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The biography of the late Dr. George R. Stuart, written by Dr. W. W. Pinson, will soon be from the press.

Rev. L. E. Crooks, pastor at Standard, La., is issuing an interesting monthly bulletin, "The Methodist Visitor."

Dr. W. Winans Drake, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Ruston, La., is being assisted in a series of pre-Easter services by Rev. W. E. Thomas, general evangelist.

Rev. H. M. Ellis of Marion Junction, Ala., has secured Rev. J. V. Bennett, of Belzoni, Miss., to assist him in a revival meeting some time in June.

Rev. R. H. Clegg, of Union, Miss., requests us to say that he would like to buy a set of Clarke's Commentaries, provided he can get one in good condition at a bargain.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation from Miss Mary Lucile Nabors to attend the graduating exercises of the Myrtle High School on Friday evening, April 22.

Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Ruston District, Louisiana Conference, has prepared an interesting program for his district conference, which meets at Athens, April 21-22.

Dr. T. D. Ellis, who is speaking daily at the noonday service at the Scottish Rite Cathedral, will preach each evening during this week at Rayne Memorial.

The revival services at the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., in which the preaching is being done by Dr. Burke Culpepper, are attracting large congregations, and much good is being accomplished.

Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle, of Noxapater, Miss., raised $42 on the mission special. He has planned for revival services, beginning on April 24, in which he will be assisted by Rev. Henry T. Young, general evangelist, of De Ridder, La.

The condition of the editor's father, Rev. Lyman Carley, is critical. All the members of his immediate family have been with him during the past week. Most of the time he lies in a semi-comatose state. The outlook is not hopeful.

Dr. A. S. Lutz, pastor at West Monroe, La., has planned a very full and fine program for his church during the month of April. Dr. Lutz is a thorough believer in the gospel of hard work—and a mighty good gospel it is.

Rev. F. L. Applewhite, Newton, Miss., writes: "We have placed the Advocate in more than half the Methodist homes. Credit for most of the work is due Mrs. P. L. Blackwell and Mrs. Applewhite."

The meeting at Morton, Miss., in which the pastor was assisted by Rev. E. R. Smoot, general evangelist, and Mr. B. G. Grenfell, song leader and young people's worker, was very successful. From Morton, this efficient evangelistic team went to First Church, Muskogee, Okla., for a meeting.

The First Methodist Church of Philadelphia, Miss., Rev. W. H. Saunders, pastor, has issued a very complete directory. In addition to matters of local interest, there is a considerable amount of general historical information which is valuable to all who may read it.

Rev. P. O. Lowrey, our pastor at Campti, La., is engaged in a series of pre-Easter services which began on the first Sunday in April and will close next Sunday. He is being assisted by Mrs. Olive Millsaps, of Shreveport, with occasional special music by the State Normal quartet.

Rev. A. J. Notestine, of Birmingham, Ala., who was in charge of the music last week at Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church in the services in which the preaching was done by Rev. Charles Lane, is preaching this week at Parker Memorial, assisting the pastor, Rev. L. W. Cain, in his pre-Easter services.

Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, presiding elder of the Minden District, Louisiana Conference, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Saturday of last week. He has prepared an interesting program for his district conference, which will meet at Plain Dealing, April 20-21. Dr. J. E. Crawford, of the General Board of Lay Activities, will be present and speak concerning the laymen's work.

Rev. H. P. Lewis, secretary for the Greenwood District, announces that the following charges have ordered Sunday School Day programs: Marks; Sidon and Cruger; Black Hawk; Carrollton; Tchula; Tutwiler; Drew; Ruleville; Lambert; Swiftown; Ittabena. These eleven charges constitute a little more than 45 per cent of the charges of the district.

The annual meeting of the Board of Temperance and Social Service will be held at Lake Junaluska, N. C., beginning Tuesday, July 5, at 2:30 p. m. In connection with the meeting of the Board, there will be held a conference on the work of the Board from July 3 to 10 which all those interested in the varied activities of the Board are invited to attend. The program of the Conference will be announced later on. Bishop James Cannon, Jr., is president of the Board.

A pilgrimage of Epworth Leaguers to Trinity Church, Los Angeles, Calif., where the first League was organized thirty-eight years ago during the pastorate of Dr., now Bishop H. M. DuBose, has been arranged for two weeks in July, July 14-29. A special train will be used. The party will leave Memphis on July 14 and arrive in Los Angeles on July 22. Rev. Ralph E. Nollner, 810 Broadway, Nashville, and Rev. W. G. Echols, of Birmingham, are in charge of the pilgrimage, and reservations can be made through them. Bishop DuBose, Dr. F. S. Parker, and carefully selected chaperones will make the trip.

FINE REPORT FROM MOORE MEMORIAL.

We closed two weeks' evangelistic services last week. The pastor preached every night. Two Teacher Training classes were taught each morning by Rev. R. H. B. Gladney and Miss Virginia Thomas. Twenty-five enrolled on Friday night of the first week. Forty of our members came forward and signed the "Stewardship and Tithing Covenant." On last Sunday, eleven were received into the church by baptism, and ten others by certificate. During the services $700 was raised in cash to apply on Grenada College Special, Superannuate Endowment, and Missionary Maintenance. The Advocate was placed in thirty-five homes. MELLVILLE JOHNSON, Winona, Miss.

FINE REVIVAL AT KREOLE, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: The Lord has recently visited this place with a real revival. Rev. J. M. "Jack" Johnson, of Magnolia, did the preaching. The Lord used him to bring gospel messages that stirred the people. Some remarked that it was the greatest revival ever in this place. I do not know about that, but I do know that sin-burdened men began to talk about the meeting and about salvation in a way to show that they were interested. There is much evidence that the Spirit of the Lord was working in our midst. There was much accomplished that will bear fruit in the years to come.

There were many conversions, a large per cent of them being adults. Some of the men were so deeply in earnest that in seeking to get right with the Lord they were willing to give up their jobs at the mill that required Sunday work. The ladies did earnest and effective personal work in the ladies' prayer meetings every afternoon. The whole spiritual tone of the church was built up, as is evidenced by increased interest in prayer meetings and Epworth League, by the number of family altars established, and by the large number of adults that now pray in public.

We thank God for the gracious revival and for sending Brother Johnson our way. Brother Johnson has the spirit of the Lord. He is earnest and preaches Jesus.

Kreole Charge, Seashore District.

WISE WORDS IN SUPPORT OF A WISE MEASURE.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Hon. William C. Langford, who represents the Eleventh Congressional District of Georgia in the Federal House of Representatives, introduced a wise measure when he offered his bill to prohibit in the District of Columbia Sunday theatres, Sunday baseball, and all forms of commercialized amusements on the Sabbath day.

While the bill failed of adoption by the Sixty-ninth Congress, it is to be hoped that it will be passed by the Seventieth Congress.

In a speech delivered in support of the measure Mr. Langford said many wise things which deserve the approval of all patriotic citizens. Among other points made by him in favor of the bill, he is reported to have said:

"I believe that our nation can never be greater than our citizenship, our citizenship never greater than our homes, our homes never greater than the children reared therein, and our children, who are to preserve this nation if it is to endure, can never be greater than is the faith of their fathers and mothers in God and in the teachings of his Word.

"I believe that the example of flagrant Sunday desecration in the nation's capital and the turning away from God, of which Sunday desecration is a part and parcel, are more insidious and more dangerous to our nation and all the people thereof than the invasion of a foreign army or the bombardment of a hostile fleet.

"I believe the city of Washington should be the nation's model of righteousness rather than its Sodom of ungodliness."

Of course, in certain quarters his bill will be denounced as "a blue law" and his utterance condemned as fanatical. That kind of cant is always applied by some to any and all efforts to preserve the Christian Sabbath and protect it against the attempts of greedy coveteousness to overthrow it in order to get gain from the schemes of corrupt commercilization. But Mr. Langford's contentions are amply justified by the history of our country and they are sustained by the wisest and purest statesmen of our own and other lands. He is in good company when he seeks to maintain one of the most indispensable pillars of social order and stable government.

Blackstone, the celebrated commentator on the common law, says:

"Profanation of the Lord's day, vulgarly (but improperly) called Sabbath-breaking, is a ninth offense against God and religion, punished by the municipal law of England. For, besides the notorious indecency and scandal of permitting any secular business to be publicly transacted on that day, in a country professing Christianity, and the corrruption of morals which usually follows its profanation, the keeping one day in seven holy, as a time of relaxation and refreshment as well as for public worship, is of admirable service to a State, considered merely as a civil institution. It humanizes by the help of conversation and society the manners of the lower classes, which would otherwise degenerate into a sordid ferocity and savage selfishness of spirit; it enables the industrious workman to pursue his occupation in the ensuing week with health and cheerfulness; it imprints on the minds of the people that sense of their duty to God, so necessary to make them good citizens; but which yet would be worn out and defaced by an unremitted continuance of labor without any stated times of recalling them to the worship of their Maker."

The renowned British statesman, Hon. William E. Gladstone, was not a fanatic, and in a speech before the House of Commons opposing the opening of museums on Sunday, he said:

"From a long experience of a laborious life, I have become most deeply impressed with the belief—to say nothing of a higher feeling—that the alternations of rest and labor at the short intervals which are afforded by the merciful and blessed institution of Sunday are necessary for the retention of a man's mind and of a man's frame in a condition to discharge his duties, and it is desirable as much as possible to restrain the exercise of labor upon the Sabbath, and to secure to the people the enjoyment of the day of rest."

Concerning the same matter the Earl of Beaconsfield (D'Israeli, who was a Jew) said:

"Of all Divine institutions, the most Divine is that which secures a day of rest for man. I hold it to be the most valuable blessing ever conceded to man. It is the corner stone of civilization, and its fracture might even affect the health of the people. The opening of museums on Sundays is a great change, and those who suppose for a moment that the proposal could be limited to the opening of museums will find they are mistaken."

That noble and saintly man, Dean Stanley, while the subject was engaging the attention of the British people, said:

"I believe there are very few in this country who would not feel that it was an immense gain to the solidity, the seriousness, the elevation of the English character, that on at least one day in the week there should be an interruption in the perpetual course of amusements and entertainments which, however innocent, tend to dissipate and distract the mind, and from which it was a great advantage to every thinking man to be from time to time disengaged and delivered."

The famous John Bright said in a speech before the House of Commons:

"The stability and character of our country, and the advancement of our race, depend, I believe, very largely upon the mode in which the Day of Rest, which seems to have been specially adapted to the needs of mankind, shall be used and observed."

The most eminent of American statesmen have held and expressed similar views with respect to the observance of the Sabbath.

Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, who represented for many years the State of Delaware in the Senate of the United States, who was at the head of the Cabinet during Mr. Cleveland's first administration, and who served as the ambassador of our country to the British Government, was a man of the most sober and sane judgment. He said:

"I most sincerely approve of the civil institution of the Sabbath. I heartily desire to see its observance under statute law, and the stronger law of habitual and universal custom and popular acquiescence."

Justice Strong, of the Supreme Court of the United States, made the following declaration concerning our Sunday laws:

"There is abundant justification for our Sunday laws, regarding them as a mere civil institution which they are, and he is no friend to the good order and welfare of society who would break them down or who himself sets an example of disobedience to them. They appeal to each citizen as a patriot, as an orderly member of the community, and as a well-wisher to his fellowmen, to uphold them with all his influence and to show respect for them by his conduct and example."

That superb Virginian, the late Judge John Randolph Tucker, went on record in these strong words:

"Ah! my friends, break down the fence of Christianity, and liberty and law and civilization will perish with it. I wish to testify my belief, that the institutional custom of our fathers, in remembering the Sabbath day to keep it holy, as the conservator of their Christian religion, is the foundation of our political system, and the only hope of American freedom, progress, and glory. Just in proportion as man is governed by his sense of right and duty, or by the religious principle in some form or other, he is capable of and fitted for duty. But, on the other hand, in proportion to his disregard of moral law, or the law of conscience, does the need of external power increase. Liberty must grow less, and power tend to despotism. When the Constitution and laws of a country, therefore, protect religion, they conserve that internal power over the man which saves liberty and makes despotism impossible."

Justice McLean, of the Supreme Court of the United States, made the following emphatic and unequivocal declaration:

"Where there is no Christian Sabbath, there is no Christian morality; and without this free institutions cannot long be sustatined."

Mr. Langford may well ignore the flippant talk of whippersnappers about "blue laws," when he considers the nature and lofty utterances of these eminent men.

We shall hear doubtless the stock misinterpretation of the words of Jesus by which men of lax views seek to justify infractions of the Sabbath law. They will say, as they have said a thousand times and more, that "the Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath."

True the Sabbath was made for man, and not by man. God made it in mercy to man. It is a divine and perpetual institution.

It was made for man, for universal mankind, and is, therefore, something more than a local or transient institution for some lands or some sections. It is designed for observance everywhere and always.

When by any means men are deprived of it, they are robbed of an inestimable treasure and an immeasurable blessing.

The late Dr. David Swing, of Chicago, was a liberal of liberalists, but even he perceived and proclaimed these great truths. In language both beautiful and forcible he said:

"Be Sunday ever so valuable as a day of positive worship of God, it possesses the additional value of being a blessed season for man, not as a Christian or as a deist, but for man as a rational, and emotional, and toiling, and resting creature.

"A Sabbath for man is something so vast that in order to measure the idea it would be necessary to measure first the idea of man. Could we estimate the being for whom the day of rest was made, could we learn how much love and thought his home demands, could we find the value of his self-introspection, the value of his meditation, could we appraise man's imagination, and fancy, and poetry, could we learn how deeply his soul needs an altar and a hymn, and understand the mystery of the death which awaits him, we might, out of such rich premises, learn the value of his Seventh Day—that day of intellectual and physical liberty."

Mr. Langford merits praise for framing and introducing his bill, and his defense of it was most creditable and cogent.

It is a wise measure wisely advocated by the Congressman from the Eleventh District of Georgia.

RAISING THE STANDARDS OF LARGE GIFTS.

The standards of individual gifts to benevolences have greatly increased during the last few years. Men and women have learned that it is a part of their duty to give the large sums necessary to build up and maintain the educational and other philanthropic enterprises of America. Our people are learning to serve and give rather than to "get and keep."

Among the many notable benefactions of 1926 the following are especially worthy of mention:

Mrs. Montgomery Ward gave $4,000,000 to Northwestern University.

Julius Rosenwald gave $3,000,000 for the establishment of a museum.

Edgar B. Davis gave $1,000,000 for the establishment of a foundation, the income to be used for needy children of Massachusetts.

Mrs. Charles W. Bingham and William Bingham gave $1,000,000 to Case School of Applied Science.

Three of these large gifts were to educational institutions, and the largest one was to a Methodist university.—W. E. Hogan.

AN ELEVATING CHOICE.

When I'm a grown-up man I'll do
The things I've always wanted to.
I'll hunt rhinoceros and deer,
And go barefooted all the year.

I'll live in tents and swim all day,
And give my dress-up things away.
I'll never do the chores!
I'll always eat my meals outdoors.

And call for one whole choc-late cake
The very minute that I wake.
But, still, 'twould be such lots of joy
To be an elevator boy.

Fly up and down from floor to floor,
And, oh, what fun to slam the door!
I guess that's what I'll do some day—
When I'm a man, grown up and gray.

—Daisy D. Stephenson, in the Churchman.

TRUE TO MOTHER.

Harold and Ralph were walking along the street when Ralph, with a smile, took off his hat to a lady on the other side.

"Who is that lady?" asked Harold.

"That is my mother."

"Do you always take off your hat to your mother?"

"Why, of course I do. Don't you?"

"I do to other ladies."

"Well, my mother is about the nicest lady I know. I think she's worth being polite to."—Zion's Herald.

MRS. D. R. LOWE.

Mary Stone, daughter of Wm. G. and Mary Simpson Stone, was born in North Carolina, Feb. 15, 1857. In October following, her parents removed to Carroll County, Miss., settling near old Midway church, west of Vaiden. Her life was almost entirely spent in Carroll County, its latter part in Vaiden. Uniting with the Methodist church in childhood, her life was spent in its service. In 1878 she was married to Mr. D. R. Lowe. Mrs. Lowe's life was that type whose worth and excellence make its course devoid of the incidents which furnish so large a part of human history. Human wrongdoing attract attention, while silent virtues are unnoted. So faithfully discharging her duties of wife, mother, home-maker, her useful life was passed in quiet contentment and peace. What she was at home is best seen in the love and devotion of husband and children. What she was to her neighbors is seen in their love and respect. What she was in and to her church, is seen in "the praise of all the saints." It is true in church and State that the really creative and sustaining forces are silent and unnoted forces! The home-making power of the world is the faithful, unselfish labor of unknown wives and mothers. The real power of the church is in the consecrated lives of its private members. When we note this, we see how very important in the kingdom of God are the consecrated personal and home lives of such servants of God as was Mrs. Lowe. Among many Christian graces it is known to the writer that she possessed the grace of hospitality. She ministered to messengers of her church, and I can never forget the genial, cordial warmth of her greeting when as a traveling preacher I was welcomed to tne comforts of her well-ordered home. To her husband, in the loneliness which must come after this companionship of nearly 50 years, and to the children who lose a mother, I tender my deepest sympathy. In such loss it lies not in men to give comfort. In this case it is well indeed that they may claim that greatest of all hopes, the hope of that greater life which is to come, for in full assurance of faith their loved one has gone before to beckon them upward to an eternal reunion. Mrs. Lowe is survived by four children: Mrs. C. L. Thompson, of Wesson; W. M. Thompson, of Greenwood; John Lowe, of Moss Point, and Walter Lowe, of Tchula; seven grandchildren, and her venerable and honored husband, Mr. D. R. Lowe, who awaits in readiness at the saddened home at Vaiden the summons to join the companion who has gone before.

N. G. AUGUSTUS.

Durant, Miss.

FROM ZWOLLE, LA.

Just a word or two telling of a few matters that indicate some progress.

It having been eleven years since I had the honor of being pastor (or should I say of trying to be) of five churches, I find it rather difficult to adjust myself to circumstances.

By the way, I had the honor of beginning my ministry, twenty-three years ago, under one of the best presiding elders our great church has ever had, Rev. C. C. Grimes, father of Dr. Charley Grimes, who is now presiding elder of the Memphis District.

As five churches were hardly enough, we developed another preaching place at a small mill town, and are planning to enter another new field in the near future. We give half-time here at Zwolle, and are here every Wednesday night for prayer meeting.

If preaching to five or six times as many people as one does in a small station, though not so often of course, means doing more good, then we are certainly doing that.

There are many good things we could state about the splendid folks of this circuit. A little over three weeks ago I was down with the "flu;" a few days later our son was operated on at Shreveport for appendicitis; two weeks ago Mrs. Sparks received word that her father was in a dying condition, and left immediately for her old home in Missouri, and last Tuesday our daughter, Lois, was operated on at Mansfield for tonsilitis and adenoids; during this time, in addition to regular work of this small (?) circuit, we conducted a revival meeting at Noble. Of course we couldn't have managed all this alone. General Evangelist Henry T. Young did the preaching in the Noble revival (and of course every one who knows Brother Young knows he did it extra well) and our good neighbors helped manage affairs at home.

Besides supplying the pantry, our good Methodists at Zwolle have given us substantial aid financially. We have never known our Heavenly Father to fail one who to the best of his ability does his will. "Trust in the Lord, and do good; so shalt thou dwell in the land, and verily thou shalt be fed" (Ps. 37:3).

We are glad to notice the brethren are keeping Brother Young busy. Pastors needing help should not hesitate at all to call this tried and true, real Gospel evangelist.

We were disappointed in not finding time to present the Advocate claims, and push matters in regard to the great advantage of every one of our homes having it. But were glad to send the goodly number of new subscribers from our well organized church at Prospect, where we found most of our folks ready to respond.

Of course one preacher could not be on the job at each church during the short period we had for the "cultivation program" for missions, and rains and bad roads hindered the local workers at each church. Hence we have only the following to report on the Special for Missions: Zwolle, $70.10; Prospect, $35; Holly Grove, $16; Bayou Scie, $14; Noble, $2.

We mailed check for $137.10 to Brother Meyer this morning. The above figures show the result of our being able to give more time to this exceedingly important matter at Zwolle, where we have not quite as many members as we have at some of the other churches.

The Sunday schools at Bayou Scie and Noble, which had been dead for several months, have been resurrected. We planned twice to have our efficient Sunday School Extension Secretary with us, but unavoidable circumstances prevented it.

Our beloved presiding elder is in excellent favor with all our people, and we are just now looking forward with interest to his coming next Sunday week for our second quarterly conference.

Our second daughter, Mary Kathryn, is more than delighted with Mansfield College.

Dr. Carley, forgive us if we have taken up too much space. Pray for us—we have some big problems here which are different in some respects from any we have found anywhere else. But by the help of the great Head of the Church, who never has forsaken us, and the help of these good people, we expect to do our best to make this one of the best years of our ministry.

We have planned to assist in two or three revivals outside our own charge. Brother McVey has already engaged us, and he is to help in one on this work. Would greatly appreciate it if some one else will take the other date.

LEE R. SPARKS.

Characterisitic is Bishop Lawrence's record of President Eliot's remark when Phillips Brooks was being urged for the office of bishop, "that the position of bishop did not call for a great preacher, but rather for a man of good sense. Dean Lawrence, for instance ,would be an excellent man for the office."—Paul R. Frothingham, reviewing Bishop Lawrence's autobiography, in the Christian Regitser.

I have, God forgive me, participated in a great number of examinations for the doctor's degree.—James Harvey Robinson.

A FINE WORK AT AMORY, MISS.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Amory, Miss., has started the new year with great zeal. We raised $1,000 in six weeks with which to install lights in our new church, and also kept up our dues, pledges, and mission study. We have just completed "Our Templed Hills," and have started a study of the Book of Judges.

MRS. L. B. ROBERTS,
Superintendent of Publicity.

ZONE MEETING AT SLEDGE, MISS.

The women of zone 9, Sardis District, came together at Sledge, April 5, meeting in the home of the zone leader, Mrs. Henry Howze. Three churches were represented—two Adult and two Junior organizations.

Mrs. B. W. Wadlington, president of Sledge Auxiliary, in a few timely words of welcome, made us feel at home.

After the devotional the following topics were discussed:

"Why Have Zone Meetings?" Mrs. Keating.

"The Duties of Officers," Mrs. Jepson.

"The New Standard of Excellence," Mrs. Pittman.

"Efficiency of the Mission and Bible Study," Mrs. Sam Gates.

Each of the Adult auxiliaries present assumed the responsibility of organizing or looking after some unorganized territory.

The Rural Secretary, Miss Hiller, was present, and gave a short account of the Council meeting at Shreveport.

Mrs. Sam Gates was elected zone chairman for the year. Mrs. W. S. Taylor acted as secretary.

After being dismissed with prayer by Mrs. Hanks, of Crenshaw, a delightful social hour was enjoyed, refreshments being served by the entertaining auxiliary.

MRS. A. M. SHORT,
District Secretary.

INTERESTING PROGRAM AT CRUGER, MISS.

The Cruger Woman's Missionary Society gave an interesting program at the Methodist church Sunday evening, March 28:

Opening song, "Jesus Saves;" Scripture lesson, Mrs. Buck McRae; Lord's Prayer in unison; talk by the president, Mrs. J. E. Turner; "Reasons for Being a Member of the Missionary Society," Mrs. C. A. Marks; "Why Have a Mission Study," Mrs. T. B. Smith; Song, "I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go;" "Summary of First Quarter's Work," Mrs. E. J. Hines; "A Few Facts About Our Superannuated Preachers," Mrs. R. B. O'Reilly; song, "The Kingdom Coming;" collection for superannuated preachers; closing prayer, Mrs. J. L. Harrison.

CALL TO PRAYER FOR CHINA.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is requested to join with the other churches in observing Wednesday, April 13, as a day for special prayer for China.

All of our people are urged to observe this day. In family devotions, in the Wednesday night prayer service and wherever possible in special prayer groups, let supplication be made:

1. That God will bring out of the present chaos a stable government for China.

2. That as a nation we may think of the good of China as well as our own in every official act.

3. That our missionaries may have special wisdom at this critical time and that they may witness to the true spirit of Jesus in their contacts with Chinese people.

4. That God may give the native Christians grace and power in this time of terrible testing.

GOOD MEETING OF SOCIETY AT WEBB, MISS.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Webb held its April business and social meeting Monday, April 4, 1927, at the home of Mrs. Nannie DeLong, with Mrs. J. J. Breland co-hostess. Twenty-two members were present. This Society has had both blue and gold stars in Mission and Bible Study for the past two years, and is beginning the study of "The Life of Christ" this quarter.

All local business was transacted and the Conference program followed.

MRS. W. J. STEPHENS,
Corresponding Secretary.

ZONE MEETING, GREENWOOD DISTRICT.

The first 1927 zone meeting for this, the seventh zone of Greenwood District, was held here Friday afternoon in the Methodist church. Mrs. J. M. Bedwell, zone leader, presided, with Mrs. W. W. Scott, of Sidon, zone secretary, in her accustomed place.

Mrs. S. J. Foose had charge of the music, and an interesting program was presented.

A short business session was held, in which Mrs. W. W. Scott, of Sidon, was elected new leader, and Mrs. J. E. Turner, of Cruger, secretary. Sidon was selected to hold next zone meeting.

A vocal solo by Mrs. E. K. Cunningham was next enjoyed.

"Why Have Zone Meetings," by Mrs. F. L. Hines.

"Duties of All Officers," by Miss Tommie Foster.

Vocal solo, "Somebody Knows," Mrs. Harvey Harris.

"Conference Dots from Starkville," Miss Laura Lee Peaster.

"Standard of Excellence, Standard of Efficiency, Mission and Bible Study Explained," Mrs. W. V. Bailey, district secretary.

Representatives were present from Sidon, Cruger, Acona, Thornton and Tchula, making a total of fifty-seven. During the social hour dainty refreshments of hot coffee and sandwiches were served.

How She Gained 10 Pounds in 22 Days

Skinny Men Can Do the Same

That's going some—but skinny men, women and children just can't help putting on good, healthy flesh when they take McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets.

As chock full of vitamines as the nasty, fishy-tasting cod liver oil itself, but these sugar-coated tablets are as easy to take as candy, and won't upset the stomach.

One woman gained ten pounds in twenty-two days. 60 tablets, 60 cents. Ask any druggist for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets and if you don't gain at least 5 pounds in 30 days your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money you paid for them.

Insist on McCoy's, the original and genuine.

Tennessee Lady Had So Little Strength She "Couldn't Get Around." Took Cardui With Benefit.

Gassaway, Tenn.—"I wasn't able to do any of my work, and it seemed like I had so little strength I just couldn't get around," says Mrs. Frank Murphy, who lives near here.

"My mother knew of the good Cardui could do, so she told me to take it. I sent and got a bottle, and seemed like all the time I grew stronger.

"I had been suffering with pains in my sides all the time, and Cardui helped this wonderfully. I needed a tonic for female trouble, and Cardui just fitted the need. I was awfully restless and could not sleep at night, but after taking two bottles of Cardui I could sleep 'like a top'. I got along all right, and I know it was due to Cardui. I can certainly recommend it to women suffering from women's troubles.

"My present health is just fine."

Thousands of women have written to tell how Cardui relieved them of pain and suffering, and helped them to improve in health and strength.

Cardui is perfectly harmless, being an extract of mild-acting herbs, and contains no dangerous drugs or harmful ingredients.

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Sunday School Day was observed at Jonestown, April 3, and at Coahoma on the 10th. Well done for the workers of this charge, who cheerfully follow their pastor, R. G. Lord! The day was observed at Greenville on the 10th. Possibly many other churches are doing likewise. More is dependent upon this phase of our work than ever before.

The training school at Greenville enrolled 61; possibly 50 credits will be issued. We have a strong faculty in this school—the head of Mansfield College, Rev. D. B. Raulins; two men in charge of departments from Millsaps College, Dr. J. F. Walker and Rev. J. E. Stephens; and Miss Virginia Thomas, Conference Elementary Superintendent. The enrollment from Greenville is very gratifying—five from Murphy, who drive eighty-four miles every night to attend the school. The fact that the school is held at night is the excuse offered by some, not so far off, for non-attendance.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Conference Superintendent.

On April 2, Saturday, we were in Rochelle, where we had a conference with leaders in regard to their Standard Training School. Two instructors have been secured for this school, Dean Smith and Clem Baker, both good ones.

On Sunday, April 3, I was in Leesville in the morning and Barham at night. I reached Leesville in time to visit the Sunday school, and was requested to lead the worship service in the Senior Department. At 11 o'clock we heard a great message by the presiding elder, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr. At 3 that afternoon representatives came for a "Set-Up" meeting for a Standard Training School. Mr. George Ferguson, of Leesville, was made chairman, with Mr. T. J. O'Neal, of DeRidder, as secretary-treasurer. The board elected Rev. J. D. Fomby, of Barham, as educational director. The attendance and enthusiasm at this meeting were great. Much credit is due Mr. J. H. Cain, of De Ridder. The following pastors were present: Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, Rev. A. H. Parker, Rev. O. L. Parker, Rev. R. F. Harrell, and Rev. J. D. Fomby. A one-day District Sunday School Conference was planned in connection with this school. Mr. T. Bivens, superintendent of the Holly Grove school, issued the invitation, which was accepted. The school is scheduled for Aug. 28-Sept. 2. At the close of the meeting, in company with the pastor, Rev. J. D. Fomby, we visited Barham, where my present associate, Rev. A. K. McLellan, served as pastor for several years. This little town is in a Sunday school attendance contest with its neighbor, Hornbeck. The attendance records of last Sunday reached over 300 at both places, with Barham in the lead.

Good echoes from the Monroe Conference continue to reach our office. Rev. B. C. Taylor, of New Orleans, writes: "I feel that it was a great inspiration to those who came." Mrs. L. D. Chaffee, District Superintendent of Missions for the New Orleans District, says: "I have attended six different conferences, missionary and others, during my six years' sojourn in Louisiana, and I have not attended one that has meant as much to me or helped me so much as the Monroe Conference. I hope to get busy and do some real missionary work in our district during 1927." Prof. Raulins, of Mansfield College, writes of the Conference: "To me it meant the exaltation of God in Christ to the central place in the educational work of our church."

The new pastor at Covington, Brother Jordan, is much encouraged over the work there. In a letter to the office he says: "We had 112 present last Sunday in Sunday school, and are aiming at 125 next Sunday. This is the greatest number in the history of the church. We have outgrown the building, and the thing I am asking you for is a plan that I can use in connection with my present church building that will accommodate the various organizations. I have a Senior League, an Intermediate League, a Junior League, Home Department, Cradle Roll, Woman's Missionary Society, and two Young People's classes that are without a meeting place. In other words, I need a parlor for the ladies, four additional class rooms, and an auditorium for assembly both in Sunday school and League. I just wish you could come over and help me plan how I am to have all these things in one room. Also, you might tell our Mission Board of a fine place to make a loan that would be for the glory of God. I am enclosing a plan of the church as it is, and you can give me some ideas. I am thinking we need a two-story Sunday school building in connection with our present building. I will not do anything until I hear from you."

The Haynesville-Homer Standard Training School has secured the following instructors: Drs. Wynn and Drake; Prof. Walker, of Jackson, Miss; Prof. Means, of Little Rock, and Rev. A. K. McLellan. The date of this school is May 29-June 3, with Rev. H. M. Johnson, educational director.

Mr. Clem Baker, Conference Superintendent, of the Little Rock Conferencet writes: "Dr. Parker rendered us a great service in our Training School. It was the greatest school we have ever had. We awarded 606 certificates, had 105 preachers and thirty-two preachers' wives taking credit." We indeed congratulate Brother Baker on this splendid success.

* * *

Dr. R. H. Harper, of New Orleans, writes: "I write to you to express my regret in not being at the Conference in Monroe. I had planned to go for a part of the time, but many matters connected with our revival campaign beginning here Sunday prevented my going."

* * *

Mrs. W. W. Holmes, Conference Elementary Superintendent, says: "I am very happy over the work done by our elementary groups at Monroe." We feel sure that this group of volunteer workers, with all the other groups, should have the thanks and congratulations of Louisiana Sunday schools.

Our faithful Conference Treasurer, Mr. A. M. Mayo, was missed at the Monroe Conference. He writes: "I am so glad to hear of the fine Conference. Matters kept piling up here that made it too hard for me to get away."

The Workers' Council of the Alexandria Sunday school voted to make a 20 per cent increase goal in membership by July 1.

THE EXTENSION SECRETARY WRITES.

Rev. J. A. George, of Ripley, writes: "We observe the fourth Sunday in the month as Missionary Sunday and take an offering and forward to Brother Lewis, Ruleville. Already much good has been accomplished. We have taken a survey, had council meeting—are having at least 20 per cent increase in attendance, etc." He is working the program of his church, giving missionary instruction in his Sunday school, which means a church to-morrow; took a religious census to find out the responsibility and obligations of his school; a fine piece of personal evangelism; visiting the homes of his community, calling the people's attention to their religious obligation and inviting them to Sunday school and church. In tabulating his survey, he is preparing in a definite way for his summer revival. Common sense—practical planning for the extension of the kingdom.

Rev. W. C. Newman says: "Our Workers' Council is the life of our Sunday school work. We could not get along without it. In the Workers' Council we get acquainted, co-ordinate our work, plan ahead and outline our school's policy." He is very right. Without the Council, as a rule, the school is a one man's proposition. I will underwrite the success of any school that meets monthly in Workers' Council and where each officer and teacher reads the magazine called "The Workers' Council." Price 20 cents per quarter each. Newman has vision, is wide awake, and knows what he is talking about. Watch Newman.

Brother, build, invest heavily in your Sunday school. From your school you get 85 per cent of your church members, 95 per cent of your preachers, your superintendents, your stewards, your League officers, the officers and members of the Woman's Missionary Society. Seventy-five per cent of our churches had their origin in the Sunday school—a Sunday school first and then a church. Logical, isn't it?

If your Sunday school goes well, you need not worry about the rest of your church activities. The Sunday school, after all, is the school of your church—your church members in school, the only school of religion our church has, our outstanding training camp for efficient workers. Give your school your best thought. Twenty per cent of our adult members are engaged in Sunday school work, giving in service (voluntary) the equivalent of $24,000,000 annually.

The following new schools have recently begun to observe Missionary Day and making a free will offering in support of our "Dual Special"—supporting the home and foreign missionary activities for which our Conference Sunday School Board is responsible: Byhalia, Blue Mountain, Duck Hill, Tie Plant, Artesia, Durant, Minter City, and Oxford. We now have ninety-three schools participating in this worthy program in keepnig with the Disciplinary requirements of our General Conference. We welcome these new schools to our honored list. We have a hearty welcome awaiting others. Come on, men, and let us make it 100 per cent. Let us stand by and support the program of our church—the best and greatest in the world. Other Conferences are doing it—why not ours? Send me the name of the chairman of your Sunday school missionary committee that I may send to him or her material to be used in observing Missionary Day. In doing this you are helping your own.

Expressions of grateful appreciation are reaching us often from the workers in the small Sunday school being helped by the Dual Special (Mission). These people were long neglected. Now they are being helped by training schools, institutes, classes, literature, visits of Conference workers and approved instructors. All this is made possible by the fourth Sunday missionary offering of our Sunday schools. We want you to have a part in this important work. Send your offering to Rev. H. P. Lewis, Ruleville.

E. G. MOHLER,
Extension Secretary.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NEWS.

Broad Street Church Presents "Golden Youth" on Anniversary Day.

The Leaguers of Broad Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, presented the pageant, "Golden Youth," in honor of the thirty-seventh anniversary of the Epworth League, March 27. Mrs. A L. Gilmore directed this pageant, and Mrs. E. J. Barksdale and Mr. A. L. Gilmore led the choir. Mr. B. F. Harrell had charge of the stage lighting, which consisted of footlights, electric star, and a stereopticon machine. With these, the tableaux were made very impressive and beautiful. The most outstanding tableaux were those representing the Mother of Jesus on the night of Christ's birth. The tableaux platform was covered with green grass, while a rough wooden manger formed a cradle for the Christ Child; there were two statues of cows placed around the manger, which made the scene very natural. The tableau of "Golden Youth" before the open gate of Opportunity was very pretty and impressive also. "Golden Youth" was dressed in a becoming costume of gold cloth and was a youth of about eleven summers. The gate was of ivory enamel, with roses entwined overhead. Mr. J. H. Weems was one of the important characters, playing the part of Chronos, or Father Time. His son, Harry, played the part of Golden Youth. The offering taken amounted to $5.26. This play was presented to a large audience at State Teachers' College on the following Sunday night at their weekly vesper service.

This pageant presented by the Broad Street League was recommended by the Central Office for the Anniversary Day program. Quite a number of Leagues were unable to give this, as it was impossible to obtain proper lighting effects. We are indeed glad that this League was able to present this effectively.

Broad Street Senior League to Have Sunrise Services.

The President of the Broad Street Senior League, M. C. Jordan, and the Superintendent of Spiritual Work, Miss Lora Parker, have planned a series of sunrise services for Holy Week. All Leaguers are expected to take part in these services, and an invitation is given to all church members to be present. These services are planned as preparation for the revival services which begin Easter Sunday at 11 o'clock.

A Visit to the Mississippi Girls at Scarritt College.

Brother W. D. Hawkins writes that he has recently returned from Nashville, where he attended a meeting. While there he dined with the "Mississippi Girls" at Scarritt College. The Mississippi girls are: Misses Jeanette Head, Rosa McNeil, Helen Sells, and Eugenia Pyron. Each of them sent her greetings to their friends. Miss Rosa McNeil and Miss Helen Sells will be at our Epworth League Assembly in June, and will have part on the program. We know that the Leaguers will be delighted at the prospect of being associated with these splendid workers during the Assembly.

Two District Institutes for Jackson District.

The first District Institute for Jackson District was held at Yazoo City on March 19. We did not attend, but from the program we gather that the discussions were both interesting and helpful. The theme of the Institutes was, "Leaguers To-Day—Leaders To-Morrow." The keynote address on "The Need of Leaders" was made by Rev. J. L. Decell. Mr. Stewart Dunning discussed "The Chapter Leader—The President." Miss Berta Nall gave a discussion of "The Devotional Leader." Miss Maggie Mae Jones led the discussion of the "Social Service Leader." Miss Mamie Chandler discussed the work of the "Recreational Leader," giving some plans for socials. Mrs. W. H. Bradley made a talk on the importance of fourth department work.

The second institute was held at the Capitol Street Church, Jackson, and the program was built on the same theme. The keynote address was given by Rev. T. M. Brownlee. The same subjects were discussed as at Yazoo City, with Miss Lucy Mae McMullen leading the song service.

The District Secretary of Jackson District is the first one to send a report of the Institute to the editor. We hope to be able to report others in the next issue of the paper.

BROAD STREET LEAGUE GIVES FINE PAGEANT.

The Epworth League of the Broad Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, presented one of the most enthusiastic pageants, at the college, Sunday evening, that has been given this year. The name "Golden Youth" typified the growth and expansion of Christian influence throughout the world. The growth of the Epworth League was also presented.

More than twenty-five members of the Broad Street League participated in the play. Miss Grace Lewis opened the play with a short talk on the general trend of education, akin to Christian development. Sheriff Hardy C. Norsworthy was one of the chief actors in the pageant. Sheriff Norsworthy represented a minister during the Puritanical days.

Others who took prominent roles were: H. W. Weems, as "Chronos;" Pauline Moore, as "Queen Isabella;" Ernest Gilmore, as "Columbus;" Myron Jordan, as "George Washington;" little Harry Weems, as "Golden Youth;" Frances Harrell, as "Epworth League," and Erline Allsup, as the "Madonna."

Special arrangements were made with the college League to present this play. Stage scenes were furnished, consisting of intricate work on the part of the committee appointed to care for this phase of the program.

Such scenes as the birth of Christ, Columbus interceding with Queen Isabella to sail west in quest of the new route, Puritanical days, etc., were depicted with the gratest care. The costumes were costly in many scenes.

The electrical effects were obtained by connecting wires to the switchboard. A star was lighted near the ceiling, representing the scene of the announcement of the birth of Christ. A spotlight was used in many of the scenes.

The house was packed with students, enjoying an hour of religious services and recreation.—Hattiesburg American.

HUNDREDS ATTEND METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOL CONFERENCE.

The first session of the Mississippi Conference Sunday School Conference was held in Capitol Street Church in Jackson April 5 and 6, with more than five hundred visitors from every section of the Conference present and participating in a highly successful meeting. Dr. John W. Schackford, Secretary of the General Sunday School Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, delivered two powerful addresses—one on Education in Religion and the need for Religion in Education, and the other on Evangelism.

The element of personality in religion was emphasized in a splendid address by Mr. L. F. Sensabaugh, head of the Department of Administration of the General Sunday School Board, at the last session of the Conference.

The afternoon session was spent in reports from unusually successful sectional meetings held in the morning.

The Adult Bible Class Federation was formed at the meeting of Adult Workers, which was led by Mr. Robert H. Ruff, head of the Department of Adult Work of the General Sunday School Board. The following officers of this Federation were elected: Mrs. W. H. Watkins, of Jackson, president; Hon. W. H. Livingstone, of Prentiss, vice president; Mr. O. H. Wingfield, of Jackson, secretary; and Mr. George Rogers, of Vicksburg, treasurer. This Federation should mean an increasing interest and emphasis on the work of the Adult Bible classes in the Conference.

Mr. L. F. Sensabaugh led the Administrative section, which was composed of pastors, superintendents and other general Sunday school officers, in a discussion of problems of administrators of local schools. One hundred representatives of sixty schools were present in this group. Mr. Sensabaugh had interpreted to the fifty check men present on the previous afternoon the "Program of Work" of the Sunday school.

The Elementary section reported thirty-seven schools, represented by sixty-five workers in a splendid meeting. The leaders of the four departmental groups in that section told of the problems discussed. Miss Margaret Patterson, Alabama Conference Elementary Superintendent, contributed much to this section. At the Elementary council meeting on the day before she interpreted with the workers the Programs of Work for the Elementary Departments and the District Programs of Work. The Conference Elementary Council is composed of the Superintendents of Elementary Work in the various districts and of several elected members. They elected Miss Madge Stuart, Superintendent of Elementary Work, Meridian District, as chairman of the Council for the coming year, and Mrs. C. W. Sullivan, of Hattiesburg District, as secretary. Mrs. J. W. Marley, Mrs. W. H.

FROM RALEIGH, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Things seem to be moving on well with us on the Raleigh charge. I was indeed glad to get back into the work after a two years' furlough on account of health. The lines have fallen to us in pleasant places out here. The good folks have treated us well all around, which makes us want to give them our best. The people are responsive to God's call.

Our Mission Special went over in good shape, and have put the Advocate into quite a few homes under the special offer. We have planned for all our meetings. Will have a country-wide Sunday School Institute and a Teachers' Training class in May. Brother Hull is to be with us at one of our churches in April.

We have some serious problems which only the wisdom and grace of God will enable us to solve. My health is very good—am able to fill all my appointments and do the other work. Brethren, pray for us.

LOUIS F. ALFORD.

FROM ROCHELLE, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: Sunday, April 3, was a great day for the Rochelle Methodist church. The first success was the fact that our Sunday school reached a hundred attendance, a mark we have been working to reach for the past three months.

At the 11 o'clock service we were honored in having as our guest the Winnfield Commandery of the Knights Templars, with visiting Knights from other points. There were thirty-odd Knights present and in uniform. To show that they appreciated the visit and to welcome them, our people filled the church and overflowed into the Sunday school rooms in the rear.

Mr. Murray, general manager of the Tremont Lumber Company here at Rochelle, gave an address of welcome. Special music was furnished by a quintet from the Commandery, and the sermon of the hour was delivered by the pastor in charge.

Mother!

Child's Best Laxative is "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry Mother! Even a bilious, constipated, feverish child loves the pleasant taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

At the night service we had no visiting delegation, but the congregation very nicely filled the house. And best of all, the Spirit of God was very present. All in all, it was truly a great day to us all.

The work generally is doing very nicely. The mid-week prayer service is especially good in point of attendance; with a church membership of approximately 120, we have an average attendance at our prayer meeting of forty.

And we have placed the Advocate in more than half of our homes, and are striving to get more subscriptions.

Brother P. M. Caraway is going to be with us in a revival beginning the fourth Sunday of this month. I solicit your prayers that this may be a season of great soul-stirring with us.

With best regards,

JAMES T. HARRIS.

NATIONAL MUTUAL CHURCH INSURANCE.

Nearly $100,000 every day throughout 1926 was thrown on the great ash heap by the more than 25,000 policyholders of the National Mutual Church Insurance Company, who then collected $249,103.32 from the company, which it had accumulated for that purpose. But for this preparation, what tragedies would have resulted among the unfortunate scattered throughout the entire country!

This brings the total amount of losses paid up to $2,493,557.91 since the business began, over 27 years ago. If, to this amount, is added the more than $2,100,000 premium saved to the members under the Economical System used by the company, it makes the large total of over $4,593,557.91 Methodist money. The largest single loss paid during the year was $50,000 to our church at Crisfield, Md., which only a few years before had collected for a total loss on their then smaller church. Had the advice the company always gives been followed and 75 per cent of the replacement value been insured, a larger additional amount would have been saved the Crisfield church, which was under-insured.

The company is constantly endeavoring to impress upon pastors and members the danger of under-insurance, no matter how well constructed the property may be. Notwithstanding the fact that the losses for the year were much larger than ever before, the financial strength of the company grew constantly. Its assets now amount to well beyond $1,000,000.

The Secretary-Manager, Henry P. Magill, 175 West Jackson Boulevard, Chicago, Ill., will promptly supply information needed.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

By W. Fred Long.

In one large demonination, a questionnaire sent out by Dr. R. H. Bennett brought replies from 4,634 preachers, showing:

Eighty per cent born in country; 8 per cent in village; 8 per cent in town; 4 per cent in city; 75 per cent reared in country; 8 per cent in village; 11 per cent in town; 6 per cent in city; 65 per cent fathers were farmers; 10 per cent fathers ministers; 6 per cent fathers merchants; 19 per cent fathers laborers; 96 per cent parents Christian; 4 per cent, no; 94 per cent attended Sunday school before joining church; 6 per cent no, guess they had none; 15 years average age joining church; 15 years average age when called to preach; 3 per cent under 13.

With all these dividends from the rural section, what are we doing to reach and encourage others? We have fewer Sunday schools now than eight or ten years ago. The church is spending millions on the city, and cents on the country. Lord, open our eyes!

A REMARKABLE OCCURRENCE.

At a called session held at Amarillo, Tex., March 29, the Northwest Texas Conference voted unanimously to move Clarendon College from Clarendon to Amarillo and to change its name to Amarillo College. Never before did an Annual Conference vote unanimously to change the location and name of one of its colleges.

Amarillo is to give the college an eighty acre campus and a minimum of $1,000,000 in cash for buildings and endowment. The trustees of Clarendon College were authorized to liquidate all outstanding indebtedness against the college and to transfer to the new institution all other net assets.

The Conference directed that the charter of the new college must provide that no mortgage can be attached on the campus or buildings, and that the endowment can never be diverted through loans to any church or church institution.—W. E. Hogan.

BEFORE HER BABY CAME

Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Adkins, Texas.—"Before my baby came I was so weak I had to stay in bed most of the time until I began taking Lydia E. Pinkhams Vegetable Compound. My mother-in-law, who is a midwife, told me it was all foolishness for me to stay in bed. She told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it would help me. She handed me one of your little books and I read it and was interested in it. I went to a drug-store that night and got a bottle of your wonderful medicine. I took it until the baby was born and was able to be up and do my work. Baby is 4½ months old now and weighs 14 pounds. I have plenty of milk for her and she gains steadily. I recommend it. I am willing to answer letters and will do anything I can for any woman, for I know how I suffered."—Mrs. A. H. Tschirhart, R. No. 2, Box 39, Adkins, Texas.

HUNDREDS ATTEND METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOL CONFERENCE.

Lamkin, and Miss Evelyn Lewis, of Jackson, were elected to membership. This Council set the following goals for Elementary Work in the Conference: 60 Children's Week Observances; 22 Standard Elementary Departments, and 114 Ranking Elementary Departments.

The Adolescent section of sixty-five workers, many of them superintendents of departments, led by Dr. Shackford, requested that the Conference next year provide for a section of representatives from Adolescent groups in the schools of the Conference, and that these Young People be urged to attend and participate in the Conference.

The Findings Committee expressed the general feeling of those present as expressed by a unanimous vote urging the Conference be repeated next year, and that those responsible for it be thanked for their earnest efforts. In order to further promote the continuance of the work of the Conference they elected the following officers for the coming year: Mr. R. C. Peebles, of Philadelphia, president; Mr. W. C. Mathis, of Petal, vice president, and Mrs. Horace Hinds, of Gulfport, secretary-treaurer.

Report of the Committee on Findings.

To the Members of the Conference-wide Sunday School Conference.

Dear Brethren: We commend the Sunday School Board for its forward look, calling together this conference-wide meeting of Sunday school workers. A new emphasis is being placed on religious education in the Sunday school, and gatherings of this kind will tend to stimulate interest and lead to more efficient activity.

The interest manifested last night and throughout this day by volunteer Sunday school workers gathering here from all parts of the Mississippi Conference would indicate the time is ripe for a permanent organization.

The inspiration that comes from contact with fellow-workers and the enlarged vision of the greatness of the Sunday school work will send us home each year better fitted to enthuse our local fellow-workers.

The messages of the representatives of the General Sunday School Board are both instructive and inspirational, giving us a bird's eye view of the need of the work in which we are engaged; such a conference may become a clearing house for our Sunday school work.

We therefore recommend that a permanent conference organization be formed, working in harmony with and under the supervision of the Conference Sunday School Board.

We recommend the election of the following officers for the ensuing year: Mr. R. C. Peebles, Philadelphia, Miss., president; Mr. W. C. Mathis, Petal, Miss., vice president; Mrs. Horace Hinds, Gulfport, Miss., vice president.

We recommend that these officers, together with the Conference Superintendent, constitute the executive committee, the Conference Superintendent to be ex-officio chairman of said committee.

We recommend further that these officers be elected for only one year and not to succeed themselves.

We note with pleasure the progress in every department of Sunday school work throughout the Conference as indicated in the reports of the section meetings. These reports indicate that unusually fine work was done in each section, and we urge our workers to return to their homes with a determined purpose to be not forgetful hearers, but doers of the work.

We recommend further that the federation of the Adult Bible classes formed in the Mississippi Conference hold its annual meetings in connection with the Conference-wide meeting.

REV. W. H. LEWIS, Chairman;
MISS MADGE STUART,
G. L. CARLEY, Secretary.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE LAYMEN AND FULL COLLECTIONS.

The greatest need of the church in a financial way is the collection in full of the regular assessments for Conference and General Work. These assessments, placed upon all churches according to an equitable ratio, are the bone and sinew of the financial operations of the church. Every program, every institution, every cause is dependent for success upon the collection of these assessments.

One of our greatest weaknesses lies in the fact that heretofore only a part of these assessments has been collected—something like 65 or 70 per cent of them. The church dollar has circulated at a discount. The stock of the church has to be sold below par. Instead of carrying on business with a full treasury, the church has had to skimp along as best it could with inadequate resources.

This condition is not due to a scarcity of money in the hands of the members of the church, nor, in all probability, is it due to the unwillingness of the members of the church to contribute to the causes to which they have pledged their support; it is due, more than likely, to a failure throughout the church to use a definite, business-like, systematic method of collecting these assessments.

The laymen of the church have looked the situation squarely in the face and have determined that these assessments shall be collected in full. The Board of Lay Activities has taken the matter in hand and, in co-operation with all the other angencies of the church, especially Conference, district, charge, and church lay leaders, is putting on a campaign of full collections that promises a successful issue. The heart of the plan is to be found in three features:

1. A process of instruction through which every member of the church is to be made familiar with the causes for which these assessments are levied and the needs of these various forms of activity. It has come to be recognized that the budget system, while it has its advantages, is weak in that it does not afford opportunity for giving full information concerning all the causes embraced in the budget. This lack of full information makes it hard for the individual member of the church to realize his full obligation to each one of them. Information means interest, and the laymen have determined to supply the information.

2. An inculcation of the principles of Christian stewardship that will bring to every member of the church the realization of the fact that the support of the church and of the work of the Kingdom of God is a duty as well as a privilege—that the obligation to give is not based merely upon human arrangements, but upon a divine imperative. We owe God a part of all we have and we have not met our obligation until we have paid what we owe. Without teaching that tithing is an obligatory injunction of the New Testament, it is stressed as being the simplest, most equitable, most practicable plan for adequate proportionate giving yet devised.

3. An opportunity for every member of the church to pay his share of the assessments levied upon his church. The essence of this plan is the every-member canvass. It is rarely if ever the case that all the members of a given church are at a service at the same time. An appeal from the pulpit usually reaches a fair proportion of them; but others who are absent, with or without good excuse, cannot be reached without direct personal effort. The every-member canvass is intended to see to it that not a single member of the church fails to have the definite opportunity to make his contribution to the institutions he has promised to support. If approached properly, we do not believe any member of a church will resent this solicitation, and we believe most of them will willingly if not cheerfully make a contribution.

This effort the laymen are making for collections in full involves a lot of time and hard work; but they are willing to give both, realizing how much the success of their efforts will mean to the church and the Kingdom of God. We doubt if there is a single charge in Southern Methodism that cannot pay its assessments in full if the collection is started in time and the plan proposed by the laymen is faithfully followed; certainly there are not many that cannot.

We have faith enough in our laymen to believe that they will do what they have started out to do and that they will secure this year the largest percentage of the assessments that has ever been paid into the treasury of the church.

REVIVALS—AND REVIVALS.

There is nothing better for an individual or a community than a revival of religion. Revivals are needed; they are normal in the progress of the Christian life; they are divinely provided for; they are the means, under God, of edifying the saints and bringing sinners unto repentance. A real revival is a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord, and its blessed results abide forever.

An imitation or "fake" revival is a poor substitute for a real one. It is not impossible—in fact, it is not difficult—to work up an imitation revival. Certain effects follow certain causes. A good practical psychologist, with a gift of gab and a high-pressure personality, can stir up an imitation revival almost anywhere. Given a sufficient amount of preceding publicity, a thorough organization of local forces in advance, and a good congregation to begin with, he can bring to bear certain psychological influences that, if persisted in long enough, will almost inevitably bring about an emotional upheaval that he at least will call a great revival. It is nothing of the kind, and the second state of that community is worse than the first.

We heard once of such a man—a good practical psychologist, with a striking personal appearance, a flow of language, and considerable histrionic ability—who stood before a great congregation and for twenty minutes rang the changes on, "There shall be weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth"—uttering not another word during that time. The inevitable happened; the people broke under the strain of the almost hypnotic power of the speaker, and there was a frenzied outburst of feeling that swept all before it. But the effects disappeared almost as quickly as they were produced.

God give us great revivals! God save us from emotional insanity!

HARD TIMES.

Following the low price of cotton in the fall and the disastrous floods of this spring, we are hearing a good deal of "hard times." The times really are hard with a great many people, as we have reason to know; but we wonder if they are as hard as we have been hearing. So far as we have observed, as many people are attending the picture shows as usual; we do not know of a single automobile that has been laid up because the owner was unable to buy the usual amount of gas—and the automobile dealers are boasting of increased output and larger sales; the baseball season has just opened, and the attendance at the games seems as good as in other years—maybe better. We hope those who do find it necessary to economize this year will not make all their savings at the expense of the church.

STATEMENT FROM ADVISORY COUNCIL ON BENEVOLENCES.

The last General Conference laid upon the General Board of Lay Activities the responsibility and definite task of securing the general benevolences of the church in full. The Board of Lay Activities was the normal organization to undertake this task, and we have come to the time when it is of vital importance that a very definite and constructive program be projected which shall put the benevolence collections on the heart of the church as a responsibility which the church must meet. It is perhaps true that the individual congregations do not realize as they send up to the Annual Conference a shortage on their assessments that this shortage is to affect the projected program of every general board of our denomination. By some process of propaganda and education we must lead our membership into realization of their duty in regard to this part of the program of the church.

Our United Responsibility.

All of the other boards of the church are expected to co-operate with the Board of Lay Activities in carrying forward this needed task which is upon the church now. We cannot accomplish the purpose involved of collections in full for Conference and General Work without a co-operation that shall be genuine and complete on the part of all the boards of our church. We perhaps fall into the habit, as a particular board set up for a special purpose, of thinking in the terms of the work of that board, so that we find ourselves now working in sections without due regard to the total program of the church; but the sections of the church work go to make up a whole which represents the program of our denomination in its entirety. It is a necessity, therefore, now, that we think afresh in the terms of the whole program of the church and also consider in a very definite way the base line from which all of the boards must proceed to their special activity.

We are coming into a united comprehension on the part of the boards of this united task concerning all of the benevolences, which in some cases now are put in one budget with the assessments for the local church work; and even here we are threatened by what seems to be a business plan to depend upon a budget system to carry through to successful issue the securing of moneys which have been asked for by the General Conference for the varied work of the church. The fact is that no system works itself. There is no particular appeal or inspiration just in a budget. We advise the best possible business methods in the procedure of the local church in securing the budgets necessary for its local work as well as the Conference and General Work, but at the same time strongly urge the necessity of making real to the congregations the causes for which these moneys stand and the purpose for which they are asked.

The Educational Factor.

Indeed, there must be a more systematic education of our people concerning their responsibility to these various askings of the church in order to produce the necessary response on the part of the local churches. Information concerning what moneys are needed for and what is being accomplished by these various assessments brings a reality to the mind of the people which they do not receive by simply asking for a contribution to a church budget. We cannot afford to disregard the educational factor which is involved in securing these assessments and at the same time produce in the mind of the people a satisfaction in the participation in which they share in making successful these askings of our demonination.

Methods of Education.

How shall we successfully educate our people so that they will respond to the request for gifts to carry on these departmental works of our church? It is necesssary, it seems to us, to have some definite and thoughtful statements which will be carried in leaflets to our pastors and people. It is also necessary in this educational program to request and urge the presiding elders, pastors and lay leaders to present in a systematic and intelligent way these causes to the various congregations of the church. This has much educational value in addition to the mere end of securing the money. It has an educational and constructive value that puts the mind and spirit of our constituency in the right attitude in the matter of giving. It will be quite impossible to reach these congregations unless some voice shall appeal to them by spoken word in the various local churches.

Every-Member Canvass.

The idea that an every-member canvass be made in behalf of the benevolences is a logical process in this educational program of securing the collections in full. The every-member canvass has great value in that it presents to the individual members of a church the claims and the reason for them that are presented from time to time by the church. We, therefore, urgently request that the Board of Lay Activities shall carry through the entire program suggested by the Discipline, that any every-member canvass be made in behalf of these benevolences after an educational program has been carried on in the congregation each year.

Christian Stewardship.

A Christian Stewardship program ought to be carried on in all the organizations of our church, for we must come to a more definite realization that Christian Stewardship is basic to both the right sort and to adequate giving. This program of Christian Stewardship cannot be completed in one year or in two. It must be carried on in every generation and through all the organizations of the church. Certainly no one can think for a moment that our denomination is not able to pay these assessments without any sort of burden or even sacrifice to them. It is not a question of the ability of our people to pay these assessments. Perhaps it is not even a question of their willingness to give more money for the greater benevolences of the church, but it is more likely a lack of interest, for which the leadership of the church is certainly more or less responsible. So in this concluding word we urge that a worthy program of education shall underlie any process or plan by which now we begin afresh to secure the full payment of all the benevolences of the church.

WHAT FULL COLLECTIONS WOULD MEAN.

By Dr. J. E. Crawford, Stewardship Secretary.

We have secured and tabulated definite information from the secretaries or treasurers of the several interests represented in the General Work which shows the importance of paying the benevolences promptly instead of waiting until the end of the year.

If one-half the amount of the assessments is collected and distributed by May 15, it would save the General Boards and other causes included in the asssessment for General Work more than $17,000.

The assessments for Conference Work aggregate a larger sum than the total assessment for General Work. Many of the Conference Boards have to borrow money to carry on during the year, while some are fortunate enough to add to their income by drawing interest on funds on hand. The saving to these Boards from both these sources would be more than the saving to the General Work.

The combined saving to both General and Conference Work would be approximately $35,000.

In addition to this saving, the payment of fifty per cent of the assessments in the first half of the year would make it much easier to reach the one hundred per cent goal by the end of the year and thereby save the million and a half dollars we have been losing each year the past four years through failure to pay in full.

Regular and systematic collections on the benevolences in the local churches and prompt remittances by the local treasurers to the Conference treasurers and by the Conference treasurers to the treasurers of the various Genaral and Conference Work funds will materially strengthen all our connectional enterprises and interests.

SAVE INTEREST AND CLEAR INDEBTEDNESS BY PAYING IN FULL.

By Dr. A. J. Lamar, Senior Publishing Agent and General Conference Treasurer.

There are special reasons which make it necessary for the boards of which we are treasurers to be paid in full if these boards are to do their work properly, even passably.

Lamar and Whitmore are treasurers of the following funds: Board of Temperance and Social Service; American Bible Society; Bishops' Fund; General Conference Expense Fund.

For want of full collections, we have run short and have had to borrow money on all of these accounts in order to meet payments which had to be met, except the American Bible Society. We are still in debt on these accounts, and unless the assessments are paid in full we cannot pay these shortages and meet the regular scheduled payments which must be met during the year. If the assessments for these interests are paid this year, we can meet all the demands of these boards besides paying the indebtedness which now rests upon each one, except the American Bible Society.

As to the American Bible Society, while we have not borrowed to pay the assessment made for that great interest in full, and will not do so, they have received only about 61 per cent of the amount assessed for them, while they have urgently needed 100 per cent.

The situation is a very serious one, and all interests involved must suffer unless there is a large increase in the collections over the past year.

RULES FOR MAKING A GOOD CHURCH MEMBER.

Number 6.

By "Rev. Ichabod Crane."

A good church member will always be working to win others to Christ and the church.

"He that winneth souls is wise." Prov. 11:30.

Soul winning is the greatest of all work. The soul winner is the person who makes heaven rejoice, and the world safe for Christianity. One of the most lovable characters in the Bible is Andrew; everywhere we read of him he is introducing some one to Jesus.

OUR EDUCATIONAL SITUATION—A WORD OF COMMENDATION.

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B. D.

Thoughtful observers of the educational situation to-day are recognizing that the most pressing need now before us is a larger number of well equipped, thorough, wholesome junior colleges, where two full years of college work can be done under conditions of more immediate oversight and less distraction than is possible in our standard colleges and universiites, where the congestion is such, especiallly in the freshman and sophomore classes, as to make the first years of college life almost demoralizing to young people at the very age when they need most wholesome guidance and control.

So the notice recently appearing in our Christian Advocates, "Whitworth Colllege Accepts Junior Rank," "that beginning in September the institution will be operated as a junior college for the present;" and that "The Junior College Comsion has already given it a leading position in the group," is highly gratifying to those who are thinking in terms of the greatest good to the greatest number to meet the greatest need.

We feel that the President and the Board of Trustees of Whitworth deserve the commendation and thanks of the Methodists of Mississippi in thus providing that which many fathers and mothers were earnestly looking for, myself among the number—a fully recognized, standardized, affiliated Christian junior college, from which, after two years, a girl can go to the larger standard colleges, maturer in character and mentally better prepared for advanced work than had she gone at once from high school into the overcrowded lower classes of the great schools.

Arkansas Methodists are also planning wisely in the same direction, and it must be gratifying to the Whitworth officials to see that the heads of Hendrix, Galloway, and Henderson-Brown Colleges in that State are all preparing to follow the pioneer example of Whitworth in accepting junior college rank, and providing the advanced courses in a new institution to be organized with adequate equipment and endowment at Little Rock. Even the students in these institutions, recognizing the impossibility of small colleges with debts and without endowment even approaching the required standards, maintaining standard college rank, have heartily endorsed this acceptance of junior rank and work.

With Millsaps College already established and endowed, it would seem that the problem is easy for Mississippi if an honest facing of facts and conditions shall characterize all educational leaders, and if the greatest good to the greatest number, and to accept and fill well the place where one is best qualified to serve shall be our guiding stars. A fine system of correlated colleges is easily within sight of the Methodists of Mississippi.

God speed the day when it shall be realized, in fulfillment of the rich meaning of the two words, Christian Education.

We commend the facts above stated to the consideration of the President and Trustees of our own Grenada College.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

In conversation with one of the leading citizens of our city not long since, a man prominent in his profession of physician and surgeon, we spoke of the intimate relation of mind and body in the art of healing. There is nothing used by the various pretentious schools or cults in the cure of suffering humanity not well known to the regular practitioner, stated the doctor, and when necessary of course used by them. This provoked a quotation from me—"We have this treasure in earthen vessels that the excellency of the power may be of God." Is it not astonishing how some will lay aside well proven methods of healing and allow themselves to be deceived by fads and ways that are altogether contrary to truths which are the result of years of experience and observation? It almost seems that the art of right reasoning from cause to effect is lost or unknown to many of these unfortunate credulous folk. Jesus, Lord of soul and body, effected miraculous cures during the period of his earthly ministry, but he never told people that sickness was a dream or fancy, an imperfection of the mortal state, or anything of this kind. Leprosy, paralysis, fever were intensely real to him, the Great Physicina, and he did not mince matters about them—he cured them. And surely as he used his means and power we are to use ours, each in his respective sphere. Anointing the eyes of the blind man, and commanding him to wash in the pool of Siloam, carries a lesson. Oh, yes, he could have cured him without that, yet he chose to do it after that manner. After all, the things, the deeds, that are worth while, in this old world of sin and sorrow, are wrought by the use of divine and human agency working together in more ways than many think. God honors us by making us co-workers with him. This is a blessed fellowship; let us not dishonor him by doing things in which he will not work with us.

The world war has left many evil results in its wake, no doubt, by the awakening of the worst passions of the human heart. One of the worst of these is the wholesale lying abounding in our country under the name of "propaganda." One man died in New York City from drinking the vile swill—blind tiger liquor. Forthwith it was bruited abroad, and proclaimed in our national halls of Congress that the authority of this government was being used for wholesale slaughter of its citizens. Great ghosts of John Barleycorn, they have added poison to poison! Rise, sheeted dead, from the tombs of centuries wherein you have lain during all these years, victims of alcoholic poisoning, and rebuke such sacrilege! Men never knew it was deadly to drink it before. Well, it's a choice between slow poison and quick poison. Take your choice, gentlemen, and move on to join the ghastly procession.

A system of propaganda is abroad in the land trying to stultify our Constitution, nullify our righteous laws, and in the end debauch our citizenship. "Be strong, quit you like men." I don't want to live anywhere else on this green globe except in these United States, and may God help us all to keep what we have and not let the enemies of God and man ruin this great commonwealth.

SUNDAY SCHOOL DAY IN THE SARDIS DISTRICT.

At the request of Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, our Conference Superintendent of Sunday Schools, I am sending a report of the charges in the Sardis District that have ordered Sunday School Day programs from me. The list is as follows:

Batesville, M. E. Jarrett, superintendent; Como, Rev. J. M. Bradley, pastor; Horn Lake—four schools—Rev. A. T. Davenport, pastor; Arkabutla—three schools—Rev. S. B. Potts, pastor; Byhalia—three schools—Rev. G. A. Baker, pastor; Cockrum, Rev. B. C. Whitehurst, pastor; Courtland—three schools—Rev. G. W. Robertson, pastor; Longtown—one school—Rev. A. C. Johnson, pastor; Oakland—one school—Rev. J. A. Patterson, pastor; Shuford—four schools—Rev. W. C. Galceran, Jr., pastor; Seay Chapel, Mrs. A. Carothers, superintendent; Mineral Wells, J. P. Moore, superintendent; Coldwater—one school—F. F. Veasey, superintendent; Greenleaf Sunday school, J. P. Bailey, superintendent.

This makes a total of twenty-six churches. We are confident that a great many more of our churches will observe Sunday School Day. I hope that every pastor will take this matter up immediately with his superintendent and order programs for his schools if the order has not already been sent in.

REPUDIATING WESLEY.

By J. R. Bingham.

Many Methodist ministers are sorely disturbed about evolution. Educators meet and pass resolutions in protest against attempts to forbid by statutory enactments the proper teaching of science. At once, fearful souls, attempting to protect the Ark of the Covenant, make the air vibrant and vocal with the charge: "You mean evolution, which is infidelity. No Christian can believe in evolution." Educators respond, "We did not specify evolution;" and are told, "No, but that is what you meant."

Wesley was wiser, saying, "I think and let think." He was never guilty of such folly as confounding opinion, either scientific or theological, with the essence of Christian faith.

We shall never reach an understanding till we shall have agreed on terms. Some one should submit a statement about evolution that all, at least all Methodists, may accept. As no one who is competent seems disposed to risk making such statement, I herewith present one which all true followers of John Wesley may and should accept:

"The universe is no less one in succession than in co-ordination. There is a prodigious number of continued links between the most perfect man and the ape. By what degree does nature raise herself up to man? How will she rectify this head that is always inclined toward the earth? How change these paws into flexible arms? What method will she make use of to transform these crooked feet into supple and skillful hands? The ape is this rough draft of man: this rude sketch, an imperfect representation, which nevertheless bears a resemblance to him, and is the last creature that serves to display the admirable progression of the works of God." Let all Methodists unite on this simple recital, then "Ephraim shall not envy Judah, and Judah shall not vex Ephraim."

THE SUNFLOWER MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.

The April meeting of the Association was held at Lambert, Miss., April 12. This was the first time the Association has met so near the north end of the district, but it was well attended, there being thirteen preachers and four wives of preachers in attendance.

Rev. T. E. Gregory, of Itta Bena, preached from the text, John 14:6, bringing a message full of spiritual inspiration.

The preachers entered heartily and earnestly into the discussion of the subjects on the program for the day, which were:

1. The most effective follow-up plan to be used after a revival.

2. The prayer meeting: Its place in the program of worship, and how to secure the best results.

3. A comparative review of the Superannuate Endowment Fund from the standpoint of Annual and district conferences.

The District Quartet, composed of E. E. McKeithen, of Drew; C. L. Oakes, of Lambert; C. T. Floyd, of Moorhead, and H. P. Lewis, of Ruleville, sang two hymns, to the delight of the Association. The quartet seems to be making some headway towards becoming a popular organization of the district.

The ladies of the Lambert church served a delightful plate dinner in the Sunday school rooms of the church at the noon hour.

The next meeting of the Association will be held at Schlater. Our "Bill of Fare" for the next meeting is as follows:

Sermon by Rev. W. J. Wood.

1. "What is a district spirit? How can it be created and cultivated in our district?"

2. "Religious training through Sunday school and training schools and its value to the church."

3. "What is the general effect of the evangelist upon the ministry and the church at large?"

4. "The kind of preaching we like." This last subject is to be discussed by the wives of preachers, namely, Mmes. C. T. Floyd, E. E. McKeithen and H. P. Lewis.

Interest in the Association continues to grow.

REPORTER.

THREE CHEERS FOR THE EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION!

By Julian S. Duncan.

News comes slowly to Brazil from the United States, so I am indebted to the Rev. John W. Ramsey for his arresting headline, which called my attention to the recent "astounding" action of the Educational Association. As a Southern Methodist, I cannot refrain from an expression of commendation of the courage and statesmanship of the resolution which placed the Association on record "as opposed to all legislation that would interfere with the proper teaching of scientific subjects in American schools and colleges."

Protestantism in the South is often accused of being hopelessly reactionary. It sometimes is. But in this case we find the Association showing real leadership. I was in Mississippi when the law interfering with the proper teaching of biological science in States schools was passed. The newspapers in the section, particularly the one with perhaps the largest circulation, played up to popular prejudice. And when organized religion takes a stand like this, it will show that the church is not to blame for all the shortcomings of the South and that from organized religion may come forces to defeat the legislative attempts to take us back to mediaeval times.

The intent of the resolution is so unmistakable that it takes away the mood to criticise because the word evolution is not directly used. Whether or not evolution is a part of biological science may be left to the educators to settle. If evolution is true, it will remain as a part of biological teaching. And if true, it cannot be opposed to religion, for God is the source of all truth, and God cannot be opposed to himself. It is a question which cannot be settled by legislative enactment.

THE TREND TOWARD UNITY IN RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

By J. Marvin Culbreth.

One of the most important outcomes of the new emphasis upon Religious Education is the recognition of the necessity of unity as essentiol to the success of the undertaking. Illustrations of the tendency toward unity are to be found in the changing relationships among educational agencies of the church as well as in the closer approach of different denominations to each other.

One of the most interesting examples of a unified program of Religious Education in a local congregation is being developed at Fayetteville, Ark. A unified department of young people's work has been organized which takes care of the interests formerly divided among the Sunday school, the Epworth League, and the Young People's Missionary Society. The plan provides for large participation by young people in the stated worship of the congregation as well as in the activities usually left entirely to youth. The cumbersome machinery of class, departmental, and Epworth League organizations has been set aside and the entire program is under the direction of a single set of officers. There is one budget for the support of the entire program and a consistent and constructive succession of events is worked out to meet the needs of the young people of the congregation.

The plan has already resulted in increased attendance and more efficient work in the religious activities of the church. So well has the plan been received by the young people and the congregation as well, that interest in a similar development in other places is being widely created. The Department of Religious Education of the Board of Education, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., will be glad to furnish any persons interested with a copy of the plan and such other information as may be desired.

Illustrations of the closer approach of the denominations in the work of Religious Education are rapidly multiplying. The pioneer in this field in the South is the Bible College at the University of Missouri. Founded by the Disciples a quarter of a century ago and designed from the beginning to be a co-operative enterprise, the college at present includes representatives on its faculty from four leading denominations. The Disciples have two professors, and the Congregationalists, the Presbyterians, U. S. A., and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, one professor each. The support of a full-time professor entitles any denomination to one representative on the Board of Curators of the Bible College. As in any well organized college, the different members of the faculty head up distinct departments of learning. No denominational divisions are recognized. For example, students enrolling for Religious Education find their way into the class room of the Professor of Religious Education, regardless of denominational affiliations. It is the same way with Departments of History, Bible Philosophy, and Psychology.

The enrollment in a given year of the Bible College has reached nearly five hundred. The constant attendance upon classes amounts well up toward four hundred. The college has established cordial relations with the university, by which it is recognized as an accredited School of Religion. Any student has choice among forty hours of work in Bible and Religious subjects toward the degree, and may take sixteen hours, for which credit will be allowed.

The influence of the Bible College upon the university community is highly gratifying because religion is set before the students on a plane of importance equal to that of any other interest in life. The spirit of the college has been caught by the students and they have organized a Student Religious Council, which extends the principle of fellowship to Jews and Catholics, as well as the various Protestant sects.

Another example of co-operation among the denominations in a School of Religion is to be found at the University of North Carolina. Presbyterians, Episcopalians, Methodists and Baptists, have formed a corporation for the purpose of conducting a School of Religion at Chapel Hill, the seat of the university. The Board of Control has the right to elect a dean and other members of the faculty of the School of Religion. The school was opened in the fall of 1926. While the university has given encouragement to the establishment of the school, the work of the school has not yet been approved by the faculty for credit toward the degrees. Friends of the school, however, are confident that the enterprise will speedily commend itself to the university authorities and soon be given the same recognition that is accorded to the Bible College of Missouri.

At the University of Arkansas is to be found the germ of a co-operative School of Religion. Disciples, Baptists, Methodists, and (probably by this time) the Presbyterians have drawn up an agreement to establish a School of the Bible at the University of Arkansas, effective September, 1927. The university is greatly interested in the development of the school. Already two instructors are employed, one by the Methodists and one by the Baptists, and the courses they offer are credited by the university to the extent of nine hours for the college course.

In two other university centers joint enterprises are in process of development. For more than a year several denominations have considered a plan to establish a Religious Foundation at the University of Kentucky. While no definite decision has been reached, nevertheless progress is being made, and the day is not far distant when those who are enterprising the school will realize their ambition.

Oklahoma furnishes the latest example of an effort to establish an inter-denominational School of Religion. A corporation has already been formed under the name of the Oklahoma School of Religion. It is to be controlled by a board of five trustees, three ministers and two laymen, one of whom shall be the president of the University of Oklahoma. The board at present includes within its membership a Congregationalist minister, a Methodist minister and a minister of the Presbyterian Church, the president of the University of Oklahoma and the dean of the university. It is proposed to lease a plot of ground from the university upon which an adequate building for the School of Religion shall be erected. A building fund and an endowment will be raised. Already there exists at the university a Department of Religion, and this department is to be expanded into the School of Religion. For several years, the university has allowed credit for courses in Bible and other religious subjects.

With such articles as "The Break-up of Protestantism," which appeared in the Atlantic Monthly for March, 1927, and "Jimmie Goes to Sunday School," which appeared in Scribners' for February, sounding the knell of a large section of the organized churches in America, it is heartening to discover that a positive trend toward a new synthesis of religious agencies has set in.

SOUTHERN METHODISM BY VOTE OF HER QUARTERLY CONFERENCES PLEDGED TO RAISE IN FIVE YEARS OVER $10,000,000 FOR SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT, AND BY EVERY TOKEN OF HONEST PURPOSE SHE SHOULD CARRY THROUGH

By LUTHER E. TODD, Secretary of the Board of Finance

WORK FAST

Is there any other class of men in the world that would suffer a total of $3,000,000 salary deficit and be sweet about it? Would other men go on working faithfully and uncomplainingly during the years the salary deficit was accumulating? No, they would not. But these servants of the Lord did. If they went to Conference one year with a good part of their salaries unpaid, they often went right back to the same churches to be treated in the same way another year. Thus throughout their ministry they toiled in the name of Christ, accepting cheerfully what they received for their services, and succeeded in laying the foundations for what has become one of the most powerful organizations in the world.

These veterans of the Cross have stood every test of character and have come forth without spot or blemish. They had "strong minds, brave hearts, true faith and ready hands. They could not be purchased by the spoils of position. They were not afraid to think or to voice their opinions with a will. When there was a good worldly price upon silent lips, concerning vital questions, they lifted their voices as true prophets and went hungry to their beds. Such men cannot be lightly cast aside in their old age. The "God of our Fathers" will not permit it. The men who went down deep and laid the mud-sills of the Church, must have an adequate old-age support. The same unerring Providence, which guided them through those trackless wastes, will not allow the Church to forget and neglect them in the days of their infirmities.

THE NEED OF THE BOARD OF EDUCATION FOR ONE HUNDRED PER CENT PAYMENT OF ASSESSMENTS.

By Stonewall Anderson, General Secretary, Board of Education.

The Board of Education receives the proceeds of the General Conference assessment of $129,000 to carry on its several lines of work. Although each of the last three General Conferences has committed to the board new tasks calling for a large increase in expense, there has been very little increase in the assessment. In fact, the receipts during the quadrennium 1922-26 were less than during 1918-22. Even with the most rigid economy, therefore, the board will need the entire assessment of $129,000 in order to do in a satisfactory way the work which the General Conference has committed to it. The several departments of the Board, with the amounts necessary for carrying on the work are as follows:

1. General administrative work $25,000
   This is for general oversight of schools; preparing, publishing and distributing reports, statistics, literature; handling the finances of the board, including investment and disbursing of loan funds; visitation of Annual Conferences, assemblies and schools; the general promotion of Christian Education and other administrative expenses connected with the several departments.
2. Conservation of Christian Education movement and the Department of financial aid to colleges.....$15,000
   Adequate financing of church schools is their greatest need, and the successful operation of this department will affect every educational institution of our church.
3. Pastors' Schools $20,000
   The last General Conference committed to the Board of Education this work, but provided no additional funds for it. About fifteen of these schools are held each year, giving inspiration and instruction to hundreds of preachers.
4. Promotion of Religious Education.....$32,000
   This is for student pastors and religious education in both our church schools and State institutions. The last General Conference committed this work entirely to the Board of Education. The opportunities here are very great and the needs urgent.
5. Appropriations to Schools $22,000
   We have a number of schools in mountain territory and undeveloped sections which are doing a most worthy work. Without these appropriations they could not keep their doors open.
6. Co-operative work $5,000
   The several boards co-operate in certain activities, such as the life service bureau, joint conferences, and other important church-wide meetings.

The activities outlined above require the full amount of the $129,000 assessment. It will be impossible for the board to carry on this work in a satisfactory way and without financial embarrassment unless the assessment is paid in full.

Theological Schools.

The General Conference assessment for Theological schools is $80,000, the proceeds of which are divided equally between the Candler School of Theology, Atlanta, Ga., and the School of Theology of Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex. These schools have small endowments and sorely need much more than the $40,000 which each would receive if the church should pay 100 per cent on the assessment. They should be training a much larger number of young preachers. In comparison with the other great churches of the country, our theological schools have a small number of students and an exceedingly small income. Payment in full of this assessment is very important.

THE FORGOTTEN MAN AND FULL PAYMENT OF THE BENEVOLENCES.

By Luther E. Todd, General Secrtary, Board of Finance.

The General Conference of 1926 approved an annual assessment of $191,000 on the whole church for the benefit of the Board of Finance. The sum realized on this assessment is to be used by the board in connection with its work in behalf of the superannuated preachers and widows and orphans of preachers.

Therefore, the importance of full collections on this assessment should be evident to all who are interested in seeing this cause make proper headway. This money makes it possible for every dollar contributed on Special Effort quotas to be credited 100 per cent to the Endowment. It also makes it possible for an increased amount to be appropriated each year for the support of the claimants. Surely these reasons should inspire every pastor to make the largest possible return on this assessment.

As a rule, the assessments for benevolences have to do with objects that do not directly affect the preachers. But the money raised in this way for the Board of Finance does go directly and solely for the benefit of preachers. Also it is used to help them at a time when they, as a rule, are unable to help themselves—that is, when superannuated.

Lay members, who have through the years been ministered unto by the preachers in spiritual affairs, ought to be quick to take an interest in an assessment that helps the preachers in material affairs when they are too old longer to serve as pastors. A little meditation upon this should serve to cause many lay members, who have hitherto contributed sparingly to the benevolences, to give in proportion to the benefits they have received.

THE NEED OF THE HOSPITAL BOARD FOR FULL PAYMENT OF ASSESSMENTS.

By C. C. Jarrell, General Secretary, Hospital Board.

The General Hospital Board has been charged with the enormous task of informing the church about a new movement and arousing the church to a sense of new duties. Thus it will be seen that its task is doubly difficult. For this heavy undertaking the General Hospital Board has had since its organization (1922) the income from a slender assessment. To begin its work and accomplish anything at all, the board has had to borrow some money. It has accumulated a deficit of about $7,000. This must be liquidated.

The board must put on an enlarged program of information and inspiration to inform and arouse the church, and thus take advantage of the enlarged legislation that passed the General Conference, May, 1926. The psychological as well as the logical time to do this is in the first year of the quadrennium.

The income of the board is based on an assessment of $50,000. This allows not one dollar for special enterprises, not even the work for tuberculars at Tucson, Arizona. If all this were raised, the board could begin to promote the Golden Cross Enrollment, create a literature on this new and most important cause, and stimulate the Conferences to inaugurate hospital enterprises where they are needed. To put the assessment of the board down to a mere living wage and then fail to pay that will cripple the board, postpone a worthy beginning of our healing ministry and almost render ineffective the money we have actually spent.

To pay salaries for a small office force; to print and distribute a literature; to impress the ministry with the nature and importance of the work; to furnish the charges with Golden Cross material for the Enrollment; to overcome the inertia and lack of information incident to a big, new, special movement, every dollar of the assessment will be needed, else the work will be marred in its very beginning.

We have waited a long time to begin to obey the Master's command to heal the sick—we are far behind the Baptist, Northern Methodist and Roman Catholic Churches. The Baptist Church allows its Hospital Board $150,000; the Northern Methodists still more; and the Catholics put $60,000,000 a year into their hospitals. For us to promise just $50,000, and then not pay that, would be pitiable. There is a line where neglect indulged too far becomes disobedience. The benevolence dollar must be lifted out of bankruptcy into solvency.

WHY THE ASSESSMENT FOR LAY ACTIVITIES SHOULD BE PAID IN FULL.

By G. L. Morelock, General Secretary, Board of Lay Activities.

The General Board of Lay Activities is a promotional agency. It inculcates loyalty to every part of the church's program; it seeks to make every member a personal witness for Christ; it strives to lead the laity to the highest ideals and standards of Christian living and service. It is specifically charged with the promotion of Christian stewardship, men's work through the Wesley Brotherhood, and the full payment of the benevolences.

Christian stewardship cultivation undergirds the entire program of the church. It is not for one cause alone, but for all the causes of the kingdom. It likewise deepens and enlarges the spiritual life of the church, for it develops in the membership a sense of personal responsibility for the use of life, time, talent, money, and influence.

The Wesley Brotherhood mobilizes the men of Southern Methodism—our greatest unused asset—for fellowship, prayer, study of the church's program, and greater activity in all phases of Christian work. Such mobilization makes for a spirit of brotherliness and power of achievement which are otherwise impossible. Our most effective contribution to world peace and international goodwill lies in the promotion of Christian brotherhood.

The full payment of the benevolent claims is the outstanding, immediate practical objective of the Board of Lay Activities. In this important task it is to have the co-operation of all the other boards and agencies of the church, for the work of every one of our boards is involved and all our connectional interests will be conserved and strengthened by the fulfillment of this task. The collection of the assessments for General and Conference Work is the greatest financial responsibility that has been committed to any board of the church.

The Board's income from the assessment is inadequate and must be supplemented from other sources. The whole amount of the assessment, which is only $50,000, could be wisely invested in any one of the three major phases of its work.

A determined-looking man entered a barber shop and demanded a "haircut without conversation." "Excuse me, sir," said the man in charge, but—"

"I won't excuse another word," interrupted the customer. "I've just left my regular barber because he was too talkative, and I insist on you cutting my hair without chatter."

When the click of the scissors had been going on for about ten minutes the man in the chair found that his head was looking like a well-known scrubbing brush.

"What do you mean by this?" he roared.

"It's the best I can do, sir," replied the man. "I never cut anybody's hair before in my life. You see, the barber has gone out to lunch. I'm the plumber and just come to look at a leaking pipe."—Western Christian Advocate.

The Home Circle

THE LITTLE LAD.

The people followed Christ one day,
A long way from the town;
Till, tired and faint, he made them stay,
And on the grass sit down;
And then there came a little lad,
With loaves and fishes small,
And gave to Jesus what he had,
Enough to feed them all.

For when the Master blest and brake,
The loaves grew large and fair;
The food was sweet for his dear sake
To those who feasted there;
And as amid the crowd, the boy
Beheld his gifts increase,
He had a new and deeper joy,
In Christ's own smile of peace.

And when the thousands he had fed,
Were going home again,
Twelve baskets full of fish and bread
Were gathered on the plain;
And surely at his mother's side,
That night the tale was told,
How Jesus blessed and multiplied
His gifts, a thousandfold.

And still Christ takes the children's store
Of loving thought and deed,
And uses them for evermore
To help the great world's need;
And whoso makes one mourner glad,
Or speaks one healing word,
Shall gather, like the little lad,
A wonderful reward.

LITTLE WILL TRY.

Little Jane was sitting on the floor, playing with her blocks.

"Jane," said Mother, "it is time for supper. Pick up your blocks, and put them in your play-box."

"I tan't," said little Jane.

"Oh, yes, you can," said Mother. "You are getting to be a big girl now. You can pick up your blocks just as easily as anything."

But Jane shook her curly head and said, "No, Muvver, I tan't."

"Then, come help Mother pick up the blocks," said Mother. "See if you can pick up more than Mother does." Jane picked up the blocks as fast as ever she could.

"There, you see you can pick up your blocks," said Mother.

"No, tan't all by myself," said Jane.

After supper, Daddy said, "I wonder if there's any little girl around here who can get Daddy's slippers for him."

Jane looked up from her picture-book and said, "I tan't, Daddy."

"Suppose you try."

"No, Daddy, I tan't," said Jane.

Big Sister Helen said, "I'll get you slippers, Daddy."

"All right," said Daddy, "for little Jane can't."

"That is a good name for her," said Mother, "little Jane Can't."

"Oh, no," said Daddy. "That's not a good name; that's a bad name. I shouldn't want my name to be little Jane Can't."

"Yes, that is my name," said little Jane, "'cause I tan't do fings."

"All right," said Mother. "We will call you little Jane Can't."

The next day, little Jane and Mother went to see dear Grandmother. After Grandmother had kissed little Jane and Mother, she said, "Jane, please close the door for Grandmother."

"I tan't," said Jane.

"You can't?" asked Grandmother.

"No, I tan't," said little Jane.

Mother said, "You see, Grandmother, this is little Jane Can't, who has come to see you to-day."

"Oh," said Grandmother, "I thought it was my dear little Jane."

"I am your dear little Jane," said Jane, as she ran to Grandmother.

"If you are my dear little Jane," said Grandmother, "you are not going to be little Jane Can't. Now, run and close the door for Grandmother, and be her dear little Jane again."

"But I tan't, Grandmuvver. Don't you see I tan't?" said Jane.

"Could you close the doof if some one would help you, Jane?" asked Grandmother.

"Of tourse I tould," said Jane. "You help me, Grandmuvver."

"No," said Grandmother, "I know a better way," and she took little Jane upon her lap.

"There is a little fairy who stays around all the time, waiting to help little girls do things their mothers and daddies and grandmothers ask them to do."

"Where is the fa'wy?" asked Jane, as she looked all around. "I don't see him."

"You can't see this little fairy," said Grandmother, "but he will come to help you if you call him."

"What's his name?" asked Jane.

"His name's Will Try," said Grandmother, "and here is the way you have to call him every time. You must shut your eyes, and say:

"'Me-o, me-o, me-o my,
I can do it if I try.'"

Jane shut her eyes tight, and said:

"Me-o, me-o, me-o my,
I tan do it if I twy."

"That is right," said Grandmother. "Now I wonder if you can close that door."

Jane jumped down off Grandmother's lap and ran to the door, and shut her eyes, and said:

"Me-o, me-o, me-o my,
I tan do it if I twy."

And she gave the door a big push, and, bang, it went shut.

"I did it! I did it!" cried Jane, as she ran back to Grandmother. "Will Twy and I did it, Grandmuvver, didn't we?"

"Of course you did," said Grandmother, "and Will Try and you can do it every time, if you don't forget to ask him."

"I won't forget," said Jane.

When Mother and Jane went home from Grandmother's, Jane took her blocks out of her play-box, and played with them until Mother said, "Jane there comes Daddy. Pick up your blocks, and get ready for supper."

"I tan't," said Jane. "Oh, I fordot," and she shut her eyes and said:

"Me-o, me-o, me-o my,
I tan do it if I twy."

And she picked up her block as fast as ever she could.

After supper, Daddy said, "I wonder if little Jane Can't is going to get Daddy's slippers for him to-night?"

"My name's not little Jane Tan't," said Jane.

"It isn't?" said Daddy. "What is it, then?"

"I'll show you fwat my name is," said Jane, and she shut her eyes and said:

"Me-o, me-o, me-o my,
I tan do it if I twy."

And away she ran, and came back in a minute with one of Daddy's slippers in each hand.

"Well, well, well!" said Daddy. "I should say your name isn't little Jane Can't. Why your name's little Jane Try, isn't it?"

"Uhhuh," said Jane, "my name's Jane Twy, and my little faiwy's name is little Will Twy."

"You must be little brother and sister Try," said Daddy. "That's a fine family."—From "Stories New and Stories True, and How to Tell Them," by Bertha Baldwin Tralle. Fleming H. Revell Company, New York.

PLAYING INDIANS.

We do have the greatest fun
Acting Indians—on the run.

Each one has a special name
When we play this lively game.

Sister is called Smiling Face—
She 'most always wins the race.

Junior's name is Laughing Boy
'Cause he chuckles so with joy.

They all call me Merry Heart
When I take an Indian part.

Even baby his name knows,
For we call him Twinkle Toes.

We do have the greatest fun
Acting Indians—on the run.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. R. H. Harper, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, is assisting Rev. D. B. Boddie in a meeting at Opelousas, La., this week.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Reformed Church, New York,, has become editor-in-chief of the Christian Herald.

The Crowley Signal is giving full reports of the meeting being held at the Methodist church, Crowley, La., in which the preaching is being done by Rev. L. P. Law.

The Spinks brothers, box 506, Shreveport, La., announce that they are ready for calls to sing in evangelistic meetings, together or separately. They can furnish good references.

Judge J. E. Cockrell, a distinguished lawyer of Dallas, Tex., and chairman of the board of trustees of Southern Methodist University, died on Thursday, April 7. He was 67 years old.

Rev. W. W. Perry announces that Rev. W. E. Thomas, general evangelist, is assisting him in a meeting at Sulphur, La., the meeting having begun on Easter Sunday. Mr. Scott is in charge of the music.

The following telegram was received from Dr. W. Winans Drake, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, Ruston, La., on Monday morning of this week: "Ruston church Orphanage offering, $2,850." Who can beat that?

Dr. Mark Terrell, general evangelist, has recently closed a very successful meeting in Wilson, Okla. He has an open date, beginning on May 1, that he would be glad to give some pastor in Louisiana or Mississippi.

The condition of the editor's father, Rev. Lyman Carley, remains practically unchanged. He is very weak and is in a deep sleep most of the time. He takes very little nourishment. Happily, he seems to be free of pain.

Dr. L. J. Miller, general evangelist, was scheduled to begin a meeting with Rev. T. H. Dorsey at New Albany, Miss., on last Sunday. Dr. Miller had just closed a very successful meeting at Calvary Methodist Church, Atlanta, Ga.

Rev. Claude P. Jones, Mississippi Conference evangelist, closed a great meeting at Mendenhall and D'Lo with a gracious consecration service on Easter Sunday. He began a meeting with Rev. Percy Vaughan at Ellisville, Miss., on April 20.

Dr. R. H. Wynn, pastor of the Broad Street Methodist Church, Lake Charles, La., spent a few hours in New Orleans on Wednesday of last week, consulting Dr. T. D. Ellis, of the Board of Church Extension. He paid the Advocate office an appreciated call while in the city.

Rev. E. E. McKeithen, of Drew, Miss., writes: "The work is going fine here. We love our people, and they respond beautifully to every worthy cause. We have added a sleeping porch to the parsonage, repaired the furnace at the church, and expect to spend $1,000 on repairing and beautifying the church in the next few weeks."

Rev. C. F. Emery, an honored superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, is now living at 1618 Caroline Street, Houston, Tex. Letters from his Mississippi friends would cheer him. He is identified with the First Methodist Church of Houston, of which Dr. A. Frank Smith is pastor. Brother Emery says that Dr. Smith preaches to a crowded house every Sunday.

After the Advocate had gone to press last week, we received the following note from Rev. Leon I. McCain, our pastor at Minden, La.: "The pageant, 'Golden Youth,' was given at our church on Annivedsary Day of the Epworth League. The free-will offering was $32.80. The pageant was given under the competent direction of Mrs. Ira Shields. Miss Mary Searles is the president of the Senior Epworth League."

The rendition of the cantata, "The First Easter," by the choir at the Methodist church, Pascagoula, Miss., on Easter Sunday evening attracted a great congregation, some not being able to get into church. At the morning service, the pastor, Rev. James W. Sells, received five children into the church by baptism and vows, and three others by certificate. The Sunday school goes on the Sunday School Day honor roll, the collection on that occasion amounting to $14.

The new Methodist church at Pineville, La., Rev. Claud K. Smith, pastor, was formally opened on Easter Sunday. The new church is a handsome structure of brick and tile, erected at a cost of $50,000. The church has grown rapidly during the pastorate of Brother Smith, the membership having increased from 160 members to more than 500, and the Sunday school attendance from 60 to more than 200. This is now one of the livest churches in the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. G. B. Love, of Mooreville, Miss., in sending in the renewal of Brother D. W. Stone, Tupelo, Miss., speaks very highly of this venerable Christian gentleman. He is a brother of the late Rev. Joseph B. Stone, who spent forty-three years in the itineracy. Brother Love adds concerning his work: "Everything is moving along very well with us here at Moooreville. We are serving a good people. They have just recently refurnished the parsonage with a nice lot of furniture, all of which we appreciate very much."

Rev. Julian S. Duncan is finishing the third and final year of his work as pastor of the Union Church of Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. Under his administration a lot has been purchased, a campaign put on for the erection of a building, from which sufficient money has been subscribed and collected to build a church and community house. Plans have already been approved, and actual construction will begin soon. Brother Duncan is joining the Eddy Seminar in London and will return with this party to the United States the latter part of August.

We learn from the Winston County Journal, Louisville, Miss., that announcement has been made of the approaching marriage of Rev. W. A. Langley and Miss Mary Stewart Hewlet, of Atlanta, Ga. Brother Langley, since returning from Poland, where he was engaged in missionary work, has been pursuing graduate studies in Emory University, from which institution he will receive his M.A. degree this year. Miss Hewlet is an A.B. graduate of Agnes Scott College, and is a highly cultured Christian young woman. The Advocate extends all good wishes in advance of the happy event.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Meridian District Conference convened in East End Methodist Church, Meridian, Thursday morning, April 7, and closed the afternoon of the next day. On the evening of April 6, Dr. Rolfe Hunt, of Lauderdale, delivered a helpful message on "The Call to Preach," which was followed by the celebration of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

All pastors of the district and a large number of lay members of the conference were present throughout the meeting. Rev. Robert Selby, presiding elder, maintained his record as an efficient presiding officer, and the business of the conference was attended to in an orderly manner and with dispatch.

The reports of the pastors, covering every phase of the work, indicate progress and forecast a year of substantial achievement.

The following were elected members of the district Sunday school council: District Secretary, Miss Minnie Rowe; Elementary Superintendent, Mrs. W. D. McLaurin; Adolescent Superintendent, Mrs. A. P. Hand; Adult and Home Department, Mrs. G. G. Woodward; Missions and Education, D. A. McKinnon; Leadership Training, Dr. A. F. Watkins; W. J. Dawson, member Conference Sunday School Board. Rev. Robert Selby is, ex-officio, chairman.

The Licensing Committee was elected, as follows: J. A. Moore, A. F. Watkins, W. B. Jones, W. B. Alsworth, W. J. Dawson, and Rolfe Hunt.

W. D. Hawkins was elected district lay leader, and D. W. Heidelberg and S. J. Creekmore, associate lay leaders.

W. A. Hays was named as district director of the Golden Cross Society.

Thirteen delegates to the Annual Conference were elected as follows: D. W. Heidelberg, S. J. Creekmore, M. P. Johnston, W. D. Hawkins, W. E. Hopkins, D. A. McKinnon, C. G. Stokes, Miss Lillybeck Phillips, L. P. Brown, C. L. Daniel, S. M. Graham, T. H. Naylor and C. W. Cochran.

The following brethren were present and spoke in behalf of the interests represented by them, respectively: Dr. D. M. Key, president of Millsaps College; H. G. Hawkins, president of Whitworth College; Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference Lay Leader; O. S. Lewis, Conference Secretary of Education; B. F. Lewis, manager Orphans' Home; W. T. Griffin, commissioner for the Orphans' Home; J. M. Morse, commissioner Superannuate Homes and Endowment, and J. L. Sutton, superintendent of the Home Finding Society.

Miss Trawick, Head Resident of the Wesley House at Meridan, gave a very interesting account of the splendid work being done by that institution.

Other visitors to the conference were: Rev. L. E. Alford, presiding elder Newton District; A. S. Oliver, of Wesson; L. J. Snelgrove, of Monticello; O. H. Strait, of Decatur, and L. E. Wicht, local elder, of Hattiesburg.

The gospel message given by Rev. B. F. Lewis on Thursday evening was enjoyed by all who heard him.

The fellowship of the conference was delightful, especially during each noon recess, when an excellent luncheon was served by the good ladies of East End in the church dining hall.

DeKalb was chosen as next piece of meeting.

W. A. HAYS, Secretary.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Hattiesburg District Conference held its 1927 session at Sumrall, April 12, 13, with the opening sermon by Rev. B. H. Williams, of Taylorsville, on Monday night, April 11. Other sermons were preached during the conference by Revs. J. W. Thompson and H. A. Gatlin, of Hattiesburg, and A. J. Boyles, more recently of Heidleberg, but formerly a student at Emory and Southern Methodist. All the sermons were of highest order, and some of them reached old-time fervor and created spiritual enthusiasm.

Rev. J. R. Jones presided with his usual efficiency, and J. B. Cain and J. L. Carter acted as secretaries. The conference registered the largest attendance in its history, one hundred and nine members answering roll call during the session. The following official visitors addressed the conference on the various connectional interests: H. G. Hawkins, W. D. Hawkins, D. M. Key, J. M. Morse, W. T. Griffin, J. M. Sullivan, O. C. Hull, O. S. Lewis, J. L. Sutton, W. Fred Long, H. T. Newell, J. C. Chambers, and Mrs. S. F. Riley, while the following were appreciated unofficial visitors: W. W. Graves, C. M. Crossley, J. L. Greenway, L. E. Alford, and J. B. Shearer.

Report blanks had been mailed the pastors by the presiding elder, and this greatly facilitated the work of the committees and the conference. The reports were optimistic and showed progress in nearly every department of the church's work. Special attention was called to the progress made on the Hattiesburg Methodist Hospital and also to the campaign inaugurated last year for the building of a district parsonage and plans made for the completion of the same.

All the local preachers had their characters passed, and where necessary their licenses renewed. None were licensed to preach and none were recommended to the Annual Conference for admission or for orders. The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: W. U. Corley, H. V. Waits, E. V. McKay, W. C. Mathis, Herbert Gillis, John A. McLeod, W. S. F. Tatum, Mrs. D. J. Robinson, G. W. Holloway, W. A. Holloway, C. K. Pearson, and H. C. Norsworthy, while Joe Cook, H. C. Clark, V. M. Scanlan, and Mrs. W. M. Williams were elected alternates.

W. A. Holloway was re-elected district lay leader, and W. C. Mathis and W. H. L. Carruth, associate lay leaders. The following district Sunday school officers were elected: Chairman, J. R. Jones; secretary, A. J. Boyles; Elementary Superintendent, Mrs. C. W. Sullivan; Adolescent Superintendent, Mrs. D. A. McIntosh; Adult Superintendent, H. A. Gatlin; Missionary Superintendent, W. C. Mathis; Superintendent of Leadership Training, J. A. Smith. K. T. Moore was confirmed as district director of the Golden Cross. The pastors in Hattiesburg and Petal were named the ad interim committee.

Messages of love and sympathy were ordered sent to Rev. Lyman Carley, ill at the home of his son in New Orleans, and to Rev. W. P. George, whose eye trouble has compelled him to give up the pastorate at Heidelberg and return to his home in Tennessee. Resolutions of appreciation were passed expressing thanks to Rev. W. H. Lane, pastor at Sumrall, and to his people, particularly to Brother W. H. L. Carruth, for their thoughtful kindnesses.

Petal was chosen as the place for the meeting of the 1928 district conference.

J. B. CAIN Secretary.

MEETING OF ABERDEEN DISTRICT MINISTERS' ASSOCIATION.

The Aberdeen District Methodist Ministers' Association met at the Aberdeen Methodist Church, Thursday, April 14, and was called to order by the president, Rev. J. J. Baird. Rev. J. C. Nelson led the opening prayer. Rev. L. P. Wasson briefly presented the Mission Special cause, which was followed by a short talk by Mr. R. H. Furr, who gave some helpful information on how to raise the benevolences. The following program committee was appointed by the president: Revs. J. T. Lewis, F. H. McGee, and B. F. Bullard.

The Association adjourned to attend the men's prayer meeting, which is being held at the City Hall during the Howard Williams revival. This prayer meeting was remarkable for its attendance and enthusiasm.

The members of the Association enjoyed a very delicious luncheon, which was served by the ladies in the church. Miss Lamont, the Bible instructor for the Williams campaign; Miss Martin, the pianist, and Mr. Lichfield, the singer, were our guests at luncheon. Immediately following lunch, Miss Martin and Mr. Lichfield entertained in a manner that was delightfully humorous and instructive. Their art is better than words are to express it. Long may they live and continue to do good!

The business session was opened by the singing of "What a Friend We Have in Jesus," after which Rev. J. W. Bell led in prayer. Rev. R. G. Moore was heard concerning the Sunday School Teachers' Training School. Our presiding elder urged us to bend our energies in our revival efforts this summer. Motion was adopted to limit the program speakers to ten minutes each.

The program was as follows:

Discussion Topic: The Pastor in His Relation to the Organizations of the Church.

1. The Sunday School—Revs. J. T. Lewis, W. C. Mattox.

2. The Mid-Week Prayer Meeting—Rev. W. C. Beasley and others.

3. The Young People—Revs. W. R. Lott, E. C. Driskell.

Every discussion was full of enthusiasm and information. We hope that no pastor in the district will miss the next meeting. A motion was adopted to combine the May meeting with the district conference, which will convene at Fulton, May 24-26. The Association will meet on the afternoon of the 24th, at such time and place as the presiding elder will designate.

A motion was adopted that the secretary draft a resolution of thanks to the ladies of the Aberdeen Methodist Church for the bountiful and wholesome luncheon which they so efficiently served. Be they well assured that we thank them.

R. T. HOLLINGSWORTH, Secretary.

SPECIAL NOTICE OF NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Newton District Conference will open at Walnut Grove on Wednesday morning, April 27, at 9 o'clock. Rev. B. L. Sutherland will preach at 11 a. m. of the first day. Millsaps College will give the evening program, closing with a sermon by Rev. J. E. Stephens, of the department of Christian Education.

Committee on License to Preach and Recommendation for Admission on Trial: J. L. Greenway, T. A. Ferguson, and R. H. Clegg.

Committee on Orders and Local Preachers: C. H. Strait, F. L. Applewhite, and M. K. Miller.

We are expecting a full attendance of pastors and delegates, local preachers and charge lay leaders.

This district will be entitled to sixteen delegates to the Annual Conference under the new law.

L. E. ALFORD, P. E.

REVIVAL IN BILOXI, MISS.

We just closed a successful revival at Wesley Memorial Church in Biloxi.

Rev. Chas. Assaf was with me, and I do thank God that he sent him our way.

He was also with me in a two weeks' meeting in March, at Epworth Church in Biloxi, and he has meant much to this community and to these two mission churches. We received thirty-one into the church during the meeting at Wesley Memorial, twenty-seven of them by profession of faith.

During both meetings we received sixty-four into the church, fifty of them by profession of faith.

I would not dare say how many conversions we had, for only the Lord knows that, but I do feel that we had several wonderful changes in life.

I wish especially to mention one, for it might help some one:

Brother Assaf and I went to visit in a home where the husband has been a drunkard for many years, and had been drunk for over two weeks—not able to go to his work.

We talked to him, and he said he did not believe in hell, nor did he believe in the church; he said the sky was his church. But when Brother Assaf had talked to him quite a while, he changed his mind. He has quit drinking and he and his wife joined the church. It would have done any one good to hear his prayer and his testimony in church a week later as to what the Lord has done for him and his home.

I ask the prayers of all Christian people in this great missionary work, that I may be able to do what the Lord would have me do.

H. L. DANIELS.

COURAGEOUS PREACHING.

The demand for more and better preaching, for more courageous preaching, is urgently recognized. It has lost none of its power, and where it is exercised men heed it. It is a first century gospel adapted to twentieth century needs, and interpreted in twentieth century language that is demanded. The Archbishop of Canterbury has, in a memorable utterance, set this before the clergy of the English Church, and even the gloomy Dean of St. Paul's makes bold to say that, even if the golden age of preaching is past, there is an insistent demand for informed, equipped, and inspired prophets to-day.

So far as in me lies, I call my brethren to a fresh recognition of the prophet's place and power. I beg them to give increasing heed to their pulpit ministry. I urge them to attack with the vitalizing gospel of Christ, the body and soul destroying evils of the present hour. I press upon them the high and holy claims of a ministry that demands, first of all, a passion for souls. I plead with the great body of laity to be true to their church's ideals, to avoid all appearance of evil; boldly to rebuke habits and practices, however popular they may be, that contravene the law of Christ; to stand forth against any and all customs that are unwholesome, unclean, and indecent. The salt has not lost its savor, and a small group of high-minded and courageous men and women have repeatedly saved a situation that was grave and threatening. The hour has struck for an aggressive crusade for Christ and His church; it calls for the most complete consecration, the highest and finest and most discriminating intelligence, and a courage that reckons not life dear unto itself, that His Kingdom may come and His will may be done among men.—Bishop Freeman, in the Living Church.

The creed that lives by isolating itself from the essential condition of the intellectual life loses its own vitality and ceases to offer any effective help to square the ideal it cherishes with the reality which it ignores.—James T. Shotwell.

"In the midst of life, there is death." Again, we have been called upon to be submisssive to the will of our Heavenly Father, and give unto him our beloved mother, MRS. N. E. COLEMAN, who departed from this life, March 31, 1927. She leaves four sons and two daughters, a host of relatives and friends to mourn her sad departure.

"A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is still,
A place made vacant in our home,
Which never can be filled."

A DAUGHTER.

MARRIED.

On April 1, at the residence of the bride's parents, MISS SUNSHINE YOUNG, a prominent teacher of St. Landry, and REV. J. A. KNIGHT, the popular pastor of the Melville Methodist Church, were united in marriage at St. Landry, Rev. C. C. Wier, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, officiating. The popularity of the contracting parties was attested by a large host of friends and relatives present. The ceremony was performed on the front porch, witnessed by friends and relatives, who filled the front yard. The happy couple left immediately for their parsonage home at Melville.

NEWS FROM THE MORTON CHURCH.

By C. C. Windham, Superintendent of Sunday School.

Rev. E. R. Smoot, general evangelist, of the North Mississippi Conference, and Mr. G. B. Grenfell, evangelistic singer, have been in Morton for one week, conducting a revival meeting at the Methodist church. Mr. Grenfell is a great singer, and it has been a pleasure and a delight to listen to the gospel songs that he has led his choir to sing. Brother Smoot is without doubt one of the great preachers of to-day. His messages of Christ and his wonderful love inspire in his hearers a desire to live better lives and to give their hearts to God that he may use them in evangelizing the world.

About the middle of last week Brother Smoot announced that Sunday morning at 11 o'clock, April 10, would be family service, or a service for the older people of the town; so at the appointed hour the church auditorium was filled to capacity with people of all ages, and then Brother Smoot opened the service by quoting, "In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you." Heaven was pictured as a home, as a great home, where the Heavenly Father loves his children and where he has prepared an eternal home for those that love him. At the conclusion of the preaching, Brother Smoot asked every one present that had a mother in the audience to walk over and stand by her while the last song was sung, and to whisper words of love into her ear. This was the greatest service that it has ever been my pleasure to attend. May Brothers Smoot and Grenfell live many years so that they will have the opportunity to bless the world with their melodious songs and forceful preaching!

We had 162 present at the Sunday school, April 10, which was the largest attendance record during the three years that I have been superintendent, and we have set as our goal 200 for Sunday, April 17.

The above was written immediately after the morning service, and before I had an opportunity to mail same another great service was held (the night service), which was the largest, when measured by the number of people attending. The subject of this service was the "Christian Home." Brother Smoot quoted the words of the Master to the fallen woman, "Go and sin no more." He bade his hearers to sin no more and to go home and there live the Christian life before their wives, their husbands and their children, stressing the fact that if we live the Christian life in the home, it will be no trouble to live for Christ in our every-day business affairs. He pleaded for better homes, stating that the way to have less criminals was to rear less criminals in the home, and the way to have more and better Christian men and women was to rear them in the home. At the conclusion of this service an opportunity was given for the ones that would dedicate their lives toward the establishing of better Christian influences in their own homes to come forward and stand at the altar for the dedicatory prayer; about forty fathers and mothers assembled for this prayer. I am still of the opinion that Brother Smoot is one of the great American preachers and that the Lord of Hosts will bless his ministry for years to come. The Smoot party will leave here on the 14th, in time to reach Muskogee, Okla., by the 17th (Easter Sunday), where he will begin a three weeks' revival at the First Methodist Church of that city.

Woman's Missionary Society

ZONE MEETING AT WATER VALLEY, MISS.

The Woman's Missionary Societies of Oxford, Coffeeville, and Water Valley held a most delightful and profitable zone meeting, educationally and spiritually, in First Church, Water Valley, Tuesday afternoon, March 22, 1927.

The program for this initial meeting had been carefully arranged by our very efficient and capable president, Mrs. A. F. Calloway, of Oxford, and merited the highest praise.

The church was attractive with appropriate mottoes and bright flowers, reflecting the beauty and glory of early spring.

Among those who honored the meeting with their presence were the following distinguished guests: Mrs. A. W. Stokes, district secretary, Grenada; Rev. E. S. Lewis, presiding elder, Grenada; Rev. W. W. Woollard, Holly Springs; Rev. W. L. Robinson, Coffeeville, and Rev. S. H. Caffey, Oxford, whose timely utterances and genuine interest in the plans projected are an evidence of the splendid co-operation and support being given the president and her co-workers in promoting the zone interest.

It is always a genuine delight to the ladies to have with them their district secretary, Mrs. Stokes, whose untiring and efficient efforts are resulting in worth-while achievements. Mrs. Stokes, in her interesting and intelligent way, discussed the various phases of our mission work, stressing the need and importance of leaders for the young people and children.

Next in order were the reports rendered by the auxiliaries, which indicated progress and interest along all lines. Mrs. Sneed, of Oxford, gave the financial report from the Annual Conference.

The Young People's Work was ably presented in a paper read by Miss Mary Whitson, Water Valley, after which the president stated that the time had arrived for the election of officers. Mrs. Stokes was invited to take the chair and proceed with the election. Mrs. A. F. Calloway was re-elected president, and Miss Eliza McFarland, secretary. Before resigning the chair to the president, Mrs. Stokes made a very practical talk on the subject of Law Enforcement, and Brother Caffey, of Oxford, offered some helpful suggestions along that line.

An exceptionally impressive and attractive feature of the program was a playlet, "America for Americans," presented by charming young ladies of Auxiliary No. 2, Water Valley.

As a special musical offering, Mrs. Johnie Hamner inspired us with a beautiful message in song.

Brother Woollard, a much beloved former pastor of First Church, made an appreciative talk and offered suggestions for increasing the auxiliary membership.

Brother Lewis paid a beautiful tribute to the women of the Missionary Societies for their splendid achievement in over-paying the one-half million dollar Belle Bennett Memorial pledge.

The meeting was dismissed with a sentence prayer from each of the visiting ministers.

MISS ELIZA McFARLAND,
Secretary.

Water Valley, Miss.

CHILDREN'S ILLS

Arkansas Lady Says She Has Never Found a Better Laxative Than Thedford's Black-Draught.

Mineral Springs, Ark.—"We use Black-Draught in our family of six children," says Mrs. C. E. Nutt, of this place, "and we find it a good bowel regulator. I give it to my children for colds and constipation, or any other stomach disorders, and it certainly is very helpful. I have never known it to fail them. Where there are so many children, it is a good idea to keep a laxative on hand, and Black-Draught is what we use.

"I have taken it myself for indigestion. I would feel dizzy, have gas and sour stomach. I would also feel a tightness in my chest. I took a good dose of Thedford's Black-Draught when I felt that way and it would relieve me. I would feel better for days.

"My husband takes Black-Draught for biliousness. He says he has never found its equal. When he has the tired, heavy feeling, he takes Black-Draught night and morning for a few days and he doesn't complain any more. I sure do recommend Black-Draught."

Sold everywhere. Get a package of Black-Draught, today Costs only one cent a dose. NC-175

CIRCLES ORGANIZED AT WINNFIELD, LA.

We decided the first of this year to try Circles to see if it would not create more interest and enthusiasm, so we divided into three Circles, and have splendid leaders, who have the co-operation of their members. We meet in the homes only for business, when all join together at the church. Our attendance is increasing, and we had such inspiring talks to-day after business session from those who attended the Conference and Council. Will also say we were only too glad to contribute toward purchasing a monument to mark the grave of our missionary, Miss Pauline Randle, who died in Korea. Many of us knew her as a child.

We were prevented from having our zone meeting last quarter on account of bad roads.

We have charge of the missionary program at Sunday school every fourth Sunday.

MRS. J. T. WOOD,
Publicity Chairman.

ZONE MEETING AT GREENSBURG, LA.

There was a zone meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society on Wednesday afternoon, March 30, at the Greensburg Methodist church. Mrs. C. S. Stewart, of Amite, the zone president, presided.

Mrs. Dunn, of Amite, in a very impressive manner, took charge of the devotional service, using the Scripture John 14:1-3, giving a splendid talk and closing with prayer, after which Mrs. William Schuhle, of Kentwood, discussed the "Benefit of Organized Effort," showing that through all the ages since the beginning of time organization and co-operation have gone hand in hand, as is mentioned in both Old and New Testaments, showing the effects of organization of the Woman's Missionary Society.

The "Responsibilities and Advantages of the Woman's Missionary Society" were told by Mrs. June, of Amite. She compared the Missionary Society as a whole to a wheel, which was an interesting illustration. She told of being impressed by the twenty-two newly consecrated deaconesses and missionaries whom she saw at the Council meeting in Shreveport; one of these was a Louisiana girl.

Mrs. Stewart gave us the message of the postage stamp, which, in a word, means "stick."

Song, "The Half Has Never Yet Been Told," by Mrs. J. O. Shoemake and Mrs. S. L. Broyles, of Kentwood.

The Jubilee Program was discussed by the president, what it is and what they plan to do.

The A B C's of our work regarding the organizing of auxiliaries, the duties of the officers and work in general was told by Mrs. Reed, of Amite.

Mrs. Dunn stressed the point of Bible and Mission study. Some questions were asked and discussed, after which the Greensburg ladies served a delicious luncheon.

There were at least fifty ladies present, and all expressed their views of these meetings as being very helpful.

MRS. J. R. COLLY, Secretary.

ANNUAL MEETING, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Mississippi Conference Woman's Missionary Society closed its sixteenth annual session in Brookhaven, Miss., March 25. This was, indeed, the best conference ever held by this organization in more than one respect. The number present was larger than ever before, among whom were quite a number who have never attended the conference.

We were fortunate in having two Council officers as our guests, Mrs. B. W. Lipscomb and Miss Althea Jones. We also had present three deaconesses, Miss Elizabeth Taylor, Biloxi Wesley House; Miss Sallie Ellis, Moore Community House, Biloxi, and Miss Annie Trawick, Meridian Wesley House.

Rev. J. L. Neill conducted the Quiet Hour each day at noon, and these were inspiring messages. His theme was "Citizenship in the Kingdom of God."

Mrs. Lipscomb brought the message at the opening session Tuesday evening. Mrs. Lipscomb did not talk about the foreign fields and our missionaries there, but about ourselves and a deeper consecration at the "Home Base;" for, after all, what could our workers do in far away lands without a good background?

The messages from our deaconesses brought their work with the less fortunate closer to us, and made all realize their responsibility in this work. Let us always remember our Wesley Houses with our boxes and money, too.

Miss Jones was a great help to our women in her splendid discussion of the importance of working with children. She told of the changes, the new plans, the correlation with the League work, and gave some very helpful suggestions.

On Thursday evening a Chinese student at Whitworth College, Wei Lien Wu, spoke to the conference about the different periods of development of Chinese women and the position of women in China to-day. This was one of the most inspiring messages of the conference. Miss Wu is a senior at Whitworth, and when she receives a higher education, she expects to return to China as a teacher to her people.

On Thursday evening, also, the Young People's Society of Magnolia presented a pageant which was very beautiful, showing that the gift of ourselves is the best gift we can offer to God.

The music furnished by the choir, with quartet, duets, solos and the beautiful pipe organ, over which Mrs. J. M. Wood presided, was very much enjoyed and appreciated. Mrs. J. A. Smith, of Hattiesburg, brought several messages in song. The Glee Club of Whitworth College also delighted the conference with several numbers.

The Mississippi Conference is indeed happy to know that we are one of the eighteen conferences that paid its pledge for the Belle Bennett Memorial. We also have quite a number of names to be inscribed on the memorial tablet.

The treasurer's report showed that our conference raised $10,738.09 more the past year than ever before, and

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Nineteen out of every twenty Jewish children under 25 years of age are not enrolled in any Jewish religious school.

Three out of every four Catholic children in the United States under 25 years of age are not enrolled in any Catholic religious school.

Two out of three Protestant children and youth in the United States are not enrolled in any institution offering systematic moral and religious training.

More than 7,000,000 nominally Protestant children under 10 years of age are growing up in non-church homes, without hearing grace at table, family prayer, or receiving similar religious instruction, and without being enrolled in any Sunday school.

The Jews provide 335 hours of religious instruction annually for such of their children as they can induce to enroll in Jewish religious schools.

The Catholic church provides 200 hours of religious instruction annually in its parochial schools.

The Protestant church provides twenty-four hours of religious instruction annually for the pupils enrolled in its Sunday schools.

The children and youth under the care of the Methodist church of North Mississippi are included in this estimate. Is it not imperative that we use the help offered by the General Sunday School Board and the Conference Board to increase the enrollment in our Sunday schools? Is it asking too much that we devote April, May, and June to a united effort to increase our attendance at least 10 per cent? A number of live churches have already increased their enrollment more than this number—but what about the other churches that have done nothing and are not planning to do anything? Up and at it; it is do or die. Pay attention to the letter sent out by the Sunday School Board. Let us help you reach the children.

Clarksdale training school closes tonight. The enrollment is thirty-eight; credits to be issued, thirty-four. Gunnison and Sherard will furnish about half the number. We have three pastors and two superintendents taking work.

If any pastor is planning to hold a Daily Vacation School, write us—we want to help. A school of one week will be better than nothing; three weeks will be better. Let us do something.

What are you doing about the observance of Sunday School Day? Start at it and push through to success.

Have you made up your mind to attend the Conference Training School to be held at Grenada, June 6-11? Quite a number have already enrolled.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Easter attendance is generally the high water mark for the year in Sunday school records.

We are asking each of our District Sunday School Secretaries, Mayo, Carter, Talley, Rickey, Gill, Scates, Raulins, and Wren, to send us Easter record of attendance at Sunday school, and the number joining the church from the Sunday schools in their districts from ten of their largest schools.

Let each pastor and superintendent keep in mind "the increase goal" in Sunday school enrollment of 10 per cent from the pastor's report at Conference. Please get the Minutes and compare your present enrollment and see if you have already reached the goal. The first school to report having reached its goal was the Oak Ridge school. The pastor of this school is Rev. S. W. B. Colvin, who is District Superintendent of Adult Work in the Monroe District. It was the adult leaders at the Monroe Conference who said they would take as their special this increase goal. We hope others to reach the goal will report to us promptly. If any district has an excess, this will go to help the Conference to reach its goal. The General Board expects each Conference to report by the first of July an increase of 10 per cent. Why not let the Louisiana Conference be the first to reach this increase goal? During the Missionary Centenary campaign our Conference was among the first, not only to report its quota, but to pay its Sunday school pledge.

Several local Sunday school bulletins have reached our office. We appreciate them all. The "Church Calendar" for April from West Monroe shows a full program for that "Forward Looking Church" of North Louisiana. We attended this church last Sunday night and heard Dr. Lutz preach a great evangelistic sermon on "How Can a Sinner Be Saved."

On Sunday, April 10, we visited Oak Ridge in the morning, Rayville in the afternoon, and West Monroe at night. At Oak Ridge we found a fine Sunday school with many good features, the best being a group of devoted teachers. The congregation at 11 o'clock was large and attentive. Before leaving Oak Ridge for Rayville, we had a Workers' Council. Mrs. Carroll was appointed Superintendent of Training Work. This school voted to make the Sunday School Day offering for 1927, $15. We enjoyed the hospitality of the home of the acting superintendent, Mrs. Gladys Norris.

At Rayville we had a conference with the District Secretary, Brother Scates, and other leaders, on district matters. The pastor at Rayville, Rev. J. A. Alford, has more than a houseful of Sunday school folk, and needs more and better equipment for his Sunday school. His congregation last year made many needed improvements on the parsonage, and will no doubt get to the needed equipment of the church as soon as they can.

In many of the Sunday schools, last Sunday was designated as Decision Day. The Junior Department of the First Church at Alexandria reports thirty-nine boys and girls as having made a definite decision for Christ. These, together with many from the other departments of this school, will be received into the church on Easter Sunday. This is the splendid result of Child-Evangelism.

On Tuesday, April 12, we were in Baton Rouge in conference with leaders there. We found First Church in the midst of a splendid revival, under the leadership of Dr. Thurston Price. We hear that other outstanding churches are holding their revivals at this time: Shreveport, Ruston, West Monroe, and others. We prophesy that more Sunday school members will join the church this Easter than ever before in Southern Methodism. We hear that one of our presiding elders, Rev. C. C. Wier, is holding a series of revival services at Eunice this week.

Mr. W. A. McKennon, supt. of First Church, Shreveport, writes for a list of the Bible classes in his district, with name of teacher, president, etc. We wish we had this record up to date, but so many classes will not organize and report their class to us.

A young man who was brought up on a form in Western Pennsylvania qualified for district school teacher. Futher pursuing his studies and teaching, he managed to save enough money to put him through medical college. He began the practice of medicine in the new oil section of Pennsylvania, and often rode horse-back through the woods to reach and relieve those who were seriously ill. He was a student of nature, knew and easily recognized most of the medicinal plants growing in the woods.

Finally, he moved to Buffalo, N. Y., where he launched his favorite remedies, and, in a short time, they were sold by every druggist in the land. Today, the name of this man, the late Dr. R. V. Pierce, is known throughout the world. His Golden Medical Discovery is the best known general tonic for building up strength, restoring impaired tissues and enriching the blood. More than fifty million bottles have been sold in the U. S. If your druggist does not sell it, in liquid or tablets, you can obtain a trial pkg. of the tablets by sending 10c to the Dr. Pierce Clinic, in Buffalo, N. Y.

Epworth League

APRIL MEETING, EVER-READY UNION.

The regular monthly meeting of the Ever-Ready Union of the Minden District Epworth League was held at the Methodist church, Springfield, La., April 10. The Springhill League had charge of the program, consisting of two special choruses by the League choir—"Awakening Chorus" and "He Arose;" talk by Miss Eris Monzingo, Intermediate superintendent; talk by one of the Senior Leaguers; musical number by the orchestra; finally, a splendid talk on the "Challenge of Easter," by Rev. H. E. Pfost.

After a short intermission, during which a picture was made of those present, the business session was held. It was announced that the next meeting would be held at Minden, Sunday, May 1, the opening day of the District Institute. President Cassells announced that the banner for organizing most Leagues would go to Sibley. The Leagues represented were: Haughton, Bethel, Mim's Chapel, Pleasant Valley, Springhill, and Minden.

After the business, refreshments of brick ice cream and cake were served to the over a hundred present. This was one of the most interesting and successful meetings held by this union.

The pageant, "Golden Youth," was presented by the Minden League on Anniversary Day, and was quite a success. About $30 was the amount of the offering.

BATON ROUGE LEAGUE INSTITUTE.

The institute for the Baton Rouge District was held at Amite, April 3-8. Twenty-five certificates were awarded, and the spiritual and inspirational value of the school is expected to go far toward making the district "All for Christ." The instructors were: Rev. J. B. Anderson, "Spiritual Life;" Miss Cora Varnado, "First Department Methods;" Mrs. R. Jackson, "Second Department Methods;" Mrs. E. E. Cayard, "Third Department Methods."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NEWS.

District Institute for Seashore District Held at Picayune.

The Seashore District Institute convened Saturday night, April 9, at Picayune. The following Leagues were represented: Lumberton, Logtown, Wiggins, Gulfport, Escatawpa, and Coalville. Although the number of delegates was small, the crowd made up in quality what it lacked in quantity.

The first meeting was held in the church on Saturday night. At this time Brother W. D. Hawkins gave the keynote address. The key words were Know, Grow, Glow and Show. Brother Hawkins told the Leaguers that as Leaguers they should know their Bible, their Handbook, themselves, and folks. The next after knowledge is growth—Leaguers must grow spiritually. After growth came glow. It is necessary to be happy in our Christian lives, and in this was the glow. And last of all came the showing. Brother Hawkins said that the whole world is "from Missouri" and must be shown. Leaguers must show the world by their lives that they are his

After the address, the delegates adjourned to the Scout Hall, where a party had been arranged. The hall was decorated with the rainbow colors, and the games played were carrying out the rainbow scheme. The most important feature of these games was a wishing game, in which the people wrote on slips of paper their wishes for other members. These were collected and read aloud.

On Sunday morning at 7, all delegates attended a morning watch service at the church. President J. H. Weems led the devotional, and made a talk on the "Power to Serve," after which Rev. H. A. Wood, pastor of the church, administered the Sacrament.

Rev. M. L. Burton preached the Institute sermon on the text, "A Good Name is Rather to Be Chosen Than Great Riches."

At 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon, the delegates again assembled, and went into the discussion groups. The discussion groups were presided over by: Administration, W. D. Hawkins; First Department, J. H. Weems; Second, D. C. Camp; Third, Misses Anna Gould Rhodes and Frances Ulmer; Fourth, Dana King. After the group discussion, the business session was held. Mr. J. H. Weems discussed the plans for the Assembly, and also explained the Golden Cross Enrollment. A plan of work was adopted, and greetings sent to Meridian and Hattiesburg District Institutes. Gulfport extended an invitation for the next Institute, and it was accepted. After this the business session adjourned and the delegates returned to their various homes.

A New League in Seashore District.

A new League has been organized at Coalville with thirty members. The officers of this League are: President, W. R. Murray; vice president, Ed McRaney; secretary, Irma Reed. This League has already begun work, their first work being to get the church painted. Coalville sent four delegates to the District Institute.

The Senior League of Crawford Street Methodist Church, Vicksburg, Celebrated April 1 With a Banquet.

On Friday night, April 1, the Seniors entertained at a baquet. The feast was spread in the Methodist church annex, and the Seniors seated at one table, and the Intermediates at another. Miss Chesley Hagan was toast mistress. Several talks were made by the Leaguers. One of the Intermediates gave a very clever impersonation, "How You Intermediates Look," and showed them a Kewpie; then, "How You Intermediates Will Look," and pointed to the Seniors. The finest food was set before the Seniors, while the Intermediates were set down to a square meal. However, all the known April Fool tricks were played, and one bright lad asked for all the cotton in the ice cream for a shirt. And the president was very much afraid of being poisoned. This banquet, very cleverly carried out, was pronounced the best of the season.

A LETTER FROM MISS PRESTON.

Dear Leaguers: Yesterday, for the first time in two years, I stood on the scales, feeling quite a heavyweight, and weighed all of seventy-seven pounds! Perhaps, if I were fat, I'd be like Bobbie, a fellow-"chaser" down the street, who fusses because he gains instead of loses. But I'm feeling fine, and quite happy over the glowing reports I have had of the good work you Leaguers are doing.

Now, here's a bit of news! You know Martha, my baby niece, from my mention of her in my other letters. On her second birthday, March 18, she received as a present a tiny twin sister and brother. So now, if Lucille, their mother, and I were the Conference twins, the Conference may consider itself a grand-Conference, for it now has grand-twins. They're fine babies, and, to use a slang phrase, "They're little, but they're loud." Martha said, as she watched them cry, "Daddy, they haven't any teeth!" They haven't, but they're pretty, and maybe I'll be able to send Mr. Hawkins a picture to show at the Assembly.

I found the thought I'm going to give you for Easter in a lovely poem. The Master stood in his garden, among the lilies which he had planted and trained with tender care. Observing that they drooped for lack of water, and looking for a vessel wherein to draw water for them, he saw, close to his feet, an earthen vessel, seemingly of no use, empty, and frail and small. He raised it from the dust, smiling as he whispered:

"This shall do my work to-day—
It is but an earthen vessel,
But it lay so close to me;
It is small, but it is empty,
That is all it needs to be."

How glad the earthen vessel was to be of use to him, as he used it to convey the living water to refresh the thirsty flowers! As he laid it aside, it whispered:

"Still will I lie in his pathway
Just where I did before.
Close would I keep to the Master,
Empty would I remain,
And perhaps some day he may use me
To water his flowers again."

Young people, he needs us to help him. He is counting on us. None of us are too small or too weak to be used of him in his work; all we have to do is to keep close to him, to empty our hearts of all selfishness and all that might hinder him, earnestly desiring to be, as was the earthen vessel, meet for the Master's use. Let us pray, as did the small boy, "Dear Jesus, keep me close to God, so I'll be there and ready to help him if he needs me."

My earnest prayer is that each of you may grow in love, and in faith, and in good works.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SCCIETY.

each officer's report sounded a note of encouragement.

Brookhaven and its women are to be congratulated for the splendid way in which they entertained so large a number, about three hundred. The noonday luncheons were, indeed, lovely, at one of which Mrs. L. W. Alford, president, was presented with a teapot, a reproduction of one used by John Wesley.

Whitworth College and President and Mrs. Hawkins were very generous in entertaining a number of the officers and delegates—all of which was appreciated and enjoyed by those who attended.

ELLA WAYNE ORMOND,
Superintendent of Publicity.

A JUBILEE IN 1928.

At the last session of the Woman's Missionary Council, which met in Shreveport, La., March 9-16, plans were set in motion for a Jubilee celebration. Organized Woman's Work for Missions was authorized at the 1878 session of the General Conference, which met in Atlanta, Ga. Prior to that date, auxiliaries were being organized here and there, particularly in Tennessee and Maryland, but at this time the enterprise of Woman's Work for woman was in reality inaugurated. Since that good day the women of the church have entered into eight Foreign Mission fields, and have inaugurated and carried forward an outstanding work in the home field. They have raised and expended $17,000,000 for the evangelization of the world.

The celebration of this Jubilee year will mark an era in the history of their work, and the year 1928 will be a time of rejoicing and thankfulness for the past and also a time when plans will be laid for the future. The task will be re-evaluated and new plans made to meet the needs of the new day. Looking Backward and Thinking Forward will characterize this year's celebration.

The Council has set before the women of the church the following five Jubilee Goals:

1. A Higher Spiritual Standard—A deepened spiritual life for the whole church is the first great aim of the Jubilee.

2. An Appreciation of a Great Missionary Inheritance—A setting forth of the achievements of the past will stimulate the women to greater achievements in the future.

3. An Extension of the Woman's Missionary Organization—This task is not complete until every woman in the church has received the missionary vision and passion.

4. Revaluation of the Missionary Task—New plans must be made to meet this new day. The Jubilee celebration will be a failure if it only looks backward. It must also look forward.

5. A Great Thank Offering commensurate with the obligation laid upon the women of the church because of their inheritance from the past, and because of the need that confronts them.

Shall we not all begin to prepare our minds and hearts for this occasion? It should mark a great move forward in the work of Missions and in the spiritual power of the womanhood of the church.

ZONE MEETING AT SULPHUR, LA.

The members of the zone were invited to Sulphur, La., for their first meeting in 1927, April 5.

Forty-nine ladies were present to enjoy the splendid program. Thirty-three delegates and visitors were registered.

Mrs. S. C. Carroll, zone leader, presided at the meeting.

The devotional was led by Mrs. A. Hillebrandt, using the second Epistle of John. Immediately after a delicious luncheon was served.

"What Responsibility do Church Women Have in Making the Community Christian?" by Mrs. William Buchanan, of Lake Arthur, gave us inspiration for much thought.

Mrs. Ward Anderson, of Lake Charles, followed this with a most helpful and practical talk on the topic of so much importance, "The Ten 'Do's' that make a Society grow."

A vocal solo, "The Holy Hour," was sweetly rendered by Mrs. W. Alden, of Lake Charles.

"The Child and the New Earth" was discussed by Mrs. C. E. Banks, of the Lake Charles Gleaner Society.

We were pleased to have our District Secretary, Mrs. Louella Dees, of De Ridder, with us and hear her on the subject, "What the Missionary Society Means to Me."

A hearty welcome was given Mrs. Jones, of De Ridder, whose intense interest in Missionary Society work for the past twenty-five years has proved such a blessing to so many women and girls in De Ridder.

The round table discussion was entered into heartily, and helpful suggestions were made.

The next meeting will be held in June, at Lake Arthur, to which we are looking forward with pleasure.

MRS. L. JOHNSON, Secretary.

ZONE MEETING AT SMITHVILLE, MISS.

On Tuesday morning, March 29, the zone No. 2, Aberdeen District, met for an all-day session in the beautiful little city of Smithville, whose welcome was apparent when on alighting from the cars a gracious committee was in waiting to conduct the visitors to the church, which had been made fragrant and attractive by the use of spring flowers.

Smithville's wonderful hospitality, the splendid co-operation and team work of the local auxiliary, together with encouraging reports of other societies, will long linger as an inspiring memory.

Rev. W. L. Pearson, pastor of the local church, led the devotional; Miss Martha Rye, whose life is wonderfully attuned to God's ways, offered prayer, after which a business session was entered into. To the roll call six of the eight auxiliaries composing this zone responded with brief and encouraging reports, namely: Amory, Antioch, Becker, Fulton, Tranquil, and Smithville. Reports were also heard from Tremont and Turon, who are not members of this zone, but are active in their various departments. Seventy-four were present, making a splendid showing, considering the inclemency of the weather.

Mrs. J. N. Mullin, zone chairman, gave an inspiring talk along the line of leadership. By a drawing, one of the members demonstrated the close relationship the auxiliaries bear to the Conference and Council, outlining the duties of the various officers and what they must measure up to in order to be an ideal Society, bringing out the secret of an ideal missionary in partnership with God on the part of a group of women to carry forward God's plans for the world in God's way. Mrs. Terrell Cox delighted the audience with a beautifully rendered solo. Just before adjournment for lunch a bevy of young girls from the high school, in a very creditable manner, rendered a song.

The afternoon session was given over to a report from Annual Conference at Starkville, a paper, "Why I Am a Missionary," and round table discussion on "The Strong and Weak Points of Our Auxiliaries." Many helpful suggestions were brought out, which incited us to greater work during the year. The meeting disbanded with an echo in our hearts that Smithville ladies are ideal hostesses. The next meeting will convene in Fulton some time in June.

Old Folks Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

Most men and women past fifty must give to the bowels some occasional help, else they suffer from constipation. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect a gentle aid to weak bowels.

Is your present laxative, in whatever form, promoting natural bowel "regularity"—or must you purge and "physic" every day or two to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, colds, or sour, gassy stomach?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural, regular bowel movement even for those chronically constipated. It never gripes, sickens or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

FROM THE LONGTOWN CHARGE, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: The ladies of my charge have organized a Sunday Egg Club for Conference collections, and at quarterly conference to-day they had raised $40 for the month of March. Nnety per cent of the resident ladies belong to the club.

Our report for other purposes is as follows: Conference claims, $40; Christian education, $60; Superannuate Endowment, $10; mission special, $15; Grenada Colllege, $25; church building fund, $81.01; parsonage, $42.30; Advocate, $13.75. Total, $287.06.

A. C. JOHNSON, P. C.

A LITTLE NOTE FROM THE ATHENS CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: I think it just and right that I make a short report of the work done here since the Annual Conference. We are moving along in a good, steady way, not turning the world upside down, but making some progress. It is a pleasure to report a decided advance movement—every department of the church is moving on in a very satisfactory way.

We have just completed a new church, at a cost of $4,000, and will be able to dedicate it as soon as the pews are assembled. Painted another one with a double coat of white paint—my, it is pretty! Organized one Sunday school. We have three prayer meetings every week, two good Missionary Societies, and it looks as if we will be able to organize another one in a very short time.

We have just closed one of the greatest revivals Athens has ever had. The Bowden Evangelistic Party was in charge of the meeting. Rev. W. M. Bowden did the preaching. There were twenty-three accessions to the church, and thirty people renewed their vows to God, as members of the church. Never in my life have I seen a man who could stir people to action as Bowden can do it. He is a genius in his line. He knows humanity, and he works a plan entirely different from any I have ever known (but he catches the fish). Surely he is a man called of God. Jesus said, "Come, follow me, and I will make you fishers of men;" this man Bowden heard the call and let Jesus teach him the art of catching men.

He is a lovable character, content with his lot as a preacher, at home in the pulpit, convincing in his argument, sound in his presentation of gospel truth, a great organizer, and promoter of good works. Bowden does not carry the congregation off with him as some evangelists do, but ties them to the pastor and his family. Bowden is not a money grabber, as some one has accused the evangelist of being; while he gets his share, and that is right, he sees that the preacher in charge gets his share as well.

Athens is talking religion now as it never did before in its history. Men are stirred, everybody seems to be happy, and in love with the church and its work. May the rich blessing of God continue to be showered upon us, and may we be faithful to the Lord in all of our works.

Pray for us. I will try to get this circuit in shape by Conference so some of the brethren will be nudging the elder in the side, trying to get me out of the way, so they can enjoy life.

WHY THE EPWORTH LEAGUE ASSESSMENT SHOULD BE PAID IN FULL.

By F. S. Parker, General Secretary, Epworth League Board.

Speaking from the standpoint of the Epworth League, I should say that the most obvious reason why the benevolent assessments should be paid in full is that important interests in the religious life of the young people of our whole church will be hampered, if not wholly defeated, if the Epworth League Board fails to realize such a sum as is modestly stated in the assessment. A dead thing needs only a few feet of ground and a coffin. A living organism needs room for expansion and opportunity for self-expression.

During the last four years the remarkable growth of the Epworth League and the opening of unprecedented opportunities called loudly for cultivation that we have never yet been able to give. The Epworth League is in immediate, urgent need of two additions to the present staff—one to engage wholly in evangelism, at present the most promising feature of the program; another to relieve an already overworked secretary in supervising the rapidly devepoling and multiplying Epworth League Unions. These needs could be met by the payment of the assessment in full. In the face of such needs, the withholding of money is equivalent to a denial of life—life in the spirit. A small increase in assessment was asked of the Budget Commission and recognized as being a reasonable request. This, as every one knows, was denied on the ground that it would be better to pay the present assessment in full than to pay a diminishing percentage on a larger assessment. Certainly this principle is true. Nevertheless, it must be borne in mind that with this stable assessment during the last quadrennium there has been a steady decline in the percentage of payments thereon.

The Epworth League is not facing ruin as a result of insufficient income, but is confronted with a very grave situation. The danger that comes from retrenchment (meaning the diminution of our activities) is imminent. It can be averted only by a large increase in the percentage of assessments paid.

GIRLS OF SCHOOL AGE LEARN VALUABLE LESSON

Find Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Dependable Medicine

LOUISE LOUTHAN
ROUTE 2, CHARLESTON, ILLINOIS

From the days of the polonaise to the days of the radio, mothers have given this dependable medicine to their daughters. School girls are often careless. They get wet feet. They overstudy or they tire themselves with too many dances and parties. They get run down.

Many an active girl of today, like the demure maiden of the 1870's, has found that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is helping her to find better health and energy.

"I gave my fifteen-year-old girl Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She had been out of school for four months. I read the advertisements of the Vegetable Compound, and since she has taken it she has improved and has gone back to school again. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be."—Mrs. Alice Louthan, Route 2, Charleston, Illinois.

"My daughter was out of school two terms. I have known about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound all my life and finally decided that she should try it. Three bottles helped her in various ways for the next couple of years."—Mrs. W. E. Gillette, 986 E. 52nd Place, Los Angeles, Calif.

"I have always been sickly, and until I was fourteen my father was very strict about my perfect attendance at grammar school. I have gone to school through hard storms and often taken cold. When I was fourteen I took to my bed and did not get up for eighteen months. Everyone thought I could not live. Just four months ago I began taking your wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I could notice a great change almost at once. Now I feel like a new person. I wish all girls would try Lydia E. Pinkham's wonderful medicine."—Mrs. C. M. Smith, Union Village, Vermont.

WHY THE MISSIONARY ASSESSMENT SHOULD BE PAID IN FULL.

By W. G. Cram, General Secretary, Board of Missions.

First, the Board of Missions is one of the great evangelistic agencies of the church, which has been established by the General Conference, for the purpose of taking the message of the gospel of Christ to all nations. In carrying out this purpose, which has been designated for it by the General Conference, the Board of Missions has many lines of activity. First, it sends to the mission fields missionaries with the evangelistic passion, who endeavor to preach the gospel and establish a church among non-Christian peoples.

Second, it sends medical missionaries to Africa, China, Korea, and Mexico. It also sends educational workers who establish schools, from the primary grade to colleges, for the specific purpose of training our Christian constituency on the one hand, and to make it an evangelistic agency in behalf of Christianity.

Third, theological and Bible schools are also established in foreign lands, so that a native minister may be trained for the development of a self-supporting church and a self-evangelizing force of worship; also publishing plants where literature is printed and established and maintained. Many of our missionaries give themselves to the translation of the Bible and translation of religious and theological books; also the translation and publication of Sunday school literature, as well as the editing of religious papers and magazines. All of this work in the foreign field must be supported in part by the assessments on the local church.

In addition to this, a vast amount of work is done in the home field. The establishment of schools in the mountain regions where neglected communities are taught, not only Christianity but the principles, and are given the opportunity of improving their minds and bodies.

Second. also there is the work among the foreigners who reach our shores, the Mexicans in Texas, where we have the Western Mexican Mission and the Texas Mexican Mission; also the Cubans in Florida, and work among many other foreigners in the Southland.

Special work is being undertaken in the industrial sections of the country, especially in the cotton mill regions.

Third, through its Bureau of Evangelism, the Board of Missions directs and leads the evangelistic campaign of the church. To this great task the Board of Missions is committed; also the creation of a wholesome literature for the church in the homeland, is one of the tasks of the Board of Missions.

These and many other enterprises of the board in its effort to carry out the main business of its organization, viz., the evangelization of the world at home and abroad, can only be effected as they are supported by the assessments from the church, and even this is not sufficient. In addition to this, it is necessary for the board to ask for a free-will offering under the authority of the General Conference, in order to maintain its work and purpose.

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 73—No 17. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3646.

HENRY T. CARLEY, D.D., Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, APRIL 28, 1927. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

ATTENTION IS CALLED TO AN IMPORTANT MATTER.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Our beloved church, notwithstanding its high character and great achievements, has been too slow to discharge its duty with reference to the establishment and maintenance of hospitals.

It is occasion for rejoicing that it is now awaking to its imperative obligation in this matter.

A few years ago we had no hospitals at all; but now they are rapidly rising at suitable points in the wide territory of the church.

The most tender service rendered by our hospitals is their care of poor people who are sick or wounded. To the care of these pathetic patients the income from the Golden Cross Enrollment is devoted.

The General Conference of 1926 ordered that Hospital Week, or the Golden Cross Enrollment period, be from May 8 to May 15. That period now draws nigh, and it is to be hoped that all the pastors of all the churches will seek to enroll their members at that time.

Junior members are enrolled for 25 cents a year; adult members for $1 a year; active members, $5 a year; service members, $50; and one may become a Comrade of the Golden Cross and a life member for $500.

This communication is written to draw the attention of the preachers and members of our church in Mississippi and Louisiana to this important matter; and I exhort all concerned to meet the occasion with cheerful and ardent zeal.

THE SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Shreveport District Conference met in annual session at Oil City, La., Tuesday, April 19, in an all-day session, Dr. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder, in the chair.

The devotional exercises were opened by singing "Come, Thou Fount of Every Blessing," and "O for a Thousand Tongues to Sing My Great Redeemer's Praise." After a few moments of silent prayer, the conference was audibly led in fervent prayers by W. A. McKennon and Rev. A. M. Shaw. The Bible message was then ably given by Brother P. B. McCullen, of Istrouma, Baton Rouge, La., the Scripture lesson being the second chapter of Second Timothy.

The conference was called to order, and Rev. Don E. Dulaney was elected secretary. The chair announced the following committees:

Committee on admission—A. M. Shaw, R. M. Brown, J. M. Alford.

Committee on Local Preachers—W. C. Childress, W. E. Akin, W. F. Roberts.

Committee on Resolutions and Memorials—R. H. Nelson, J. B. Grambling, A. W. Turner.

Committee on Quarterly Conference Records—R. S. Walton, J. P. Honaker, B. R. George.

Ad Interim Committee—R. T. Ware, W. C. Scott, R. E. Goodrich, S. L. Riggs.

Sunday School Committee—D. B. Raulins, W. A. McKennon, C. T. Law.

The local preachers whose licenses were renewed are as follows: J. C. Allen, Jr., H. W. Brown, E. C. Dufresne, R. J. Marshall, Alvin Smith, T. A. Spinks, David Tarver.

Two young local preachers, H. W. Brown and E. C. Dufresne, were recommended for admission on trial into the Annual Conference.

In the absence of Dr. J. E. Crawford, of Nashville, Dr. George S. Sexton delivered a message in the interest of Christian Education.

A very spiritual observance of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was conducted by our beloved superannuates, Revs. B. T. Crews, S. J. Davies, W. F. Henderson, J. G. Sloan.

Splendid reports from all of the pastoral charges of the district were made by pastors. Outstanding points reported were: A full and loyal response to the free-will offering for Missions for the district, and a healthy gain in membership.

The various interests of the church were presented as follows: Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, Rev. R. W. Vaughan; Mansfield Female College, Rev. D. B. Raulins; Missions and the Memorial Home, Rev. J. G. Snelling, Conference Missionary Secretary; Prohibition, Rev. A. W. Turner; Religious Education, Dr. Briscoe Carter; District Woman's Missionary Society, Mrs. J. W. Peyton, District Secretary; Sunday Schools, Rev. C. D. Atkinson; Centenary College, Dr. Geo. Sexton, President; Layman's Movement, H. H. Bain, District Lay Leader; Epworth Leagues, Rev. J. B. Grambling.

Reports from the various committees were made.

The following delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: H. H. Bain, Mrs. C. A. Loyd, Dr. H. B. Wren, Mrs. S. L. Riggs, R. T. Douglas, J. M. Nabors, W. A. McKennon, R. H. Cushman, A. J. Scott, A. McGuirt.

Alternates: J. F. McDade, Mrs. S. F. Talbert, Tom Hickman, Dr. P. O. Brinkley, B. R. George, S. D. Johnson, J. P. Honaker, A. J. Johnson, Mrs. S. F. Fall, S. O. Williams.

Lay Leaders Elected: H. H. Bain, District Lay Leader; J. M. Nabors, associate; Dr. H. B. Wren, associate.

District Sunday School Council Officers: R. H. Nelson, Secretary; Elementary Superintendent, Mrs. N. L. Hudson; Adolescent Superintendent, Mrs. F. A. Bradshaw; Assistant Superintendent, Mary Matthews; Teacher Training Superintendent, W. G. Phelps; Parent Teacher Work, Mrs. R. E. Smith; Adult Work, Ruben Douglas; Week Day Religious Education, Rev. G. M. Hicks; Missionary Superintendent, Mrs. E. M. Venable.

At the night session, the Superannuate Endowment cause was very effectively presented in the form of a pageant, entitled, "The Fruits of His Labors," by Mattie Carruth Robertson.

Our superannuates of the district were given a liberal free-will offering following the presentation of the pageant.

On invitation of Rev. R. M. Brown, pastor, Mangum Memorial was selected as the place of out next district conference meeting.

Resolutions of thanks to the people of Oil City for the splendid entertainment of the conference, and to Dr. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder, for his wonderful management of the conference were adopted.

DON E. DULANEY, Secretary.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

An Arkansas hunter determined to know for himself whether the North Star held its unchangeable position in the sidereal heavens. He arranged his bed for the night, so that while lying thereon he could keep his sight intent upon Polaris through the fork of a nearby tree. He gazed for hours upon the far distant luminary, and ever afterward, no matter what astronomers might say concerning stellar movements, he was convinced that star was fixed.

I believe star gazers of these modern days tell us this particular heavenly body is a sun, and of such immense distance from earth that all apparent movement is lost to our poor earthly vision. But for all practical purposes, navigation, surveying, etc., Polaris, to use the words of a colored friend, is "sot in its socket."

Yes, there are some things fixed that are neither stars, hills or suns. Our present state of life, civilization, and social relation, our homes, the virtues and graces of good women, the integrity, courage and strength of our men, the welfare and happiness of our children, are dependent on certain well known principles of honesty, sincerity and truth. Yet there is continually and repeatedly a certain class of blatant sensationalists who would introduce into our social life the prurient, immoral standards of conduct and living that obtain among pagan or semi-pagan peoples. The sanctity of the marriage relation, the wholesome respect and reverence for law, the value and sacredness of human life, in short, virtue, respectability and honesty in business are hooted at as though these were effete customs of a simple civilization of the past, and should be relegated to the scrap heap.

The author of the Epistles to the Hebrews rejoices in the fact of "the things which cannot be shaken." One may shake a pliant willow or a lithe cane, but the everlasting hills are not moved by the tempests' wrath. Life, with all its glorious privileges, is not altogether empirical. New discoveries in the vast fields of nature, and ingenious inventions, which no doubt bring added comfort and convenience to our common welfare, do not affect the real essential principles of morals. Really, since you and I live in better homes than our forefathers, and have all the conveniences of modern life, we should be better men and women —more kindly, more considerate, more charitable, more Christlike, for we say all these material things sprang from a state of progress and civilization inaugurated by him, and are maintained by the things he taught the race.

A scornful Pilate, all at sea as to moral standards, asked of our Blessed Lord, "What is Truth?" but the observation and experience of the race, through the slow-moving centuries, evidences the fact, not only of its existence, but of the paramount importance for the highest welfare of all concerned. Sweeping away the standards in the end, means untold suffering. Men must have a sure guide in morals and religion. Jesus' answer to the Roman procurator stands for all time, "I am the Truth." In his life, person, and teaching we have the absolute, assured standard.

"I AM THAT I AM."

A Study in Righteousness, Law, and Redemption.

By Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, B.D.

An illustration is often the gateway to enlarged spiritual insight. Sometimes a problem with which we can do nothing by direct thought responds easily to treatment when approached through questions pertaining to a concrete case. So the orthodox view of the creation of man as recorded in the first chapters of Genesis, thought upon, may furnish much illumination and inspiration concerning some of the most perplexing problems in theology: The nature and origin of righteousness, whether in God or man; the origin of the moral law; and the ideal and method of Christian attainment—all may have much light thrown on them, we believe, by some thought on man as made in God's image.

As to the primitive state of man, all who accept the Scriptural record will readily agree that it was one of perfect holiness, justice, goodness, truth, love. Man was made in the image of God, in spiritual likeness to God, with every faculty perfect and every affection holy and good.

But the question may be asked: Was this holiness, goodness, perfectness, then, the righteousness of Adam? We answer without hesitation, No. It was the blessedness of Adam, the good fortune, the crown and glory of Adam, a precious gift of God that he was created thus; but in being thus there was at first no merit, no moral worth on Adam's part. Before such could become in Adam meritorious righteousness one thing was needful: That Adam should look within, should see all these qualities as holy and good, and should choose them as his, set his seal of valuation and approval upon them, and determine to hold fast thereto as supremely cherished. That choice of the good and self-commitment thereto would then have become the righteousness of Adam. Without it there was no more merit in his goodness than there is in the beauty of a lily or the innocence of a lamb. Character, personal righteousness, was an achievement possible for him but possible to him only as he made a fixed genetic right choice with subsequent minor choices and conduct consistent therewith. In order to this, evil in possibility must have been within his reach. So we have a theodicy for the existence of evil. As Dr. Olin A. Curtis finely puts it: "All evil in possibility is the awful price which had to be paid for any personal sainthood."

The record shows that no such steadfast personal commitment to the holy attributes of his own derived being did Adam make; so neither character nor righteousness did Adam possess, except as he struggled theretoward after the fall to regain the heavenly birthright—holiness, purity, the fellowship of God which he had in folly cast away; and which through steadfast loyalty from the beginning he would have maintained, transmitting even his holiness and innocence into righteousness and character of a far loftier kind, and escaping the thousand ills that with the entrance of sin flesh became heir to.

Now reverently we ask this same question concerning God: What constitutes the righteousness of God? The possession of all perfect attributes? Again we answer, No, and affirm that the essential righteousness of God is, that recognizing the supreme value and worth of his own perfect being, he has chosen and committed himself to it from all eternity to all eternity. Long before the dawn of creation, as God looked into the whole range of his own holy nature and saw its qualities he passed judgment upon it also that it was "very good," and committed himself to adhere to his own holy nature in its integrity forever. The personal righteousness of God is, then, this divine imprimatur upon himself, which has been and will be from everlasting to everlasting his abiding attitude.

We find a clue now to the significance of that obscure, mighty, perplexing, divine declaration: "I Am That I Am:" Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I am hath sent me unto you," as recorded in Exodus 3:13, 14. Some see in this only an assertion of God's incomprehensibility; but the best commentators, as Driver, quoting Delitzsch, recognize that the Hebrew here "denotes not the idea of inactive abstract existence, but the active manifestation of existence." May we not see in it, more clearly, a mighty volitional assertion of unchanging personality in perfect rectitude, including not merely the Being but also the Volitional Personality consistent with the Being of God?

If so, is it not, then, the utterly basal utterance of God himself concerning himself, so placed in the Scriptures and so recognized by mankind, though but dimly understood? The much heralded new translation by Moffatt, "I will be what I will be," is simply a weakening of the sublime old words, involving no change in sense and having not even the merit of being new; dating back indeed to an old Jewish commentator, Rashi of the eleventh century.

So the personal righteousness of God flashes forth in this ancient mighty declaration of Jehovah—I Am That I Am! Great personalities in human history, when very sure of themselves, have occasionally given utterance to words of like import; and the world has trembled and the course of human history has been changed thereby. A righteous will rightly fixed is the sublimest, mightiest thing in the heavens above or in the earth beneath.

And, now, with these thoughts before us, we ask: What is the moral law? Plainly and simply this: God's demand: What I Am, That You Must Be! God's righteousness—What I Am I will stand by forever: the moral law—What I am that you must be. Not something outside of God, in conformity to which God must himself order his own life; not something outside of God arbitrarily imposed by God upon us; but the very nature of God projected and established as a norm for the universe of moral persons.

The ideal, then, of human attainment is plainly and simply this—perfect and willing conformity to the divine nature. "Be ye therefore perfect even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect," "Be ye holy, for I am holy." Almost all religions recognize this; but vary in application all the way from becoming "partakers of the divine nature" and being "filled with all the fullness of God" through the Christian way of repentance, faith, and sanctification, in intensely conscious personality throughout, to a pantheistic reabsorption into an impersonal divine essence, cosmic force, vital energy, insensate all. What I Am That You Must Be is surely widely recognized as the norm for all created and existing intelligences.

But it is generally admitted, whatever attitude is assumed toward the orthodox Christian explanation and remedy, that there is a wide gulf between what man is ethically and what God is—between what man is and what man knows he ought to be. Our final question then is: How may this gulf be spanned? How may godlikeness be restored to man in personal character? This is the command of God: this is the desire of God: this is the fundamental need of man. In this human need and this divine desire the Plan of Redemption originates. With this word, Redemption, we know we part company with all consistent evolutionists, modernists, pantheists, and join a far more numerous and representative company, "the general assembly and church of the first born," "elect out of every age and nation," who accept the Holy Scriptures as a true and authoritative Revelation, and who through faith have been "renewed after the image of him who created us," in truly scientific as well as Christian fashion putting the doctrine to the pragmatic test and finding its truth confirmed by experience.

How may the gulf be spanned? By man? At his own initiative and through his own power of attainment? No. It is but to mock man to tell him so, to belie all history and all experience; and where are the "cloud of witnesses" who thereby have even claimed to have attained? No, the doctrinal statement of Articles VII and VIII is indeed true, "Man is very far gone from original righteousness, and of his own nature inclined to evil, and that continually," with neither the inclination nor the power within himself, "without the grace of God by Christ preventing us, that we may have a good will, and working with us, when we have that good will." The fact of depravity, of "dirt," as Chesterton bluntly puts it, is the most obvious thing in the world, and that it should be questioned in an age claiming to base everything on fact is amazing. The doubter might question the reality of the "heavenly washing," but as to the "dirt"—a will perverted and a nature selfish and sordid—that is apparent in all and to all who have any ethical eyes to see. Ovid, Seneca, Paul, down to Mark Twain, all bear witness to the fact of depravity and the futility of the struggle against it, with hopeless pessimism for the individual and the race, except as Christian faith has led to victory.

Redemption, then, through the Incarnation, Expiatory Death, and Resurrection of God's own Son, "very and eternal God, of one substance with the Father," is the divine plan whereby godlikeness may be restored in man. The story of it is outwardly known to all, though its close continuity with the original plan in creation is not generally recognized, making quite essential the historical validity of the Genesis record. The first Adam, created pure and holy in divine fellowship, having fallen, "in the fullness of time" after long preparation a Second Adam, the incarnate Son of God, with like uncorrupted nature comes into the world. As Dr. Alexander Whyte affirms: "My brethren, it is no irreverent play upon words, but it is a most profound and fundamental truth to say—That as Adam in his creation was made in the Image of the Son of God, so the Son of God in his Incarnation was in return made in the Image of Adam." And was, as was the first Adam and as we are, "in all points tempted;" "yet (the vast difference) without sin." He adheres to God, cherishes and maintains against all adversaries his holy and divine nature, even unto death, "the death of the cross." He thus "fulfills all righteousness;" is "made perfect through suffering;" and stands the righteous representative of the human race, in contrast to Adam, the fallen representative. As human, as man, he did all this and thereby qualified for sacrificial service, having escaped the just sentence of death which had been pronounced upon mankind because of sin. The contrast and outcome St. Paul expounds in logical detail: "As by one man sin entered into the world and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men for that all have sinned. But not as is the offense so also is the free gift—by the offense of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men to justification of life. . . . That as sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord" (Rom. 5:6-21).

But it is apparent that this Second Adam, this

Son of Man, must also be the Son of God, very God of very God, in the highest Christian sense, as affirmed in all the creeds of the centuries that any great mediatorial work might be wrought through and by him. Here is one who does not deserve death, but he dies; against whom the curse of broken law cannot be pronounced, but he bears it. Why? How? The Christian answer is, For others, voluntarily—in sacrifice, expiation, propitiation, substitution, satisfaction of the claims of a holy and broken law and in demands of justice inherent in the very nature of God. "That 'God might be just and the justifier of him that believeth on Jesus;" that justice might reign with love (not be dethroned), and the universe be undergirded and upheld by moral law.

Surely an age characterized by insistence upon the demands of natural law should not lightly hold that moral law may be lightly regarded. The right of God to maintain inviolate the whole range of his holy life seems utterly forgotten in our times. Had we such a weakly, sentimental God as is proclaimed to-day, he would be unworthy of a throne; and would reduce a universe to chaos, physical and moral, as we are reducing a world to chaos, without respect for moral law, human or divine, by our folly.

But granting that law demands penalty, sin demands atonement, the objection would still hold that the remedy is utterly inadequate to the cure, if only a mortal man, however holy, however sublime in sacrifice, died centuries ago upon a cross. So that Christ is God, is essential to even the credibility of the Christian faith as a consistent whole, else his task and claim of re-creating man in his own image and after his own likeness is preposterous and impossible. A human Christ only must be to-day a dead Christ utterly inadequate to the redemptive task of either pardoning or cleansing. But a "Lamb of God," a "Ransom," a "Christ Crucified," who is also Christ, "seated on the right hand of God the Father, from whence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead," to whom "all power is given in heaven and in earth" is, it must be admitted, utterly adequate to any task.

That there may be indeed a "heavenly washing" for the dirt of earth, such a personal God and Saviour there must be, else there is no salvation. But the Revelation we have, and the Revelation is sure, and consistent throughout. A cloud of witnesses which no man can number out of every race and age and tongue and nation have validated by experience this sublimely ethical and quickening Revelation which God has given us of his nature, his purpose, his plan. To reject it is to generate a smoke screen which shuts out the moral sun from our intellectual and spiritual heavens, and leaves us a blind, hopeless, despairing, lost race. There is no danger of dethroning God, but there is imminent danger of destroying men. "The Titans did not scale heaven; but they laid waste the world." With such a smoke screen of repudiation of Christian doctrine pouring forth from our leading magazines—with university professors asking therein for "A Substitute for Righteousness," and affirming that practically all intelligent students to-day "chuck out the 'right and wrong' standard," as "moribund," "because based on authority;" with another admitting under the title "Our Crumbling Ethics" that "we of the older generation (the destroyers of orthodox faith) have played with ideas and let loose forces the power of which we little dreamed," it is high time to realize that the adamantine God and gospel of our fathers must be proclaimed again with uncompromising boldness and truth that the eternal purpose of God be realized and a pure river of water of life flow forth through the church of God for the healing of the nations.

A DISAPPROVAL OF THE ACTION OF THE EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

By Hon. T. M. Evans.

I desire to express my disapproval as a layman of the Methodist Church, South, and a citizen of the State of Mississippi, of the conduct of the Methodist Educational Association in its unauthorized action in attempting to speak for the two and one-half million Southern Methodist people, by the resolutions passed at its eighth annual meeting held in Memphis recently at follows:

"We, the members of the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in session at Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 10, 1927, hereby put ourselves on record as opposed to all legislation that would interfere with the proper teaching of scientific subjects in American schools and colleges.

"Whether or not we have been in position to form opinions on current scientific theories or whatever opinions we may have formed on these subjects, in any case, we are opposed to such legislation because we believe it will be futile and can serve no good purpose."

The foregoing resolution taken in the abstract is about as void of meaning as an imaginary line given without a point of beginning, of course, or ending.

Dr. D. M. Key, LL.D., in the New Orleans Advocate of March 31, and the Christian Advocate of April 1, said:

"Having been present when the resolution was formulated and having heard and participated in the discussion of the wording, I feel that I can state accurately what was in the mind of those who presented the resolution. It was intended to express the conviction of the Association that legislative control of the subject matter taught in colleges is wrong in principle and dangerous to that freedom of thought which our fathers came to this country to establish. The word 'evolution' was avoided in order that the resolution might not even seem to indorse a materialistic and atheistic teaching of that subject.

"I can hardly see how any one who did not already completely distrust these educators could think that it was intended in this resolution to endorse any purely materialistic theory of evolution as a proper teaching of science. But if there be any possible excuse for misunderstanding of the resolution it is due perhaps to the anxiety not to offend which prevented the framers of the resolution from going on record as opposed to any legislation that would interfere with even the improper teaching of science—in other words, legislation that would interfere at all with full faculty responsibility for the curriculum. Such a statement would at any rate represent my own view."

Now Dr. Key makes it plain that the word "evolution" was left out on purpose, but that the resolution as published was intended to oppose any legislation tending to prevent the teaching of evolution in the public schools as well as the other schools.

Now, does Dr. Key mean that this Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, assume that they are the founders of all the educational institutions of the State and of the church? and that as the founders and supporters of the institutions, they have the exclusive right to dictate to the State and church what shall be taught? In other words, that the State and the church are subordinate to them? If they are the owners of these institutions, maintaining them out of their own resources, they would unquestionably have such rights, but Mississippi is spending from six to eight million dollars annually on education out of money raised by taxation, very little if any of which is collected from the members of this Association.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has been raising several millions dollars for educational purposes; a very small proportion of it has been contributed by these gentlemen.

Now are the people who contribute the money to the church and State to be subordinate to this Association who are making their living off of the contributions of the church members and the taxes of the people?

The law as enacted in Mississippi and Tennessee, and the legislation then pending in other States, does not in any way affect or attempt to regulate what shall be taught in any Christian, religious, Jewish, heathen or atheistic association or organization.

The power to assess, levy and collect taxes for public revenue is a political power, inherent in the legislative department of Government, and the Legislature does not only exercise the power to direct how all public funds raised by revenue shall be expended and for what purpose it shall be expended, but it is the imperative duty of the Legislature to provide for what purposes all public revenues are to be expended, and from the first act in the State of Mississippi authorizing the organization and maintenance of free public schools, the Legislature has directed what shall be taught in the public schools. While the selection of text books has been largely committed to Boards of Trustees and Text Book Commission, the Trustees and the Text Book Commission derive their authority to act from the Legislature, and therefore they have no authority to dictate to the Legislature, but are bound to carry out the wishes of the Legislature.

While I do not question the right of any member of the Association to express his individual opinion on any question, whenever the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, attempts to speak on political issues through General or Annual Conferences, committees or commissions, such action will be resented by all self-respecting American citizens who have enrolled themselves as members of this church, since the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, or any other church has no right to dictate to its members on any political issue or to speak for the membership of the church on any political issue. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is a Christian organization, organized as a branch of the Christian church established by Jesus Christ and commissioned by him.

Matthew 28, verses 19 and 20: "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

If these distinguished gentlemen will only take enough of their valuable time from the study of science to read a few of the first chapters of Genesis and the Book of Deuteronomy, they will find that the Holy Bible is as much a book of civil government as it is a book of Christian religion.

They will find that civil government was authorized by the same God who created the world, and who sent his Son as the Redeemer of the world. They will observe that man was created for the purpose of exercising civil government over all of the things of this world. See Genesis, chapter 1, verses 26 to 31; also, Genesis, second chapter, verses 15 to 25. In this we are taught that God gave Adam dominion over the earth and all that in it is, except one tree. Dominion has been defined by every court to mean sovereign power. From this comes the doctrine of the divine right of kings or sovereign power, which from first Samuel, chapter 8, verses 7, 8 and 9, we are taught that this divine right of government was not vested in a king, or particular forms of government, but was vested in the people, to be exercised by whatever form of government the people chose for themselves.

The Christian church was not instituted until after the fall of Adam, and there was no more occasion for the organization of the Christian church prior to the fall of Adam than there could be for a hospital in a place where no one was ever sick or died, or a prison in Heaven.

The Bible is silent as to what form of civil government Adam should maintain or what instructions were given him by God himself, in regard to civil government; but we find in the Book of Deuteronomy where God gave Moses the Ten Commandments. As the constitution of a civil government, the Ten Commandments provide no penalties or procedure for enforcement, but Moses promulgated under God's directions the necessary laws and regulations for the enforcement thereof. And the Book of Deuteronomy is a commentary written by Moses on civil government, and should be the first text book in every law school.

Civil government is as directly connected with God and the Holy Bible as the Christian church is, and should be considered as sacred, civil government being instituted for one purpose, and the Christian church being instituted for another. They are each as divine as the other, and each owes the same allegiance to God, but are as entirely separate in jurisdiction as the executive and legislative departments of government, the civil government having been instituted for the preservation of that which is pure in its purity, and the punishment and destruction of that which is impure. All of the civil powers of the world cannot restore one impure thing to purity or restore life to any dead thing.

The Christian church is commissioned to go forth and preach the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, by which, through the Atonement of our Lord, that which is vile and impure may be made pure, and the dead may be restored to life.

I am not familiar with all the States of the Union, but so far as Mississippi is concerned our government is a Christian government.

The Preamble to the Constitution of the State of Mississippi from its first organization read as follows: "We, the people of Mississippi in convention assembled, grateful to Almighty God, and invoking his blessing on our work, do ordain and establish this constitution."

Every officer of the State of Mississippi, from the members of the first Constitutional Convention to the present day, took an oath of office upon the Holy Bible, and their oath concluded with the sentence, "So help me God."

Section 265 of the Constitution prohibits any person from holding office in the State who denies the existence of God.

Section 18 of the Constitution reads as follows: "No religious test as a qualification for office shall be required and no preference shall be given by law to any religious sect or mode of worship; but the free enjoyment of all religious sentiments and the different modes of worship shall be kept sacred. The rights hereby secured shall not be construed to justify acts of licentiousness injurious to morals or dangerous to the peace and safety of the State, or to exclude the Holy Bible from use in any public schools of this State."

So that the Holy Bible is recognized by the Constitution of the State of Mississippi as the Word of God.

And to allow the teaching of any scientific theory in tax-supported schools in the State of Mississippi which theory contradicts the Holy Bible and imputes falsehood thereto, would be using the public revenue to destroy the Constitution of the State.

It would be as much a violation of the spirit and purpose of the Constitution of the State as to teach anarchy in the public schools.

In addition to the foregoing constitutional recognition of the Holy Bible and of God, our forefathers brought with them the Common Law against blasphemy and, in addition, our statute imposes a penalty on any person taking the name of God in vain in the presence of two or more persons.

Our State also adopted the common law against all common law officers which penalizes witchcraftry and many other offenses prohibited by the Bible.

Our statute also prohibits the desecration of the Sabbath and requires the children to take care of their parents.

Our statute prohibits murder, "thou shalt not kill;" also adultery; also theft, "thou shalt not steal; also perjury, "thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor." Our statute also prohibits covetousness. The Bible prohibits drunkenness—"and putting the cup to thy neighbor's lips when it sparkles."

Our whole sysem of jurisprudence on fraud is based on the commandment forbidding covetousness. Would these gentlemen in their ecclesiastical robes and living out of the treasury of our church have all of these laws repealed, rather than have the church in politics?

Would they have the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Law repealed, and yet all of the matters provided for in these laws shrink into insignificance compared to the teaching of unestablished theories which would contradict the Holy Bible and make it a book of falsehood, instead of the Word of God.

Dr. Key further says:

"I believe that the best way, really the only possible way, for the church or the state to 'control' our schools and what is taught in them is through the character of the persons that are put in charge of them and that do the teaching."

Now I fully concur in this suggestion and insist that we should select men to edit our papers and teach and control our schools who are willing to be subordinate to the State and the church, and that no one should hold such position who resents the control of the church or the State. And while it is not my purpose to compare the characters of the gentlemen who compose this Association with any one whomsoever, nevertheless it is a fact in this attempt to defeat any legislation that would prevent the teaching of evolution in the public schools of the State, they take the same position as the association that Clarence Darrow represents, which is organized and maintained for the same purpose.

SPRING TIME IN KENTUCKY.

By Rev. J. A. Poe.

They that live beneath Africa's sunny fountains
Know nothing of Greenland's icy mountains;
To live beneath aurora's glittering glow,
Amid the scenes of universal ice and snow,
Makes the heart with rapturous joy sing
At the first harbinger of approaching spring.

Yes, they that spend their lives beneath the light and tender glow of the Southern Cross can hardly imagine the changes that are wrought by the winter season. The stinging bite of "jack frost," and the withering blight and death that follow in the wake of the winter king is something wholly unknown to them.

Our winters here are neither extremely severe nor long, but are much more so than in Mississippi. So, five months of perpetual frost, dark clouds, howling winds and swirling snow-storms, is quite enough to give an old Mississippian a deep yearning and longing for sunny skies, balmy breezes, blooming flowers and singing birds. But my! When the gentle maiden does come tripping over the hills and across the valley, how fair to behold! With what enchanting loveliness, and—

On uncertain, timid, faltering feet,
She stands where life and death meet,
And o'er all the silent, gloomy land
She waves her wonder magic wand.

Then dark and angry clouds, break and fly
From beneath a smiling, cerulean sky;
Then can be heard the mild-eyed dove
Cooing her low, gentle song of love.

And the robin greets the break of day
With his rare, rich, rollicking lay;
The dawn is resonant with song and twitter,
And twilight is emblazoned with stars aglitter.

The fields are clothed in living green,
And in all the land may be seen,
In field and forest, and in every bower,
The bursting bud and the blooming flower.

Sure thing—spring time in "Ole Kentuck" is great, with its ever changing scenery of hill and vale, cliffs and craggy heights trailing off into enchanting landscapes, verdant with wheat, rye, oats, barley, blue and other grasses, dotted with droves of hogs, flocks of sheep and herds of cattle. It would be hard to find a more beautiful country than Kentucky is when at her best—and she is at her best in the spring season. And this promises to be one of the earliest of the five I have spent in the State. I planted my garden in February (a kind of a dare), and was laughed at by some of the older natives; but it begins to look as if I will have the laugh on them, for everything I planted is up, looking good—cabbage spreading their leaves, peas ready to stick, potatoes up, with lettuce, radish and other small vegetables looking fine. If Aurora does not nip us with his cold blast, in just a short time it will look like gardening way down in "Ole Missip."

Nowhere I have been is there a greater variety of birds, flowers, fruits and vegetables, and no section more arboreous. Almost every tree and hardy shrub that grows between the extremes of North and South can be found here, and of the most luxuriant growth and richest foliage. So, along toward the close of April the whole land bears some resemblance to a vast, boundless, beautiful canvas in which the hand of the Divine Artist has blended every tint and shade that is contained in the solar spectrum. And until well into mid-summer this spring-like scenery lingers, and then gradually fades into the golden glow of autumn.

It is a land where "every prospect pleases" and every vista shows a surprising change. There is no monotony here. If there is any one thing that is characteristic of Kentucky, it is variety; and yet there is a homogeneity that seems to embrace all. For the variety of Kentucky is all its own, and unlike that to be found anywhere else. Its lofty mountains, deep valleys, precipitous, winding rivers, rushing, foaming, gurgling rivulets as they hasten down little precipices and along broken courses, the deep, dark, wildwood—all make a dreamland from which it would be hard to break loose. No wonder the Kentuckians love Kentucky, for I find myself falling under the enchantment, and growing more and more en rapport with climate, country and people. I like Kentucky, and have renewed my youth since coming here. I feel like a twenty-year-old, and with the return of the robin and the blooming of the "buttercups," love, faith, and hope burn anew on the altars of my heart—love for God who made all things so lovely, and for my fellow-man made in his image; faith that all will be well while here on earth, and a hope that the Infinite Fiat that calls all nature from its wintry grave and fills it with a new life and robes it with gorgeous glory will not leave me in the shadows of death nor my body in the dust of the earth.

TEN WEEKS OF TITHE EDUCATION.

Any church may now put on a ten weeks' course of tithing education, right in the midst of its other activities, and at a ridiculously small cost.

The Layman Company, which has distributed many millions of pamphlets on the tithe, now announces an attractive new series, at so low a price that distribution to an entire church through ten weeks costs only two cents and a half per family.

A complete set of samples and full particulars will be sent for thirty cents. This includes two playlets; a Tithing Account Book, Winning Financial Freedom, and Adventures in Tithing.

Please give your denomination; also mention the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

THE PLAN THAT IS HATCHED-UP TO RAISE YOUR SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT QUOTA ACCOMPLISHES NOTHING UNTIL IT IS HITCHED-UP

By LUTHER E. TODD, Secretary of the Board of Finance

YOUR CHANCE IN MAY

Forgotten Men are they? How can they be forgotten with so many commodious church buildings and comfortable parsonages standing monumental to their fidelity? These structures are our Keep Sakes of the men under whose leadership they were erected, and through many years they have withstood the weather's angry moods, steadfastly refusing to forsake appointed tasks. They seem somehow to possess, within the wood and stone, the spirit of those who brought them into being. The very steeples and walls of them scream out a protest against the Church's forgetting their builders.

The 4,000 churches built by the superannuates provide places of worship for more than one million people. The 1,500 parsonages built by them provide comfortable homes for one-fourth of all the pastors in active service today in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The people, who assemble in these churches seeking communion with God, will not realize their aim in full measure until they have done their part to provide for the necessities of the aged and worn-out preachers under whose leadership the churches were erected. Nor can the pastors in active service, who live in the 1,500 comfortable parsonages erected by the superannuates, be at ease while they are haunted by the spectre of the builders in distress.

WHAT IS WRONG WITH THE SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES OF THE LAND?

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

Part 1.

Sedalia, Jan. 2, 1927. Miss Sarah Osborn, a student in Cambridge College, was arrested last night while attempting to break into the store of Heflin & Co., of this city.

Mariona, Jan. 10, 1927. It was ascertained this morning that yesterday just before the closing hour of the Commercial Bank, of this city, Miss Mary Sweatman entered the bank, held up the cashier, and made her get-away with $1,000. She was later arrested at the residence of her parents. Miss Sweatman was a student in High Hill College.

Marietta, Jan. 15, 1927. There was great excitement at the Exalted University when James S. Steadman was found dead in his room. When discovered his body was found lying on the floor with a bullet through his brain, and a revolver, with one empty chamber, was held in his right hand. He left a note, addressed to his parents, in which he said: "Life is not worth living."

Jones City, Feb. 5, 1927. It is reported that on the night of Feb. 2, a banquet was given the male students of X University by the co-eds at which, until past midnight, hip flasks and cigarettes were in evidence. This is the university which has become famous throughout the nation because of the activities of two organizations among its students, viz., "The Thinkers' Association" and "The Atheistical Society of America." The purpose of the former, as announced by its organizers, is to stage debates between opponents and proponents of "companionate" marriage, birth control, and similar subjects. The leaders of the latter organization have stated that the purpose of their society is to destroy the superstitious idea of God.

Jamestown, June 10, 1927. Joe Smith returned yesterday from college where he graduated with the highest honors of his class. However, the hearts of his father and mother are broken, because Joe, while in college, had his faith in God wrecked.

Baltimore, March 25, 1927. The freshmen of Johnston University made a violent effort last night to break up a sophomore banquet which was being held in a public building. In the general mix-up four students were killed, others were seriously wounded, and several thousands of dollars damage was done to the building. The police were callled in to quell the riot.

The reader will understand, of course, that the above purported dispatches are, in a sense, fictitious; but are, nevertheless, patterned after dispatches which have been published in the newspapers of the nation within recent months as news items released by the Associated Press. A few days ago, a press report estimated that during the present school term no less than thirty youths, who were students in the various institutions of learning, had committed suicide, leaving behind them such dying messages as, "Life is not worth while;" "Death is a great adventure;" "I am tired of living," etc. Such tragedies as these, together with many news items published in the daily press similar to the purported press dispatches given above, have raised in the minds and hearts of the Christian parents of this country the question contained in the caption of this article: What is Wrong with the schools and colleges of the land?

The public has not forgotten the murder of the Franks boy by two youths who stated that they committed the deed for the thrill—to ascertain if in the agony of death the boy would wriggle as an impaled fly. Both these youthful murderers were university students, both highly educated, and one of them was said to be able to read fluently fifteen different languages. When such horrible, bloody deeds are done by the products of the nation's institutions of learning, it raises the question, What is wrong with the schools and colleges? and when the judges of our criminal courts are telling us that the vast majority of those who are being arraigned before them are youthful delinquents, the question persists, What is wrong with the schools and colleges? Recently, the newspapers, in giving an account of a revival meeting held in a certain town within the bounds of the Mississippi Conference, stated that no less than fifty high school students, both boys and girls, publicly confessed that they were "crap shooters" and gamblers. As long as the newspapers publish reports of such conditions as existing in the schools of the country, it will not be strange if Christian fathers and mothers continue to ask, What is wrong with the schools and colleges?

That something is radically wrong is certain, if we may judge by some of the products of these institutions. "By their fruits," said our Lord, "ye shall know them." In this article I shall attempt to mention only two things which I believe to be the fundamental causes of the delinquent and moral aberrations of students in the schools.

In the first place, there must be assigned the fact that the whole system of education, from the university down to the public school system, is based upon an erroneous conception—the idea that mere book learning or intellectual training will make good citizens. I have to say the experience of other nations has demonstrated that such a procedure will not produce good citizens and conversely intellectual training alone will only equip youth for greater criminality and more skillful rascality. The truth is, nothing but the development of the conscience, or moral nature, along with intellectual training, will produce good citizenship. Decry it as they may, let the educators make note of this fact. But this very essential factor in any worthwhile system of education is the very thing which is largely neglected in the schools of to-day, and if the educators cannot be brought to a realization of this fact and be persuaded in some way to introduce moral culture into the present system of education, our boasted civilization will be driven upon the rocks. As I see it, the only salvation of the present day system of education is the Christian character of the men and women who enter the school rooms as teachers; and the time has come in the history of this Republic when the boards of school trustees should demand that every teacher has an experimental knowledge of God, and is a member of some evangelical church.

Another thing that is radically wrong with the schools is the materialistic teaching sanctioned by too many educators. When the writer was pastor in a certain South Mississippi town, the teacher of ancient history informed the class that the Genesis story of creation is only allegory; that Adam and Eve were not the first man and woman, but there was a pre-historic race which evolved itself from the slime and ooze of the sea-bed. It has been alleged that materialistic instruction is especially prevalent in the higher institutions of learning. If this allegation be true, it accounts for the opposition of so many modern educators to all legislative enactments prohibiting the teaching of evolution in tax-supported schools. It is understood, of course, that evolution is thoroughly materialistic in all its tendencies, and only an unestablished hypothesis, being unsupported by a scintilla of evidence. It cannot properly be said to be given a materialistic interpretation; it is materialistic per se, teaching the brute origin of man as against the Bible account of man's creation by the direct act of God. The religion of Evolution and the Christian religion cannot exist side by side—one or the other must go, because they are essentially and mutually antagonistic. Evolution taught in the schools of Germany for a generation prepared that generation for the brutalities of the world war. This country is adopting in a large measure in institutions of learning the materialistic educational system of Germany, and the results, as the first fruits already indicate, will be shocking moral delinquencies of the youth of the nation. Many educators, apparently blinded by materialistic propaganda, are sowing the wind, and the rising generation shall reap the whirwind. In fact, instances of Christian fathers and mothers whose hearts have been broken, because their children whom they sent away from home to attend college have returned with their faith in God wrecked, is proof sufficient that the harvest, sowed by liberalistic professors, is already being reaped. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," is a biblical expression of an immutable law, universal in the realm of nature and morals.

What is wrong with the schools and colleges of the land? Both the answer and explanation of all the present day tendencies toward atheism and its logical fruitage in crime and moral degeneracy among the youth of the nation are found in these two things: An erroneous educational system, based upon the false idea that intellectual training alone will produce a citizenship of moral character; and second, the teaching of the unsubstantiated and materialistic hypothesis of evolution. From such seed sowing the sower can expect the reaping of no other harvest than that of a multiplication of infidels and athetists, and woe be unto the nation when the harvest is ready for the reaping!

RULES FOR MAKING A GOOD CHURCH MEMBER.

Number 7.

By "Rev. Ichabod Crane."

A good church member will live the truth his pastor preaches.

"But he that received seed into the good ground is he that heareth the Word, and understandeth it; which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, some an hundred fold, some sixty, some thirty." Matt. 13:23.

The best way to produce an eloquent sermon is to fill it with the Word of God, which is the most eloquent of all writings or speech. We should be anxious to hear and live this word of truth, which is the "power of God unto salvation."

TO THE PASTORS OF THE ABERDEEN DISTRICT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFENRENCE.

Please send me the names of your delegates to the district conference, which meets at Fulton, Miss., May 24-26, 1927, beginning at 10:30 a.m., Tuesday, with sermon by Rev. F. H. McGhee.

If you have not elected your delegates, please do so at once. See paragraph 84, Discipline, 1926, and North Mississippi Conference Year Book, 1926, page 25, for those who are members.

Thanking you for this information, and praying that you may bring our town a great blessing, I am,

Yours truly,

THE PIKE COUNTY METHODIST MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.

Dear Brother Carley: The Pike County Ministerial Association is meeting regularly and much good is being realized by the members in our monthly gatherings.

On March 8, we met in the church at Bogue Chitto, of which Brother L. M. Sharp is pastor. Nearly all the members of the Association were present. The reports of the preachers revealed the fact that they were all busy and much progress was being made in this section of the Brookhaven District.

On March 29 we met in the church at Osyka. Brother Ainsworth is the popular pastor of these fine people. We had a full attendance and a great day together.

The good ladies of both these churches showed their loyalty and love for the ministry in preparing sumptuous lunches for the physical man.

The lower group of the Brookhaven District of which the Pike County Ministerial Conference is composed, is progressing steadily in the program of our great church. JAMES M. LEWIS.

ASK ME ANOTHER ABOUT TRAVEL.

Church Touring Guild Tests Knowledge of Its Members.

What Do Ministers Know About Traveling?

A seasonable suggestion to test their knowledge comes in the form of a questionnaire from the Church Touring Guild, which annually arranges vacation trips to Europe and the Holy Land for hundreds of ministers and laymen. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, President of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ, is president of the Guild, and its vice presidents are Bishops James Cannon, James E. Freeman and William Lawrence.

The Church Touring Guild is submitting, in the interest of smoother and more pleasant travel, a list of questions which it believes its members should be able to answer before walking up the gangplank. These apply not only to the clergy, but to any one contemplating a first trip abroad. Whether steps will be taken later to have the government refuse a passport unless the applicant rates at least seventy-five per cent on this quiz, has not yet been decided.

Questions.

1. What is a continental breakfast?
2. How many classes of railroad travel are there in Europe?
3. What becomes of the money raised at ships' concerts?
4. What are the two nearest seaports to Paris?
5. How far out to sea does a country's jurisdiction extend?
6. What is usually the most disillusioning experience connected with a journey to another country?
7. What is the correct amount to tip a bedroom steward on board ship?
8. To what amount can goods purchased abroad be legally brought back into the United States by a citizen without paying duty?
9. What is the most famous literary shrine in Europe?
10. Why does a wise traveler avoid sailing dates at the end of June and the beginning of July?
11. What is the best way to treat a customs official?
12. What is the most famous rock in Europe, and for what two reasons is it famous?
13. Through what government does one get passports?
14. What steamship lines give their ships names ending in -ia? in -ic?
15. In a foreign country whose language you do not understand, what is the best medium of communication?
16. How much baggage is a traveler allowed on European railroads without paying extra?
17. What is a pension?
18. What is a visa (or vise)?
19. What does an "inclusive fee" tour really include?
20. Who allots seats at the dining tables on board ship?
21. From what point in Europe can one see thirteen lakes?
22. How far in advance should steamship reservations be made?
23. If in trouble in a foreign country, to what official should one apply?
24. Around what body of water are grouped the remains of the most renowned ancient civilization?
25. Where is the best place to stop if you want nothing but American food?

Answers.

1. A light breakfast of coffee (or chocolate) and a roll.
2. Three, in most European countries.
3. It goes to a fund for the relief of seamen's widows and orphans and of disabled seamen.
4. Havre and Cherbourg.
5. Three miles.
6. The first sight of one's passport photograph.
7. It depends on the class of travel; generally $5 for first class, and $3 for third class.
8. One hundred dollars' worth.
9. Stratford-on-Avon, birthplace of William Shakespeare.
10. It is most difficult at that time to get good accommodations.
11. With absolute courtesy.
12. Gibraltar, famous for (1) its strategic position commanding the Mediterranean Sea, and (2) the advertising of a great insurance company.
13. Department of State.
14. Cunard and Anchor lines, -ia; White Star, -ic.
15. Money.
16. No more than sixty-six pounds; in some countries none at all.
17. A contnental boarding house.
18. Official endorsement of a passport by the consul of the country to be visited.
19. All traveling and maintenance expenses from the point of sailing to return, except tips on Atlantic steamers and purely personal expenses; it includes also admission fees, services of guides, and necessary tips.
20. The second steward.
21. The summit of the Rigi, in Switzerland.
22. As early as possible, in order to get the best choice of accommodations.
23. The nearest consul of one's own country.
24. The Mediterranean Sea.
25. At home.

A CITY FOR SALE.

By William Rittenhouse.

How would you like to wake up in the morning and find that your city had been sold? Suppose New York, or Chicago, or San Francisco should go to the highest bidder by act of the Government, and then have to pay its own ransom? Such a thing is beyond imagination, you say. Well, this has happened to one rich, beautiful city in Europe. It was sold not only once, but twice.

"Taormina, the Beautiful," was one of the three leading towns of Sicily when Sicily was one of the leading countries of the Mediterranean. It was settled by the Greeks before history began. It helped the Romans bravely in the war against Carthage. It became a Christian city, and battled heroically against the Saracens.

Over and over again the Saracens took Taormina, put her Christians to the sword, tortured and pillaged them, but in vain. The streets ran red with the blood of the martyrs; but the survivors rallied to the standard of the cross in generation after generation until, after one hundred and nine years of Saracen rule in Sicily, Count Roger, the Norman, forced them to surrender Taormina forever.

It was not the Saracens who sold Taormina. Five hundred years later a great German emperor owned Sicily as part of his wide-flung dominion. He was the grandson of Ferdinand and Isabella of Spain, the young Charles V. He visited his city of Taormina, and the people welcomed him with enthusiastic loyalty. The emperor saw how beautiful it was, lying below Mount Etna on the sea. It was a rich trading city, proud of its long, brave history. Any monarch might rejoice to be its possessor.

But Charles wanted money more than he wanted cities. He was ruler over nearly all Europe. He had cities to spare. So he quietly set out to sell Taormina. One fine day, the people of the proud Sicilian metropolis woke up to find that their beloved emperor had turned them over to the highest bidder. Eighty thousand florins had bought Taormina—houses, streets, trade, and inhabitants.

Instantly the citizens set to work to ransom their town. They sold their goods; they brought everything that they had; they scraped and saved; they raised the sum, great as it was for those days, including, of course, a handsome profit for the buyer; and they bought back their freedom, such as it was. The Emperor Charles, having spent the eighty thousand florins of purchase money, and seeing how brave and self-sacrificing the Taorminians were, had a brilliant idea.

Why not sell Taormina whenever he needed money?

He acted on this idea at once. By a royal decree, this time, the city was formally put up for sale. But it was no longer rich; any buyer could see that for himself. Its trade was crippled. Its people were discouraged. Many of them had left the town. Some of them had starved. So the only offer that Charles received was from Anthony Balsamo, of Messina, who offered eight thousand florins.

As it was all that he could get, the royal bargainer accepted it. Taormina summoned up all its resources. By incredible sacrifices, the eight thousand florins, plus Balsamo's profit, were scraped together, and paid to him. Taormina was ruined, but there was one comfort: the city could not be sold again, for no one would buy it.

Balsamo was not so treacherous as an emperor. When, after this, some raiding bands of Spanish soldiers attacked Taormina, Balsamo, under a commission from the careless viceroy, came with armed forces and defended the city. So Taormina survived, though never again in its former glory.

To-day the city is a famous resort for tourists. They bring so much wealth to Taormina that it would soon be prosperous again but for the beggars that crowd to it to feed on the lavish charity of the travelers. The three crowded hotels probably take in more money in one season than would have paid the city's ransom. But Taormina's true greatness—the greatness of her people's hearts—is gone, never to return.—Queens' Gardens.

FATHER'S GONE.

Rev. Lyman Carley, a superannuate member of the Mississippi Conference, passed to his reward from the home of his son, the editor of the Advocate, in New Orleans on Wednesday afternoon, April 20, at 1 o'clock. He was 78 years and 21 days old. After a brief service at the home on Thursday morning, conducted by Dr. J. B. Mitchell, pastor of the Rayne Memorial Methodist Church, the body was carried to Ellisville, Miss., for burial. The funeral services were held at the Methodist church in Ellisville, conducted by the pastor, Rev. Percy Vaughan, assisted by Revs. G. E. Allan, J. L. Greenway, and B. L. Sutherland. In spite of a downpour of rain, the church was filled with his former friends and neighbors; and their esteem for him was expressed by the closing of the business houses during the funeral, by a profusion of flowers, and by many beautiful courtesies extended to members of the family.

The life of this faithful minister of the gospel was dominated by three master passions—a passionate love for God, a passionate devotion to his family, and a passionate thirst for knowledge.

His love for God he manifested by a singularly pure and beautiful personal life and by a faithful ministry of the Word over a period, all told, of nearly sixty years. Some sore trials came into his life; but he never fled from a difficult place or turned away from the call of duty. He was one of that vast multitude of men upon whom God could count!

His devotion to his family showed itself in all the ways that a father's heart can devise for the welfare and happiness of those he loves. He made many sacrifices that they might have opportunities that he did not enjoy in youth—but his love transmuted those sacrifices into blessed privileges. From the time when he held his children as infants in his arms and sang to them the songs of the Kingdom, to the last time he could look consciously upon the faces of grown sons and daughters, there shone in his eyes a love-light that was as strong and tender as shone in the eyes of mother. How he loved them!

His thirst for knowledge he showed by a lifetime of study. He held a book in his hand as he rode horseback over the wide stretches of his early circuits; he read by the light of the pine-knot fire as he rested at the end of the day's journey; as the years went by he grew in knowledge, but he never ceased to learn. He did not go to college—but he acquired the full equivalent of a college education by his own efforts. He could read Hebrew and Latin and Greek—he read the New Testament in Greek through at least once a year for thirty years. He worked through some of the higher courses of mathematics; he studied history and philosophy as well as theology, and was keenly interested in the developments of modern scholarship. He never ceased to buy and read books. But he was more than a reader—he was a thinker. He was much in meditation and prayer.

Now he is gone. But we know where he has gone—to Heaven, where Mother already was. Now both of them are waiting and watching for us to come Home.

Yes, Father and Mother, we are coming.

THE FLOOD SITUATION.

Large sections of Mississippi and Louisiana are already suffering from the most disastrous flood in their history, and other sections are threatened with the same disaster. Hundreds of people, mostly colored, have lost their lives, and thousands have lost practically all their belongings. The situation is extremely serious.

In the midst of it all, we must not forget the blessings that have been ours through all the years, or lose faith in God. All possible relief agencies are at work, and everything possible is being done to save life and property and relieve suffering. It may be that out of this great catastrophe may come a plan of flood control that will make the recurrence of such a calamity impossible.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. A. S. Lutz, pastor of the West Monroe Methodist Church, West Monroe, La., received twelve members into the church on Easter Sunday.

President H. G. Hawkins, of Whitworth College, is in Chicago this week attending the annual convention of the National Religious Education Association.

Rev. R. G. A. Carlisle began a revival meeting at Noxapater, Miss., last Sunday, in which he is being assisted by Rev. Henry T. Young, general evangelist, of De Ridder, La.

Jeff Cunningham, son of Rev. and Mrs. E. H. Cunningham, of the North Mississippi Conference, is a member of the debating team of Millsaps College that has made such a notable record this year.

Dr. David Aston, editor of the Oklahoma Methodist, died suddenly on April 17. He had been prominent in the work of the church for many years. He was at one time a student in Millsaps College.

A meeting at Richton, Miss., in which the pastor, Rev. M. M. Black, was assisted by Rev. J. O. Hanes, general evangelist, came to a close on Wednesday night of last week. Gracious results followed the meeting.

The First Methodist Church of Minden, La., Rev. Leon I. McCain, pastor, contributed the magnificent sum of $1,700 to the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage on Easter Sunday—the largest amount ever given by the church.

Rev. and Mrs. Gayle C. Beanland, missionaries in Africa of the Presbyterian Church, arrived in New York on April 23 for a visit home. Mrs. Beanland is a daughter of Rev. W. M. Williams, of the Mississippi Conference.

As a result of the revival meeting at the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., conducted by Dr. Burke Culpepper, 176 members were received on Easter Sunday—sixty-seven by baptism, fifty-four by vows, and fifty-four by certificate.

The Presbyterian Hospital, this city, will observe Sunday, May 1, as Hospital Day, at which time friends of the institution are requested to make contributions for its support. The hospital renders free service to the poor to the amount of about $40,000 annually.

Rev. C. A. Northington, District Sunday School Superintendent of the Columbus District, announces that that district is leading the North Mississippi Conference in the number of churches that have ordered Sunday School Day programs, fifty churches having ordered them up to April 22.

Lamar & Whitmore, Publishing Agents, announce that Bishop Warren A. Candler, Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, Dr. Franklin N. Parker, Dr. Gilbert T. Rowe, and Dr. Paul B. Kern have been chosen by popular vote as members of the "Board of Review for the Ministers' Selective Book Service."

Easter Sunday was a great day with the First Methodist Church, Gulfport, Miss. The Sunday school attendance was 1,157; twelve infants were baptized, and a great congregation heard the pastor, Rev. W. J. Ferguson, preach at the morning hour. The choir rendered an Easter cantata at the evening service. This church has received eighty-seven members since Conference.

The following telegram was received from Rev. G. A. Morgan, Arcadia, La., just before the Advocate went to press: "Six hundred seventy-eight attended Arcadia Methodist Sunday school yesterday. Four hundred six in men's Bible class. The large attendance of men was the result of a spirited attendance contest between Arcadia and Winnfield men's classes."

The family of Rev. D. L. Griffin, formerly of the Louisiana Conference, is passing through deep waters. Mrs. Griffin has recently undergone the second major operation since October of last year, and the fourth since June, 1925. Other members of the family have been advised by physicians to undergo operations. During the past month, the mother and five children have been sick with the mumps. These misfortunes have exhausted Brother Griffin's resources, and if any kindly disposed persons should care to assist him financially, they can get in touch with him through P. O. Box 1595, Shreveport, La. Brother Girffin will be glad to assist in meetings.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, sends the Advocate the following sad news: "Mrs. Minnie Maddox Clark, wife of Rev. O. A. Clark, our pastor at Shuqulak, passed away at the parsonage home early Friday morning, April 22. The funeral service was held Saturday, April 23, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Methodist church in Shuqulak, conducted by the presiding elder, assisted by Revs. W. N. Duncan, Seamon Rhea, and W. S. Selman. Her body was laid to rest in the cemetery at Shuqulak. She leaves her husband, and four children—Allene, 12; Arnold, 10; Marie, 5, and Maggie Love, 3 years of age. We sympathize with the bereaved family." The Advocate joins in sincere sympathy for the sorrowing ones.

MONROE DISTRICT CONFERENCE POSTPONED.

The following telegram from Dr. N. E. Joyner, presiding elder of the Monroe District, Louisiana Conference, is self-explanatory: "Announce indefinite postponement of Monroe District Conference. Conditions demand it."

GREENWOOD DISTRICT CONFERENCE POSTPONED.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham, presiding elder of the Greenwood District, North Mississippi Conference, authorizes the Advocate to announce that the Greenwood District Conference has been indefinitely postponed, due to flood conditions.

THE SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Seashore District Conference met in Pascagoula, Miss., March 30 and 31. There was a large attendance from the beginning until the end.

The opening sermon was preached by Rev. H. A. Wood, of Picayune. The other three sermons were preached by Bishop W. A. Candler. The conference was a spiritual one, and seemed to meet the requirement of giving prominence to religious exerices. Bishop Candler presided during a good part of the sessions, and his presence and preaching were a benediction to the delegates and to the people of Pascagoula.

The conference asked the Trustees of Seashore Camp Ground to call upon the patronizing Conferences either to develop the property along the lines stated in the transfer of title to them, or else return the title to the districts which had granted it. This would call, if possible, for a summer assembly and a thoroughly orthodox Bible school for ministers and laymen to be open all the year.

The following delegates and alternate delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: Delegates—Mrs. M. Davis, H. B. Rush, Mrs. W. J. Ferguson, Horace Hinds, H. H. Hinton, H. D. Cudebac, D. C. Camp, Mrs. A. W. Jenkins, E. E. O'Neill, C. V. Hathorn, D. R. Weston, and H. L. Daniels; alternates—Mrs. M. E. Gale, J. C. Ross, Mrs. C. A. Carrier, Miss Tillie Swan, Mrs. W. F. Hopkins, and C. H. Wood.

Randolph Saucier, Henry Lindsey Daniels, and William Oliver Gordon were recommended for admission on trial into the Annual Conference.

Pascagoula entertained royally. Jim Sells is a good pastor-host. His father, J. L. Sells, was a good presiding officer. He is careful and quietly looks after all the business of the district conference.

S. F. HARKEY, Secretary.

GOLDEN CROSS ENROLLMENT AT HAND.

By Dr. Charles C. Jarrell, General Secretary.

The General Conference has hallowed May 8-15 as the period for Golden Cross Enrollment.

The aim of this enrollment is to make possible the relief mission of Methodism to the sick and injured—particularly the sick poor.

Where there is a Conference hospital, one hundred per cent of the proceeds of the enrollment in that Conference (or Conferences) will be used in the hospital treatment of those unable to pay for medical and surgical care.

In Conferences where there is no Conference hospital, eighty per cent of Golden Cross funds will be used to build up a hospital fund for that Conference and twenty per cent will be used by the General Hospital Board in advancing its work.

One week in the year (May 8-15) is allotted this work. If it is not done at this time, it will likely get crowded out. What did Jesus do about the sick when he was in the world?

The Golden Cross has been called the "Red Cross of Methodism." I should rather say, "The Golden Cross is the Golden Love in the Golden Heart of Methodism, writing a Golden Creed in a Golden Deed, answering the cry of human need and obeying the command of the healing Jesus."

Obedience to the command of Jesus and to the law of the church and to the call of Humanity should be spelt with Golden Cross buttons, May 8-15.

OPENING SERVICES IN THE NEW CHURCH AT WINNSBORO, LA.

On Thursday, April 14, at 8 p. m., a lovely church wedding took place when the pastor, Rev. H. W. Rickey, united in marriage Mr. Fay Walter and Miss Alice Bradley. This was the first service in the beautiful new brick church.

On Easter Sunday, the Sunday school attendance was nearly double what it has been, and was followed by a "Cradle Roll Program." At this service, Rev. D. C. Barr assisted the pastor in baptizing ten members of the Cradle Roll.

The Easter music, with the Winnsboro orchestra and choir, trained by Mrs. W. D. Harrison, and a duet by Messrs. Frank and Henry Rickey, was very enjoyable. The Orphanage collection was large.

Many visitors were shown through the new church in the afternoon.

At the night service, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, a former presiding elder, preached to a crowded house. The Epworth League had charge of the music, and were assisted by a male quartet from Wisner.

This was a wonderful day for the Winnsboro Methodists, who have hoped and labored so long for this temple worthy of our God.

MRS. H. W. RICKEY.

A FALSE ALARM.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

A short editorial in a late issue of our Adult Student contains the following:

"Not so long ago the Senate hearing on prohibition was moving along merrily. Came the president of the Carnegie Institute of Technology to inform the investigators of the violations of moral law among his students. The picture he painted was almost terrorizing. Youth were making such headway as they went to the devil that it had become impossible to calculate their rate of speed. But Dr. Church was in for one of those surprises which young people are prone to give us adults ever so often. The student council met him, challenged his statements, found him without sufficient proof for them, and got from Dr. Church a retraction and apology. Thus we see our students calling the hand of those making loose statements concerning the evil effects of prohibition. In the face of such signs as these can we afford to hold before our minds the suggestions often made that our young people are 'rotten?' On the other hand, we might be giving serious consideration to the possibilities of a closer alliance with our youth to fight the forces of darkness."

These are strong and well-timed words, and this writer heartily endorses them. The fact that all this fright about our youthhood going "all to the bad," as indicated by the author of the above editorial, is but an effort on the part of anti-prohibitionists to sow far and wide a propaganda as false as it is cruel, to induce voters to believe that national prohibition of the liquor business is an unjust, unwise, and impossible national policy. None of us who know the spirit and purpose of this anti-prohibition movement, are surprised that they should resort to falsehood of any shade of meanness, and would cruelly slander the finest youthhood ever known; but we are surprised that such men as Dr. Church, the President of Carnegie Institute of Technology, should be so egregiously misled as to join with the bums, these conscienceless liquor men and others willingly ready to ruin thousands of their fellows for the money they may get by it. Surely this learned man, with so high a reputation for righteousness and wisdom, is not aware of the company who are claiming him and his quasi-endorsement of their nefarious business.

In the New Orleans Christian Advocate of March 17, there is an article by our beloved and honored Bishop Candler, evidently inspired by an address delivered recently by Dr. Henry Louis Smith, President of Washington and Lee University, whose theme was, "The Biggest Failure in American Education." The Bishop quotes, without dissent, from the address such phrases as these: "This disastrous moral breakdown of our American civilization"—"this outburst of educational activity, this spectacular triumph of our American system, should fill the whole land with trained and daring criminals, dedicating their trained powers to robbery and murder, and openly scorning and nullifying our elaborate system of police and courts and penitentiaries." All of this and more like it insists that our criminals are principally our young people.

Per contra, I clip from a morning paper the following:

"Crime Wave Myth Is Social Worker's Word.

"Des Moines, Iowa, April9.—(AP)—Crime wave? There isn't any, declares John A. Lapp, of Chicago.

"It is his business to know, for as president of the National Conferences on Social Work he has at his fingertips extensive data on crime and its treatment.

"The fact is, he says, that fewer people are in jails, prisons and reformatories in proportion to the nation's population than there were ten years ago.

"When the social workers meet in Des Moines May 11 to 18 they will spend no time, Lapp asserts, debating such myths as the crime wave. They will dicuss the very certain progress in handling criminals and will plan methods of holding their hard-won reforms.

"'A popular hysteria about crime gives rise to the idea that there is a crime wave which must be checked by drastic methods,' says Lapp. 'But crime in its totality has decreased in ratio to population.

"'It is like the creation of a suicide wave. One or two spectacular student suicides are played up to give an outward evidence of an epidemic which is false.'"

When Christ on Herman said: "On this rock (faith in Him) I build my church, and the gates of Hades shall not prevail against it," he meant just what he said; and I most heartily accept the truth of it. When he in the shadow of Calvary said: "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also," I dare not doubt it. When I read from Paul's Epistle to the Romans: "I am supremely proud of the Gospel, for it is the dynamite of God," (this is the literal translation of the Greek), these and similar statements in the Word of God so confirm my faith in the unquestionable success of Christianity in fighting the world, coupled with my more than sixty years of observation, make it impossible for me to accept these pessimistic pictures of the young life of our Methodism that are so current just now.

RULES FOR AVOIDING BEING A BORE.

1. The first essential is to talk too little rather than too much.

2. Avoid detail. A sketch may be crude, inaccurate, and badly executed, but it is not boring.

3. If you must tell a story—and please don't do so if you can help it—never imitate the mannerism or intonations of the people you are describing.

4. Look interested; and, if possible, be interested in what other people say. Do not let your eyes or your attention wander. A good listener is never a bore.—Atlantic Monthly.

A man was trying to sell a horse. The animal was broken-winded, but sleek. The owner trotted it around for inspection, and remarked: "Hasn't he a lovely coat?"

The prospective buyer looked at the heaving flanks of the animal, and replied: "Yes, his coat's all right; but I don't like his pants."—Good Hardware.

The subject of this sketch, MRS. LOUISA MARTIN ROUSE, was born April 17, 1860, and departed this life Jan. 15, 1927. Sister Rouse was twice married, first to Mr. John Summerall. To this union were born four children, two of whom survive: Mrs. Carl Roberts, of Vancleave, Miss., and Ray R. Summerall, of Lake Charles, La. Her former husband having died in 1889, she was married to Mr. J. Quitman Rouse. To this union were born six children: Mrs. C. J. Ridder, Mrs. T. A. Cochran, Mrs. G. C. Cochran, Lubar Rouse, Mack and Sink Rouse; four step-children, R. H. Rouse, Mrs. W. M. Maddin, Mrs. B. Jacobs. Beside the above mentioned, she leaves an aged father, W. M. Martin, who is now postmaster at Vancleave; she also leaves five sisters and seven brothers and a host of friends to mourn her loss.

We miss thee from our home, dear mother,
We miss thee from thy place;
Shadow o'er our life is cast;
We miss the sunshine of thy face.

We miss thy kind and willing hand,
Thy fond and earnest care;
Our home is dark without thee,
We miss thee everywhere.

Then may we yield with gladness,
Our mother to Him to keep,
And rejoice in sweet assurance,
Our mother again we'll meet.

Her pastor,
W. W. NELSON.

A MEMORIAL.

We, the undersigned members of the Philathea class of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, co-workers with SISTER EFFIE ERWIN MITCHELL, whom God in his inscrutable wisdom has removed from our class, church and community, having realized the great loss we have sustained; therefore, be it resolved, That we express our love and heartfelt sympathy to her family, and assure them of our prayers in this hour of sudden bereavement and heartbreaking grief when the angel of death came so suddenly in that hospital room and carried away the soul of our sister to meet the summons to come up higher and receive the reward of a life spent in unselfish love and devotion to the best ideals of home and church, she found a soul fitted to receive the reward of eternal glory that awaits hers here on earth.

Sister Effie Mitchell was beloved by all who knew her; her unaffected goodness of heart and unfailing brightness of spirit were such that when you left her presence you felt that you had been with one of God's loved ones, with whom his Spirit abided always, and you were better for having been associated with her.

Her sudden and almost tragic taking away left an aching void in the hearts of her beloved companion and children, to whom God alone, with time as the healing balm, can speak peace and resignation to their sorrowing hearts.

She was a consistent and joyous member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, having been identified with it since young maidenhood, true to all of its ideals, ever ready to act in any capacity for its good, yet her interest extended to all the concerns of life, and she maintained a vital interest in the community as well as church life.

She was equally devoted as a wife; she was a comrade to her husband, walking with him hand in hand through prosperity or adversity, a helpmeet indeed, aiding in every emergency with her fine sense of justice and right.

Know this, then, dear friends, our Heavenly Father makes no mistakes, and "what seems rebuke means love most true." She is waiting to say to her loved ones—come up higher and enter with me into the joy of our Lord.

Signed: Mrs. Sallie B. Powell, Mrs. E. S. Voelker, Mrs. James Beard, Committee.

RESOLUTIONS.

"A shining isle in a stormy sea,
We seek it ever with smiles and sighs;
To-day is sad. In the bland To-be,
Serene and lovely To-morrow lies."
—Mary Clemmer.

Our gracious Heavenly Father, in his wisdom, gives us rare gems, who are living examples of the teachings of his Son. Such was the life of MR. T. J. PARKER, who departed from this life at his home in Moselle, Miss., Thursday night, April 7.

Whereas, we feel that the light shed by his holy, consecrated life will shine on, leading and guiding others to the realms above;

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of the Methodist church, will gravely miss his presence as an active lay leader and one who loved the services of the church and took a deep interest in all its activities.

2. That the Sunday school will miss him both as secretary, as an active and punctual member of the Bible class and as one who was always willing to give his best efforts to any department of its work.

3. That the Epworth League will keenly feel the loss of his interested counsel and guidance in all of the phases of its work.

4. That the public school has lost one of its most faithful and constructive workers—one who was always zealous for the mental, moral and spiritual life of the children of his community.

5. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved loved ones, and pray that God will be very near in this the hour of their deep sorrow and will keep them under the shadow of his wing and their eyes turned toward heaven, where they may rightfully expect to meet their loved one bye and bye.

6. Lastly, That we send a copy of these resolutions to the Laurel Leader, one to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and one to the bereaved family.

Signed: Winnie J. Hood, chairman of Resolutions Committee.

IN MEMORIAM.

(Mrs. J. A. Bennett.)

By J. F. Dorroh.

"Ashes to ashes! Dust to dust!"
Here, in this consecrated sod,
She sweetly sleeps, whose love, whose trust,
Whose life, whose faith was fixed on God.

As mother, neighbor, wife and friend,
To those she loved her all she gave.
And dare we say her being's end
Is locked within the silent grave?

No! Such a life can be but gain
To those who mourn when she has gone;
Else had the Savior died in vain,
And earth would have no Easter Morn!

From realms of unconjectured bliss
Her spirit ever hovers nigh;
Her heart was but Love's chrysalis,
Life such as hers can never die!

The sun majestically nears
The boundary-line of Day and Night,
And through the evening haze appears
A fuller orb, a larger light.

And when at length the hilltops hide
Its splendor, and its work is done,
The magic west is glorified
With radiance from the vanished sun:

So, as she neared the blessed Goal,
The Goal of all that's pure and good,
Serenely shone her steadfast soul,
The soul of Christian Motherhoood!

And down the west, across the night,
She passed; and One beside her trod—
Out of the darkness, into Light!
Out of the shadow, up to God!

To her no doubt, no fear occurs—
Home lieth at the journey's end!
No stranger's hand is clasping hers—
It is the warm Hand of a Friend!

And she is gone! And, yet, I know
Through some high sphere her spirit moves,
And sheds Love's tender afterglow
Into the hearts of those she loves.

Madison, Miss.

THE UNDESIRABLES.

A survey of the Department of Labor shows that there are 111,673 aliens in jails, insane asylums, hospitals, poor houses and charitable institutions, in the United States. In New York City alone there are 46,936 foreigners officially designated as "undesirables." The laws of the country specifically state that such persons shall be deported; yet the activities of certain racial lawyers and institutions have interfered so seriously that the number of undesirables is mounting rather than decreasing. A definite drive has at last been undertaken by the Government to rid the nation of all aliens, inmates of penal and public institutions. The movement has its pathetic features, but the blame rests squarely with those organizations which have so persistently flouted the immigration laws by helping into the country those who have no right to be here.—Dearborn Independent.

ZONE MEETING AT LAKE, MISS.

The zone meeting of the Newton District met at Lake. Our leader, Mrs. Musting, certainly is a fine leader. Scripture reading and prayer by Brother Young. Welcome address by Mrs. Floyd Loper—and such a welcome we had! Lake met us with open arms.

Special songs by Miss Jones and music were rendered between the different papers, which we all enjoyed. Mrs. James W. Abney gave a most inspiring talk on "Stewardship;" Mrs. Burton, paper on, "If Jesus Came to Appraise the Value of Our Missionary Church." Mrs. Allen read a paper on "Woman Facing a New Task," which all enjoyed.

The district secretary gave her conference report. Also read the report of the Newton District, which we were all proud of; but we give her all the praise, for she is a fine worker.

Round table discussion, led by Mrs. Hopkins, on, "What Is Essential to Success of a Missionary Society?" Mrs. Shepherd told of the many missionaries and their needs.

The next zone meeting is to be held at Hickory in June.

MRS. E. F. PRUITT, Secretary.

ZONE MEETING.

On Monday afternoon, April 18, the Missionary Societies of the Kilmichael and Vaiden Methodist churches met with the Winona Society for the first quarter's zone meeting. Mrs. F. W. Norwood, zone chairman, presided, with Miss L. Dunstan, acting recording secretary, and Mrs. A. B. Trotter conducting the devotional exercises.

Mrs. A. W. Stokes, secretary of the Grenada District, was guest of honor, and brought an inspiring message to the members. Mrs. Stokes reviewed the work of the district for the first quarter, which showed a splendid increase over former first quarters in new members, study class attendance, finances and reporting.

The following program was rendered:

"Why Have Zone Meeting," Mrs. Hogue, of Vaiden.

"Duties of Auxiliary Officers," Mrs. Gee, of Vaiden.

"Standard of Efficiency in Bible and Mission Study," Mrs. Forrest, of Kilmichael.

"Standard of Auxiliary Excellence," Mrs. Bridges, of Kilmichael.

"Report of Annual Conference at Starkville," Mrs. T. W. Holmes, of Winona.

Vocal solo, Mrs. C. H. Hester, of Winona.

Chorus, Winona Young People.

Mmes. Hogue, Brannon and Holmes were appointed to make a survey of the unorganized adjacent territory and report to the next zone meeting, which will be held in Kilmichael.

The members present unanimously pledged themselves to support only the candidates in the summer primaries who stood four-square for law enforcement, with emphasis on the Eighteenth Amendment.

Rev. Mr. McKibben, of Kilmichael, pronounced the benediction.

MRS. F. M. NORWOOD, Chairman.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE JUBILEE IN 1927.

The news of our Jubilee to be celebrated in 1928 throughout the Woman's Missionary organization has probably reached the last woman, and the question of what we may do now to make this celebration a success is doubtless arising in many minds.

Every member may begin by enlarging and deepening her own life. This individual preparation should be our main task for this year. To this end plans are being made. The names enrolled in the Bennett Memorial Prayer League will form a nucleus for a Jubilee Prayer League. The conference has been asked to appoint a leader whose task it will be to cultivate very definitely the spiritual life of the church through the missionary auxiliaries. Suggestions will be furnished from headquarters through the Missionary Voice, the bulletin, and leaflets. It is being urged that prayer groups be formed for study and prayer, and that plans be made for groups of a like mind to spend some days together in seeking the higher spiritual life. Suggestions will also be made for these times of retreat.

A second task for the present year is that of gathering historical facts and stories of pioneers for use during Jubilee year. Nearly every Conference has appointed a Conference Historian, and the auxiliaries will be asked to gather a complete history of the work they have accomplished throughout their entire history. Every auxiliary should be able to close the Jubilee with a complete history up-to-date.

The real celebration will begin with the 1928 Council meeting. This will be followed by an appropriate celebration in the conferences, districts and auxiliaries. The work of planning for these occasions must be done in 1927. Each Conference must plan a celebration appropriate to its own unique history and achievements, together with its peculiar possibilities for the future.

The days of 1927 must be busy days if 1928 is to be a success.

SHUFORD CIRCUIT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI.

Dear Brother Carley: Brother T. M. Bradley was out Sunday and held our second quarterly conference. Good reports were made from all of the organizations of the church. The Sunday schools and Woman's Missionary Societies are doing some very constructive work.

This last quarter Eureka church was painted at a total cost of $110, and Mount Olivet church repaired to the amount of $49, getting it ready for painting, which will be done this summer.

There was held at each of the four churches last quarter a week-end meeting, which proved to be helpful in stimulating new interest.

We also had with us Easter Sunday Revs. A. T. Clanton and E. G. Mohler, Hon. J. W. Kyle, and Mrs. T. T. O'Bryant, who spoke in the interest of the Sunday school work. Brother Mohler will return at a later date and hold an Institute for us, which I am sure will be very helpful.

As a whole things are moving along nicely, and the pastor and his wife are happy, for we have a good, loyal people to serve.

W. C. GALCERAN, JR.

FROM ELLISVILLE, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: We had a fine Easter program Sunday, put on at the 11 o'clock hour. It represented the apostles' sad plight after the death of Jesus, and their trying to console each other, together with the Marys. Then their happiness and joy after the Resurrection, and their reports of finding and talking with Jesus. We had a splendid Sunday school attendance, and every one seemed to enjoy the program immensely. After a twenty-minute sermon on the "Resurrection," and a collection of about $25 for the Orphanage, everybody went home in fine spirits at about fifteen minutes to 12 o'clock.

Millsaps Girls Glee Club gave us a splendid program the night of the 8th at 8 o'clock. We cheerfully recommend them to any one wanting a splendid program of music and other entertaining features, and a happy, sweet spirited body of young people to present it, get the Millsaps Girls' Glee Club, and you will be delighted.

Our meeting begins here at Ellisville, Friday, at 7:30 p. m., Brother Claud P. Jones to conduct it. We feel that with his sweet spirit, and pep, interspersed with enthusiasm, overflowing with seriousness, and crowned with tremendous desire for souls, and backed by the great bulwark of prayer, filled with great faith, we will have a great meeting. Brother Flowers, who will lead the singing, will be a power in making this meeting a success.

Mrs. Vaughan is in Memphis for treatment of her eyes, which have been troubling her very much for some time. We feel that she will return soon much improved.

We are having a fine year, and feel that we will have a good report at Conference time.

Sincerely yours,
PERCY VAUGHAN, P. C.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

I want to call attention to the camp for boys to be held at Junaluska, N. C., from July 28 to Aug. 12. This is for boys from 13 to 17. The cost of camp is $30, plus whatever you spend in side trips, laundry, etc. The railroad fare is around $35 there and return. The camp was most successful last year, and the work done in the camp was creditable and fine.

Any young person interested may receive blanks and information from this office; or write to Mr. W. C. Black, Raymond, Miss., until the latter part of June, and then at Richton. Black was in the camp last year, and if you hear him tell of his good times, you will have a great desire to go and be with them this summer.

The number is limited that can be taken, so it is to your interest to register early. The registration fee is $5. We ought to have four or five boys from Mississippi Conference in the camp this summer.

Our Honor Roll list of the preachers who have taken credit in Leadership Training work is growing. We now have forty-three names on this Honor Roll. This is a mighty good start. Last year at Conference we had fifty-two names. We are anxious to have an even hundred names this year. We desire that our preachers take units of credit as an encouragement to the people to seek these credits and honors. We are delighted with the response we are receiving in this work.

We have four names for the Sunday School Day Honor Roll to date: Rev. W. J. Dawson, Rev. S. F. Harkey, Rev. A. S. Byrd, Rev. J. L. Carter. This is a good start on the Sunday School Day Honor Roll.

We have received offerings from several churches that have lacked just a little. We wish not only to get as many names on the Honor Roll as possible, but we want each district to reach its quota for Sunday School Day offering.

Applications are rolling in for Cokesbury Schools. I trust we will have the workers and the money to give every applicant just what he desires in the line of leadership work. The Cokesbury Schools offer an opportunity for training to the small school that is a boon for those schools desiring Leadership Training work.

Let us hear from you if you have not written. The larger number of applications we have, the stronger we can plead for workers.

The leaders in the local schools are most considerate and co-operative. They are responding to each and every request in a satisfactory way. It is greatly encouraging to the employed staff to receive so much of encouragement. School after school is reporting advanced work; school after school is asking for aid to better work and advancement, all of which cheers and encourages the workers.

We need yours prayers.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The third session of the Ruleville Standard Training School is being held this week under unfavorable conditions—rain, high water, and excitement over the stage of the water in the Mississippi River. Rev. H. P. Lewis has enrolled a larger number from his own church than last year or the year before—twenty-six from Ruleville, eight from Doddsville, thirteen from Drew, four from Minter City, three from Drew Mission. The indications are that we will issue fifty credits. All say this is the best of the three schools previously held at Ruleville. Our only regret is that other churches nearby did not take advantage of this school.

The Sherard church is making a most interesting and encouraging record in bringing in the kingdom of God. The pastor and his wife, the superintendent, and ten teachers attended the school held at Clarksdale—every teacher save one was in the school; this teacher was hindered on account of the condition of the road. The officers and teachers have a total of sixty-two credits; three departmental superintendents each lack one credit of having the required number for a complete diploma. The testimony of the teachers is: "This training work is helping us understand the best way to lead our people in worship, instruction, service, and recreation. There is no way of measuring what this work will do for the next generation, and we are praying that God will richly bless the leaders in this work."

Our next school will be held in Iuka, beginning Monday, May 2, at 2:30 p. m. The course: "The Church and Its Work," R. H. B. Gladney, instructor; "Pupil Study," Miss Virginia Thomas, instructor; "Missionary Message of the Bible," R. G. Lord, instructor; "The Small Sunday School," E. G. Mohler, instructor.

The Corinth District has led the Conference in the number of pastors and teachers in attendance upon the training schools. Rev. E. H. Cunningham, presiding elder; Rev. G. C. Swartz, and Rev. E. P. Craddock, of Iuka, are making an effort to have at least one hundred enroll in this school.

The questionnaires sent to the high school men of North Mississippi are coming in with some startling information. If we can have two thousand of these life problems for our study at Grenada, June 6-11, we may learn how to render some help to our young people.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

On Saturday and Sunday—Easter—I was in Lake Charles District in the interest of the Standard Training School to be held May 1-6, at Lafayette. Saturday morning I had a conference with the pastor and superintendent of the Lafayette School. Saturday afternoon I was at Rayne, where I had a fine conference with Mr. Holt, but found Brother Bernard out of town. Later in the same afternoon I visited Crowley. Brother Jordan is in the midst of a revival, with Lovick Pearce Law as evangelist. That night, and part of Sunday were spent in the Indian Bayou community, where I enjoyed the hospitallity of the pastor, Brother Moreland. I reached home Sunday afternoon in time to make a short visit to see the new church in Pineville, where Brother Smith and his congregation held the first service that morning. Sunday night I had the pleasure of listening to the Easter music at Alexandria First Church.

Monday, April 18, found me en route to Natchitoches for a "set-up" meeting in the interest of the Standard Training School there. We found an interested board of managers present, including three professors from the State Normal College, who elected the pastor, Brother H. L. Johns, as Educational Director. They set as a tentative date for this school, Sept. 18-23. I enjoyed again the hospitality of the parsonage. This young preacher and his wife are gracious hosts.

Tuesday, the 19th instant, was spent at the Shreveport District Conference, held at Oil City. The attendance was large and representative. Dr. Holmes, the presiding elder, looked after every interest of the church, and wound up the business in time for a very interesting pageant, "The Forgotten Man." The ladies of the church served two splendid meals to the conference. I gather from the reports of the pastors that this district has had more than 225 new members on profession of faith since Conference. The Sunday School Committee nominated the following district officers: Secretary, Mr. Nelson, of Mangum Memorial Church; Elementary Superintendent, Mrs. N. L. Hudson; Young People's worker, Mrs. F. H. Bradshaw; Associate Young People's worker, Miss Mary Matthews; Teacher Training, Prof. Phelps; Adult Superintendent, Mr. R. T. Douglas; Parent-Teacher Superintendent, Mrs. R. E. Smith; Superintendent Week Day Religious Education, Rev. Guy Hicks; Missions, Mrs. E. M. Venable.

On Wednesday, the 20th, I visited the Minden District Conference, which was held at Plain Dealing. This conference, being held at the extreme end of the district, was not so well attended, but the interest was wonderful. Dr. Crawford, of Nashville, representing the General Board of Lay Activities, was present and rendered much fine service. The pastor at Plain Dealing, Rev. A. M. Wynne, is a member of our Conference Sunday School Board, and no doubt looks after the interest of Sunday school work in his beautiful little city. Plain Dealing has an attractive new brick church. While in the city, Dr. Holmes, Dr. Crawford, and I enjoyed the hospitality in the home of Mr. E. M. Carstarphen.

Easter was a great day in Louisiana Methodism, showing wonderful results of Sunday school evangelism. We have not yet received reports from many of the schools and churches, but understand that Alexandria received seventy-seven members on Easter, fifty-six coming from the Sunday school. First Church, Shreveport, reports 176 new members, making a total membership for this church of 3136 at the present time. The attenudance record so far reported from the schools over the State is as follows: Alexandria, 612; Ruston, 607; Minden, 425; Winnfield, 342; Springhill, 127; Rochelle, 116; Coushatta, 101; Plain Dealing, 94. We are anxious to hear from other schools.

At the Shreveport District Conference no pastor was more loudly applauded when making his report than the faithful, hard-working pastor of Texas Avenue, Rev. R. T. Ware.

The new pastor at Mangum Memorial, Rev. R. M. Brown, made a most encouraging report concerning the Sunday school work. They had nearly 600 present Easter, and have invited the district conference to meet with them. Brother Brown states that they expect to have 1,000 enrolled in their Sunday school by the time of the next ditsrict conference.

* * *

Rev. Leon I. McCain writes us from Minden that his Sunday school folk have voted to have their Standard Training School early in the summer. He tells us that they had a wonderful day Easter.

* * *

An interesting letter has been received in the office from Gilbert, telling us that they are working on a "B Type" school; have a Men's Wesley Bible class of thirty members; a woman's class of fifteen members; a class of young married women of eighteen members, which is a fine report from their Adult Department. This is an interesting item, and we are glad to hear of this good showing.

I leave to-morrow to attend the third district conference of this week, in the Ruston District. Dr. Briscoe Carter will preach the opening sermon at this conference. The regular Sunday School District Conference will not be held in connection with this meeting, but will be held separately, on July 8, at Simsboro. The first Standard Training School in the Ruston District will be held in Haynesville, May 29-June 3, with five courses, as follows: Bible, Dr. Wynn; Sunday School, Dr. Drake; Principles of Teaching, Prof. Means, of Little Rock; Pupil, Prof. Walker, of Millsaps; Cokesbury, Rev. A. K. McLellan.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

GOLDEN JUBILEE, MISSISSIPPI SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

The Golden Jubilee convention of the Mississippi Sunday School Association will be held in the Calvary Baptist Church, Jackson, Miss., May 24, 25, and 26. Every school in Mississippi is invited to send delegates.

Among the visiting speakers are: Mr. Charles Davids, Chicago, International Council of Religious Education; Mr. J. R. Pepper, of Memphis; Judge Joseph Carthell, Birmingham, and Bishop Warren A. Candler, of Atlanta, Ga. The program will cover every phase of the Sunday school work.

Fifty years of service!

COKESBURY TRAINING CLASS, ABBEVILLE, LA.

Rev. A. K. McLellan, Sunday School Extension Secretary for the Louisiana Conference, of Alexandria, has just closed a very interesting series of lessons on Sunday school work at Abbeville, La. He is teaching the Cokesbury Teacher-Training Course for Sunday school officers and teachers, using as a textbook, "The Small Sunday School, Its Plan and Work," by Sensabaugh.

The class at Abbeville consisted of eight regularly attending, six of whom did all of the required work. It is hoped that six full certificates of credit will be given. Two members could not get the papers prepared because of a rush of other work. Others visiting the class enjoyed the lectures very much.

We feel that we are better prepared for our work because of having studied this course.

While Mr. McLellan was here, our Sunday school was carefully regraded under his direction. We appreciate his work here very much and wish him success in his future work.

MRS. C. C. CLARK.

COKESBURY SCHOOL AT GUEYDAN, APRIL 9-12, 1927.

Our Cokesbury Class is now over;
It lasted just five days, but oh,
The good that we gained, the truths that we learned,
Will last through long years; time will show.

Oft Brother McLellan did score us
And make our deficiencies plain,
Then laughingly, lovingly pointed the way
To avoid their occurring again.

He showed us the way e'en this Sunday school could
Efficiency's apex soon reach.
We listened, we learned, we counseled, we caught
The vision of work seen for each.

Eleven began—but sickness claimed two—
So the credits received were but nine,
But the interest aroused throughout the whole church
Has put every worker in line.

We feel this year's work will show the results
Of the worship and study hours spent
In learning how best in his service to use
The talents our Lord to us lent.

With a class such as this, held in every small school
In every small church in this land,
What an army of captains and soldiers we'd see
Trained, able and willing to stand

For God and for right, against every foe,
To do any task, howe'er small
That will aid in the work of our children to save
Whom Christ placed "in the midst of them all."

MEETING OF MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ELEMENTARY COUNCIL.

On April 5, 1927, in Capitol Street Church at Jackson, Miss., there was the regular yearly meeting of the Elementary Council. Those present were: Miss Margaret Patterson, Elementary Superintendent of Alabama Conference; Mr. F. L. Sensabaugh, Superintendent of Administation, of Nashville; Miss Maggie May Jones, Conference Elementary Superintendent; Rev. J. C. Chambers, Conference Sunday School Superintendent, and the following members: Miss Laura White, District Superintendent of Seashore District; Miss Madge Stewart, District Superintendent of Meridian District; Miss Mamie Dietrich, District Superintendent of Jackson District; Mrs. C. W. Sullivan, District Superintendent of Brookhaven District, and Mrs. C. W. Sullivan, District Superintendent of Hattiesburg District. Mrs. J. E. Oakey, Newton District, came in late, and there was no representative from Vicksburg District. Two new members were greeted, Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Marley, of the Capitol Street Church, who are approved checkers.

Miss Jones opened the meeting with devotional exercises.

The minutes of last year's meeting were read and approved, and the meeting was turned over to Miss Margaret Patterson, who discussed the Program of Work for the district, and we found that we have attained the Progressive Standard and will work this year on the Advanced Standard, i. e.:

1. District Elementary Superintendent.

2. Thirty per cent of departments working toward an appropriate program of work.

3. Five per cent of Cradle Roll, of Beginner, of Primary, and of Junior groups attaining six, eight or ten points on appropriate Program of Work. Five Standard departments in each district.

4. Children's Week adequately observed in 10 per cent of schools.

5. District sub-divided, with at least three sub-district chairmen.

6. District Elementary institute held annually.

7. Quarterly report to Conference Elementary Superintendent.

8. Record of names and addresses of outstanding elementary workers, revised annually.

After a delightful lunch, served by the Capitol Street ladies, we reassembled to hear Miss Patterson check the Junior Department of Capitol Street Church. They attained 80 per cent, or "Advanced," on B type Program of Work; Mrs. Wood is superintendent.

We then heard Miss Patterson check the Primary Department of Capitol Street Church. They attained 70 per cent, or "Progressive," on a B type Program of Work; Mrs. Marley is superintendent.

Officers were elected for 1927-1928 as follows: Miss Madge Stewart, of Meridian, president, and Mrs. Sullivan, of Hattiesburg, secretary. The following were a committee elected to draw up resolutions of appreciation of Brother Chambers and Miss Jones in their splendid work: Miss Laura White, Miss Madge Stewart and Mrs. Sullivan.

The secretary was instructed to write a note of thanks to Mrs. Nugent, of Capitol Street, for the lovely courtesy shown us in entertainment.

MRS. C. W. SULLIVAN,
Secretary.

Meridian District Institute Held at DeKalb.

Meridian District held its institute on April 15 and 16 at DeKalb. The program suggested by the Central Office was used. The first evening, the keynote address, "The Cost of Leadership," was given by Dr. A. F. Watkins, of Central Church, Meridian. His address was followed by an hour of games and social activities.

On the morning of the 16th, the program was as follows: Devotional—Theme, "The Need of Leaders," Dr. Rolfe Hunt, Lauderdale; "The Chapter Leader (the President)," Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Meridian; "The Recreational Leader," Miss Dora Rodgers, Meridian; "The Missionary Leader," Rev. J. W. Dawson, Shubuta; address, "The Making of a Leader," by Rev. J. G. Bates, Scooba.

The meeting then adjourned for dinner on the grounds. The program for the afternoon was: Solo, Mrs. Helen Creekman, DeKalb; "The Social Service Leader," Mr. Joe Chambers, Meridian; "The Devotional Meeting," Miss Nancy Matheny; reports of committees.

Scooba was chosen for the next meeting.

Miss Lilybec Phillips, the very efficient secretary of the Meridian District, was awarded a leather-bound Epworth League Handbook, with her name in gold on it, by Mr. Nollner, of the Central Office, for having her district up to standard as far as the required quota of Eras was concerned.

Laurel League Has Sunrise Prayer Meeting.

On Sunday morning, April 10, the Senior League of the First Methodist Church went to a delightful spot in the woods and held their sunrise service. After the service they cooked and served their breakfast. Mr. Scott, the young people's leader for the revival services, was with these Leaguers and had charge of the services.

These Leaguers have pledged $500 on the new church. Two Saturdays they sold cold drinks and sandwiches, which netted them $64.

A GRACIOUS REVIVAL AT EUPORA, MISS.

A very soul-stirring religious revival meeting by the Eupora Methodist Episcopal Church, South, closed Sunday night, after being in session for ten days. Services were had at the church each morning, prayer meetings in the stores in the afternoon, and services at the church at night. At all times the great throngs of people filled the church and stores to hear the wonderful messages, which were brought by Rev. J. W. York, the pastor, as well as the inspiring religious songs so beautifully and harmoniously rendered by three Wisdom Sisters, of Macon, Mo.

During the services many, many souls re-dedicated themselves to Christ, and have started out in this world to follow the teachings of the only perfect one, Jesus Christ.

Seven united with the local church and were received into full fellowship of the church at the closing service. Others have told that they expect to unite with other churches.

The Sunday school class for men of this church has been large and interesting for many years, and the meeting has about doubled the membership and attendance of this class, which is known extensively as the Morris Bible Class.

The results of this meeting will be seen for all time to come.

Yours very truly,

J. E. EUDY.

FROM THE FRENCH FIELD.

Dear Christian Friends: You may be wondering sometime what we French missionaries are doing, that we seldom write concerning our work. You may be tempted to believe that the work is slow and monotonous; but such is not the case, because the work is encouraging.

I shall endeavor to tell you the story of how the Lord sometimes opens work in his vineyard. About three miles from Houma lives the owner of a certain plantation, a man of great influence, who is a Catholic. He has an old pair of people living on his plantation who are very much in need, both financially and spiritually. Being all Catholics, the owner of that plantation called the priest the other day to come and visit these people. The priest came, but he was surprised to see that some of his people could be in such a condition. I do not know just what happened between the priest and the plantation owner, but the priest went home and never came back.

The owner of that plantation, knowing a certain woman who is a member of our church, came to see her. He told the woman the story concerning the old pair of needy people, and then said, "Do you think I could get a preacher or a preacher's wife to come and see those old people?" "Surely we can," said the woman. "If so, when they come, I want to be there," said the plantation owner.

The woman knowing that I could speak French, 'phoned to me to go to her house, that two sick persons wanted me to go and pray for them. We went to those old people's house, and the plantation owner came with us. I am sorry I can't describe the condition here with my pen, but Oh my! I had never seen people in such a condition before. I told the old people that we were missionaries, and had come to visit them. They seemed to be pleased with our presence. We sang two or three French songs, and the poor old lady was so moved by those songs, she ran and caught her old man by the neck and started crying—they never had heard that before. But they were not the only ones who had never heard those songs before—there were a great many others. The first thing I noticed, the house and its surrounding were full of eager people listening to those songs. To make the story short, they were all pleased, and invited us to come back, which we did.

Now, I am going to give you the climax of my story. The owner of that plantation turned toward me, and said, "Mr. La Grange, I want you to come home, for my wife must hear that." I told him that I would be too glad to have services in his house, if he wanted. He assured me that it was the desire of his heart. In conclusion, I am glad to tell you that I preached in his house last Sunday night to approximately sixty eager Catholics, who were glad to listen to the Good News of our Lord. Another woman from the same community invited me to go preach in her house next time.

Remember, although we are working under many difficulties in the French field, the Lord is blessing our efforts. Pray for his cause.

Yours for Christ,
G. A. LA GRANGE, P. C.

THERMOMETERS AND COMMON SENSE

It's a cold morning.

How did you know?

Did you look at the thermometer or did your tingling fingers shout the news? Perhaps the thermometer verified your own opinion but you knew it was cold before you looked. Your common sense told you.

Exactly!

When you take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound or any other medicine—how do you know it helps you? Do you ask the neighbors? Do you try to figure it out on a scientific basis?

Certainly not.

You feel better and your common sense tells you what caused it.

Science may confirm your own opinion, but you knew it all the time.

Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then judge for yourself.

The Third Generation

Mrs. W. O. Blewett, Route B, Box 197a, Lakeland, Florida, says: "I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was a girl. My mother had taken it, also my grandmother used it in her family for her eight daughters and herself. I think this medicine does more for women than anything else I know of. I surely recommend it to my friends and several have taken it because of my recommendation."

In some families, the fourth generation is relying on this medicine.

THE SECRET OF A POPULAR MINISTER'S SUCCESS.

By Rev. Robert S. Satterfield, D.D.

"I think I at last know the secret of Dr. A's success. He is more eager to discover points of contact with the non-Christian population than he is to point out their defects and hold these up for condemnation." The speaker had been a member for several years of the church served by the eminently successful minister about whom he made this striking statement.

Further discussion brought out the fact that this popular minister does not belong to any lodge, luncheon club or golf club. But he has more invitations than he can accept to speak to social, fraternal, industrial, commercial, political, and other bodies outside those of a distinctively religious nature. He explains that he does not have time to belong to any of these, but he gladly responds to requests for addresses and to be a guest whenever he can, in order to discover points of contact.

No one ever accuses this minister of being worldly-minded; on the other hand, he is far from being a man whom the world would call goody goody. In no way does he even hint at a compromise with the world, but in every way his attitude is such as to win and hold the respect and confidence of all. He is not a "fighting parson." Other ministers may ridicule and condemn in severest terms; he loves folks, believes in folks, and wins hundreds every year for Christ, church membership, and clean, upright, Christian living.

This minister is pastor in a city that has gone far beyond most cities in the building of great churches and in paying ministers large salaries. Each of several church plants within a few blocks of the church he serves cost hundreds of thousands of dollars more than his church. But no other minister has such a hold upon the city as this man. And one who knows him well, says that the secret of his success rests in the fact that "he is more eager to discover points of contact with non-Christian people than he is to hold them up for ridicule and condemnation." And whenever the name of this minister is mentioned, people of all classes smile and say: "That man has religion."

THE BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION AND FULL PAYMENT OF ASSESSMENTS.

By T. D. Ellis, General Secretary, Board of Church Extension.

The Board of Church Extension is vitally interested in full collections because it needs ten dollars for every dollar placed as an assessment on the church by the General Conference at Memphis for building churches and parsonages.

The assessment for church extension is so much less than the need that the failure to receive every dollar of the amount assessed produces disappointment throughout the church. Take the year closing with the meeting of our Appropriations Committee, Jan. 11, 1927, for example: During the year we had applications amounting to $771,503.03, and to meet this very large need we had only $161,119.26. These figures set forth the facts so clearly that comment is unnecessary.

We have no fund laid aside to meet emergencies. Within a few months we have had severe and destructive storms in Florida, Cuba, and Arkansas. In addition to this, there have been several churches destroyed by fire. Because of lack of funds the Board of Church Extension has been unable to render adequate aid in the work of rebuilding in the areas where property was destroyed by these disasters.

The Board of Church Extension is entirely dependent upon the assessment placed upon the several Annual Conferences for its Donation Fund. The Loan Fund is created by personal contributions and sources other than the asssessment upon the church. The failure to pay the full amount of the assessment embarrasses both the Board of Church Extension and the churches needing aid.

RELIGIOUS CENSUS.

The first step is to take a religious census. Then tabulate as follows:

1. Number of non-members Methodist inclined.
2. Number of church members' letters elsewhere.
3. Number of adults not attending Sunday school.
4. Number of Young People not attending Sunday school (ages 18 to 24).
5. Number of Intermediates and Seniors not attending Sunday school (ages 13 to 17).
6. Number of Juniors not attending Sunday school (ages 9 to 12).
7. Number of Beginners and Primaries not attending Sunday school (ages 4 to 8).
8. Number that should be in Home Department (aged, shut-ins, etc.).
9. Number that should be on baby or cradle roll (infants to 3 years).

Next put these facts on a large cardboard and place in auditorium—and following Sunday point out and comment on these facts. If you do, you will bring something to pass. I know you will, for I have tried it.

Values of the Census.

1. It will give your workers a job ("Give me something to do.")
2. It will give you and your school definite knowledge.
3. It will show your school's obligations and responsibilities.
4. It will enable your workers to do evangelistic work by: a. Calling the attention of the ones visited to their religious obligation, to the Sunday school and to the church; b. Inviting the ones visited to attend Sunday school and church (personal invitation—personal work); c. In visiting the homes of the charge with a Christian, sympathetic attitude.
5. It will stimulate and awaken interest.
6. It will increase attendance upon Sunday school and church services.
7. It will give you facts needed for your revival.

Then work out a "follow-up program." Give the superintendents of the departments the names of those found that should be in their respective departments. Ask them to interest their teachers—visit these prospects and "bring them in" (more vital, personal work—evangelistic).

Brother, if you will do the above, you are bound to get results. We need not worry about an appreciable increase of Sunday school members if you will first find out "What to do," and with God's help and approval "do it."

Last, Brother Gladney's suggestion, "Pray, Work, Study, and Study, Work. and Pray."

If you want and need census cards, the writer will gladly send them to you upon request. Yours for a great increase in membership during April, May and June.

E. G. MOHLER,
Extension Secretary.

TERRIBLE PAIN

Alabama Lady Tells How She Obtained Relief by Taking Cardui. Feels Fine and Enjoys Life Now, She Says.

Talladega, Ala.—Mrs. Mary Hardy, 406 Henderson Avenue, this city, says that seven years ago she "got down sick" and was unable to attend to her housework.

"I have never been so weak before or since," she says. "I had a terrible pain in my side—so sore in my side and the lower part of my body.

"Across my back ached, and I was so nervous I couldn't stand up. I had just about given up when some one who came to see me began talking about Cardui. This caused me to get it. I took about two bottles before I saw much improvement.

"After this, though, I picked up right away. I slept better at night. I was hungry, enjoyed my food, which I hadn't done for some time. The pain and soreness gradually left my side. I regained my strength. I took about six bottles and left off for awhile, then took two or three more. . . I feel just fine, enjoy life and can work now, too."

Cardui is purely vegetable, and contains no harmful drugs. It has helped thousands of suffering women and should help you, too. NC-168

BEAUTIFUL CAMP LASSA OPENS SEVENTH SESSION JULY 4.

The Louisiana Council of Religious Education, which is the officially accredited agency for forty evangelical denominations for co-operative religious education in Louisiana, announces that beautiful Camp Lassa, its character building camps for boys and girls, will open its seventh session on July 4, and will continue through Aug. 27.

The first camp is the Camp of the Guiding Spirit for girls 9 to 14 years of age. It begins July 4 and continues for twelve days, closing on the morning of Saturday, July 16. This will be followed by the Camp of the Four Life Lights for girls 15 to 24 years of age, which opens Monday, July 18, and continues through July 30. There are two camps for boys—the Camp of the Shining Path for ages 9 to 14, which opens Monday, Aug. 1, and closes Aug. 13, and the Camp of the Upward Trail for ages 15 to 24, opening Aug. 15 and continuing through the 27th. To these camps boys and girls throughout Louisiana to the number of 250 in 1926 came eager to learn how to become physically fit, mentally alert, socially welcomed, and religiously active.

Camp Lassa is located at Forbing, La., eight miles south of Shreveport, on the Kansas City Southern Railroad, and comprises fifty acres of beautiful wooded land, rambling over hills and dales, and five acres of prairie land, and is considered the best equipped camp for both comfort and training in Louisiana, having two large dormitories, a dining room, a Tipi-Wa-Kan, a Delco plant, two large playgrounds, twenty shower baths, a council circle, courts for tennis, volley ball, baseball, etc., numerous lovely pathways and many of the most delightful spots for recreation, meditation and play. The camps will again be under the direction of Miss Fannie Norman, "Uncle Van," and Miss Susie M. Juden, members of the staff of the Louisiana Council of Religious Education.

The 1927 faculty will include such leaders as Dr. C. W. Rodgers, Mrs. Ireta Simons, Larry Armstrong, Miss Catherine Robertson, Guy M. Hicks, Miss Ruth Proctor, Mrs. R. T. Glassell, C. L. Dean, Mrs. Briscoe Carter, "Uncle Van," Miss Alleen Ramsey, Mrs. Guy Hicks and Miss Susie M. Juden. Additional instructors will be announced as rapidly as they are secured.

READ YOUR BIBLE THROUGH THIS YEAR.

For several years I made it a plan to read my Bible through each year. A plan most satisfactory to me is to read three chapters in the Old Testament each week day and five in the New Testament each Lord's Day. This puts you through the Bible in twelve months and gives you a balanced reading. Every human being should know the contents of the Bible, not alone because some believe it to be the inspired Word of God, but because it is the Book Supreme touching every phase of human life. Read your Bible through this year. It is the Word of God, and will furnish you needed daily food.—Selected.

FROM EPWORTH, NEW ORLEANS.

Dear Dr. Carley: We were asked by our beloved Bishop Candler and the presiding elder, Dr. Harper, to come to Epworth, and naturally we hesitated. The evangelistic work is hard for us to give up. We had almost enough meetings engaged to keep us busy all the year when we made the change; but owing to a very serious throat disorder from which we suffered all winter, it seemed the wise thing to come here.

However, we can easily discern the hand of the Lord in our coming to New Orleans. Never have we seen the harvest field so white as here. The opportunity is great for every Protestant minister in the city, but we naturally feel that ours is the greatest. The facts about Epworth Church are too well known to need reiterating, but words cannot express our estimate of the future of this congregation. No one who has been to Epworth recently doubts her opportunity of becoming one of the leading centers of religious life in this great city.

Space will not allow us to tell the whole story; suffice it to say, in all our travels over half a dozen States as evangelist we have seen few places we had rather be than here. We have just closed our revival, with Rev. Wm. Dean White, of Sour Lake, Tex., doing the preaching, and it was his opinion that in all his years as a Methodist preacher he had not seen a more promising field.

Our reception here has been all that any one could ask. We have already been "pounded" twice. Our church is practically filled at every service, and we have received members on profession of faith at every service.

Our Sunday school is one of the most efficient we have ever had—last Sunday our attendance equalled our total enrollment. We attribute these facts largely to the wisdom and efficiency of our superintendent, who is not only a scholarly educator from an academic standpoint, but has availed himself of the special training the church offers. He also renders very helpful service to the pastor as director of the choir.

By the way, we must not forget to mention to our host of friends in Louisiana and Mississippi that our doors are open, and we expect them to come to see us while in the city. We have a lovely two-story parsonage and plenty of room. We have held over a hundred revivals in Louisiana, which means that when we say, "friends invited," it will have to be at least by parish delegations. Our hospitality could not be crowded, but the parsonage might be.

A new church is being thought of, and many other forward looking movements. We covet the prayers of our many friends in the different sections, and we really mean it when we say, "Come to see us."

Fraternally,

ROBERT A. BOZEMAN, Pastor.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE CHURCH CENSUS OF 1926.

The Christian Herald has recently published the results of Dr. H. K. Carroll's annual census of the churches in the United States. His figures show a net gain for the year of 489,000 members. The largest gain is attributed to the Roman Catholic Church, with 147,257. The largest gain among the Protestant churches is attributed to the Baptists (fourteen bodies), with 66,022. The present membership of the churches having more than half a million membership is given as follows:

Catholic (Roman, Polish, Old)	16,303,171
Methodists (fifteen bodies)	8,968,288
Baptists (fourteen bodies)	8,670,895
Presbyterians (nine bodies)	2,610,716
Lutherans (twenty bodies)	2,588,279
Disciples of Christ (two bodies)	1,754,512
Eastern Orthodox (nine bodies)	751,880
Latter-Day Saints (two bodies)	636,389
Reformed (three bodies)	547,024

The present membership of some of the leading separate denominations and their gains or losses for the year are given as folllows:

Denomination.	Communicants.	Gain.
Roman Catholic	16,193,171	146,257
Methodist Episcopal	4,545,866	29,060
Southern Baptist	3,707,523	65,918
Methodist Episcopal, South	2,538,311	4,199
Presbyterian U. S. A.	1,868,055	39,139
Disciples of Christ	1,436,575	*4,887
Protestant Episcopal	1,173,679	8,768
Presbyterian in U. S. (Southern)	462,177	5,084

*Loss

Concerning the comparatively small net gain, Dr. Carroll says: "The net gain in communicants is 489,556, which means that all losses from death, withdrawal and exclusion have first been filled with new members, and nearly half a million remain to increase the strength and service of the various religious bodies. It will be observed that the increase by denominational families, beginning with the Roman Catholic and related bodies, and also by separate churches, shows a downward tenedency. * * * In brief, the churches, almost without exception, have been pruning their membership rolls by eliminating large numbers of absentees and of the inactive. The Roman Catholic Church is not included among those losing by the pruning process, because it has no lists of communicants and constituents, such as the Protestants keep, nor does it grant letters of dismissal to the migrator. Its lessened growth may be attributed to lessened immigration and to failure of not a few dioceses to report regularly their population, and to other reasons.

"The losses of the evangelical churches from this source are real and extensive. Scarcely any escape the cutting off process as conducted by pastors and sessions, official boards and the like. One strong impulse that appears to govern is the pressure of mounting apportionments for missionary, educational and other benevolent objects, and local church expenses. It costs something in these days to be a Christian, and absentees and inactive members are of no help either in finance or service. * * * It is sufficient to say that all the churches are aroused over their losses and will doubtless take measures to reduce them."

The present total number of communicants of all churches in the United States is given as 47,550,902. This is considerably more than one-third the estimated population of the country. The outstanding fact in this showing is that there is a vast need of evangelistic effort on the part of all the churches to reach the great unchurched masses of the land.

A DEFENSE OF THE FEDERAL COUNCIL.

Some time ago, Congressman Free, of California, introduced a resolution in the House calling for an investigation of the activities of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ. The resolution evidently was based upon charges contained in an irresponsible publication, of which only five issues had been published, the indictment running all the way from the charge that the Federal Council is attempting to undermine the doctrine of the separation of church and State to the charge that it is co-operating with and frequently working under the direction of radical groups, even intimating that it is affiliated with the Third International.

Honorable John E. Rankin, Congressman from Mississippi, took notice of this resolution, and, on March 3, paid his respects to it in no unmistakable terms in a speech in the House, from which we quote briefly:

"I am not a preacher, or a son of a preacher, but I believe in the great fundamental doctrines of Christianity which constitute the bedrock of our civilization, and I resent any attack or any reflection upon those self-sacrificing, God-fearing, humanity-loving ministers of the Protestant churches who constitute the leadership of this great organization. There has been but one civilization worthy of the name, and that is the Christian civilization that has grown up within the last 2,000 years; and when we destroy the confidence of our people in the leaders of the great religious movements, upon the success of which the perpetuity of our civilization depends, we will have rendered a greater injury than could be wrought by all the radicals which the gentleman from California presumes to fear. * * * The Federal Council of Churches needs no defense at my hands or at the hands of the Congress of the United States; but, on the other hand, Congress needs to follow the example of this great body of Christian men and women and to assist them in upholding the standard of morality, of common honesty, of common decency, of Christianity, and of all the other elevating and ennobling attributes which tend to upbuild and advance a great Christian civilization."

Bravely spoken, Mr. Rankin!

NOT RELIGIOUS PREJUDICE.

We do not believe the opposition in the South to the nomination of Governor Smith of New York for the presidency of the United States is based largely upon the fact that he is a Roman Catholic, though that may have some weight; it is based primarily and principally upon the fact that he is an avowed opponent of prohibition, that he favors the legal manufacture and sale of wines and beer.

Governor Smith's reply to an open letter adddressed to him by a writer in the Atlantic Monthly concerning his obligation to his church and his allegiance to the Constitution of the United States is, we think, a clear, forceful, straightforward declaration of a loyal American citizen, to be taken at its face value, though we do not believe his argument can be sustained by an appeal to the historical record of the Roman Catholic Church, especially in its European relationships.

But Governor Smith holds views concerning prohibition that are diametrically opposed, we believe, to the views of the South as a whole, in which a great moral issue is involved. It is his attitude toward this moral issue that, in our opinion, makes him unacceptable as a candidate for the presidency, and that will cause the South to withhold in a large measure its support if he should be nominated. We judge, from our reading of the newspapers, that the wet Democrats want him and that the wet Republicans would rather have him than a dry candidate. We believe he is a loyal American citizen—but he is on the wrong side of the greatest moral issue of this age.

THE LIFE OF BISHOP GALLOWAY.

By Rev. F. N. Parker, D.D.

It is well that Bishop Candler has found time in the midst of his manifold activiites to write the life of his dear friend and honored colleague, Bishop Charles Betts Galloway. The biographer and his subject are much alike as men of incessant toil and utter devotion to the work committed to them. The book is a tribute inspired by many years of intimate association and a just estimate of a truly great man. The characterization is true; a great friendship has not betrayed the writer into an overdrawn portrait of a man whose great gifts of mind, grace of character and extraordinary achievement might easily have led to such a result.

The biographer gives a suggestive setting for the life. He was born in the mid-period of the nineteenth century, in Kosciusko, Miss., Sept. 1, 1849, the child of devout parents of English, Scotch and Irish blood. He grew to manhood in a typical Southern community. He loved his State, and his State loved and honored him as easily its first citizen for many years.

His childhood and youth were passed in the midst of the difficulties and issues precipitated by the Civil War and the period of reconstruction. Those were times to try men's souls. They were times when the material losses, political and social problems might readily mould the characters of men into relentless prejudice or incurable sectionalism. Bishop Galloway fully understood the problems of the South, sympathized with his people in their struggle towards political readjustment, and contributed much to the better grasp of the situation. But he became a citizen of the nation, his influence was felt throughout the world. It was imposssible for him to be a merely sectional man.

Bishop Candler stresses the catholicity of Bishop Galloway. As fraternal messenger to sister churches his welcome was enthusiastic and his representation of the cause of Christ and his own church an honor and commendation of his church and section. He helped to make our position secure in its place among the churches of God at home and abroad. He was especially intimate in his association with brother Methodists in all branches of the sons of Wesley; this was especially noticeable in the Methodist Episcopal Church, the Canadian Methodist Church, and the Wesleyans in England and Ireland.

Bishop Galloway gave his heart to God in early life. It was a complete and life-long surrender to Jesus Christ as Savior and Lord. In school and university his work was conscientious and effective. He had an unusual power in making friends. He was a hero in the making. The youth was father to the man, a princely Christian gentleman, handsome and gracious, gifted and courageous, commanding and yet tender, a child of God without rebuke in his blameless character and tireless energy.

His services as pastor and preacher brought him to the consideration of his brethren at a very early age. He began at once a life of incessant toil, attended by a success that never failed. He had an eagle eye for opportunity, and used it as few men ever dream of its value. He cultivated mind and heart in pursuit of the best service he could offer to the Master of all good workmen. Always heroic, he faced difficult situations with assured strength. There is no better illustration of this than his noble service in Vicksburg during the appalling yellow fever epidemic of 1878, when he nearly lost his life in doing it.

As editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, Bishop Galloway found a larger circle of influence. It was plain that he was fitted for the largest place in the gift of the church. He was elected to the office of bishop at the early age of 36, in May, 1886, at Richmond, Va.

Bishop Candler is at his best in his description of Bishop Galloway's labors in the episcopal office. Only a man familiar with the responsibilities and difficulties of that office could properly appraise the great usefulness Bishop Galloway manifested in his episcopal administration. Wherever he went, in the home Conferences or in his repeated visits to our Oriental mission fields, he showed his painstaking administration and world-wide interest and insight into the work of the church.

The biography gives an excellent account of the remarkable literary output of this busy bishop. It is amazing to consider the number of volumes produced by him in the midst of his public activities, journeying far and near, and campaigns furthering the cause of education and other great enterprises of the church. Only a master in the use of time could produce so much. His writings indicate penetration of mind, grasp of situations and power of literary expression. His range of subjects was considerable, but his mind tended to matters of world-wide interest as related to the spread of the gospel. Mention may be made here of only a few of his books. His "Handbook of Prohibition" was a most effective campaign essay in a cause he did much to place on a secure foundation. His Quillian Lectures at Emory College and Cole Lectures at Vanderbilt are evidences of his larger interests in the religious life of his times. It must be remembered that he sustained his power as a great preacher in the midst of all these activities. He was a great preacher. He loved to proclaim the gospel, and did it to the great edification and satisfaction of all classes.

Bishop Candler has wisely given prominent place to Bishop Galloway's famous controversy with Jefferson Davis on the question of prohibition. The discussion was lengthy and distressing. The venerable statesman attempted to criticize a subject he did not understand, and gave the discussion a rather personal aspect which was not only irrelevant but feeble. Bishop Galloway carried the discussion with powerful vindication of his cause, yet treated Mr. Davis with the utmost consideration. The discussion brings out Bishop Galloway's clear-cut and undeviating devotion to any principle that engaged his conscience and his heart.

Aside from the defense of a great cause the controversy brings out the essential manhood of Bishop Galloway as a statesmanlike Christian. He was alive to the issues of the day, vital with human interest. There was no mould forming about the house of his mind. To look at this man or hear him speak was to gain the impression that here was a man who was facing the future, neither dreaming irrelevancies nor retreating into the securities of the dead past.

This book will be an inspiration for any one. It is especially a book for young ministers. They may read here the story of fully consecrated life and learn the important lesson that even genius builds a great life by hard work. I count it one of the great blessings of my life to have known him in my youth and during many years of constant observation of his splendid career. He was

"One who never turned his back, but marched breast forward,
Never doubted clouds would break,
Never dreamed, though right were worsted,
Wrong would triumph,
Held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better,
Sleep to wake.
No, at noonday in the battle of man's work time,
Greet the unseen with a cheer!
Bid him forward, breast and back as either should be,
Strive and thrive! cry, speed—fight on forever.
There as here."

ANTI-EVOLUTION LEGISLATION: IS IT WISE OR OTHERWISE?

By Rev. W. T. Bazzel.

I am not in favor of passing State laws forbidding the teaching of the evolution theory of man's origin in our schools and colleges. I have never been in favor of such laws. Let me assign a few of my many reasons for believing such laws to be not only unwise and futile, but actually detrimental to the cause of Christianity which they are supposed to defend and protect.

First, the church should not demand laws which restrict investigation or interfere with the search after knowledge in any field of philosophy or science whatsoever. Why place legal shackles on the human mind in its search for truth? Let us leave the human reason free to explore every nook and cranny of this universe, and free to lawfully speculate and theorize upon all data which may be discovered.

Second, our educators, and not our legislatures, are the parties best qualified to decide upon a curriculum for our schools. I have great respect for our law-makers, but I am not willing to grant them arbitrary power to define my religion and tell me, by means of penal statute, just what I must, or must not believe concerning Genesis and the processes of creation. Even if a legislature could be assembled which had the wisdom needful to qualify it to instruct our educators on education and teach our teachers how to teach (which has never happened and probably never will), it would be swayed by popular opinion and would prescribe, or proscribe, such courses as the masses happened to approve or disapprove at the time of the election. That is the way with politics. While I have great faith in the whole people as a mass, I do not believe them to be as well qualified to select courses of study for our schools as our educators who are especially trained for that very business, and are devoting their lives to the cause of education.

Third, anti-evolution laws are advocated and passed solely for the purpose of controlling religious opinion by civil statute. This cannot be denied, for the avowed purpose and prime argument of proponents of such laws is that we must protect the faith of our children, and defend the truths of Christianity! We should protect the faith of our children and defend the truths of the Holy Bible, but let us not depend upon acts of the legislature to help us do it. Let Roman Catholics, with their infallible (?) pope, appeal to civil and military power to enforce their tenets if they will; but let us Protestants remain true to the principles of separation of church and State, and the doctrine of the freedom of conscience, which is the crown and glory of Protestantism.

Fourth, I fear that all this agitation over the questions at issue between "Fundamentalists" and "Modernists" may drive more young people away from the church than any erroneous theory of the origin of man, studied and taught as a theory, could ever do. And those who would inject the matter into politics and make it a subject for arbitrary legislation may succeed in driving thousands of our young people to renounce the faith of their fathers! Youth is an iconoclastic period. As the wide-awake boy pursues his studies he learns to think for himself. Above everything else he wants to do his own thinking, and form his own conclusions. He takes peculiar delight in ridding himself of childish notions and discarding childish delusions. With the zeal of a crusader, he demolishes old traditions—Santa Claus, fairies, mermaids, sea-serpents and ghosts.

Then he turns a critical eye upon the doctrines of revealed religion, ready to reject whatsoever may seem superstitious or fanciful therein. This is inevitable. The only possible way to prevent it is to refuse to educate him, and keep him in profound ignorance. Now, if the young student has a Christian teacher to guide him, and is in an institution of learning which has a Christian atmosphere, we may safely leave teacher and student together, free from all legislative restrictions, to pursue their researches in philosophy and science. But if we have hedged Christian teaching about with legal restrictions, and tried to protect our tenets by civil law, seeking to chain his mind to our own interpretation of the first chapter of Genesis, why should we wonder if he rebels? And if we have proclaimed and declared —and have written it into the laws of the State—that he who rejects our pet theory of man's origin rejects the whole Christian religion, why should we be amazed if he discards the church and turns atheist?

The charge is often made that the study of evolution destroys faith and makes atheists of students. Yet most of our educators, including presidents of Methodist colleges; most of our science lecturers and instructors in biology are familiar with the Darwinian theory. They have studied it. Are they all atheists? Many educated men and women, preachers and teachers among them, have not only studied the teachings of Darwin and other evolutionists, but accept and endorse the evolution theory as the only workable hypothesis yet devised by science. Shall we denounce them all as atheists?

Personally, I do not believe in the Darwinian theory of man's origin; I do not believe there are monkeys, frogs, tadpoles and mere polliwogs included among my direct ancestors. But I can readily understand how a man could believe it and yet be a devout Christian. I admit that I did not come into existence as a full grown man. In fact I suppose I started as a tiny germ, a mere speck of protoplasm; that I gradually evolved into my present size and shape; and at one point in the process of evolving I was more like a frog than a man in size and shape; at another point in the process possibly I had a tail somewhat like a monkey. Now if I can be an orthodox Christian and yet believe that I personally began as a mere nucleated speck of living protoplasm, why could I not also be a devout Christian and at the same time believe that the first man began as a tiny germ of life—a mere living speck upon the waters of some ancient pool? If my extreme fundamentalistic friends can be Christians and at the same time believe that their own bodies evolved gradually from a mere polliwog-like organism through form resembling those of frog and monkey, why cannot others be good Christians even though they believe the first man's body was evolved through countless centuries of development through frog-like and monkey-like forms?

I did not start this article with any notion of discussing the merits or demerits of evolution, or presenting any argument, pro or con. I am only trying to explain why I believe it to be unwise and futile to attempt to protect the faith of our young people by forbidding the teaching of evolution in State schools and colleges.

Lastly, if I may give one more reason, it is this: I am afraid we have not yet discovered all truth, and that a more enlightened generation may have to discard a lot of our doctrines, just as we have discarded some of the doctrines and theories of our ancestors. Every generation throughout history has forsaken old ideas and adopted newer and (sometimes) truer ones. So let us hold to our six-day interpretation of Genesis if we wish, but let us not declare by legislative fiat that future generations must accept our interpretation of the Scriptures, or become atheists!

WHAT IS WRONG WITH THE SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES?

By John W. Ramsey.

Part II.

That something is radically wrong with the American system of education is manifest from the frequent suicides, the many riots in colleges and universities, the prevalent criminality, and the moral delinquencies among the student bodies of American institutions of learning. In Part I of this article I pointed out what I believe to be the root of the trouble, viz., that the American educational system is based upon the false assumption that intellectual training alone will produce good citizens of moral character; while all cultural processes to produce a worthwhile citizenship should include those essentials necessary for the development of the conscience or moral nature. Another thing which I indicated in my first article is the teaching of the atheistical theory of evolution, or the brute origin of man.

It is my purpose now to re-enforce my former argument by showing what others think, and how they are answering the question, What is wrong with the schools and colleges? By the mouth of two or three witnesses my proposition should be established. In order to show what the average man is thinking, I begin with a quotation from the editorial page of a small town newspaper:

"More than thirty college students have committed suicide within the past two or three months. It seems to be an epidemic. For the most part they say: 'After reading from authors of New Thought and various philosophies of life, we find no promise for the future.' Had the college training of these suicides been confined to old time principles of moral training, with liberal use of the Bible, thirty young lives would be enjoying life and singing promises of the future. Our colleges are filling young heads with theories and isms, all of which discredit the Bible, the divinity of Christ, and the origin of man. If what the colleges are teaching nowadays results in the suicide of young men and women, we are in favor of abolishing the colleges and going back to the old country school house."

Dr. J. M. Fletcher, of Vanderbilt University, speaking before the Mississippi State conference of social welfare, assembled at the University of Mississippi, said:

"Student suicide has been a problem in Germany for years, but never before has it been such in the United States. It is a danger sign that we should correct our system, or we shall have a gross and terrible miscarriage of education."

Then after giving some statistics as an evidence of declining mentality, and naming what he believes to be some of the causes of this declension, Dr. Fletcher says again:

"The inevitable result is the same problem that Germany has faced for years...It brands our present educational system as faulty and sends out a challenge to America's educators for correction. (Black type mine.)

Dr. Henry Louis Smith, the distinguished president of Washington and Lee University, after speaking in a recent address of the wonderful expansion of the elaborate system of American education during post-war years, has this to say:

"That this outburst of educational activity should fill the whole land with highly trained and daring criminals, dedicating their trained powers to robbery and murder and openly scorning and nullifying our elaborate system of police and courts and penitentiaries—this appalling combination of universal education and universal crime is the leading problem of America, the severest and most unanswerable indictment of our present American method of operating our vast system of training schools for our future citizenship." (Black type mine.)

In the closing part of his address, Dr. Smith assigns the causes of these existing conditions in the schools in these emphatic words:

"This is the biggest failure of our American civilization, the most inexplicable blunder of our Christian citizens, the most fatal defect of our elaborate educational machinery—their utter neglect of definite and effective moral training in our nation-wide systems of schools and colleges and universities.

"Let the teachers and preachers and leaders of the nation exert every effort to make the moral culture of our swarming millions catch up with their genius, their miracles of applied science, and their marvelous advance in organized industry and world-wide commerce. Then instead of Russian anarchy and Italian despotism and carnival of defiant crime, we shall see millions of enlightened freemen rising together into the privileges of co-operative citizenship, and dedicating their new-found powers and accumulating wealth to the cause of human happiness and human welfare in our thrice-blessed America!" (Black type mine.)

Last but not least, I quote from Bishop Warren A. Candler, the greatest and sanest leader to-day in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as follows:

"There is a certain class of professors in some educational institutions who seem obsessed with the notion that they must weaken rather than strengthen the faith of their students. They seem to believe and teach almost anything provided it is not the Bible. They approach scientific speculations with superstitious credulity and confidence while they treat revealed truths with suspicious skepticism and derisive doubt.

"And now some among them have come even to repudiate any standard of morality whatsoever. One can hardly characterize too strongly the pernicious effects of such instruction on the minds and morals of youths. Out of this welter of infidelity among instructors come students' unbelief and despair, moral disorders and suicides." Black type mine.)

Thus, in answer to the enquiry, What is wrong with the schools and colleges? I have established my contention that the whole educational system is based upon an erroneous assumption—the idea that intellectual training alone will produce good citizens; and in harmony with this false assumption, the educational system has adopted wrong educational methods and is forcing students through detrimental cultural processes that disturb and confuse their mental and emotional centers, thereby driving them to suicide and moral degeneracy. I claim further that underlying all the moral wreckage, the product of perverted modern educational systems, is the teaching of the pernicious and materialistic theory of evolution, or brute origin of man, as against the Genesis history of the creation of man by the direct act of God.

As quoted above, Dr. J. M. Fletcher, of Vanderbilt University, has said that student suicide has been a problem in Germay for years, and America is now facing the same problem with the added complication of wrecked morals resulting in crime; and God only knows what the future holds for the civilization of America, if the blinded eyes of educators cannot be opened so that they may realize the impending dangers in the present critical situation, and see that moral instruction, the fundamental teachings of the Bible, and God must have a place in the school room. Otherwise, educational systems and American civilization must go by the way of all the nations that forget God!

A young criminal lawyer was always full of quips.

A few years ago I attended the funeral of a millionaire financier—one of those "high financiers" whose low methods he loved to turn the light on.

I arrived at the funeral a little late and took a seat beside him, and whispered, "How far has the service gone?"

He nodded toward the clergyman in the pulpit, and whispered back tersely, "Just opened for the defense."—Everybody's Magazine.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions passed by the Columbus District Conference, of the North Mississippi Conference, which convened in Ackerman, Miss., April 19-21, 1927:

Whereas, there is great spiritual unrest among people and many unproved theories are being advanced which are subversive of revealed truth, and many of our immature young people are not able to distinguish between these hurtful theories and the truths upon which our civilization has been built; and,

Whereas, the Educational Association of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in its meeting on Feb. 10, 1927, in Memphis, Tenn., adopted resolutions putting the Association "on record as opposed to all legislation that would interfere with the proper teachings of scientific subjects in American schools and colleges;" and in published interviews, the framers of the said resolutions explained that the resolutions had direct reference to legislation prohibiting the teaching of evolution; and also expressed the hope that the adoption of these resolutions by that body would influence the legislatures before which anti-evolution bills were then pending; and,

Whereas, a suggestion was made that the resolution should contain an explanation that the members of the Association were not agreeing with Clarence Darrow, who has been the champion of those opposed to anti-evolution legislation, but they neglected or refused to insert it; and,

Whereas, the laws which have been enacted by the States, and the bills which were pending before the legislatures, were specific in their description of the kind of teaching which was prohibited —"that men had ascended or descended from lower animals;" and,

Whereas, the laws which have been enacted by the States, and the bills pending before the legislatures had no relation to any institution except those supported by taxation, and the adoption of said resolutions has raised doubts in the minds of the people as to what is being taught in the church institutions over which these educators preside; now,

Therefore, be it resolved by the Columbus District Conference of the North Mississippi Annual Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, assembled in annual session in Ackerman, Miss., April 20, 1927:

1. That we repudiate the action of the said Educational Association in any sense that it officially or unofficially is supposed to represent the sentiment or will of the church;

2. That we deplore the fact that any organization bearing the name of our church, especially an organization of Christian educators, whether constituted by order of the General Conference, or voluntarily formed by the association of its members or otherwise, should have antagonized legislation proposed or enacted for the protection of the faith and morals; without which unbelievers and infidels are left without rebuke or restraint to continue their faith-wrecking asseverations and denials of Biblical records;

3. That it is the sense of this conference that those who support institutions with their money and supply them with students, should have their wishes respected as to the teaching of theories to their immature sons and daughters, which theories have not been proven, and which, if adopted, would undermine their faith in the veracity of the Word of God and be destructive to their morals;

4. That this conference advise the said educators that it is our sincere belief that the failure to collect a large part of the subscriptions which were made to Christian Education has been due to the attitude of their own members as expressed in reported speeches and published interviews which have been carried in the secular press; and is not due, as is being charged by many of these educators, to the indifference of the people or indolence of the pastors;

5. That this conference express its belief that for the best interest of these institutions, unless they have succeeded in accumulating a sufficient endowment to make them independent of the people, that they should seek closer relations with both the pastors and people upon whom they must depend for their continued existence and success;

6. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Nashville Christian Advocate for publication.

TO LOUISIANA PASTORS.

The church owes a duty to the superannuate preachers, and we must not fail. This is the fourth year of the Special Offering for this worthy cause, and we have—most of us—paid up only an amount equaling that due for one year.

During this month, I am hoping that all pastors will press these collections and redeem the pledges made in 1924.

JNO. F. FOSTER,
Chairman Conference Board of Finance.

MEETING OF THE GENERAL HOSPITAL BOARD.

The regular annual meeting of the General Hospital Board was held in the general offices, April 20, and the members of the Association remained over to this meeting, reporting their work and listening to the discussions.

There were present: Bishop W. A. Candler, Revs. S. H. C. Burgin, J. R. Jones, A. F. Smith, W. J. Young; Messrs. J. B. Ivey, M. M. McCall, L. J. Cox, R. J. Quinn, H. L. Ott; F. W. Brandon, Associate Secretary, and C. C. Jarrell, General Secretary.

The President, Bishop Warren A. Candler, was in the chair. The General Secretary, Dr. Chas. C. Jarrell, read his annual report, which showed large progress in the hospital work of our church. Something over two million dollars have been added to the hospital properties of our church in the last year.

The Board commended the work of the secretaries, the business management of the office, the economy of the administration, the large results accomplished, the careful exhibit of the year's work as shown by the report of the General Secretary, and expressed its faith in the great future of this movement. Our total hospital properties now amount to more than eight million dollars.

Only three members were absent from the meeting. The chairman, Bishop Candler, commented on the harmonious co-operation in the Board and the large progress being made in the work.

Dr. F. W. Brandon, Associate Secretary, was added to the Executive Committe, which is now: Bishop W. A Candler, Dr. W. J. Young, Messrs. R. J. Guinn and M. M. McCall.

The Board authorized an addition to the Good Samaritan Hospital, at Lexington, Ky.; a new nurses' home is going up at Montgomery; the Dallas Sanitarium will open May 1, and the Fort Worth Hospital will open in November or December.

The Hattiesburg Hospital moved into its new $250,000 building in March; the Memphis Hospital is now using and filling its new $140,000 addition. The General Conference Commission on the Tucson Hospital reported through its chairman, Mr. L. J. Cox, of Phoenix, Arizona, that it had acquired that hospital, worth $115,000, and would soon add a new building. The name was changed to Southern Methodist Hospital and Sanatorium.

The next meeting of he Board will be held at Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, Mo.

THE RUSTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Ruston District Conference convened at Athens on April 21, with 14 preachers and 25 laymen in attendance. The conference was one of splendid interest throughout. The hospitality of Brother Dring and the good people of Athens left nothing to be desired in the way of entertainment and comfort.

The program of the conference, as prepared by the presiding elder, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, was thorough in its provision for all the requirements of the occasion. In fact, splendid craftsmanship was displayed both by the presiding elder in planning and conducting the conference and by those who were called upon to address the body from time to time. Strong and intelligent portrayals of the needs and interests of the church were made by the several speakers—many of whom were chosen from within the district.

The laymen's program was of special strength and interest. It combined the powers of Dr. W. W. Drake and Dr. J. E. Crawford in emphatic pronouncements on the obligations, needs and problems of "paid in full" benevolences.

The results of the laymen's elections are as follows: District Lay Leader, I. P. Nelson; Associate Lay Leaders, E. L. Walker and H. Nelson.

Delegates to Annual Conference: T. L. James, E. M. Decker, A. P. Railey, I. P. Nelson, W. A. McKenzie, T. N. Camp, J. R. Revill, E. L. Walker, and Mrs. V. H. Spinks.

Alternates: Mrs. W. S. Row, J. M. Kavanaugh, M. Brown, T. H. Mills, J. E. Reynolds, C. A. Tooke, H. Odom, James Pitman, and Mrs. W. W. Moreland.

The conference obligated itself to provide a scholarship of $250 for a divinity student at S. M. U. The amount was divided among the several charges for collection.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson was present and spoke briefly concerning Standard Training School work, but the usual Sunday school hour was not included on the program. This work will be brought before the people of the district through a special all-day meeting some time in July. This feature as instituted by Kleinschmidt is far more effective than the usual method of presenting the work in extra-brief speeches before the conference body. Last year 750 people were brought together for this special day, and plans are being made to care for 1000 this year. The program will be so arranged that the whole Sunday school program will be presented as fully as possible to the whole assembly.

Visitors attending the conference were: Dr. Geo. S. Sexton, Rev. D. B. Raulins, Dr. Briscoe Carter, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Rev. L. I. McCain, Rev. Robt. W. Vaughn, Rev. J. G. Snelling, Rev. K. W. Dodson, and Dr. J. E. Crawford.

Bienville was chosen as the seat of the conference for next year.

CHAS. E. McLEAN, Secretary.

NOTICE.

To Whom It May Concern:

After twenty-two years of active, faithful services in the traveling connection, filled with hardships, privations, and sacrifices, accomplishing as much for Christ and the church as the average preacher, I cannot have the proper respect for myself and family and submit to location, against my will and wishes, on the grounds, "inefficiency and unacceptability." Therefore, after due consideration, I voluntarily withdraw from the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Signed: H. J. MADDOX,

IF EVERY COUPLE MARRIED BY A PREACHER NOW SUPERANNUATED WOULD GIVE $10.00 TO SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT, THE TOTAL THUS CONTRIBUTED WOULD AMOUNT TO $2,630,000.

By LUTHER E. TODD, Secretary of the Board of Finance

DO YOUR PART

It would seem that a man and his wife ought always to have a very tender feeling toward the preacher who united them in marriage, and all the more so when the preacher grows old, worn-out and is superannuated. There are 263,000 couples scattered around, who had their marriage ceremonies performed by preachers who are now "laid on the shelf." In practically every case lovely children have since come to brighten the home; not infrequently fortune has smiled and wealth increased; and, with few exceptions, these couples have been gloriously happy all the way. But the preachers, who opened the gate for them to possess such joys, languish in the poverty of enforced retirement—lonely, often hungry, and forgotten. If each of these couples would make a liberal contribution to Superannuate Endowment, what a fitting expression it would be of their appreciation of these grand old men.

When a preacher ministers to a bereaved family with Christian solicitude and words of comfort, he does something that should forever bind him to their hearts by ties of loving appreciation. When a group of 1000 preachers gives similar service to 410,000 families wherein death stalks, the debt of gratitude cannot be measured. And, when these preachers are old and superannuated, the debt presses its claim at compound interest. Therefore, the appeal for contributions to Superannuate Endowment from these families is not a plea for charity—it is an opportunity offered to pay an honest debt.

BEFORE MAY ENDS

IF EVERY FAMILY THAT WAS COMFORTED BY A PREACHER NOW SUPERANNUATED, WHEN BEREAVED BY DEATH, WOULD GIVE $10.00 TO SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT, THE TOTAL THUS CONTRIBUTED WOULD AMOUNT TO $4,100,000.00

MRS. CLARA BELL WAILES DRAKE.

From the day of her birth, Feb. 5, 1850, Clara Bell Wailes Drake had the great gift of being able to draw many hearts to hers by the power of love's sweet law. As she grew to maturity, the sweetness and strength of her nature ripened so that to the day of her death, Jan. 12, 1927, even those who were only slightly acquainted with her were impressed by the fact that hers was a rare spirit, a sympathetic heart, and understanding mind. In her presence one felt a constant sense of all things sweet and fair.

She was a native of Woodville, Wilkinson County, Miss., the youngest of the twelve children who were born to Edmund Howard Wailes and his wife, Jane Newell Wailes. To this large and affectionate family, she was always known as "Pet," and, as one of her nephews expressed it—on the day of her death—"she had love showered upon her, all the days of her life." But the loving care which surrounded her seemed to enrich rather than spoil her wonderful nature.

Very early in her life, her parents recognized in her unusual taste for books and for all intellectual and artistic pursuits. Accordingly, they gave her every educational advantage which they could command; first, the instruction of private schools and tutors of Woodville and New Orleans, and later, the full literary and musical courses offered at that time by the Woodville Seminary—an institution which was later known as Edward McGehee College. That she was proficient in her studies is attested by the fact that very soon after her graduation she was made principal of her Alma Mater. Here she taught for two years. During the season 1872-'73 she taught at Wesleyan College, Macon, Ga.

On Sept. 24, 1873, she was married to James Perry Drake, a young Mississippian, who was, at that time, practicing law in Louisiana—in the courts of Concordia and Tensas Parishes. Three years after this, December, 1876, he joined the Mississippi Conference, and was a loyal, faithful member of that body until his death—twenty-five years later. So, for a quarter of a century, she knew all the material hardships as well as the spiritual blessings of itinerant life.

She was more than an ordinary helper and companion to her husband. He was an exceptionally good pastor, and whenever possible, she visited with him. She was his ideal and his inspiration, and it was his earnest desire that she should never suffer hardship. He joyed in her intellectual ability and was pleased when she wrote for the church press, or was sent as delegate to a W. C. T. U. convention, or a Woman's Missionary conference. Her heart was always in the work of missions, and for several years she was a Conference officer in the Woman's Missionary Society. She has often said that one of the great events of her life was the week she spent, in company with her husband, attending the great Ecumenical Missionary Conference which met in New Orleans, in 1901.

To James Perry Drake and Clara Bell Wailes Drake nine children were born. Two daughters, Susie and Alice, died in infancy. One son, Benjamin Howard, lived to be 9 years of age. He was a child of rare sweetness of nature and promise of intellect, and his death was a great blow to his parents. Another son, William Lambuth, lived to his twenty-fourth year. He gave his life for his country, dying at Camp Pike, Arkansas, Oct. 11, 1918. He was her youngest, and between them there existed such a strong bond of affection that her mother heart never ceased to bleed for him. But she was a remarkably devoted mother to all of her children, and very ambitious for their welfare and happiness. Character and education were the attainments she craved most for them, and from their earliest days she did her utmost to obtain these blessings for them. Among their happiest recollections are stories, poems, prayers, lessons, learned by her fireside or on the occasions of her Sunday afternoon readings and rambles with them in the woods.

After the death of her husband, in 1902, her eldest son, W. W. Drake, became the head of her home. Most of her time from 1902 to 1917, she lived with him in Vicksburg, but a few years were spent in Port Gibson. In 1917, she moved to the old family homestead, Mount Ararat Plantation, in Jefferson County, to be with her youngest son, Lambuth, who was at that time managing the place. Here, after Lambuth's death, she chose to remain for the rest of her life—one or more of her children always living with her. Her local attachments were very strong. She loved Mount Ararat Plantation. Here she felt that her itinerant life was ended. Here was home. Here she was near the graves of her loved husband and children and the sweet associations of her early married life. Here she was near to nature and nature's God. Here were the birds, the trees, the flowers she loved so well. Here were peaceful, quiet days and nights.

In this home she loved to meet her friends and her children's friends and offer them hospitality. So, in spite of the fact that Mount Ararat Plantation is a considerable distance from town, guests were often present to bask in the genial atmosphere her presence created. She was much loved in her country community, and almost adored by the servants on the place.

During her last years, failing health and distance in the country cut her off from leadership in church or civic work. But her interest in organized forces for righteousness never flagged, and she was ever ready to contribute of her means to every worthy cause.

The early part of 1926 she suffered from a severe attack of influenza. It left her with a weakened heart—and vitality otherwise impaired. Her mind, however, was as bright and active as ever, and her spiritual outlook as sweet and steadfast. Her general health seemed to be improving, but in January, a short and violent illness proved too much for her strength. She died of pneumonia at the Chamberlain-Rice Hospital, in Natchez, early in the morning of Jan. 12, 1927.

In spite of very inclement weather, a large number of friends and neighbors attended the beautiful service which was held for her at her home, at 11 o'clock, the morning of the fourteenth. The service was in charge of Rev. O. S. Lewis, of Natchez. He was assisted by Rev. C. C. Evans, of McComb; Rev. S F. Harkey, of Bay St. Louis, and Rev. L P. Anders, of Washington. At the request of members of the family Rev. O. S. Lewis sang, very beautifully, one of her favorite hymns,

"I'm a pilgrim, I'm a stranger,
I can tarry, I can tarry but a night;
Do not detain me, for I am going
Where crystal fountains are ever flowing."

Her loved body was then laid to rest in the family cemetery where members of the Magruder and Drake families have been buried for nearly a century.

She is survived by two sisters: Mrs. N. E. Cropper, of Columbia, and Mrs. S. E. Harris, of Gulfport; and by five children: W. Magruder Drake, of New York City; Mrs. Janie Drake Cooper, of Church Hill; E. Steele and J. Perry Drake, of Bay St. Louis, and Miss Claribel Drake, of Church Hill.

To these children she has bequeathed the memory of a rare and beautiful personality. Although she lived almost to the completion of her seventy-seventh year, she was never very strong of body; but after all, "'tis the mind that makes the body rich." Her mind was filled with the knowledge of books, for she loved to lose herself in the thoughts of others. But in additfon to the gift of appreciation of wisdom in others, she had unusual originality of mind and much grace of expression in formulating her own thoughts. Moreover, she had an eye for beauty and an ear for music, and so she loved, and wrote poetry. Very few of these poems were written for publication, since they were usually of an occasional and personal nature and intended only for her friends, but all of them possessed the grace and beauty of a finely tuned and imaginative spirit.

She was a constantly industrious woman. Never able to do heavy work she was, nevertheless, always employed with needle, pen, book or work with her beloved flowers.

She had great will power and ambition, but these qualities were always subordinated to her gentleness, patience, keen appreciation of all the love and blessings which came to her, deep and abiding devotion to her loved ones, and fidelity to her religious beliefs and principles.

The greatest thing God creates is personality. When, through the interaction of his grace, personality has expressed itself in some rare, noble and exalted form, those who are privileged to be close to such a being will necessarily yearn to give others a picture such as would pass on the blessing of this association. Yet, how can one adequately express—with the limited medium of words—anything so exquisite, so complex and so uplifting as the essence and influence of such a soul as that of Clara Bell Wailes Drake! Mention has been made of this and that quality and this and that achievement, but the beauty and beneficence of her life has been merely suggested. This sketch has touched only a few aspects of her character; it has not revealed the whole, true self. Yet this must be said in further comment on her personality as a whole, that the secret of its gentleness, its sweetness, peace and power was God's love expressed in her. Her ardent, imaginative, beauty-loving nature was dominated by intense devotion to God. An expression often on her lips was, "May our very dreams be devout." No wonder that baser feelings died and peace and harmony lived in her presence!

Is it wonderful that the going away of such a mother has left a deep shadow upon her home? But "shadow owes its birth to light." And what a light shone in her presence her loved ones will never forget!

Her daughters,

RULES FOR MAKING A GOOD CHURCH MEMBER.

Number 8.

By "Rev. Ichabod Crane."

A good church member will support his church financially according to his ability.

"With reference to the collection for the saints * * * upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by him in store, as God hath prospered him."

The church proves that it is of God by doing what is done with the amount of money it gets. A man's pocketbook is the ground to his spiritual radio receiving set. Unless the ground is properly connected with the rest of the set, it is impossible to receive the message. A person cannot be a good Christian and be a stranger to sacrifice. God does not request stewardship—He demands it.

JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE, MAY 10-12.

The Jackson District Conference will convene at Flora, Miss., Tuesday night, May 10, and continue through Thursday, May 12. Rev. C. C. Clark, of Benton, will preach the opening sermon Tuesday night at 7:45, and all are urged to be present for this opening service. The Lord's Supper will be administered following the sermon.

The following committees are announced:

License to Preach—J. L. Neill, R. E. Rutledge, H. G. Roberts.

Admissions—H. S. Spragins, S. B. Watkins, W. A. Terry.

Orders—H. W. Featherstun, C. H. Ellis, J. H. Foreman.

Local Preachers—L. L. Roberts, J. O Ware, E. M. Allen.

Quarterly Conference Records—T. O. Prewitt, I. O. Brown, R. L. Walton.

WISHING.

Do you wish the world were better?
Let me tell you what to do:
Set a watch upon your actions,
Keep them always straight and true;
Rid your mind of selfish motives,
Let your thoughts be clean and high.
You can make a little Eden
Of the sphere you occupy.

Do you wish the world were wiser?
Well, suppose you make a start
By accumulating wisdom
In the scrapbook of your heart.
Do not waste one page on folly;
Live to learn, and learn to live.
If you want to give men knowledge,
You must get ere you give.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

MR. PARKER'S PEAS.

"Father, I don't want to go to school," said Harry Williams one morning; "I wish you would always let me stay home. Charles Parker's father don't make him go to school."

Mr. Williams took the little boy by the hand, and said kindly to him, "Come, my son; I want to show you something."

Harry walked into the garden with his father, who led him along until they came to a bed in which peas were growing, the stems supported by thin branches which had been placed in the ground. Not a weed was to be seen about their roots, nor even disfiguring the walk around the bed.

"See how beautifully these peas are growing, my son. We shall have an abundant crop. Now let me show you the peas in Mr. Parker's garden. We can look at them through a great hole in the fence."

Mr. Williams then led Harry through the garden gates across the road to look at Mr. Parker's peas. After looking into the garden for a few moments, Mr. Williams said:

"Well, my son, what do you think of Mr. Parker's peas?"

"Oh, father, I never saw such poor looking peas in my life. There are no sticks for them to run upon, and the weeds are nearly as high as the peas themselves."

"Why are they so much smaller and thinner than ours, Harry?"

"Because they have been left to grow as they pleased. I suppose Mr. Parker just planted them, and never took care of them afterwards. He has neither taken out the weeds nor helped the stalks to grow right."

"Yes, that's the truth, my son. A garden will soon be overrun with weeds and briars if it is not cultivated with the greatest care. And just so it is with the human garden. This precious garden must be trained and watered and kept free from weeds, or it will run to waste. Children's minds are like garden beds, and they must be tended even more carefully than the choicest plants. If you were never to go to school, nor have good seeds of knowledge planted in your mind, it would, when you become a man, resemble the weed-covered bed we have just been looking at instead of the beautiful one in my garden. Would you think it right for me to neglect my garden as Mr. Parker neglects his?"

"Oh, no, father; your garden is a good one, but Mr. Parker's garden is all overrun with weeds and briars."

"Or, my son, do you think it would be right if I neglected my son as Mr. Parker neglects his, allowing him to run wild, and his mind uncultivated to become overrun with weeds?"

Little Harry made no reply, but he understood very clearly what his father meant.—Presbyterian Banner.

THE JEWELERS.

They were playing jewelry store, Edith and Corinne, when Mrs. Barr called from the back door. Edith ran up at once.

"Hadn't you better invite Mrs. Mills' granddaughter over to play with you?" her mother asked.

Edith scowled. "We don't either of us know her," she said.

"It won't take long to get acquainted. She looks lonesome."

"Well," yielded Edith.

The two little girls talked together in whispers for a minute; then Edith slowly crawled through the place in the fence where the pickets were off, and walked toward the little girl in the big, old-fashioned garden.

"Would you like to come and play with us?" she asked. "We're going to have a jewelry store; we're making the jewelry now."

"Oh, thank you! I'd love to!" cried the other. "I'll run in and ask grandma. You will have to teach me how to play it; I never did," she said.

"Oh, we're stringing snowberries for pearl necklaces and making pins out of asters, and doing things like that. When we get enough we'll ask the other children to come and buy."

"It must be fun!" and Laura Mills' face glowed with pleasure.

The bench, which was now a counter for the display of jewelry, showed several necklaces.

"How pretty!" cried Laura. "Oh, I know what I'll make," and she ran back into her grandmother's garden.

"I don't think that very polite—to go off first thing," said Edith, as the visitor did not return.

"Let's tell her she can have a store by herself," suggested Corinne. "Probably she won't make anything nice."

So Edith called through the fence: "If you want to you can have your things on your side!"

"All right!" came back to them from behind the flowerbeds; but it did not have a joyful sound.

For a long time the three worked quietly. Finally Edith and Corinne were ready for customers. "We'll have to go and tell her," whispered Edith.

Together they approached the fence.

"Oh, what a lot!" exclaimed Corinne.

"Why, it's just like a real jewelry store!" cried Edith.

"Aren't they pretty?" said Laura, smiling.

There was a large wooden box close by the "gate," and on it, in small paper boxes, lying on white and pink cotton, were the articles she had made. The blossoms of scarlet sage strung together looked almost like a coral necklace; red, rosy lips made a pretty bracelet; yellow baby roses put together with wire answered for pins and belt buckles, while fuschias were pretty earrings.

"Nobody will want to buy ours after seeing yours," declared Corinne.

"Oh, I think they will!" returned Laura. "But why not put them all together? I'd rather."

"Would you, really?" asked Corinne, her face growing hot, as she remembered that she had been the one to propose separate "stores."

So more shallow boxes were obtained and the whole stock was soon in readiness for the real play to begin. Business was brisk, and Laura soon had to leave her place behind the counter in order to fashion more jewelry.

By dinner-time all the children were wearing pretty ornaments, and both Corinne and Edith thought there could not be a pleasanter playmate than Laura Mills.—Montreal Star.

FOUR ESSENTIALS.

A man from his shoulders down is worth $2 a day, but from his shoulders up there is no limit to his earning capacity. I never saw a boy or a man who got anywhere if he did not work. As a boy grows older he will find the competition between men very keen, and he who is fairly well educated has a distinct advantage over the man who is not.

Every boy has some kind of a vague idea that he would like to be something or other when he grows up, but he does not know just what. He will find, however, that there are three or four simple things that tend to a man's success. The first is good health. It is impossible for a boy or man to work against the handicap of poor health. The next thing is honesty. No man in this or any other country who was not honest attained success. He may appear to do this for a time, but when his dishonesty is discovered—which will be sooner or later—his success is at an end and his failure begins. The third essential is education; without education it is impossible to climb to any important position. The fourth essential is work. Nothing was ever accomplished without work, and if any man tells you differently it is not the truth. During this year many capable men will be required to fill important positions, and he who has the essentials to which I have referred is the one who will get the preference.

The things we admire most in other men are the qualities we should develop in ourselves. The first is honesty, the second courage, and third modesty. Without courage one could not go very far in this world. If a man is content to stand aside for others, he is bound to lose. Without modesty no man can secure the respect of his fellow-beings. Every man's hand is against the man who shows he believes himself better than others. When I was a youngster my father, who was a very wise man, used to say, "Never think you are better than anybody else, but always think you are as good." Modesty is one of the finest qualities a boy or man could have.—E. W. Beatty, President Canadian Pacific Railway.

WHERE THE U. S. STANDS.

Just where the United States stands in relationship of the world is pointed out by the New York Curb News which suggests the "knockers" be presented with these facts—that America has:

6 per cent of the world's population;
7 per cent of the world's land;
20 per cent of all wheat grown;
40 per cent of the world's silver;
40 per cent of the world's railroads;
40 per cent of the world's steel and iron;
52 per cent of the world's coal;
60 per cent of all cotton grown;
66 per cent of the world's oil;
70 per cent of the world's copper;
75 per cent of all corn grown;
80 per cent of the world's automobiles.

Previous to 1914 we owed England so much money that the anual interest was $300,000,000. Now England is paying us $150,000,000 a year interest. Before the war we owed about $4,000,000,000 abroad. To-day the net indebtedness of Europe to America is $10,000,000,000. America is now the richest nation and the financial center of the world.—Exchange.

"TIME OUT."

Annette, visiting at the beach, saw for the first time a muzzled bulldog on the boardwalk.

"Oh, daddy," she exclaimed, "I didn't know that doggies played ball!"—Exchange.

Mother: "Grace, darling, run and call Fido, will you?"

Grace: "I don't see how I can, mummy, 'cos I aren't speakin' to Fido since he broke my doll!"—The Progressive Grocer.

"You've heard what the last witness said," persisted the counsel, "and yet your evidence is to the contrary. Am I to infer that you doubt her veracity?"

The polite young man waved a deprecating hand.

"Not at all," he replied. "I merely wish to make it clear what a liar I am if she's speaking the truth."—Everybody's Magazine.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

THE OVERFLOW.

The disastrous overflow continues its work of devastation throughout a wide territory. It is impossible at this time to estimate the loss. Along with all other interests, the church will suffer heavily. As soon as possible, steps must and will be taken to repair the damage. This is a time that calls for courage, faith, and an invincible determination to "carry on" throughout the stricken area.

Official reports of river engineers are to the effect that New Orleans will not be overflowed unless some wholly unforseen event takes place. The levees are in fine condition, every foot of them is watched day and night, and ample provision has been made for any emergency. We make this statement in reply to many inquiries that have reached us concerning the situation here. Personally, we feel assured that New Orleans will escape inundation.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. T. Woodward, of Sicily Island, La., has been a reader of the Advocate for forty-five years.

The ninth annual Louisiana Epworth League Assembly will meet at Mansfield College on June 7 and continue to June 14.

Mr. J. W. Lipscomb, of Baton Rouge, La., is another of the "Old Guard"—he has been taking the Advocate for more than fifty-eight years.

Dr. R. H. Wynn, Lake Charles, La., attended the meeting of the General Board of Education, of which he is a member, in Nashville last week.

Services now are being conducted every Sunday at Mandeville, La., Rev. Fred H. Campbell, a local preacher of New Orleans, filling the pulpit.

Dr. J. W. Billington, Yazoo City, Miss., is entitled to an officer's commission in the "Old Guard"—he has taken the Advocate since 1868.

Mr. S. H. Meyer, Louisiana Conference member of the General Board of Church Extension, attended the meeting of the Board in Louisville last week.

Miss Martha Rye, Amory, Miss., has been a reader of the Advocate for about forty years, and in renewing her subscription she says she enjoys it more and more.

The meeting at Crowley, La., conducted by Rev. L. P. Law, resulted in the addition of more than sixty members to the church. Rev. W. H. Jordan is the pastor at Crowley.

Mrs. P. W. Shell, of Houston, Miss., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, takes occasion to speak kindly of the paper. She has been reading it since childhood.

We learn with sorrow of the death of Mrs. C. C. Hutchinson, of Shreveport, La., on April 26. She leaves a husband and two children, to whom the Advocate extends sincere sympathy.

Dr. R. H. Harper, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, who recently assisted Rev. D. B. Boddie in a meeting at Opelousas, La., reports that gracious results followed the meeting.

Rev. W. N. Dodds, our pastor at Houston, Miss., is happy in his work with the fine people of his church. He says that Houston is one of the best appointments in the Conference.

Dr. Wallace M. Crutchfield, pastor of Centenary Church, Tulsa, Okla., is serving as editor of the Oklahoma Methodist pending the election of a successor to the late Dr. David H. Aston.

Rev. L. W. Cain, pastor of Parker Memorial Church, this city, is assisting Rev. S. A. Seegers in a meeting at Slidell, La. Brother Seegers filled the pulpit at Parker Memorial last Sunday.

A note from Rev. W. L. Broome, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Muskogee, Okla., states that the meeting in which Rev. E. R. Smoot is doing the preaching has assumed great proportions.

Rev. C. A. Northington, our pastor at Ackerman, Miss., preached the commencement sermon for the Choctaw Agricultural High School this year. There was a fine graduating class of thirty-five members.

Rev. V. G. Clifford, pastor of the Mendenhall and D'Lo charge, Mississippi Conference, has received twenty-five new members into the church since Conference—fifteen by vows and ten by certificate.

Mr. J. M. Lawshe, of Longstreet, Miss., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, states that this makes the twenty-fourth year he has taken the paper, and that he read it in his father's home when he was a boy.

We thank Miss Maude Merritt Sweeney for an invitation to attend the graduating exercises of the Franklinton, La., High School, on Tuesday evening, May 10. Miss Sweeney, a daughter of Rev. F. N. Sweeney, is a member of the graduating class.

Mrs. R. S. Collier, writing from San Antonio, Tex., says that Brother Collier's health is extremely poor and that he is suffering from a complication of diseases. Her own health is also poor; but in all their trials they are sustained by the grace of God.

Brother J. T. M. Hancock, of Miami, Fla., in renewing his subscription to the Advocate, says: "I have been reading the Advocate so long that it is a part of my life." He states that the health of himself and wife has greatly improved since they went to Florida.

Rev. John L. Williams, State Superintendent of the Louisiana Child Finding and Home Society, announces that he will have a book from the press some time in July, "The Cross of Gold in Social Teaching." Brother Williams has given much study to social problems.

Dr. R. E. Goodrich, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., is assisting the pastor in a meeting at Vineville Methodist church, Macon, Ga. Dr. George S. Sexton, president of Centenary College, preached at First Church last Sunday in the pastor's absence.

Rev. Marlin H. McCormack, Jr., pastor of the Clinton charge, Mississippi Conference, suggests in the May number of the church bulletin that the time of meeting of the Annual Conference be changed from November to March. He supports his suggestion with some good reasoning.

The editor of the Advocate spent a few hours between trains in Poplarville, Miss., on Thursday of last week. He greatly enjoyed the hospitality of the home of Rev. and Mrs. T. J. O'Neil. Brother O'Neil is giving full proof of his ministry in the important charge, and the work is advancing in every way.

Rev. Lee R. Sparks, of Zwolle, La., writes that he has engaged the gospel tent of the Board of Missions from July 25 to Aug. 15, and that the Board would like to rent it to some other brother in the Lake Charles District from July 5 or 6 to July 25. Application should be made at once to Rev. J. G. Snelling, 815 Washington Avenue, New Orleans.

Rev. W. W. Perry, Sulphur, La., writes: "Rev. W. E. Thomas, general evangelist, and his singer, Rev. M. V. Lewis, are closing a gracious meeting here—a fine spirit prevails. We go to Vinton for the next two weeks. Please pray for us." Brother Thomas has two open dates—one in June and one in July—that are available for the brethren.

Rev. Osmond S. Lewis, pastor of the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, Natchez, Miss., had a great day on Easter Sunday. He received thirty-seven members into the church—thirty-one on profession of faith—and since then he has received six more, making a total of fifty-nine since Conference. The Sunday school annex is nearing completion and will soon be ready for use. The general condition of Mrs. Lewis' health is very much better.

Rev. W. C. Childress, our pastor at Mansfield, La., writes: "Owing to a change that has been made in my revival, Mr. A. R. Wells, of Dallas, Tex., chorister and pastor's helper, will have an open date from June 19 to July 3, and any pastor desiring a splendid helper for his meeting would do well to secure the services of Brother Wells. I have used him twice; he has also been with Dr. O. E. Goddard in several meetings, and is splendid help. He is religious, sweet-spirited, and has had large success in his work with young people. Any pastor who may be interested can write or wire him at his home address, 5210 Parry Avenue, Dallas."

Rev. J. A. George, our pastor at Ripley, Miss., writes: "Rev. Carroll Varner, pastor of the First Methodist Church at Water Valley, delivered the commencement sermon to the graduating class of the Ripley High School on Sunday morning, April 24, in the Methodist church at Ripley, to a large and appreciative congregation. His sermon was splendid, and contained much good advice to the class, and it was a great inspiration to all. He remained over for the night service, and gave his lecture on his tour last summer to the Holy Land. The people came back and again filled the church. This was indeed a great lecture, and every one thoroughly enjoyed it. We were made to feel that we were in the sacred places of the trip. I believe any church in the Conference would be fortunate to have him deliver his lecture on the Holy Land."

THE GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE POSTPONED—AND THE FLOOD.

Dear Advocate: Please say the Greenville District Conference is postponed indefinitely. The flood is calamitous; it simply cannot be described by any words that man can use. The city of Greenville is under water from one to ten feet or more. The mad waters are rushing through her beautiful streets like a Niagara. Leland, Arcola, Hollandale, and all sections south of the break are under deep and turbulent waters.

There is no estimating the loss of life and damage to property. The roads and bridges are torn up and swept away to the amount of $500,000 in Washington County, so I heard conservative men say. I heard others say a thousand or fifteen hundred people, white and black, were drowned. Practically all live stock, mules, cows, hogs, including all barnyard fowls, perished.

The Red Cross and American Legion were on the ground as soon as possible, organizing and working heroically to save the people from starvation and disease, and make them as comfortable as possible.

All the steamcraft on the river hurried to the scene of the disaster to carry the people to places of safety. The Standard Oil Company rushed a big steamboat, the "Sprague," there to make several trips, conveying people to places of safety without charge, and fed them while on the trip, while other steamcraft and the railroads did the same.

This disaster touched the nation, and its purse-strings broke, and money poured in to buy bread, milk, pure water, and meat to save the pitiful, beleaguered and unfortunate people who had not a bite to eat or a drink of water or a place to sit or lie down to rest.

It is so awful—so terrible that no one who did not see it can ever realize it any more than a deaf man can hear Niagara, or a blind man perceive the height of the mountains.

It simply beggars description and defies imagination.

L. M. LIPSCOMB.

THE LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Lake Charles District Conference met in Abbeville, La., April 26, at 2:30 p. m., Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder, in the chair. All the pastors were present save Revs. R. H. Wynn, F. B. Hill, and L. R. Sparks. Dr. Wynn was in attendance on the meeting of the Board of Education; Brother Hill was detained by the illness of Sister Hill.

Quite a large representation of the laity were in their places on the second day, with a fair number on the opening day. Brother A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles, an honored and faithful layman, who for forty or more years has seldom if ever failed to be at his post of duty, was present and welcomed among the brethren.

As each pastoral charge was called, the secretary noted an optimistic note in nearly all the reports, with financial outlook hopeful along varied lines.

The fact that many claims of the church had not been met as they should have been was brought forth by varied speakers as the visiting brethren presented their causes; but the outlook for the year, as evidenced by that which had been accomplished to date, was that this year would be better than the reports of the past. A cheering note was the fact that there had been received into the church already, some one hundred and sixty souls, more than during all the past year.

The following visiting brethren were with us: Rev. C. D. Atkinson, representing the Sunday school interests; Rev. J. G. Snelling, the missionary interests of the church and the Memorial Home in New Orleans; Rev. R. W. Vaughan, the Orphanage Home in Ruston; Dr. Briscoe Carter, the educational work of the Conference and specially the interests of Centenary College, and Dr. R. H. Harper, the hospital interests of the church and the Golden Cross movement.

Brother R. J. O'Neil, of De Ridder, presented the cause of Lay Activity, and spoke at length, setting forth the forms of church work into which the laymen should enter, and stressing the need of full collections. Brothers John F. Foster and W. L. Doss followed, presenting the need of full collections on benevolences, both Conference and General.

Mrs. Luella Dees, District Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society, presented the report of said Society.

Brother Foster spoke on the need of pressing the collecting of pledges made for the Superannuate Endowment Fund, and the duty we owe to these honored brethren.

The delegates elected to the Annual Conference are as folllows: A. M. Mayo, R. J. O'Neil, W. L. Doss, J. W. Wynn, J. Ed Eaves, Mrs. Luella Dees, J. J. Davidson, Mrs. E. Henry. Afternates: Mrs. R. H. Wynn, R. P. Howell, Mrs. B. M. Lambert.

Brother Doss spoke of the spiritual needs of Cameron Parish, saying that before he can place a man in the field he would need more money than was in hand at present. A subscription collection being taken, the sum of $145 was pledged.

Brother Ed Stine, of Chenier, who for years had been a local preacher, was re-licensed as a local preacher in our church.

Lake Arthur was chosen as the place of the meeting of the conference for the next year.

JOHN F. FOSTER, Secretary.

HOSPITAL WEEK AND GOLDEN CROSS ENROLLMENT.

I have been asked by the chairman of our Hospital Board to assist in having "Hospital Week" observed in the North Mississippi Conference. This week is May 8-15.

If it is said that it is hard to put on some of the programs of our church, here is one part of the program which can be put on with ease in every congregation. Every pastor and Golden Cross Director may get complete information about the Golden Cross from the Discipline in a very few minutes by reading paragraphs 529-542. Enrollment evelopes and buttons have been mailed to the pastors from the office of the General Board, 406 Wesley Memorial Building, Atlanta, Ga. Additional supplies may be had on request.

There is no assessment. Large sums are not asked of any one. There is no doubt as to the need. There is no doubt as to our duty. There is no doubt as to our being able to enroll the people if we tell them of the work, of the Master's command and of the plan. Let us not pass up Hospital Enrollment Week, but let us have a Golden Cross Society in every congregation. All proceeds from the North Mississippi Conference go to the Methodist Hospital in Memphis, one of the finest in the South.

A. Y. BROWN.

MEETING OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE BOARD OF EDUCATION.

The first regular meeting of the Board of Education elected by the last General Conference was held April 26-27, at Nashville, Tennessee. Two full days were devoted to the consideration of the important activities of the church which have been committed to this Board. Only a sketch of the more important actions of the Boord can be given in this brief article.

Earnest consideration was given to the importance of an educated and trained ministry. The General Secretary discussed this question at length in his report to the Board. Doctors Cox and Parker, of Emory University, and Dr. Selecman, of Southern Methodist University, came before the Board and discussed the great need of theological training for the ministry. After full discussion of the whole subject of ministerial education, the Board expressed itself as being in hearty sympathy with our two theological schools in their proposal to inaugurate a concentrated effort to place upon the conscience and in the conviction of the whole church the need of a thoroughly educated ministry, and pledged the support and co-operation of the Board in a church-wide appeal for this work.

Since the last General Conference transferred the responsibility for the organization and conduct of Pastor's Schools to the Board of Education the work of these schools naturally received much attention at this meeting. It was the sense of the Board that the Pastors' Schools should increasingly emphasize graduate instruction and that the undergraduates should be strongly urged to take their work in the Correspondence School. $10,000 was appropriated for the work of the Pastors' School during the next year.

The work which is being done in the field of religious education in both church and State schools was commended and the strengthening and enlargement of the program in important and strategic centers was agreed upon. The Board also directed that all new work in this field be projected upon a broad and generous plan with a view to future enlargement and permanence. At least $27,000 was made available for this work during the year 1927-'28.

The very pressing financial problem of many of our schools and colleges was not overlooked by the Board. It was recognized that "there are unmistakable indications that the time has come for the church either to increase greatly the financial support of the colleges or to cut down the number." In view of the gravity of this situation the Board requested the Annual Conferences to appoint a commission to act in conjunction with the General Secretary in an effort to secure for the institutions in their respective territory the financial support necessary to accomplish the educational task of the church.

There was presented to the Board a communication from the Educational Commission of the two Annual Conferences in Arkansas with reference to the proposal to merge the three colleges of that State into one institution, under one board of trustees, but functioning in four different places, with the head of the consolidated institution at Little Rock. Without expressing any judgment on the wisdom of the plan, the Board voted to concur in the proposal of the Commission provided the plan shall be adopted by the two Annual Conferences in Arkansas and that at least three million dollars become available before the enterprise is begun.

The proposal of the two Annual Conferences in Oklahoma to co-operate with the Methodist Episcopal Church in conducting a joint educational institution of higher learning at Oklahoma City was brought before the Board. The Board expressed its sympathy with the plan and voted unanimously to give the Conferences in Oklahoma a full liberty to proceed with the development of the plan adopted by the adjourned sessions of the Oklahoma Conferences held in 1926. The General Secretary was instructed to render every assistance possible in carrying out the plan.

The very great value which the observance of Christian Education Day in the local churches can be made a means of approach to local congregations was emphasized by the Board and each Annual Conference was requested to order Christian Education Day in their local congregations and to urge their pastors to observe the day with suitable programs.

Upon the whole, it was a most satisfactory and profitable meeting. It is quite apparent that the members of the Board for this quadrennium are thoroughly in earnest in their task of directing the educational work of the church.

RESOLUTIONS.

On Feb. 27, 1927, there passed from this life into the Great Beyond MRS. JOE SAM ROLFE, nee Gertrude C. S. Cooper. She was born Nov. 18, 1868, and had lived all her life in Oak Ridge. She was devoted to her church and to her home, and left nothing undone or unsaid, within the range of her powers, that she felt necessary to the well-being of either. Her devotion to her children was especially beautiful, and her concern for their development in health and godliness was first in her heart. In addition to her husband and children, Mrs. Rolfe is survived by two sisters, as well as by numbers of other relatives and friends. "Faithful unto death," she has inherited "a crown of righteousness which the Righteous Judge has laid up for all who love his appearing."

Mrs. Rolfe was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, of Oak Ridge, La. She was a worthy and honored member of the Woman's Missionary Society.

Whereas, our sister has passed from this life; therefore, be it resolved, That we bow in humble submission to the supreme will of God; and in this trying sorrow that has come to the children and husband we extend our tenderest sympathies and pray that the God of love will bless and sanctify this sorrow to the good of each of her children and her husband.

Also, That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, to the Bastrop Enterprise, and the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed: Mrs. W. W. Whithorne, Mrs. C. L. Hope, Mrs. W. D. Carroll, Mrs. F. W. Files, Committee.

On April 14, 1927, MRS. OLIVE EUGINE CLARK, wife of Mr. M. E. Clark, peacefully departed this life. She was born July 7, 1858, of noble parents, William D. Abbott and Mrs. Mary Holden Abbott, in Jefferson County. Sister Clark joined the Brandywine M. E. Church, South, early in life. She married a Mr. Cobb, who died a few years after their marriage. Mrs. Cobb then married Mr. M. E. Clark, Jan. 25, 1882. God blessed this union with forty-five years of happy wedlock. Their home was the place of joy and fun to the young and a delight to the old. Mother Clark, as all soon learned to call her, drew every one to her with her tender spirit and charming disposition. A welcome was expressed to all as she gave her small, soft hand in a gentle clasp, with a happy smile, re-enforced with two radiant brown eyes, surrounded by a meek face crowned with a head of silver. She was a devoted wife, a good mother and a dear friend. Her spiritual life was a demonstration of God's Word, that she "grew in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord," noticed in her complete belief in the reality of the heavenly home, and a triumphant faith in God, the Father, and Jesus Christ as her Saviour, and expressed in her increasing zeal for the church. Her dying declaration, "I love everybody," was indeed in keeping with "the two great commandments" of love and service. On her last ride with her noble doctor son, in whom she had utmost confidence, she said to him, "The last three years have been the happiest years of my life." A guess would not miss the reason, that she had seen her prayers come true in the ripening faith of her attentive son and daughter in Christ as a personal Saviour and in the church as Christ's holy institution through which they are rendering service. To her beloved husband in the years of grief and needed comfort and lavished love; to her loving son, Dr. B. R. Clark; to her idealizing daughter, Mrs. Lucian Farris; to her kind brother, Mr. Young Abbott; to her son, W. Percy Cobb, and to her grandchildren, Burnell and Rae Farris, her constant companion and care from babyhood, may the love of God and the peace of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ and the comfort of the Holy Ghost rest upon each of you and remain with you. Mother Clark has joined two children who went before her, and is singing the song of the redeemed and awaiting with an anxious spirit that the family chain shall not be broken.

Her pastor,

E. D. SIMPSON.

MRS. C. C. HAMMETT was born in Mississippi, March 8, 1846, and died in Natchitoches, La., Jan. 26, 1927. She was a daughter of Rev. J. Jones, a Presbyterian minister. On Nov. 9, 1869, she was married to E. E. Hammett, who died in 1904. She leaves five children: Eugene Hammett, and Misses Lucy and Mae Hammett, of Natchitoches; A. G. Hammett, of Shreveport, and Mrs. E. P. Brown, of San Antonio, Tex. Twenty-five grandchildren and twelve great-grandchildren survive her. She was laid to rest in the family cemetery at Davis Springs church. Services were conducted by Rev. J. Richardson, Presbyterian minister of Natchitoches, and Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Methodist minister, of Campti. She was confined to her room and bed for a week before the end came. She was always cheerful, and enjoyed so much to have her friends and kind people to visit her. She died in the faith. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was a faithful one. She read the Advocate for many years. Our homes are made sad when our mothers leave us; but a blessed thought—we can live to go to them in that sweet home where there will be no sad good-by.

A lifelong friend and brother-in-law,

H. C. MURPHY.

MRS. MARION B. BRITTEN was born Aug. 16, 1833, and died Feb. 9, 1927. She was married, March 3, 1858, to Wm. E. Britten. To this union were born ten children. Four of them, Mrs. A. H. Stalling, Mrs. D. A. Meeks, W. F. Britten, and D. J. Britten; thirty-three grandchildren and thirty-two great-grandchildren are left to mourn her going away. She joined the Presbyterian church in her girlhood days in Wayne County, Miss., where she was reared, but joined the Methodist church later. She was a faithful and devoted member of De Soto Methodist church. She loved her church, and it was a great pleasure to her to attend the services; but for several years she had not been able to go to church. The church and community have lost a good woman, and her children a devoted mother, but our loss is her gain. The writer, assisted by Rev. W. J. Dawson, conducted the funeral services, and her body was tenderly laid to rest in the family cemetery in the presence of a large congregation of sorrowing friends and loved ones. When we look on her vacant chair, we should humbly submit to God's holy will, for her death on earth is her birthday in heaven. While she is lost to our material vision, we shall ever feel her spiritual presence and look forward to a day of happy reunion.

Woman's Missionary Society

ZONE MEETING AT CAMPTI, LA.

The first zone meeting this year for zone No. 3, Minden Ditsrict, was held at Campti, March 25, Mrs. J. B. Fulton, zone president, presiding.

The devotional services were conducted by Rev. J. B Williams, pastor at Coushatta. Address of welcome by resident pastor, P. O. Lowrey.

The following Societies were represented: Colfax, Coushatta, Hall Summitt, Montrose, Davis Springs, and Campti. There were fifty ladies and five preachers present.

After a short business session and round table discussion, a very interesting and helpful program was rendered.

A plate lunch was served the visitors at Lake Hotel.

The meeting adjourned to meet at Colfax some time near the middle of June, day to be set later.

MRS. A. H. MITCHELL,
Secretary.

FEBRUARY MEETING OF THE SOCIETY AT BATON ROUGE.

A fine program was given by members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church of Baton Rouge.

The Society is doing splendid work and gives a program of like nature each month of the year, at the church, open to all denominations, which are well attended and are always a marked success.

MRS. NORIS HONORED AT MEETING OF SOCIETY, BERNICE, LA.

The Woman's Missionary Society of Bernice Methodist church, met at Mrs. Sam Bailey's, Monday, April 11, 1927. Eleven members and one visitor were present.

A splendid program was rendered, and refreshments served in honor of Mrs. Joe Noris, who, we regret to know, is leaving us. A lovely gift from the Society was presented to Mrs. Noris by Mrs. D. W. Caldwell, in appreciation of her faithful and efficient service to our Society, first as president, then as superintendent of our Bible and Mission study.

Mrs. Noris leaves many warm friends. Her going is a great loss to our Society. Mrs. Noris has rendered a service which can scarcely be equaled.

The meeting was a success, and greatly enjoyed by all.

COLUMBUS, MISS., WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

We of the Woman's Missionary Society of First Church, Columbus, Miss., have closed the first quarter of our year's work with a good report—all dues paid in full up to date and an average attendance of 75 per cent of membership.

Our new president, Mrs. R. A. Tucker, our pastor's wife, reorganized our auxiliary according to the new regulations, and we are doing splendid work in all departments. Our adult department is organized into six Circles, one being the Business Woman's Circle. We support a Bible woman in Brazil, give to a leper fund, and have the care of a young girl in the Methodist Orphanage in Jackson, Miss.

The Intermediate department, and also the Juniors, are doing good work, the latter being the most wide-awake department in our auxiliary.

We are well on our way for this second quarter, and every member is full of enthusiasm.

MRS. N. R. DRAKE,
Superintendent of Publicity.

NEWS FROM CENTENARY CHURCH, McCOMB, MISS.

At our monthly business meeting on the first Monday in April some very splendid and encouraging reports were given, showing that the work is going forward under the direction and very capable leadership of our new local president, Mrs. C. A. Butterworth.

Such a fine financial report was turned in by the treasurer, Mrs. W. W. Robertson, who stated that during her several terms of administration she had never had the pleasure of making, at the close of the first quarter's work, such an encouraging report before.

We have just sent a box to the orphan, little Robert Thompson, who is being supported by this auxiliary, which contained a most generous and complete outfit for the little fellow's needs.

There is at this particular time a city-wide campaign, of the most intensive nature, being launched for the purpose of enlisting new members, as Centenary has for her goal the enlistment of every Methodist woman in this very important work.

Our Missionary Voice representative, too, has on a campaign for new subscribers. She has appointed subworkers to represent the cause in each of the various Circles, and the plan is working most effectively.

Centenary feels proud of the splendid honor that has again been ours in having one from our ranks, Mrs. L. W. Alford, unanimously elected as conference president for the second term.

Mrs. Alford has given the Mississippi missionary cause a service that will mean much to Southern Methodism throughout the coming years.

Utica, Miss.—"I wish to express my thanks for the benefits which I received from the use of Dr. Pierce's medicines and kind advice of his Specialists.

"I was weak and nervous and felt tired all the time. I felt as though I was almost an invalid. I wrote Dr. Pierce for advice. He advised me to take the 'Favorite Prescription,' 'Golden Medical Discovery,' 'Pleasant Pellets' and also to use the 'Lotion Tablets,' which I did, according to directions. After taking a few bottles I began to improve in strength and weight. I am now the proud mother of a ten weeks' old daughter which I desired so much. I have three little sons. I am recommending Dr. Pierce's remedies to others."—Mrs. Mary Ella Young.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Sunday School Day offering should be sent to Rev. H. P. Lewis, Ruleville, Miss., not to Rev. J. E. Stephens, nor to myself. We are glad to forward any amount when it is sent to us, but it saves expense to send it to the trseaurer of the Board. Send any amount you have, also remit your Sunday School Missionary offering each month. It might get lost, besides the treasurer must pay bills monthly and not quarterly.

Our school at Ruleville closed out in fine shape after we heard the news that the levee had given away. No more loyal, braver people exist than our people in the Delta. My heart goes out to them and up to the kind Heavenly Father in their behalf. May they realize that all things work together for good to them that love God.

Miss Virginia Thomas held a very successful District Elementary Institute at Coldwater the 26th. Four preachers, one superintendent, and fifteen teachers were present, and a number of interested people from Coldwater. Miss Thomas discussed with skill and force the place the home occupies in the field of religious education, also gave help on problems that teachers have in dealing with children. Rev. T. M. Bradley, presiding elder of Sardis District, is always eager to have help from Conference force of Sunday school workers.

From the 2nd to the 7th of May our team will be together for the first time in a school at Iuka. Rev. E. H. Cunningham, presiding elder; Rev. G. C. Swartz, and Rev. E. P. Craddock have been busy advertising and soliciting for this school. If the people fail to attend it will be because they do not know what is in store for them.

May 9-14 we are to be at Aberdeen. The following is our schedule: "Pupil Study," Miss Virginia Thomas, instructor; "Bible" (New Teetament), Rev. R. G. Moore, instructor; "Principles of Teaching," Mrs. W. N. Duncan, instructor; "Intermediate-Senior Department Administration," Miss Helen E. Swisher, instructor. The school will begin class work Monday, at 2:30 p. m., and close Saturday at noon. Rev. R. G. Moore is Educational Director of this school.

The folder, announcing the Conference school to be held at Grenada, June 6-11, will be sent out in a few days. If pastors, superintendents, or other interested persons will send me a list of the people they want to attend this school I shall mail them the announcement that they may know what is in store for them. Do not be afraid to send the list of names; it may do some good.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Sunday, April 24, closed interesting attendance contests between Winnfield and Arcadia, and Barham and Hornbeck. The Men's Bible class at Winnfield had an attendance on last Sunday of 533, with a total attendance in the school of 844. Arcadia reports 406 in the Men's Bible class, with a total Sunday school attenadnce of 628. Congressman James A. Aswell taught the men's class at Winnfield, while Dean R. E. Smith taught the Arcadia class. The records at Hornbeck and Barham were as follows: Hornbeck 1,236, Barham 607.

The writer had the pleasure of teaching the Emma Owen Bible class at Alexandria on last Sunday. This is one of the outstanding classes in the State, and extremely active, with monthly business and social meetings. The president of the class at this time is Mrs. J. E. Potts, with Mrs. F. D. LeSeueur as teacher.

The office has received a letter from Mr. T. M. Sayman, the newly elected president of the Bible Class Federation, who writes from out in his territory that he is making plans to put on a building program in the Federation.

The flood situation over the State is proving serious, and many of our pastors and presiding elders write of conditions in their sections. Dr. N. E. Joyner writes that he has found it necessary to call off his district conference in the Monroe District because of the conditions there. Rev. B. C. Taylor, of Louisiana Avenue, New Orleans, writes of the seriousness of the New Orleans situation.

We were in Rochelle again on Sunday afternoon in the interest of the Standard Training School. One of the courses in this school will be open to any one in the State, as it is a Conference-wide course to be taught by Mr. Clem Baker, of Little Rock Conference. The Entertainment Committee at Rochelle will be glad to arrange for the entertainment of any who will take the course, and it is hoped that a number of our workers throughout the State will take advantage of this fine opportunity. Mrs. S. M. Ables, of Rochelle, is chairman of the committee on entertainment.

Rev. K. W. Dodson, of the Minden District, has announced two Sunday school rallies, one at Colfax and the other at Pine Grove, in the suburbs of Minden.

* * *

Mrs. W. W. Holmes, State Superintendent of the Elementary Work, has sent us a copy of her program for the Elementary Conference of the Shreveport District called for April 29. The program is complete in every department, with some of the finest of the leaders of that district taking part on the program.

I have before me the report of training work at the recent meeting of the General Board at Nashville. Louisiana Conference is reported with a total number of credits aggregating 1,425; Mississippi Conference, 948; North Mississippi Conference, 965; Little Rock Conference, 1,338; Texas Conference, 1,352.

On Tuesday, April 26, I left Alexandria in company with Dr. Briscoe Carter, our destination being Abbeville, with the district conference of the Lake Charles District as our objective. We reached Abbeville by way of Lafayette and New Iberia in time for the opening session. Dr. J. F. Foster was elected secretary. We listened with interest to the reports of the pastors. The Abbeville pastor, Brother Roy, has just closed a gracious revival meeting, with forty-four additions to the church, thirty-three of whom were received on profession of faith. Two pastors, Foster and Ledbetter, reported large attendance at prayer meeting. Brother Ledbetter has set aside June as "Church month." Jordan, of Crowley, reported good results from his recent revival. He told of the good work of his Parent-Teacher Association in his congregation. Wilson, of Lake Arthur, said he has the best Epworth League in his experience. Harrell, of Many, is the only one who reported "overpaid." Parker, of Leesville, reported a great interest on the part of his laymen. Dr. Wynn, of Lake Charles, was absent, attending a meeting of the General Board of Education. His report showed sixty-four additions, thirty-three through the Sunday school. His new church will cost, according to the estimate of the architect, $130,000, without furnishings. His report showed a subscription of $75,000 at present. Hoffpauir, of Lafayette, and Bernard, of Rayne, were the preachers for the meeting, and gave us some fine messages. Perry, of Sulphur, reported his Sunday school at "high-water" mark.

All the delegates were delighted at the fine hospitality enjoyed, and with their visit to this beautiful and historic little city near the gulf. The writer enjoyed the charming hospitality in the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. McPherson. Brother McPherson is a native of South Carolina, while the writer hails from Georgia, and we had a fine visit together.

We are in receipt of a splendid detailed report of the attendance records for the New Orleans District for Easter Sunday, showing a total attendance for First Church, 373; Carrollton Avenue, 307; Algiers, 205; Rayne Memorial, 154; Parker Memorial, 151; Second Church, 146; Morgan City, 135; St. Mark's, 130; Houma, 115; Epworth, 113, these being the first ten schools. Brother Carter tells us that Epworth was in the flooded area, and many of the other schools were affected by the flood conditions.

C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent

USING THE FOURTH SUNDAY PROGRAMS.

Are the programs provided for the fourth Sunday in each month being used in your school? If so, is the interest in our European work increased thereby? Are your programs planned and provided for ahead of the time for presenting them, or hastily given without real preparation? The answers to these questions probably mark the difference between intelligent, growing interest in our three European Missions with generous offerings for their needs, and indifference, or even boredom, toward that work, and consequently scanty offerings. One of our Conference superintendents recently secured illuminating reports on several Sunday schools in his Conference as to the use of the program for the fourth Sunday. In one school in a small town, with separate Beginner, Primary, and Junior departments, the whole school met for the Missionary Program, which was carried out by having some one in the back of the assembly rise and read the story of "Little White Russia."

In another, where the school had departmental class work, all the departments reassembled for the program, which consisted of the story of "Little White Russia" told by one person, with a song and a special collection for missions following.

In a third, a large city school having departmental work, the superintendent of the Senior department casually mentioned that it was Missionary Sunday. There was no program and no emphsasis on the offering, although all of it was devoted to missions. Perhaps these schools, and others, saw some difficulties in the way of carrying out a special missionary program on every fourth Sunday, which a few suggestions as to their use and preparaton may remove:

1. If your school has not received the map showing our European mission fields, which is sent free to all schools devoting their fourth Sunday offerings to the European work, send for it; send also 20 cents for the set of twenty-eight pictures on our European Missions with a booklet of interesting information. For both the map and the pictures, address the Department of Missionary Education, 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

2. Plan the program at the beginning of the month. Appoint a particular person or committee to do that planning.

3. Read carefully the program appropriate to your school or department. Decide what changes may have to be made; for instance, as to songs or offering service.

4. Appoint the persons to take the different parts of the service early in the month; get their agreement to be ready and provide each with an outline of the program and the material for his own part. If it is a map talk, see that he has the map mentioned above to study.

5. Place on your bulletin board each Sunday before the fourth some item of interest about the field to be considered in the program. You can get these from the bulletin, Europe, and from the booklet accompanying the pictures. Use appropriate pictures from the set on the bulletin board, different each Sunday. Get your Junior Department to keep a scrapbook of clippings and pictures gleaned from magazines, etc., on Belgium, Czechoslovakia, and Poland. If you have no bulletin board, get some one to make posters.

6. On the third Sunday make some mention of the fact that the offering next Sunday will be devoted to missions, and urge that it be truly a specail givinig.

7. Adapt the programs to your own group. They are intended to be suggestive, not absolute.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NOTES.

Golden Cross Enrollment.

We have had much to say in this column about the Golden Cross Enrollment, but as the time draws near for this drive we feel that we should remind our readers again. Christ's ministry consisted not only of teaching and preaching, but also of healing. So, with Christ, the Eminent Healer, as our example, we should go forward in this great work for the promotion of our Methodist hospitals. We cannot as Leaguers be "All for Christ" if we neglect this phase of Christian work. This drive is scheduled from May 8 to 15, and during this week the League presidents should endeavor to get every member of the chapter enrolled. A dollar will buy an adult membership, and we ought by all means to enroll.

The Epworth League Calendar.

In looking over the League Calendar, we note that the month that is just closing is the month for the election of officers. We have no doubt that the election of officers was held, but we wonder how many chapters have reported to "Headquarters" the names of the new officers. As yet we have not been apprised of any election except in our League. Now, Leaguers, the Central officers have no means of knowing whether you have a chapter organized unless you report it to the District Secretary. The District Secretary has no means of knowing who your officers are unless you inform him. So, let us admonish you to be careful about this "little thing."

"Revival Gems Number Two" contains many old favorites, commonly known as the "Moody and Sankey hymns." Only ten cents per copy. Fully orchestrated for 14 instruments. See ad on page 10 of this issue.

League Quartet Visits Bay St. Louis Church.

Recently a male quartet has been formed in the Picayune Senior League. This quartet has rendered efficient service in the preaching service by giving a number at each service. Last Sunday morning the pastor preached on "The Winsomeness of the Lily," and the quartet sang. On Sunday evening they motored to the Methodist church at Bay St. Louis and gave this number at the evening service. The Picayune Senior League is indeed proud of these four boys: D. C. Camp, Harley Goodwin, John Grice and Billy Stevens.

REPORT OF CHAS. ASSAF FOR MARCH AND APRIL, 1927.

Seashore District.

March 5 to 21: With Rev. H. L. Daniels, Biloxi, Miss. We had a good meeting; during the meeting, 33 people joined the church, 23 of them by profession of faith; 4 infants baptized and several people at the altar for prayer and reconsecration; 102 visits made, with services and prayer in each home in Back Bay Epworth Church.

Newton District.

March 26 and 27: With Rev. R. M. Gibson, Trenton, Miss. I preached three times. During the services we had altar prayer for reconsecrated life for the Lord and his church work. Several people at the altar for prayer. Sunday school to be organized at Indepedence church community.

Jackson District.

March 31: While I was in the city of Jackson I went to visit the sick in the hospital. The Lord led me to a room where we found a woman. I talked with her and prayed. After the question and prayer, she surrendered and gave her life to the Lord, and requested to be baptized. I called Rev. T. M. Brownlee, and we received her into Capitol Street Church. On the next day I asked the Lord for help, and I went to the hospital to see the woman and give her the Bible which I promised to her. I found Mr. Brown, the husband of the woman, with her in the room. Then his wife and I prayed, and he requested to be baptized and to be received with his wife into the church, and we did as he requested. It would have done any one good to see the man and his wife clap their hands and kiss each other and thank the Lord for the new life and his blessing. After that I asked them to pray with me for their three little children, and they did, and Mr. Brown and his wife went back to their home, and Brother Brownlee sent their church membership to their home.

Seashore District.

April 2 to 18: With Rev. H. L. Daniels, Biloxi, Miss. We had a good meeting. During the meeting 31 people joined the church, 27 of them by profession of faith; 4 infants baptized; several people at the altar for prayer and reconsecration; 57 visits made, with services and prayer. Brother Daniels and I went to visit in a home where the husband had been a drunkard for many years, and been drunk for over two weeks, not being able to go to his work. When we had a talk with him, he accepted the Lord, and he and his wife came to the services and joined the church. It would have done any one good to hear the man's prayer and testimony in the church, what the Lord had done for him and his home. We had a good revival in Wesley Memorial Church.

Hattiesburg District.

April 21 to 23: With Rev. J. A. Smith, Hattiesburg, Miss., visiting all those needing the Lord, and the sick at their homes; also we visited the Syrians in their homes. While we were visiting, we heard of a Syrian man dead in Picayune, Miss. Brother Smith very kindly released me for the services on Sunday. Before leaving, I preached for Brother J. W. Thompson, at Broad Street Church, Saturday, at 7:45 p. m., and I left for Picayune after the service. During the service we had altar prayer, and several people came to the altar for prayer in Broad Street.

Seashore District.

April 24: With Rev. H. A. Wood, Picayune, Miss. At 2:30 p. m. we had funeral service for Mr. K. Joseph in the church. He and family and several Syrians are members of our church. The Syrians came to Picayune for the Joseph funeral from eight different towns in Mississippi and Louisiana. I preached the funeral service, and at 7 p. m. I spoke to the Epworth League, and preached at 7:30 p. m. We had a good service. I do appreciate the love the people of Picayune are showing to the Syrians.

Services, 45; joined the church, 64; infants baptized, 8; visiting and prayer, the Lord knows how many!

I ask the brethren and all the Christian people to remember me and my work in their prayers, in the church and home. I am happy in my work for the Lord. If I can be of help to you in your work, I will be glad to come to you. The Lord and I and you will beat the devil and destroy his work. My home address is:

FROM THE WATERFORD CIRCUIT.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed a very successful revival at Waterford. Six souls were added to the church, and the entire membership and community have taken on new zeal. Brother John Robertson, of Friars Point, delivered the messages. The attendance was very gratifying, and we have been told by many that this was among the best revivals ever held in Waterford.

We are also purchasing the Presbyterian church here, plans being almost completed.

Brother S. A. Brown, of Okolona, was with us Saturday and Sunday, 23 and 24, holding quarterly conference at Lebanon. At the Sunday morning service Brother Brown had a real "old-time" revival.

Our Epworth Leagues are doing splendid work and our Sunday schools are all running nicely, looking forward to a Sunday school institute a little later.

We are putting forth every effort at present to send material relief to the flood-stricken areas.

We are among a progressive people, and planning much success in the Master's cause.

LESTER M. JAMES, Pastor.

FROM POLLOCK, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: I am glad to report that our church here has a grand opportunity of renewed conditions. Rev. L. L. Lantrip, our most worthy pastor, is taking much interest in the welfare of our church. He was successful in securing the services of the Rev. W. M. Bowden evangelistic troop, consisting of wife, three daughters and one son. They began a revival campaign Sunday, April 24. The beginning was beyond expectation. The large audience reminded me of the old-time camp meetings. We are looking forward to a great revival. May the readers of the Advocate pray for us that we may rejoice in having new developments in our church here, so badly needed.

LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOL AT MOUNT SEQUOYAH.

Louisiana Methodism is more or less acquainted with the nature and purpose of the Leadership Schools conducted annually by the General Sunday School Board at Mount Sequoyah, Arkansas. For several years the General Sunday School Board and the Conference Sunday School Boards have been co-operating in bringing together at Mount Sequoyah the leaders in the Sunday school program in the Annual Conferences and the presiding elders' districts.

When the Cokesbury Training Course was released for service in our church, another important group of leaders emerged—the approved Cokesbury instructor. Whether the Cokesbury Training Course makes a large or small contribution to the life and work of the Sunday school officers and teachers in the small Sunday schools of our church, will be determined more largely by the approved Cokesbury instructors than by any other single group of persons. When we remember that more than three-fourths of the Sunday schools in our church are in what we might call the Cokesbury area, the large influence of these instructors becomes apparent.

The General Sunday School Board feels that a contribution ought to be made in the Leadership Schools to these instructors. With that purpose in mind, plans are being made to offer two courses at Mount Sequoyah this summer especially for these workers.

The first course is: "The Place of the Sunday School in the Rural Community." The purpose of this course will be to aid the approved Cokesbury instructor in acquiring a keen appreciation of the importance of his task.

The second course is: "Teaching in the Cokesbury Training School." The purpose of this course will be to aid the Cokesbury instructor in acquiring knowledge of the best procedure to follow in rendering effective service as an instructor in a Cokesbury Training School. It will be observed that both of these courses are practical in nature and are meant to meet a very definite need.

We are very anxious that a large number from the Louisiana Conference be represented in these two courses. Louisiana has always been foremost in training for Leadership in the Sunday school work of the Conference. The need of the small Sunday school are nearest our heart. We feel sure there are many in our Conference who would enjoy preparing themselves for service in this wonderful field of Leadership Training for the small Sunday school.

The place is Mount Sequoyah, Arkansas. The date, July 19-Aug. 2. For further information write Rev. A. K. McLellan, box 477, Alexandria, or Rev. C. D. Atkinson, 1777 Jackson Street, Alexandria.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON CHRISTIAN LITERATURE,

Adopted at Brookhaven District Conference, April 22.

Mr. President, Brethren and Sisters: We, your Committee on Christian Literature, beg leave to submit the following report: We find the total number of Advocates received weekly in the homes of the Brookhaven District to be 638 New Orleans, and 40 Nashville, twenty charges reporting.

We call attention to, and recommend, the plan operated at Tylertown by which the New Orleans Advocate is placed in every home. Their method is to add $1.25 for this purpose to the assessment of each family of the congregation.

A larger circulation of our periodicals would greatly increase their value from every practical standpoint, material and spiritual. If the going of the New Orleans Advocate into 638 homes of the Brookhaven District blesses those homes and boosts our various causes, then the going of the Advocate into 1,300 or 2,000 homes would be a still greater blessing and a greater boost to every other cause of our church. Any good thing written in it, or any announcement, would have a greater audience, and thus larger value.

Let us give our people to know, that, though the Christian Herald and similar weeklies are good, they are not our own, cannot take the place of our own, and that our own comes first.

We recommend also that our pastors, Sunday school superintendents, lay leaders, and other workers increase their efforts toward the circulation and reading of good books, Science from the Christian viewpoint, Church History, books on Missionary Heroes, Mission Problems, Social and World questions, books of devotion. Copies of such books of biography as Pinson's Life of Bishop Lambuth and Candler's Life of Bishop Galloway should have large reading. It ought to be made easy for our people to buy these books. The more we buy and read, the cheaper the price can be made, and the nobler we and our people will become.

The Book of Discipline should be largely bought and used.

This is a great cause. It is usually through the preaching of the Word that people are converted; but sometimes conversion comes through the reading of the Word; and certainly the development of our members as a strong people working for the upbuilding of the kingdom would result from the large reading of Christian literature.

Respectfully submitted,

H. G. HAWKINS, Chairman.

SICK HEADACHE

No Pleasure, Says Ohio Lady, to Go Places, Till She Took Black-Draught Which Brought Relief.

Langsville, Ohio.—"For years and years I suffered with severe headache," says Mrs. Jane Campbell, of this place. "It wasn't any pleasure for me to go places, for I came home with sick headache. If I went to church or to any social gathering or to town to shop, when I got back I would have these headaches and have to go to bed for a day or more, till I would just get out of heart and would not try to go.

"About 15 years ago I discovered that Black-Draught was good for these headaches. I began using it. I would take it two or three nights in succession if I felt the least bad, and it sure did wonders for me. It is about 14 years since I had sick headaches, and I can go places and really enjoy life. It surely is splendid."

Headache often is a symptom of constipation. The best relief is secured by treating the cause of the trouble and in such a case many people have been greatly helped by the use of Thedford's Black-Draught.

Constipation! How to Keep Bowels Regular

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated men, women, children, and particularly old folks, had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all headaches, biliousness, indigestion and stomach misery, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

THE WORK OF THE GENERAL SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD AND ITS NEED FOR AID.

By J. W. Shackford, General Secretary, Sunday School Board.

The work of the General Sunday School Board which must be provided for out of the income from the assessment on the church of $191,000 involves the creation, supervision, and promotion of organization standards and programs of work for all types of Sunday schools and all departments and classes in these schools. It likewise involves the training of teachers, officers and leaders for our Sunday school work.

This work is carried on in a number of specialized directions. These include Elementary, Intermediate, Senior, Young People's and Adult work, with the supervision and training of workers in these specialized fields. It embraces a special department to assist the superintendent and other administrative officers of the school, special help to parents, a program of missionary education, a program of week-day and vacation work in connection with the Sunday program, a great department of leadership training, a program of Sunday school extension in the home field and also co-operation with the Board of Missions in Sunday school work in the foreign fields, a program of evangelism in the Sunday schools, and special attention to Sunday school architecture.

The plans for teacher training alone involve the direction of two church-wide leadership schools, supervision of three hundred standard schools, more than a hundred Cokesbury schools, hundreds of Junior or non-standard schools, thousands of local training classes, and correspondence work. It also involves co-operation in sixteen Pastors' Schools, co-operation with all our colleges in their work in religious education. Through these and many other ways the General Sunday School Board is seeking to awaken general interest throughout the church in Christian instruction and training of children, youth, and adults and to make the Sunday school more effective as an agency of evangelism and in the development of Christian life.

The demand for help from the General Sunday School Board in training schools of all types and in practically all its departments of work far outruns the ability of the Board to respond. Some of the most important aspects of its work cannot be pushed vigorously for lack of funds, and yet the work of this board is dealing with the very foundations of the church and of the kingdom. The opportunity for expanding the work of Christian instruction and training was never greater than to-day, and the board can not possibly respond to the expectations of the church for service unless the resources necessary to this end are made available.

SAD BUT REMEDIAL FACTS.

Brethren: Dr. Shackford writes: "An examination of the Annual Conference journals shows a distressing decline in the rate of membership increase in most of the Conferences. We will all admit that there is a vital relationship between the growth of the Sunday school membership and the growth of the church membership. In the years that are gone, a very large proportion of those coming into the church on profession of faith have come through the Sunday school. If, then, the Sunday school membership fails to grow as it should, it is obvious that there will follow a serious falling off in the growth of church membership. This is just what has happened. Last year we suffered a decrease in Sunday school enrollment. Naturally the church membership decreases. This pitiful fact is a reflection on our leadership as pastors and Sunday school superintendents. What is the remedy—what can be done? How can we increase the membership of our Methodist Sunday schools?

Remedy.

Let the pastors and superintendents read carefully both the pamphlet and poster recently sent out by the General Sunday School Board and follow as near as possible the fifteen steps suggested. Post in a conspicuous place the poster, "The Ten-to-Win-One Membership Campaign." Call a Workers' Council, explain the dire situation and commit it to the campaign. It is a challenge that no live, intelligent Workers' Council will ignore. Work intelligently during the months of April, May and June for an increased Sunday school enrollment.

THE ALL-SUFFICIENCY OF LOVE.

"Love is the fulfilling of the law." They say there are thirty thousand promises in the Book. I suppose there are nearly as many commands and precepts. Perhaps you are tempted to say: "Then I can never keep God's law and live in his will. If God would only have some simple rule of the Christian life that would fulfill everything!" Well, God has. "Love is the fulfilling of the law." If you love a man you will not steal from him; you will not murder him; you will not covet his goods; you will not bear false witness against him; if you love a man you are fulfilling—you are filling full the law. Some of you are husbands and fathers. If the legislature should pass a hundred statutes concerning the care of your wives and children, you men would not only do all the legislators enact, but you would do a thousand things they never would think of putting on the statute books. Why? Because you love your wife and children. You would not only keep the law, but you would fill full the law to overflowing. Now, that is God's simple rule of life for you and me. As we come to the twilight of this day, as we sit down in the evening hour to meditate over it, we do not have to think of all the commandments that are in The Book. We simply say to ourselves, "The words that I spoke this day, were they in love? The deeds that I did, were they in love? The letter I wrote, was it in love? All I have done this day, can I lay God's straight edge of love alongside of it?" How simple that makes the Christian life! For the man or woman who lives that simple law of love is fulfilling God's great purpose in this life.—James H. McConkey.

One of my minor pleasures just now is working on a committee which is compiling the music for a new hymn book, and a guiding rule for me in the case of any tune is—Will this make people sing? Not, "Can it be sung?" but "Must it be sung?"—Dr. T. R. Glover.

DO YOU KNOW AS MUCH AS YOUR CAT?

She's a knowing cat.

She asks for little—just her meals, a saucer of milk and a place in the sun. She gets plenty of sleep and exercise. She never worries, never frets. What is the result? Such vitality and resistance that we say, "Cats have nine lives."

What does your cat do when she is not well? She eats catnip, if she can find it. She eats grass and certain green plants to which her instinct leads her.

Your cat takes herbs for a tonic.

Did you ever stop to think that Old Mother Nature, who supplies the herbs necessary to your cat's health, has also provided the herbs necessary to your own well-being?

You don't have to hunt for them as the cat does. The herbs you need are skilfully blended in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, an old-fashioned tonic that will help to restore your energy.

Feels Better Now

Mrs. Gust Green of 401 Lincoln Park Boulevard, Rockford, Illinois, writes: "I was weak and run down but the Vegetable Compound has helped me and I feel better now. I recommend it to all women who need more strength."

For more than a half a century this medicine has been taken by women with very satisfactory results.

If it has helped others, why shouldn't it help you?

REVIVAL AT RICHTON, MISS.

Dear Mr. Editor: On April 20 we closed a very successful revival meeting at Richton, Miss., conducted by Rev. J. O. Hanes, of Birmingham, Ala., one of our general evangelists, whose earnest and persuasive preaching made a profound impression upon all who heard him. Brother Hanes is a man of winsome personality and deep piety, and greatly endeared himself to our people. Brother J. B. Stalnaker rendered efficient service as choir director. The meeting was held at the Gipsy Smith tabernacle, and large crowds were in attendance at most of the services. There were many conversion and scores of reconsecrations, and a large number of people pledged themselves to hold family prayer.

On last Sunday, the 24th inst., I received a class of twenty-four into the church as one of the results of the meeting—twenty-two by vows and baptism, and two by letter. Of these, twelve were adults, and twelve were children and young people. Six other persons applied for membership in the Baptist church. Seven young people were received into the church on profession of faith previous to the meeting, making a total received on profession of faith to date of twenty-nine.

Our church at Ovett has made the enviable record this year of paying the pastor and presiding elder a month in advance.

We are serving a loyal and appreciative people, to whom we are deeply grateful for many kindnesses.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE OVERFLOW AND FAITH IN GOD.

The present disastrous overflow will doubtless be a severe test of the faith of many who have suffered as a result of it. This suffering, both physical and mental, is beyond estimate. Many people have lost their lives; thousands have endured the distressing hardships of cold, hunger, and long exposure; thousands more have toiled to the limit of their strength to protect themselves, their loved ones, their neighbors and friends, and their possessions from the ravages of the flood. And at last, after having done all they could and suffered to the limit of physical endurance, they have seen the accumulation of a lifetime swept away and complete financial ruin staring them in the face. They have suffered already beyond measure, and they will continue to suffer.

We know a man who, for many years, has been a faithful, devout, consistent Christian, loving his fellow-men, serving his church faithfully in important official capacities, walking humbly with God, who has seen all the work of his hands come to naught and whose plans for the future, made in faith and prayer, are, as far as he can see, completely wrecked. And there are thousands more like him. They will almost inevitably ask, "Why should it be so?"

There are others who have never taken God into their thoughts who have suffered the same losses. As they have never served God in the past, so now they will say: "How is it better with the Christian than with us? Why should we love and serve a God who brings or permits to be brought upon his people such suffering?" And their lips will speak scorn.

Not bold enough to undertake to interpret the ways of Providence, nevertheless, having ourselves suffered disastrously as a result of the overflow, we reverently venture to suggest two thoughts that come to us as we contemplate the ruin that has been wrought. The first thought is that the supreme tragedy of this dark hour would be for us to curse God. We may reverently say that his knowledge is too wonderful for us, and his ways past finding out, but we will not, for that reason, turn away from him or despise his name. Rather, we will acknowledge his power and majesty and bow humbly before him, acknowledging our misdoings and repenting of our sins, remembering that this "terrible" God is our God. The flood will have served one great purpose if it reminds us of the majesty and power of God and warns us of the error of our way.

The second thought is that the promises of God stand sure. He will not desert his people. He will reward the faith of those who put their trust in him. We cannot see ahead; but the times are in his hands and he will take care of us. He moves in a mysterious way to perform his wonders—but he performs them, and it is possible for him to bring to us out of this terrible misfortune—though we cannot see how he can do it—blessings greater than any we have ever had in the past.

In one word the lesson is, Be warned, be comforted.

A METHODIST SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The work of the church goes forward largely in proportion to the extent and efficiency of its Sunday school work. A study of the sources from which the large number of additions to the membership of the church came during the recent Easter revivals shows that a very large per cent of them came through the Sunday school. It is perfectly natural and normal that it should be so, and all who are concerned for the steady growth of the church will faithfully continue their efforts to advance the work of the Sunday school.

A Methodist Sunday school is, by the very nature of the case, an agent of the Methodist church. It is not simply a religious organization having as its end the promotion of religious education; it is a religious organization having as its end the promotion of religious education according to the Methodist interpretation of the great fundamentals of Christianity. It should, therefore, conform in its organization and in all its activities to the Methodist plan and program. It should use Methodist literature and adhere to Methodist usage. It is not good Methodist practice to use non-standard literature, for example, just because "it is cheaper." It may be good in a way, but it is necessarily lacking in some of the essentials of denominational standards; and the lower price is possible only because of the sacrifice of highly desirable qualities. With apologies to one of the great oil companies, we urge all our Sunday school officials to "stick to the standard" literature and program of the church.

SOME HOSPITAL FACTS.

The General Hospital Board of the church has recently called attention to the following facts in connection with our hospital work: There are now eight hospitals operated by the church, as follows: Wesley Memorial, Atlanta, Ga., built by Mr. Asa G. Candler, Sr., and his children; Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, Mo., built by the late Mr. Robert Barnes; Methodist Hospital, Memphis, Tenn.; Methodist Hospital, Hattiesburg, Miss.; Methodist Hospital, Houston, Tex.; Memorial Hospital, Montgomery, Ala.; Good Samaritan Hospital, Lexington, Ky.; Southern Methodist Hospital and Sanatorium, Tucson, Ariz.

Two other hospitals are approaching completion—Dallas Sanitarium, Dallas, Tex., and Fort Worth Methodist Hospital, Fort Worth, Tex.

The total value of these properties is nearly $7,000,000. These hospitals now have in use 1,000 beds, they treat 23,000 patients a year, and their gross income is $1,500,000. There are eight nurse training schools in connection with the hospitals, with 450 young women as students.

Our church is now prepared to receive tubercular patients at its hospital in Tucson, Ariz.

Those who enlist in the Golden Cross enrollment have a part in this great hospitalization work of the church.

THE RED CROSS FUNCTIONS.

The Red Cross is a great organization. Founded to administer relief in times of great need, it has made a notable record of efficiency on every occasion when its services were enlisted. It has maintained that record in the present disastrous situation arising from the overflow. Coming promptly to the rescue, it threw all its resources into the breach, sent its trained workers into the devastated area, made a national appeal for funds, and is now taking care of many thousands who otherwise would be helpless and hopeless. The Red Cross is intended to be a minister of mercy in time of need—and it is functioning beautifully.

EDUCATION AND TEMPERANCE.

The Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association, at its recent annual meeting in Dallas, Tex., unanimously adopted the following recommendation: "We recommend and urge that a worthwhile health program be carried on throughout the country, emphasizing in particular personal hygiene and the evil effects of narcotics and alcoholic beverages."

It is well known that for more than a generation the public schools of a large part of the United States have taught the facts as to the effects of alcoholic liquors; and it is doubtless true that this teaching had its part in the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment. This recommendation indicates that the superintendents of schools recognize the value of such teaching and are concerned that it shall be continued. Along with this teaching there should be—and the superintendents make mention of this very thing—in all our schools the inculcation of respect for law and order as the outstanding characteristic of loyal citizenship.

If all our citizens were loyal to the law of the land, bootleggers would have to go out of business for lack of customers. Booze drinkers who patronize bootleggers are charter members of the disloyalty legion.

"SKETCH OF THE BOOK OF JOB."

By Rev. A. Y. Brown.

Some scholars have interpreted the name "Job" to mean "he who turns," and others that it means "object of enmity." But it seems to be very doubtful that the writer of the book attached any importance to the name given to the chief character. In the Hebrew it is said, again, to mean "the one afflicted." Possibly the name came to have this meaning after Job had lived, for certainly at the time of his birth, when his name was given to him, his father and mother did not know that he was to be so afflicted, and we have no evidence that such a prophecy was ever made.

It is a mooted question as to whether or not such a man as Job ever lived. I believe he is an actual character of history, for the book opens by saying, "There was a man," and the Prophet Ezekiel names Job along with Noah and Daniel, whom we know to be actual characters of history. I hardly see how a man could have had such a fertile imagination as to plan the whole story and the course of the debate. Certainly it portrays many feelings and thoughts of every man's life, and it seems likely that such a man lived who furnished an experience which proved to be a basis, at least, for the story.

In regard to the author of the book we again have to confess that we do not know who he was. Some claim that Moses wrote it in Midian and gave it to his suffering people in Egypt for their comfort. But a closer examination of the text by scholars indicates that the author of Job did not write the Pentateuch. Various scholars have placed the time of the writing down to the captivity. The indications are that it is a very old book, possibly the oldest literature of the Bible. It seems to have been written by a man well acquainted with Arab modes of life. Certainly the claim that the ethics of the book are high does not make a reasonable claim that the book was a late production. All the high standards of the world were not late in arriving. The value of the book is not in the least impaired by our not knowing who wrote it or when it was written.

The book has a prologue and an epilogue, both written in prose, while the main body of the book, except the short sentences introducing the speakers, is written in poetry. The body of the book constitutes a debate. Beginning with Job's curse of the day he was born, and the answer of his three friends, the debate goes through three cycles, except that Zophar fails to speak in the third cycle. Jehovah speaks once in a whirlwind and is answered by Job. Elihu speaks once, and is a character in the book that has called forth much discussion. The book is dramatic in tendency, though it cannot properly be said to be a drama.

The book certainly teaches Monotheism. It pictures one God supreme, and his ability is not questioned. The author indicates that the power and majesty of God are manifested in the works of nature and of history. The description of God is made more vivid in order to convince man, in order to convince Job particularly, of his insignificance before the God of the universe. God's greatness is shown in the reference to his crushing his foes, and references to Babylonian stories of the overthrow of the monster Leviathan by Yahweh. Then the greatness of God is shown in the creation and control of the universe. His control over the elements indicates further his greatness. The friends of Job ridicule him that he should ever for a moment think himself innocent in the face of such punishment which he is suffering and which, they say, always comes for sin, from God who is of such majesty as has been pointed out.

Scholars are almost unanimous in the opinion that the book has received some additions since it came from the hands of the original author. Some believe the entire speech of Elihu to be a later addition by a different author. It seems to me that the speeches of Elihu contain practically the same substance as those of the three friends. He enforces their arguments, and his being introduced differently only serves to break the monotony and yet enforce the argument against Job. Some hold that Elihu's place in the poem is to show Job the slumbering sin of spiritual pride that lay dormant in his heart.

One view of the speeches of Elihu that seems in some degree probable is that the author had written the book and was not satisfied with it. He probably thought the speeches of Bildad, Eliphaz and Zophar needed strengthening, and he was also dissatisfied with the speeches of Job, feeling that his language about God was very close to blasphemy. So he added Elihu's, partly to protest against Job's tone, and partly to show more fully the goodness of God and the discipline or testing of suffering.

The speeches of Yahweh have been accepted by almost all scholars as properly belonging to the book. While there may seem to be a lacking in the speeches of Yahweh, since Job's sufferings are not explained, yet an explanation in these speeches of Yahweh is not needed for the purpose of the book. The explanation does not come in words.

The problem of the book is presented in the story itself. Why should the innocent, the righteous, suffer? If they do suffer, what course should they pursue? Job is a very rich man and contented in the land of Uz, which we cannot locate exactly. He had many cattle and sheep and had ten children, seven sons and three daughters, which were a delight to him. With all of these possessions Job was a just and upright man, and loved righteousness. He made regular sacrifices unto God for any sin which he might have committed unknowingly, or that his children might have committed. He seems to have been a good man indeed, and we cannot find his equal to-day. The thought uppermost in Job's mind seems to have been to obey God.

Now it came to pass that Satan came before the Lord and charged Job with serving the Lord for gain. Then Jehovah gave Satan power to tempt Job. He was to afflict him, but was not to put his hand upon Job himself. So while the sons and daughters of Job were feasting and the oxen were plowing in the field, the Sabeans fell upon the oxen and carried them away, and slew the servants so that only one was left to tell Job about it. While he was yet speaking another came and told his master that the fire from heaven had fallen upon the sheep and consumed them and had destroyed the servants, so that he alone was escaped to tell about it. And then still another servant came and reported that the Chaldeans had made three bands and had fallen upon the camels and carried them away and had slain the servants, so that one alone had escaped to tell about it. At last the servant with the worst news came, and reported that a great wind from the wilderness had smitten the four corners of the house where the children of Job were making merry, and had killed them all.

But on receipt of all this disastrous news Job only mourned and said that he brought nothing into this world and it was certain he could carry nothing out of it; the Lord had given and the Lord had taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord. In all of his sorrow Job sinned not nor charged God foolishly.

Again Satan appeared before Jehovah and urged that Job had not sinned because he was grateful because he was spared himself. Then it was that God gave him permission to afflict Job himself, only he was to spare his life. So Satan smote Job with boils from the crown of his head to the soles of his feet. It is likely that the disease he had was Elephantiasis. But in all this Job did not sin as Satan had predicted, and it is in such a situation that we find him when the debate begins. The problem of the book is: Why should Job, a righteous man, suffer? The friends represent the theologians of the day, and they try to show Job that his suffering is the result of his own sin, and they urge him to repent. But this does not square with Job's experience.

The problem then is: Why should the righteous suffer? The idea in that day was that good health, plenty of material possessions and old age were the rewards of the righteous man, and one who was denied these things was denied them because he had sinned and had not merited them. The friends of Job quoted the law of the land, the creed of the cult, which we might say was their Bible, and tried to show Job that this book convicted him of having sinned because he had received the very punishments which the creed said would be meted out to those who committed certain sins. They urged that the only remedy was for Job to repent and turn again into the paths of righteousness. Job, also, had believed in the creed of the cult. He believed that the wicked received certain punishment here, and doubtless had he come to comfort another one who was suffering as he himself was, he would have quoted to that one the same creed of the cult which his friends quoted to him. But now Job finds that though he has tried to live right, and has made his sacrifices to God regularly, and has been to the best of his ability a good man, still he is suffering. There is the problem. It is the problem of life, and every man can find his own thoughts and experiences in the thoughts and experiences of Job.

In such an hour we would expect to find Job's wife his best frend and comforter. But instead of being sympathetic with him, and seeking to give him sound advice, she only urges him to "curse God and die." Surely one would feel forsaken and in despair when, troubled for a cause unknown, afflicted in body and mind, the wife of his bosom turns aganst him and urges him to do the thing which would change his grief and affliction into eternal despair and defeat.

The description of Job's grief is intensified by the manner in which his friends approach him. When they were yet afar off, they lifted up their voices and wept, and they rent their robes and sprinkled dust upon their heads. Then they sat down on the ground around Job, and so great was their grief that they dared not speak to him for seven days and seven nights. Surely this indicates to us that Job was indeed sorely afflicted, and was of all men most miserable. No wonder he proclaims in substance, "Woe, woe is me; O that I had not been born." But the more intensified is the suffering and affliction of Job, the greater the lesson of the book. For the problem is worked out in the life of Job. The steadfastness of the character of the man is shown, and the big lesson is that virtue is its own reward.

The characters of the three friends develop as the story progresses. Eliphaz represents the patriarchal chieftain and is probably the oldest of the three because he speaks first. He is grave and dignified. He relies utterly upon the doctrines held by the wise men of the age and set forth in the creed of the cult, and when Job's experience indicates that he has gone contrary to the teachings of the creed, he is practically satisfied that it is Job and not the creed that is at fault. He indicates to Job that since we are not free from sin, it need not call forth wonder on our part that we are liable to calamities, and we must not charge God with being the author of them, but look to ourselves as bringing them upon ourselves. He tells Job that no one ever perished who did right, but that in his long life he has observed that "they that plow iniquity and sow trouble reap the same." Bildad confirms the accusations brought out by Eliphaz. He, too, cites the creed and makes the same arguments as Eliphaz. His tone is milder than that of Eliphaz, yet he maintains the same points of argument. Zophar is the "heretic" of the three. He seems to be a young man and more impulsive. His language is coarse and sometimes offensive. He represents the prejudiced and narrow-minded critics of the day. He tries to convict Job of sin, and in addition indicates to him the glories of repentance.

The debate grows more intense through three cycles. The three friends stick to the creed of the cult and become scathing in their arguments. But each time Job answers them by showing that he knows the things they are pleading, but maintains steadily and persistently that he has not sinned as they have charged, and he is utterly at a loss to know why God should have sent this punishment upon him. He is unwilling to confess sin of which he is not guilty. The speeches of Job throughout this debate contain a great deal of the philosophy of life. There are many portrayals of the everyday thoughts of men. These make the book interesting and valuable as a part of the Bible. When one's faith grows weak, one should read Job.

In the second cycle of the debate the three friends strive more elaborately to indicate to Job his error. They no longer approach him softly and indicate that maybe he has sinned, but they now tell him that the fact that his calamities are so much worse than any known before prove that there can be no doubt but that he has sinned indeed. They positively cannot admit his innocence. Eliphaz charges Job with the worst crimes that man can commit. He tells him his defense is blasphemous, and that because of this and the fact that he disregards the fundamental truths of the creed he indicates that Job deserves the worst calamities that can befall him. Bildad takes up the argument and tries to show Job that his condition is exactly that of the wicked, and that he is so wicked at heart that God has forsaken him, and he has come into the estate of a man who knows not God. Zophar then tells Job that though he enjoyed prosperity for a season, that as usual with the wicked it was for a short time only, and now his sufferings are in proportion to his former joys. He even indicates that further sorrows will come upon Job because of his sins.

In answer, Job recognizes that God afflicts him, but he says his witness is in Heaven, and avows that he has remained godly and has maintained a right purpose and has never ceased to pray. In this section Job utters his hopeful assertion that he knows his vindicator lives and some day he shall see God on his side. Here his faith is portrayed in its dynamic power. Job also indicates that sometimes the wicked enjoy prosperity, but in a moment they go down to Sheol. Through this he would indicate that possibly they should not be surprised that it is hard to understand from a temporal standpoint God's dealings with him.

In the third cycle Job's opponents maintain practically the same things and make no headway. Eliphaz charges Job with some specific sins. He has no ground on which to base the charges, but he knows that Job would have been tempted to commit certain sins in the position of life which he formerly held, and that the creed of the cult says that the sufferings which Job is now enduring would be the punishment for those sins. So Eliphaz puts two and two together and charges Job with having committed these specific sins. He charges him with having taken pledges from his brothers for naught, and of having stripped the naked of clothing. He charges him with refusing to give water to the weary to drink, and with refusing to give bread to the hungry. These direct charges, however, do not alter Job's position. He still steadily maintains that he is innocent.

Job is greatly perplexed. He cannot understand why he should be thus afflicted. He cannot understand God, and he tells his friends that the righteous even undergo severe trials sometimes, and though the righteous suffer, it is their duty still to adore God and know that all things work out all right. This is the main lesson we are to get from the book.

It is at the end of the discussion that Elihu comes in and speaks to both sides, but especially to Job. He tells the opponents that they have accused Job on ground which he did not merit. Elihu says that man is spoken to by God through these sufferings. He holds that Job's sufferings may be to prevent sin. He upholds the justice of God. He claims that Job has been seeking to justify himself, whereas he should have been trying to justify God. He thinks Job argues with a biased mind, and that if he would just look he would see God is entirely justified in the course he has taken. Elihu attempts to show that God is much greater and more powerful than any of the three friends who have been talking, or than Job. Elihu is a young man, but he speaks with much confidence.

Next the voice of Jehovah comes from the whirlwind. He does not enter into an argument, but begins by telling of his majesty and power. Job then realizes his own insignificance and confesses his inability to answer God. Job then expresses a feeling of deep humility. He says to God, "I know that thou canst do everything, and that no thought can be withholden from thee." And so he repents in sackcloth and ashes, not for sins which his opponents charged him with, but for his bitterness and his unchristian attitudes which had crept into some parts of his speeches. He repents for his presumption to charge God with injustice, and repents for his impatience.

Then follows the epilogue in which the three friends are instructed by the Lord to prepare sacrifice to atone for their unjust accusations, and to get Job to pray for them. This they do, and they are forgiven. Job regains his possessions and greater possessions than he had to begin with. He also has seven sons and three daughters, and "the Lord blessed the latter end of Job more than the beginning." It is a mooted question as to when the epilogue was written. Possibly it was a later addition. It seems to me that there may have been some such restoring to Job, and the writer wrote it to correspond with the prologue.

One of the greatest teachings of the book seems to me to be the teaching of immortality. It seems that in Job's reasonings we can see that there is in man a longing for a future life, and an innate assurance that there is a future life. He feels that he will live after he has left this body. The whole book teaches it. Then the whole book undoubtedly teaches that the trials of life should only strengthen and not undermine our faith. Job looked to God as his vindicator throughout it all, and turned nowhere else for his hope. The book of Job should very greatly strengthen our faith. I think it teaches that suffering by righteous people may be a test of faith, it may be for something which we cannot know, for some reason which is not obvious, but for whatever cause it is, we should only keep our faith and trust in God, and be assured that all things will work together for good if we love him.

"REPUDIATING WESLEY."

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

Under the above caption in the Advocate of April 21, Mr. J. R. Bingham, following in the footsteps of other evolutionists, makes a futile effort to place the weight and influence of John Wesley's name on the side of evolution by repeating a quotation from Mr. Wesley's abridgement of "The Contemplation of Nature" by Bonnet, a celebrated naturalist, which has for some time been going the rounds of the press. Who first started this misrepresentation of Mr. Wesley's words, I do not know; but I am sure that if Mr. Bingham, an intelligent Methodist layman as he is known to be, had taken the pains to go to the original source from which his quotation was first taken by some evolutionist and started upon its rounds of the press, he would never have rushed into print with a quotation that does not at all represent Mr. Wesley's thought or attitude on the question of evolution. I cannot believe that Mr. Bingham would have intentionally misrepresented the meaning of the immortal founder of his own great church.

The mistake of the evolutionist who first published the quotation under discussion, and which Mr. Bingham has no doubt inadvertently followed, lies in their wresting their quotation from Wesley's abridgement of Bonnet's treatise on nature out of its connection and putting their own interpretation on it. It is well known that by this same procedure the Bible is abused and made to teach anything which accords with the notions of men—instead of reading the Bible into their opinions they read their opinions into the Bible. According to my way of thinking it would be a good idea to give both the Bible and Mr. Wesley a square deal. Had Mr. Bingham gone to the original source from which his quotation is taken, with an unbiased mind, he would have discovered that the evolutionist who started the said quotation upon its rounds in the press either mistakenly or intentionally misrepresented Mr. Wesley.

Mr. Wesley had been dead for sixty years or more before Darwin published his "Descent of Man" and his "Origin of Species." In all his writing there is no evidence whatever that he even thought of such theories as Darwin taught. All that Mr. Wesley accepted was that God created all living things in a series of gradations, as recorded in the book of Genesis. If Mr. Bingham has access to Wesley's abridgement of Bonnet, the book from which the quotation referred to is taken, he may read on page 58 the following:

"Now, since the scale of being advanced by such regular steps as high as man, is it not possible that it still proceeds gradually upwards through beings of superior nature?"

Certainly no process of evolution of one form of life from another of a different sort is implied in the above quoted passage. If it were, the conclusion would inevitably follow that Mr. Wesley taught that superior beings, such as angels, had been evolved from man, and that he believed that apes were the ancestors of angels as well as man, which, of course, would be perfectly absurd; yet this would be just as legitimate an interpretation of Mr. Wesley as that given to the paragraph quoted by Mr. Bingham from other evolutionists.

The Darwinian theory of evolution has for its foundation the transformation of species, while on page 75 of the volume referred to Mr. Wesley unequivocally affirms "the immutability of species amidst the perpetual motion that reigns in the Universe." In all his writings, it is clear that Wesley accepted the historical account of man's creation as recorded in the book of Genesis. In his treatise on "Original Sin" he says: "God made Adam by immediate creation," and "Adam came directly out of the hands of God without the intervention of any other creature" (Wesley's Works, Vol. 9, page 320). From these utterances of Mr. Wesley, it is evident to any right thinking man that the Darwinian theory, nor any other theory of evolution, was not in Wesley's thought, and no trace of such a theory can be found in all his writings. Wesley was sound in his doctrines and evangelical in his teachings. It is to be regretted, therefore, that Mr. Bingham, an otherwise intelligent Methodist layman, should mistakenly follow the malignant leadership of materialistic evolutionists and assist in the prepetuation of a hurtful misinterpretation of the saintly Wesley, the founder of Methodism.

Had Mr. Bingham read Bishop Candler's article, "John Wesley and Evolution," which was published in the Nashville Christian Advocate, it would not have become necessary for me to make this effort to rescue him from the predicament into which he has fallen; but it has happened unto him as our Lord said: "And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." However, that he may in the future avoid a repetition of such a blunder as he has made in the article herein referrerd to, I recommend that he purchase and read Bishop Candler's great book, "Current Comments on Timely Topics," which contains the Bishop's article on "John Wesley and Evolution."

THE COLUMBUS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Columbus District Conference held its fifty-seventh annual session at Ackerman, Miss., with a good attendance of preachers and laymen. All the pastors of the district were present except the Rev. O. A. Clark, of Shuqulak, who was prevented from coming by the serious illness of his wife.

The sessions were harmonious and the discussions were all constructive. The Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder, fully sustained his excellent reputation as a presiding officer. Business matters were disposed of with dispatch, and the decisions of the chair were at all times fair, impartial and according to the best rules of order.

Reports made by the pastors showed the church to be in good condition throughout the district. All the interests of the departments of the church are receiving attention, and the indications point to a good report from this district at the Annual Conference.

Visitors to the conference included Dr. D. M. Key, president of Millsaps College; Dr. J. R. Countiss, president of Grenada College; S. A. Brown, commissioner of the Orphans' Home, and L. P. Wasson, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District.

Sermons were delivered during the conference by Dr. W. M. McIntosh, R. P. Neblett, and E. Nash Broyles. Judge J. M. Foreman, of Indianola, Conference Lay Leader, delivered an address on Wednesday evening.

William I. Henley, of Cedar Bluff, was recommended to the Annual Conference for admission on trial. J. H. McKinnon was re-elected District Lay Leader, with W. S. McAlilly and N. C. Oakes as associates.

Resolutions concerning the utterances of the Educational Association and the report of the Committee on Christian Literature were the only matters which evoked discussion, and both were adopted by a majority vote.

Delegates to the Annual Conference were elected as follows: F. S. Jackson, W. F. Lagrone, J. H. McKinnon, Dr. N. D. Guerry, Mrs. T. J. Lee, Mrs. J. B. Randolph, W. W. Magruder, Mrs. W. N. Duncan, L. H. Roberts, Mrs. W. A. Swan, Mrs. W. L. Atkins, E. C. Cochran, Mrs. W. M. McIntsoh, N. C. Oakes and W. S. McAlilly, with alternates as follows: Mrs. R. P. Neblett, B. G. Webb and Captain W. A. Wimberly.

West Point was selected as the meeting place of the conference next year.

A resolution was adopted commending the excellent administration of the presiding elder, the Rev. J. B. Randolph, and the conference heartily expressed its thanks for the hospitality of the good people of Ackerman.

The session was one of the best, most constructive and harmonious held in the history of the district.

DEL LONGGREAR, Secretary.

AN EYE-WITNESS TELLS OF THE OVERFLOW.

Dear Brother Carley: Just thought I would write you a line and let Advocate folks know how fortunate we are. Of course every one knows that we are in the flood area, but some may want to know just how we fare. The Arcola-Murphy charge has four churches in territory about twenty by twenty-five miles. We are under from one to twenty feet of water. Every one of our folks is a heavy loser. Many have been made homeless. Many have lost furniture, stock, fences, out-buildings, etc. There will not be a fruit tree, pasture, vegetable or fruit garden, or meadow left. Many have lost every accumulation of their lives of labor.

I have just taken a swing around our parish in a motorboat, and the experience is beyond description. Many houses washed away, others wrecked, all very much damaged. Water up to eaves in many cases. The sight of the seas of water where fine crops should be is enough to break one's heart and make one give up in despair.

And yet—and yet—these delta folks! They just won't go down. They are planning even now on rebuilding. I saw some buying flower and garden seeds who had ten feet of water all over their place. It will take hard work and years of time, but this will still be the great country. We do things in a big way here. When we prosper, we prosper big; when we have a flood, we have a big one. When we build back, it will be bigger and better than ever.

Water is up to the eaves in Day Love Chapel, but we saved the piano by shipping it out. Water is up to bottom of top window sash in Lock and Murphy churches. We have from six inches to two feet of water in our yard here in Arcola. We have the church full of refugees. The water did not get in our parsonage, so we are still here, all well and happy. I came through Hollandale and saw that Brother McKeown had moved to his sons'. His parsonage and church are housing refugees also. I haven't heard of the churches in Greenville, Glen Allan, Leland, Isola, Belzoni, etc., but from reports of water at these places they must all have water in ground floors at least.

The end is not yet. There will likely be sickness, and certainly unpleasant sights and smells as the water goes down. The crest has passed here. Water has fallen two inches in our yard. It will give us a dry yard in about ten days, but will take probably six to eight weeks for all water to leave.

Yes, I say we are forunate. None of our people have lost lives; none sick as yet; Red Cross is feeding our refugees. Many have moved to hills temporarily. Could have been much worse.

We are thankful for courage to keep on. Some are accepting the flood as accidental, others as "fate," but many as a reproach from God. Anything that recalls the words of Jesus as he tells us to "sin no more lest a worse thing come upon thee," is good for us. The best of all is, God is with us. We will come back with God. With God, we will come back.

H. D. SUYDAM.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

"Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes"—"I fear the Greeks even bearing gifts." So the wary old Trojan warned his people, and yet all in vain, for the trusting citizens of the besieged city dragged the huge wooden horse within the fated walls. The old lesson has come down to us. There are some folks in the world we could love more and trust better, if they did not have so much history. For the lengthening shadow of the past cast a trail, not altogether radiant, over the present. Wonderful are some of these folks, companionable, pleasant, so liberal in profession, so cultured in conversation, you just cannot help liking them; but when you sound them to the core, you find out to your disappointment how utterly foreign to your convictions are their ideas of church and State. Let me be plain: America does not want a divided citizenship. The seat of authority, of all kinds, church and State, lies in the body of our people. So far as I am concerned in the matter, I am willing for any man of any creed to enjoy the blessings of life, liberty and happiness, guaranteed under laws organic and statutory; but I protest against divided allegiance. Solomon the wisest, and Jesus the greatest, protested against a divided household. It cannot stand in the end and is apt to raise a whole lot of turmoil while it exists.

We are having some more of that gentle spring the poets rave about. The flowers, birds, bees and lambkins, and the children who sport on verdant meadows are surely having a hard time of it in order to celebrate this spring in some unfavored spots of this commonwealth—storms of all sorts and varieties, tornadoes, live tempests, hail, thunder that rolls, crashes, and scares, lightning that gleams like flashing daggers from the sky, and rain falling and flooding all the streams until they submerge city and countryside. The greatest flood in the history of the country, and our puny dykes and dams give way like chaff before the wind. From St. Louis to New Orleans vast stretches of the great river valley are an inland sea. Nature had provided many belated streams for the escape of these mighty floods, so that they soon ran their course to the gulf. But our engineers, staunch believers in the levee system, dammed these outlets and vainly tried to confine the waters to the channel of the Mississippi. The levee always breaks somewhere when a real "high water" comes. It is simply a matter of pouring enough water into a vessel until it overflows. Practical river men have again and again said, "Open outlets or construct spillways—this is the one sensible way." Drain the water off as it comes this way seems to me is the one and only solution of the flood question. It is a huge task, yet it can and will be done in the end.

MY MOTHER.

By Frances Minor Crymes.

Time's frost has touched you, yet could not efface
Aught of your beauty or your gracious charm;
And still you move with gentle, stately grace,
As though time's warnings give you no alarm.
Mother, my mother,
My own precious mother.

Your dark hair, silvered in life's wintry chill,
Wears lovelier shimmer in its silky waves;
Low-toned your voice, but it is vibrant still,
As oft I hear you singing, "Jesus saves!"
Mother, sweet mother,
My old gray-haired mother.

The joy of youth beams in your eyes no more,
They glow with sweet serenity's soft light;
Peace shines in them to-day as e'er before,
For love's the fire behind them burning bright;
Mother, dear mother,
My loving old mother.

In Christ-like patience you a cross have borne,
By Christ's own promise you a crown shall take;
His will become your own, like him you've grown;
Soon, darling, in his likeness you'll awake.
Mother beloved,
My saintly old mother.

WHAT IS MORE INTRIGUING THAN A BEAUTIFUL BRIDE MARRIED IN JUNE? A SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT QUOTA RAISED IN MAY

By LUTHER E. TODD, Secretary of the Board of Finance

THESE MAY DAYS ARE TEST DAYS

When a preacher takes a tiny infant in his arms and by holy baptism consecrates its life to the service of Christ, he does something for the child and its parents which will continue to act and react for good. If such value attaches to the christening of one little babe, what shall be stated concerning the consecration of 322,000 such lives? This is the record of the living superannuated preachers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, during their years of active ministry. Having performed such invaluable service, these men are now in great need. The Church is able at present from all sources to pay them annually a mere pittance per capita. What will you do about it, you parents whose hearts were made happy, you grown-up sons and daughters of the Church who received this service in babyhood? Don't you think you should make substantial contributions to Superannuate Endowment, and thus help the men who did so much for you?

The mere statement that our living superannuates, during their years of active service, added approximately 1,000,000 members to the Church, does not do justice to this most extraordinary success in soul winning. The total membership of our Church today is reported as about 2,500,000. Thus it appears that these old heroes are to be credited with adding to the Church practically half as many members as the present total membership. It is doubtless true that a great part of the paying strength of the Church today is present with us because of the faithful service of the superannuates when they were pastors. Is it right to draw upon this financial power for every cause that appears, and then leave the superannuates out of a just consideration? Should not these heroes have at least the reward of an old age sustentation out of the millions of dollars being contributed for benevolent purposes by the people who first learned the grace of Christian giving from them?

THOSE 322,000 BABIES, NOW MEN AND WOMEN, COULD RAISE THE BALANCE OF THE $10,000,000 FOR SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT BY CONTRIBUTING AN AVERAGE OF $22 EACH

NOTES FROM THE ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT.

The district has moved along steadily and quietly under the faithful leadership of a crowd of well-loved pastors.

Pelican is led by Brother J. L. Cady, who is now serving his first year on that splendid circuit. He has had sickness in his family, but every one is out and well again. The papers have had much to say about oil in that section, but quarterly conference reports do not indicate any increase in the pastor's salary. There will be, no doubt, if the members are benefited.

Pleasant Hill is also in the area of the oil field, and will feel some benefits from the wells, we hope.

This section was in the midst of a fierce wind storm that was tragic in its ruinous force. The houses of all the sufferers were rebuilt except for one man, and it was not necessary, as his wife and six children were killed. The pastor, Brother D. F. Anders, did some heroic service in giving first aid. The congregation is still expecting to erect a nice building. The charge expects to have everything up in full. The only circuit Brotherhood that I know about is on the Pleasant Hill charge.

Brother Anding, who srves the Provencal work, had a narrow escape in the big storm, but it changed its route just before reaching his home. He rendered fine service in the rescue relief work. This work has been reduced in size and has been improved by the changes that were made.

Natchitoches moves along in a steady manner. One of the handicaps is the lack of room to house the Sunday school. They put in some fine seats last fall that have filled a long-felt want. The pastor will be away again taking special medical treatment in New Orleans, May 2-10. This will, it is confidently hoped, give Brother H. L. Johns permanent relief. The church now has an assessment of $3,000 for pastor's salary, and will pay everything in full.

Brother P. H. Fontaine is serving his first year at Kurthwood and Alco and is in high favor with his people. This was the first work to call for the Special Missionary collection. Everything is moving along nicely. Last year there were three preaching places, and now it is a half-station.

Brother Thomason is serving his second year at Boyce, and has had a great meeting, led by the Bowden evangelistic party. He has been sick and out of his pulpit for several Sundays, but is back again, being able to preach twice on Easter Sunday. His little grandson, son of Mr. Fred Thomason, of St. Landry, was desperately sick at the parsonage, but is now out of danger, and his parents expect to take him back home Sunday.

Brother C. K. Smith occupied the new brick church in Pineville for the first time on Easter Sunday, and had crowds to attend both services. This is a great feat and represents sacrificial endeavor on the part of this people, led by the untiring pastor. This church has moved forward greatly during the pastorate of the present pastor, who is now serving his fifth year. This congregation has one of the best prayer meetings on the Alexandria District.

First Church, led by Dr. Cleanth Brooks, is just about ready to begin work on the new educational building that will cost about $125,000 when furnished and completed. The architect will deliver the plans about the first of May. Dr. Brooks is serving his third year, having transferred here from the Memphis Conference. He has impressed himself upon our folks as a great expository preacher. This pulpit now has an assessment for the pastor of $5,000.

The Lecompte congregation lost their building on Jan. 8, and since has worshiped in an empty store building. They are led by Brother W. S. Henry, who is shaping affairs looking towards the building of a brick building. The parsonage folks are rejoicing over the graduation of the eldest daughter, Miss Nell, at Lander College, Greenwood, S. C.

At Bunkie, the pastor is serving his first year, but there are marked advances along all lines. One of the marked features is the splendid prayer meeting that has constantly grown until at the service of Wednesday, April 27, there was an attendance of ninety-seven.

Brother White has seen marked advances in various lines on the Evergreen work. One evidence is the crowds that have attended his ministry and by the big response given the Special Missionary effort. This, in spite of the sickness of the pastor, who has been in the Baptist Hospital part of the time.

Brother Harold T. Young is making his bow to the pastorate, serving his first year at Evangeline, and is in high favor with his folks. He preaches and plays and prays and works. One of the unusual instruments is a hand-saw that is made to give forth praises to God by his touch.

Brother Knight is serving his first year at Melville, having recently married Miss Sunshine Young. He and his bride are happily housed in a splendid parsonage. The Bowden evangelistic party recently held an enthusiastic meeting that resulted in much good.

Brother P. S. Carpenter has a large territory over in Point Coupee, living in a nice parsonage at Lottie. He is serving well, but his folks are disturbed over the water situation. He stands high with his folks. Brother Carpenter is a very youthful looking grandfather, but is a real one just the same.

Brother I. T. Reames has gotten back to the southern part of the State, where he wrought so successfully in the past. There have been material improvements at Eunice. The church has been painted and the parsonage has had installed a fine bath room, with sanitary fixtures, and cabinet of the nicest kind in the kitchen. It is quite a show place, for every one is interested in seeing the new works in the parsonage and calls and says nice things.

Brother Duplantis has everything moving nicely at Oberlin. Rev. W. E. Thomas closed a great meeting there just as the Conference year ended. They are still expecting to erect a building this year. The work is much stronger than it was and is gaining.

Brother Bowman is doing an appreciated work at Oakdale, and has good congregations, though the town has suffered severely on account of the removal of saw mill interests. Brother S. S. Holladay, Sister Holladay, and Tom are with them for a visit. Brother Holladay is Sister Bowman's father and one of our honored veterans.

Brother H. B. Hines is at Elizabeth, where there are many good folks who are working with him and who are members of other churches. He surely has the "holy catholic church," for it is right in his crowd. The Culpepper meeting was of great benefit to the folks.

Brother A. S. J. Neill has quietly forged ahead at Glenmora. The church has to readjust itself to the changing conditions. It has been a saw mill center, but the mills are fast cutting out, and they are trying to change into trucking and other farming.

Brother F. C. Cady is at the Melder circuit, which has been greatly reduced in territory, and is now reached in an easier manner than before. Just now they have closed a big interdenominational tent meeting that was pitched at Hineston for about two weks. The pastor is planning to hold some big meeting this summer.

The Rapides circuit is manned by Brother J. B. McCann, who serves from Pineville. He is energetic and faithful, but can only render a limited service, as he is in the commercial world.

Opelousas has been blessed with a great meeting, led by Dr. R. H. Harper, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and Grand Chaplain of the Masonic Grand Lodge of Louisiana. Brother Boddie had planned for the meeting and had the co-operation of the local church and also the sympathy and help of the whole community. The work is hindered because of lack of room for the Sunday school. They are talking brick church, and forging ahead.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE, MAY 24-26.

The Aberdeen District Conference will meet in the Methodist church at Fulton, May 24, at 10 o'clock a.m., with the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, followed by organization. Preaching at 11 o'clock by Rev. J. J. Baird.

From 2 to 4 o'clock of the afternoon will be given to the program of the Aberdeen District Methodist Ministers' Association; 4 to 5 o'clock, reports of pastors; 7:30 p.m., preaching by Rev. J. W. York.

The second day of the conference will be special Laymen's day, with an address by Hon. J. M. Forman, Conference Lay Leader, at 11 o'clock a.m. Every minute of the day will be crowded with good things for those who attend. Preaching at 7:30 p.m. by Rev. F. H. McGee.

There will be much business of interest and importance for the third day of the conference. Preaching at 11 o'clock by Rev. W. C. Newman.

The good people of Fulton are preparing abundant entertainment for the conference, and every pastor and delegate is expected to be there for the opening service and remain to the last amen is said. Brethren, let us make no engagements that will keep any away from the district conference. Let us have a great conference and a Pentecostal time together.

In answer to the appeal of the laymen and the bishops of the church, I trust every pastor will be able to report a very substantial payment on the benevolent collections at this conference. Let every pastor see that his Quarterly Conference Record is brought to the conference.

Dr. Carley, we trust you will be with us.

L. P. WASSON, P. E.

GROUP CONFERENCE AT AMORY, MAY 19.

The quarterly conferences of Aberdeen, Amory, Houston, Okolona, Pontotoc, and Tupelo will meet together in the beautiful new church building at Amory on the evening of May 19. Luncheon will be served to the visitors on their arrival at about 6:30 or 7 p.m., in the spacious dining room of the new church. The congregation at Amory have wrought well in the erection of this splendid building, that is one of the most beautiful that I have seen. They are taking great delight in welcoming the members of these other five quarterly conferences to their new church home. Doctor, this is going to be one of the great events of the year in the Aberdeen District, and we would be glad to have you with us. If you want to see Methodism at high tide, come.

L. P. WASSON.

CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Will all the preachers of the Corinth District please send me the names of all of their delegates who expect to attend the district conference at Potts Camp, June 1-3, and oblige

RULES FOR MAKING A GOOD CHURCH MEMBER.

Number 9.

By "Rev. Ichabod Crane."

A good church member will co-operate with his church and church.

"Stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the Gospel."

When we make the promise to support the church and its institutions, we are promising to support the denomination as well as the local church. We are promising to do all of the things that have been set forth week after week in "Rules for Making a Good Church Member." We are promising to subscribe to the church papers. We are promising to be in every respect a true and loyal member of our church.

The Home Circle

EASY ROADS CROWDED.

The easy roads are crowded,
And the level roads are jammed,
The pleasant little rivers
With the drifting folks are crammed.
But off yonder where it's rocky,
Where you get a better view,
You will find the ranks are thinning
And the travelers are few.
Where the going's smooth and pleasant
You will always find the throng,
For the many, more's the pity,
Seem to like to drift along.
But the steps that call for courage,
And the task that's hard to do,
In the end result in glory
For the never-wavering few.

WHAT HAPPENED TO LAZY ANT.

Lazy Ant, so all her neighbors called her, because she'd take all day to do what any other ant could do in a few hours.

The meadow-folks said that Lazy Ant, rather than go out and hunt food for herself, would call on her neighbors just about meal-time, and in that way she wouldn't have to work for her food.

This soon became a nuisance, and finally some of her neighbors told her she must get out and get her own food.

"I'd just like to know where Mr. Bee gets that lovely honey," Lazy Ant thought, so the next time she saw Mr. Bee fly by she followed him and hid behind a bush while he sipped from the white cluster blossoms.

When Mr. Bee had filled all his tiny pockets with pollen and honey and sailed away, Lazy Ant crawled up the stem road that led to the white blossoms.

"I can't see why some of us have to work for what we get and others don't," she grumbled to herself. "And I'll just bet I'll not be silly and load my pockets down with pollen bundles, either. It's getting to be a bore. Every cafe-keeper that gives you a bit of honey seems to think you've got to carry her old pollen bundles to pay for the sip.

"Goodness, how careless of me! I must have stepped in something sticky," and Lazy Ant lifted her little legs one at a time and ran them through her mouth to clean them off. But the more she would clean, the stickier they became. First she'd lick one leg, then the other, and by the time she got the first three legs clean, the other three were sticky. And the first thing she knew, she was so sticky from the tip of her silly little head to the soles of her lazy little feet that she couldn't move, and she began to cry as hard as she could.

Mr. Bee saw her plight, and stopped to help her, but he found his own feet growing sticky and had to give it up.

"You see, Mrs. Starry Campion, the keeper of this blossom cafe, doesn't cater to crawling insects, so that's why her stem roads are so sticky," he buzzed. "We bees don't have to touch that road. We just light right down in the blossom cafe. I guess Mrs. Starry Campion heard you say you didn't care to help distribute her pollen bundles, so she didn't warn you. I'm sorry; I wish I could help."

Just then something bumped into the plant. Mr. Bee lost his balance, but caught himself and sailed away as quick as he could. Lazy Ant closed her eyes, for she thought the keeper of the plant cafe was after her. But when she landed on the ground she opened her eyes, and there sat a big yellow cat eyeing a fluttering butterfly.

Lazy Ant crawled through the grass as fast as she could, and when she reached her home she jumped into a tub of water and had to soak a long time to get the horrid, sticky stuff from her head and feet. But you can believe it or not—Lazy Ant is lazy no more. She set to work the very next day and has the loveliest ant hill in the whole meadows and is raising a great big family.

"It takes work to keep one out of mischief," she always says when any one reminds her of the days when she was called Lazy Ant.—Christian Sun.

RIDING A GRIZZLY.

It would be hard to imagine a more daring prank than the following, in which two Montana cowboys once participated. Jim McNaney, my buffalo hunter, writes Dr. William T. Hornaday, told it to me soon after it occurred, and I carefully wrote down the details.

In the days before 1900, when silver-tip grizzlies wandered up and down through the breaks and bad-lands bordering the Missouri and the Yellowstone rivers, they often strolled out upon the open cattle-range country. In 1888 Jim and his bunkie, Hank Kusker, were working for the N-bar-N Cattle Company, at the mouth of Prairie Elk Creek. In the late autumn Jim and Hank were sent out to the Missouri-Yellowstone divide, "moonshining" horses—which means rounding them up and gradually driving them down to the home ranch. Their pack horse was a wise old cow horse named Judge.

The two cowboys came unexpectedly upon an old female grizzly bear, two big cubs nearly two years old and one small cub. The men had available on their horses neither a rifle nor a revolver nor a hunting knife, only a small ivory-handled penknife.

"Let's rope 'em!" cried Hank.

"Go to it!" cried Jim.

As the four bears started to run the cowboys galloped hard after them. The small cub fell behind and began to cry for help. Its mother wheeled and charged. Hank fled, and the bear tore after him. When his hat fell off the old lady ripped it to shreds; then she quickly rounded up her small cub and fled with it down Shade Creek. They saw her no more.

Hank and Jim quickly roped the two big cubs. Hank snubbed his cub so hard that he almost broke its neck. He got off his horse and left the disabled bear dragging at the end of the rope as his scared horse steadily backed away from it. Jim first roped his bear round one of its hind legs, but the animal sat down and with its front paws skilfully threw off the noose. Jim promptly tossed again, and that time caught the bear around the neck. Thereupon the grizzly became furious and rolled over backward with all four feet in the air, "clawing and bawling, and almost a-bustin' with rage."

Then up came Hank on foot recklessly and said: "I've rode most every kind of animal but a grizzly bear, and I'm a-goin' to ride this one or bust!"

"Well, then pile on to him!" said Jim.

While Jim's horse dragged on the bear Hank slipped up behind him, jumped astraddle and drove his spurs into him. The bear roared and, reaching up first one hind foot and then the other, "tore off Hank's pants and drawers and nearly tore his legs open into the bargain." How Hank did pile off that bear! As he fled the bear tried to chase him, and only Jim's rope prevented a capture.

"Hank got on his horse," said Jim, "and roped the bear around the hind legs, and we stretched him out between two horses and choked him to death. By that time the other bear was dead."

With great difficulty they skinned the two bears with Jim's penknife; then, blindfolding old Judge, they put the skins upon him and turned him loose with their bunch of seventy horses. The horses took fright at the smell of the fresh bear skins and fled in a panic over the fifteen miles down to the ranch. The men at the ranch saw the chase coming; they opened the gate of the corral, and in rushed the seventy horses. A moment later old Judge with his pack and the disheveled bear hides wearily loped in, whereupon the whole herd wildly leaped or fell over the fences and fled.—Youth's Companion.

THE JUMPING FISH OF SIAM.

Did you ever see a fish jump aboard a boat and knock a man down? That is what happened in Siam, when Rev. Mr. Jones and two assistants were making a journey.

One day a large fish jumped across the bow of the boat, barely missing a steersman's head. The missionaries laughed, and said they wished the steersman had come inside the boat for protection. But in a minute another fish made the jump, the steersman ducked his head, and the fish was hurled into the boat, knocking one of the men, who was sitting serenely inside the boat, to the floor.

Was the fish caught? No, indeed! It bounded from him out through the window into the river.

How would you like to catch a fish as you would a baseball? That is what happened to the next one that tried the flying leap.—"Over Sea and Land."

OUR ALARM CLOCKS.

Did you ever have an alarm-clock to wake you up in the morning? When it goes off with a loud ring, it warns you not to sleep any longer.

Did you ever stop to think that your body has many alarm-clocks? If you stay up late one night, the next morning you are tired, cross and sleepy. That is your alarm-clock telling you to get more sleep.

When you eat a piece of pie or cake just before going to bed, and all during the night you roll and toss and have bad dreams, that is your alarm-clock warning you not to do it again.

When you sit near an open window on a cool day, the wind blows against you, but you do not notice it. Before you realize it, you begin to sneeze. That sneeze is an alarm-clock telling you either to close the window or move out of the draft.

Do you ever have a tooth ache so much that it seems you cannot stand it much longer? That ache is an alarm-clock warning you to go to the dentist to have your teeth fixed and to take better care of your teeth after that.

Every pain that you have is an alarm-clock warning you against something. If you want to be strong and healthy, you must listen to the warning of those alarm-clocks of your body.—Dew Drop.

LIKE DANIEL.

I will live honestly and walk uprightly before God and man; I will keep my lips sweet with words of kindness; my heart pure with noble ideals; my hands clean with honorable deeds; I will keep my body sacred, my soul free; I will strive to be rich in love, strong in gentleness, untiring in patience, abundant in hope; I will serve God by helping some of His children; I will try always to be better than my word and more liberal than my promise; every day I will make most of myself and the best of myself, and so be ready for the opportunities that God sends to those who are ready for them.—Robert J. Burdette.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. and Mrs. G. H. Corry, Joyce, La., announce the birth of a son on April 30. Blessings upon the young man!

The Sunday school attendance of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., on the first Sunday in May, was 1,839.

Dr. Alonzo Early, our pastor at Bastrop, La., recently underwent an operation at a Monroe hospital, from which he is recuperating nicely.

Rev. J. D. Nesom, our pastor at Mer Rouge, La., and Mrs. G. E. Hunter, of Oak Grove, La., were married on April 26. The Advocate extends all good wishes.

Rev. T. M. Bradley, presiding elder of the Sardis District, has prepared and sent out an interesting program for his district conference, in session this week at Hernando, Miss.

Brother W. E. Wiygul, of Nettleton, Miss., writing concerning the renewal of his subscription to the Advocate, takes occasion to speak kindly of it. He has been taking the paper thirty-four years.

The work at Haynesville, La., Rev. H. M. Johnson, pastor, is moving along well. A Standard Training School will be held at Haynesville, May 29-June 3, for which extensive preparation is being made.

Rev. W. F. Rogers requests the Advocate to ask the preachers of the Corinth District to be sure to send to him the names of all the delgates who expect to attend the Corinth district conference at Potts Camp, June 1-3.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, Louisiana Conference, passed through New Orleans on Monday of this week, en route to Baton Rouge, where he is teaching a class in the Standard Training School.

Every pastor in the district and many of the lay delgates attended the recent session of the Grenada district conference at Oxford, Miss. The pastors' reports showed 135 additions to the church on profession of faith thus far this year.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation from Miss Bernice Grice to attend the graduating exercises of the Collins, Miss., High School, on May 24. Miss Grice is a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. P. H. Grice, and is a member of the graduating class.

Rev. E. S. Lewis, presiding elder of the Grenada District, North Mississippi Conference, recently preached the commencement sermon for the County Agricultural High School at Eupora, Miss., and he will render a similar service for the school at Vaiden, Miss., on the fourth Sunday in May.

Rev. S. D. Howard, of Haughton, La., reports marked progress on his charge. The attendance on the preaching services is good, and members are being received into the church. The new church at Doyline, begun during the pastorate of Rev. P. H. Fontaine, has just been completed.

A beautiful new church was dedicated at Williamsville, on the Kosciusko circuit, on May 1. The presiding elder of the Columbus District, Rev. J. B. Randolph, and the presiding elder of the Grenada District, Rev. E. S. Lewis, were with the pastor, Rev. W. W. Milligan. It was a happy occasion.

The commencement sermon for Southern Methodist University will be preached on June 5 by Dr. Philip Cone Fletcher, pastor of the Laurel Heights Methodist Church, San Antonio, Tex., and the commencement address will be delivered on June 8 by Congressman Fritz C. Lanham, of Texas.

The reassignment of Bishop Warren A. Candler to the episcopal district in which the Louisiana, the Mississippi, and the North Mississippi Conferences are included, will give general satisfaction. Bishop Candler is not only one of the ablest, but also one of the most beloved leaders of Methodism.

Rev. P. H. Grice, our pastor at Collins, Miss., was operated on at the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, on May 2 for a bone infection, a trouble he has been suffering from for several years. He will probably be in the hospital several weeks. Earnest prayer will be made, we are sure, by his many friends for his complete recovery.

Mr. Harmon L. Smith, evangelistic singer and young people's worker, has been assisting Rev. W. F. Baggett in a successful meeting at Saucier, Miss. Mr. Smith has some open dates in July and August that he would be glad to have taken. A letter addressed to him at Saucier, Miss., in care of Rev. W. F. Baggett, will reach him.

A note from Brother James H. Walker, of Pollock, La., tells of the great revival in which the pastor, Rev. W. W. Lantrip, was assisted by the Bowden evangelistic party, making special mention of the interest of the children in the meeting. There were twenty additions to the membership of the church, with financial results that were adequate for all purposes.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Smith, of West Point, Miss., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Marion, to John E. Ramsey, of Jackson, Miss. The marriage will take place at high noon, June 29, at the First Methodist Church, West Point, the father of the groom, Rev. John W. Ramsey, officiating. Mr. Ramsey is a former student of Millsaps College. The Advocate extends all good wishes in advance of the happy event.

The baccalaureate address at Whitworth College will be delivered at 10 o'clock a. m., May 31, by Hon. Forest B. Jackson, of McComb, Miss. The following are candidates for the A.B. degree this year: Miss Gladys Breland, Wesson; Miss Christine Ferguson, Gallman; Miss Fannie Foster, Sontag; Miss Irene Griffin, Gulfport; Miss Ruth McKay, Farmhaven; Miss Dorothy Middleton, Satartia; Miss Mamie Penn, Brookhaven; Miss Florence Russ, Logtown; Miss Alfreda Corley, Raleigh; Miss Velma Thompson; Collins; Miss Wei Lien Wu, Soochow, China.

The book by Dr. R. E. Smith, dean emeritus and professor of Biblical Literature, Centenary College, Shreveport, La., based upon his recent tour of the Holy Land and Europe, will soon be from the press. A private edition of 1,000 copies, autographed by the author, will be issued first and sold for $2.50, after which the price will be advanced. Subscriptions for this edition should be sent to Dr. Smith himself. The published table of contents suggests a most tempting bill of fare.

Rev. Claude P. Jones, Mississippi Conference evangelist, is with Rev. J. C. Jackson in a meeting at Beaumont, Miss. The meeting at Ellisville resulted in a great revival, with many conversions and reclamations, and a large number of additions to the membership of the church. The Sunday school at Ellisville unanimously passed resolutions of appreciation of the services of Brother Jones and his co-workers. Brother Jones has an open date, May 22 to June 5, that he would be glad to give to some preacher in Louisiana or Mississippi.

FLOOD CONDITIONS IN THE VICKSBURG DISTRICT.

Some of my friends have written me, asking about flood conditions in the Vicksburg District. I take this method of expressing, through the columns of the Advocate, my hearty appreciation of this manifest interest in our distressful situation. A little less than one-third of the Vicksburg District is under water, and conditions beggar description. The suffering through which many of the people are passing is awful.

Our people are scattered, and their property is either floating on the bosom of the moving waters, or else submerged. What the end will be we cannot tell at this writing. The people have the genius to come back, and they are eagerly waiting for the water to recede, that they may begin the work of rehabilitation. The five pastors serving charges within the inundated section of the district, with their families, have gone to places of safety, but the little they possessed has been left in the flooded area. The whole country has responded generously to the relief of the flood-stricken people, but our preachers have not asked for help. Forgetful of their own needs, they are giving themselves heroically to the relief of others. These men have no means of support, and must suffer unless they get help. They are just waiting to get back to their charges and get into the difficult work of rehabilitation.

It would be a fine thing, and timely, if the generous people of our church in the Mississippi Conference would come to their relief.

I would be glad to hear from those who are willing to make a contribution to their relief in this time of need and distress.

J. T. LEGGETT, P. E.,
Vicksburg District.

NEW ORLEANS METHODISTS PLAN TO HELP PREACHERS IN OVERFLOWED SECTIONS OF THE STATE.

At the regular meeting of the Methodist pastors of New Orleans last Monday morning, the situation of our preachers in overflowed sections of the State was considered, and steps were taken to render them assistance. A committee, consisting of the presiding elder, Dr. R. H. Harper; Rev. E. C. Gunn, pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Church; Dr. J. B. Mitchell, pastor of Rayne Memorial; Mr. H. H. Ahrens, and Dr. M. F. Wilson, was appointed to have the matter in charge. This committee will address a letter to members of the Methodist churches in New Orleans, calling attention to the need of these brethren whose parsonages and churches are under water, and soliciting contributions. If others than those who receive the letter, either in the city or elsewhere, should wish to contribute to this worthy cause, their gifts may be sent to Dr. R. H. Harper, 1431 Octavia St., New Orleans.

It is likely that a general appeal will be made for aid later, when the full extent of the damage is known.

THE BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Brookhaven District Conference met at Wesson, Miss., April 21 and 22. The attendance was excellent. The reports of the pastors were very encouraging, especially showing that the Missionary Special was popular with our people this year. The presiding elder, Brother W. H. Lewis, had such a well arranged program that there was not a dull minute, each cause having full time and being presented by some one appointed specially; all the connectional interests had representatives.

Dr. Key, of Millsaps, spoke for Millsaps; H. G. Hawkins, for Whitworth; W. D. Hawkins, for Missions; Rev. J. M. Morse, for the superannuates; Prof. J. M. Sullivan, for Lay Activities; J. L. Sutton, Children's Home Finding Society; W. T. Griffin, Orphans' Home; Mrs. L. N. Alford, president Woman's Missionary Society, and Mrs. Frank Decell, District Secretary, Brookhaven District, Woman's Work.

Delegates to the Annual Conference are: H. H. Goza, C. C. Youngblood, W. W. Godbold, Mrs. A. S. Oliver, W. A. Price, S. R. Granberry, J. S. Decell, Mrs. C. C. Herlong, Dr. H. R. Fairfax, Mrs. J. A. Wooten, W. T. Denman, J. W. Leggett, Mrs. L. W. Alford, S. E. Denman.

V. D. Youngblood was elected District Lay Leader, and W. S. Marx, and W. H. Peritt his associates.

The preaching was enjoyed by the large audiences. Brothers Cooley, Crisler and J. M. Lewis gave us messages full of gospel truth and full of the Spirit.

Many visitors from many miles came and went each day, showing a wide general interest in the church and its blessed work.

Wesson gave us cordial entertainment, and of course Brother Oliver was happy.

W. T. GRIFFIN, Secretary.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The New Orleans District Conference will meet in the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, New Orleans, on Friday morning, May 20, at 9 o'clock, and continue through May 21. Bishop Warren A. Candler will preside. All the pastors of the district are requested to send the names of their delegates who will attend the conference to the presiding elder, Dr. R. H. Harper, 1431 Octavia St., or to Rev. E. C. Gunn, 1125 Fern Street.

MEETING OF SEASHORE CAMP GROUND TRUSTEES.

The trustees of Seashore Camp Ground met in regular session in the tabernacle on the grounds at 1:30 p. m., May 3, 1927. The following members were persent: Dr. B. Z. Welch, president; Sam Meyer, treasurer; C. Girard, Dr. G. S. Brown, J. L. Sells, C. C. Miller, and W. M. Sullivan.

Immediately after formally opening the meeting and stating the purpose of it, Dr. Welch resigned as president and as a member of the Board of Trustees. T. J. O'Neil, pastor of Poplarville church, was elected to fill the vacancy caused by Dr. Welch's resignation.

The Board fo Trustees was then formally organized, with Dr. G. S. Brown as temporary chairman and T. J. O'Neil as secretary pro tem.

The minutes of the November meeting of the Board were read for information, and then the treasurer made his report, which was received and ordered filed for record.

Keller Lodge was, by unanimous vote, rented to Mrs. Kate Foster for the season, and R. S. Saucier was employed to clean up and take care of the grounds, and to look after the renting of the buildings.

A resolution adopted last May, prohibiting the renting of any buildings on the grounds for revenue, was rescinded, which action liberates the trustees, and all others who own buildings on the grounds, to rent the same to desirable occupants.

A committee, composed of C. Girard, W. M. Sullivan, and H. L. Daniels, was appointed to have some needed repairs made on the tabernacle, and the treasurer was authorized to have lights installed on the grounds, and to have all buildings owned by the Board of Trustees insured.

The following officers were elected to serve during the incoming year: Hon. C. Girard, President; J. L. Sells and H. H. McNeil, Vice Presidents; Sam Meyer, Treasurer; T. J. O'Neil, Secretary.

Resolutions of appreciation of the efficient presidency of Dr. Welch and Dr. Brown were adopted, the minutes of the meeting were read, corrected, and adopted as corrected, and the Board adjourned to meet again at 2 p. m., June 16, 1927, at which time it is hoped all members of the Board will be present, as some very important matters are to be considered.

T. J. O'NEIL, Secretary.

FROM A SAD PARSONAGE HOME.

When we returned home from the Annual Conference meeting in Grenada, in November, 1925, we found my dear companion sick with what we thought was the flu. Her condition did not improve, and in January we took her to our great Methodist Hospital in Memphis, where for two months she had advantage of the best medical skill. We then brought her home and began trying to get her in the Mississippi State Tubercular Sanatorium, where she remained for almost ten months. After all hope was gone for recovery, we brought her home, where we could give her our personal care and attention. Her sister, a trained nurse, came, and we did all in our power to make her comfortable.

In the early morning of April 22, 1927, our Heavenly Father said, "You have suffered enough," and the angels came and took her home. She loved her Lord. Her faith in life was beautiful, but in death more beautiful. We were permitted to walk and work together for nearly thirteen years. In the early days of our ministry, in days of hardships and sacrifice, she was a great source of strength to me, meeting every problem with a smile.

Just a few hours before she left us, she opened her eyes, and seeing her loved ones about her bed, smiled and said, "I love all of you, and I love Jesus."

Our home is lonely and sad, but she has given to us four precious children to live for, and we know that her long suffering is over.

All during her sickness our people have been kind and sympathetic. Heaven is more real to us now.

When we stand in the midst of sorrow and tell others how the love of Christ can strengthen us, we can speak from experience.

Our brethren have been so kind, and so many comforting letters have come. May God bless each of you.

In His name,

O. E. CLARK.

Shuqualak, Miss.

I sometimes wish that we of the churches knew how to dress our windows and display our goods to rather more advantage than we often do. It is a matter of regret to me that religion is often made so utterly unattractive. For myself I have the feeling that we "have the goods," and I do not think that the demand has really fallen off. And yet we find a continual difficulty in, shall I say, the sales department?—Percy Pegler, in Wheat and Some Chaff.

EASY PLACES.

An easy life is not usually productive; it is very apt to be barren and unfruitful. One should be comfortable and happy in the love of his work and should acquire such a skill in it that he is never ill at ease but always seems to do it without strenuous effort. There are two kinds of easy (?) places: one is that to which one climbs by persistent, arduous effort and seldom reaches; the other is that which exists in the imagination of a self-indulgent mind and is nowhere to be found.

A young man asked Henry Ward Beecher to find him an easy berth. He replied: "If you wish an easy berth, do not be an editor. Do not try law. Do not think of the ministry. Avoid schoolteaching. Let alone all ships, stores, shops, merchandise. Abhor politics. Do not practice medicine. Be not a farmer nor a mechanic; neither be a soldier or a sailor. Don't work. Don't study. Don't think. None of these are easy. O, my friend, you have come into a hard world! I know of but one easy place in it, and that is the grave."—Baptist and Reflector.

DAWN.

By Anna Hamilton Wood.

Who puts the stars to bed, I wonder?
Covers them up with a blue counterpane?
Sometimes I think their nurses must blunder
For two or three wee ones fall out again
Just as old Mother Sun comes sweeping
Her rose and gold mantle across her arm,
And pauses a moment to kiss the babies
Who hide in her skirts with assumed alarm.

Who opens the strings of the wind-bags, I wonder,
And lets little breezes come tumbling down?
Who loosens the chains of old dog Thunder
And sends him scampering past the town?
Who upsets the paint-pots making the sky-line
Look like an old-fashioned garden in June?
Who sprinkles flowers with diamonds of dew-shine—
Are these a few pranks of old Father Moon?

—Exchange.

A BOGEY.

Fifty thousand men who work in the shoe shining and repair shops in New York are trying to secure a law closing such shops on Sunday. When the barbers sought such a law, the cry of "blue laws" was raised against them, but they won. The same cry may be expected to greet the "shine" men in their effort to secure a day of rest. The bogey of "blue laws" is kept in store for use in all such cases, but it is becoming a badly shop-worn bogey.—The Baptist.

THE END OF WAR.

War is a symptom of modern man's profound discontent with himself and his environment; and there will be no end to war until he himself has found peace. And there will be no chance of his finding peace until he has admitted honestly that he hasn't found it. When men ackuowledge that the whole thrust of their endeavor has been in the wrong direction, that they have not been able to create a civilization in which their souls can live, and that war is a way of escape from their consequent miseries and an outlet for their thwarted virtues, then the League of Nations may function to some purpose.—I. A. R. Wylie, in Harper's.

BROTHER JACK (better known as "Little Jack") was the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Maxey, of near Myrtle, Miss. Jack, who came in my experience while living a neighbor to him, was true and honest in every particular. He was a real neighbor indeed, and remembered me in a great way. I shall never forget him, with his many deeds of kindness. He assisted me in getting to my appointments. In my illness he came to my rescue. He very often would divide his means with me and would say, "It's right that we see to it that you have a living." He took pleasure in talking on religion and he believed that he was a steward of all that God placed in his possession. Jack was a member of the Friendship Methodist Church. He was a splendid singer and was choir leader in his church. Not only will his father, mother, brothers, sisters, wife and baby miss him, but all who have ever known him. Just twenty-five years old, he was such a splendid specimen of young manhood; but God in his wisdom saw best to call him to a better, purer, sweeter life, where all of God's children can praise Him forever. The bereaved sisters and brothers are: Mrs. G. A. Baker, Byhalia; Mrs. Seamon Rhea, Brooksville; Mrs. W. F. Maxey, Mrs. Daisie Smith, Mr. C. D. Maxey, Myrtle; Rev. J. S. Maxey, Corinth; Mrs. W. F. and J. A. Ferguson, New Albany; his wife, Mrs. Lois Cornell Maxey, Myrtle.

J. L. JENNINGS.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas our Heavenly Father, in his infinite wisdom, has removed from our midst Mrs. Bertie Bethea Ash, whose inspiration and faithful service we shall sadly miss; therefore, be it resolved by the Woman's Missionary Society:

1. That we express the keen sense of our loss and the appreciation of this noble woman, who was ever loyal to the great cause which lies so near our hearts.

2. That we extend to her husband and daughter our most heartfelt sympathy in this their saddest bereavement.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be placed in our minutes, one sent to the family, and one to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed by: Mrs. Janie Williams, Mrs. C. C. Evans, Mrs. R. E. McInturff.

MRS. ADDIE NEWSOM, wife of the late Monroe Easley, departed this life in March, 1927, aged 59 years and 6 months. She was initiated into the Order of the Eastern Star, Eleanor Chapter No. 105, of Grangeville, La., March, 1919. In the death of Sister Addie Easley the Methodist Church and the Order of the Eastern Star have lost a zealous, conscientious, good member. She leaves to mourn her loss six sons and two daughters. We pray that the Great Architect of the Universe may give them, with this Chapter, the great consolation that she is now resting under the light of the Star of Bethlehem, who giveth light to all them that put their trust in Him.

Resolved, That a copy of this memorium be spread upon our minutes, a copy be sent to the St. Helena Echo for publication, and to the bereaved family.

Signed by: D. R. Warren, Kate Warren, Lillie Morgan.

RESOLUTIONS.

In the death of MRS. R. B. PRESTRIDGE, the Athens Missionary Society has lost one of its much loved members. As a wife and mother, she had not a peer; as a friend, she was loyal beyond measure; as a co-worker, she was capable and willing; in her views, she was generous.

Fond memories of her will ever find an abiding place in the hearts of every member of this Society.

Whereas, God has seen fit to remove from our midst one of our most useful and faithful members, we humbly bow with submission to his Divine will. Be it resolved:

1. That an irreparable loss has come to us.

2. That we as a body extend to the bereaved family our sincere sympathy and prayer in their sad hour.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be given the family, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mrs. F. L. Brownfield, Mrs. H. L. Neel, Mrs. F. R. Dillon, Committee.

RESOLUTIONS.

We cannot see beyond the garden wall, and yet the rose that blossomed here and filled our hearts with love and cheer is growing on the other side in the beauty of a fuller life. The call of death should not cause us to grieve, but let us hope, let us believe that joy eternal waits beyond the wall.

Whereas, God in his wisdom has seen fit to remove our friend and co-worker, MRS. C. C. RAWLS, from her earthly abode and transferred her to his heavenly home; and knowing the loss the Woman's Missionary Society of the Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church, South, McComb, Miss., has sustained, we, the committee, offer the following resolutions:

Be it resolved, That we truly feel our loss by the removal of Mrs. Rawls from our ranks, and Circle 6 will indeed miss her faithful service and congenial fellowship.

Be it further resolved, That the Woman's Missionary Society extend to the family their sympathy, feeling the sorrow that has come to them by the going away of a wife and mother.

A precious one from the home is gone,
A voice that was loved is still,
A place made vacant, that never can be filled.

Signed: Mrs. T. R. Ratliff, Mrs. W. W. Robertson, Mrs. G. W. Winborn, Committee.

A GREAT CHRISTIAN LUMBERMAN PROMOTES RELIGION.

Dear Dr. Carley: For the seventh year consecutively I am conducting meetings for the Tatum Lumber Company, by invitation of Brother W. S. F. Tatum, who always pays the expenses of these campaigns. I preached the commencement sermon at Neely, Miss., last Sunday morning, and preached to large congregations in the tabernacle at Brother Tatum's timber camp in the afternoon and at night.

I preach in the tabernacle at night, and people from adjacent communities are invited to these services, and I preach to the men in the woods at noon. The company runs a train to carry the people who wish to attend the service in the woods, which is held in a beautiful spot, and large numbers avail themselves of this opportunity.

So far as I know, these meetings, promoted and supported by this big lumber company, are unique in the industrial world. To say nothing of direct spiritual results, the superintendent of the woods informs me that these annual revivals have promoted model conditions in the camp and community and greatly added to the efficiency of the men. Brother Tatum is constantly concerned for the spiritual welfare of his employees and their families.

Yours sincerely,

J. O. HANES.

ZONE MEETING AT FOXWORTH, MISS.

The second of a series of zone meetings, including the auxiliaries of the Woman's Missionary Society of Osyka Magnolia, Muddy Springs, Tylertown, Kokomo, Foxworth, and Sandy Hook, was held in the Methodist church in Foxworth, April 13, 1927. Vases and baskets of poppies decorated the church, which added just the proper setting that was needed.

The meeting was called to order at 1 p. m. by singing, "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning." Devotionals were conducted by Brother Baggett, from Foxworth, assisted by Brother Cottrell from Magnolia and Brother Ainsworth from Osyka, also prayers by Mrs. J. W. Sandell, of Magnolia, known as "Aunt Tena," and Mrs. Aletha Conerly, of Foxworth, Aunt Tena's prayer being a special one for the people of China, which touched our hearts.

Mrs. W. F. Foxworth extended to the visitors a hearty welcome, and our efficient leader, Mrs. Reid, responded.

Minutes of the last meeting held in Kokomo, Jan. 31, were read by Mrs. T. W. Andrews, of Kokomo.

Instead of having roll call every one registered as she came in, and when each auxiliary was called the members rose and were counted. We had several representatives from each church with the exception of Tylertown. Brother Bennett was having his last afternoon service of their protracted meeting, and they felt it their duty to stay there.

We were very glad to have several ladies from the Columbia auxiliary with us.

Mrs. Reid gave us a very interesting talk on her trip to the Community House at Back Bay, Biloxi. She told us how the house was built, the number of rooms, etc., and how all those babies are cared for by the nurses while their mothers are shucking oysters. They need more money to finish screening the house and do other work around the place that needs to be done.

Mrs. W. E. Conlee, of Kokomo, read a very impressive paper on, "What the Zone Meetings Mean to Me." She spoke of it as being a time of refreshing our social and spiritual relationship to each other in the great missionary movement.

Mrs. R. I. Lee, of Kokomo, favored us by singing, "When They Ring Those Golden Bells for You and Me," which was enjoyed very much by all.

Mrs. J. E. Forbes, of Sandy Hook, told us how the ladies in her community had organized a Missionary Society and had made up money to help build their church.

We could not have had a more interesting and helpful talk on "Young People's Work," than Mrs. Van Saunders, of Norfield, gave us. She stressed the Bible verse, "Remember thy Creator in the days of thy youth," and how we should talk with the children, bringing them into fellowship with Jesus by schooling them in Christian living and preparing them to take our places in the missionary work.

Mrs. Edgar Goodwill, our Social Service leader, was the only representative we had at the Council meeting at Shreveport, La., and we felt that we missed a great deal when we read it in the Missionary Voice and then heard her tell in such an interesting way about some of the great issues that were discussed at this meeting.

Our corresponding secretary, Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, read such a gratifying report from the Woman's Missionary Society of the Mississippi Conference at Brookhaven. The pledge to Council was paid and we were one of eighteen Conferences to reach the Belle Bennett Memorial goal. We are grateful to all who helped to place the name of our Conference on the Honor Roll.

Mrs. Reid responded to each one that helped in this meeting and appreciated every effort that was made to make it a success.

The next meeting will be held at Muddy Springs in June, the exact date to be decided later.

MRS. T. W. ANDREWS,
President of Kokomo Missionary Society.

ZONE MEETING AT SARDIS, MISS.

The first of the four zone meetings to be held by the Societies around Sardis was held in the Methodist church here last Saturday afternoon, and was a pronounced success, thanks to the efforts of the zone leader, Mrs. Maud Segrest, and her co-workers from the different Societies in the zone.

The auxiliary of the Sardis Society acted as hostess, as well as furnishing the program of entertainment.

Mmes. McCafferty and Owens, heads of the Junior Society, composed of children from 5 to 12 years, led the program with choruses and Bible quotations. There were also lovely solos by little Dorothy Belle Russell, who sang "America," and May Wright, who sang "In the Garden," with great expression and feeling. A little guest, Bettie Jean Cobb, a born vocalist, charmed the audience with "Little Twigs," sung to an accompaniment by her mother.

The meeting was organized by the election of Mrs. Robert E. Woodfin, of the Davis Chapel Society, secretary. Reports from the different Societies showed a satisfactory condition in all.

Miss Bessie Miller, Superintendent of Rural Work in Sardis District made an enlightening talk on the work of social service committees.

Before adjournment, a resolution of sympathy for the flood victims of the Mississippi Delta, with a desire to do all possible for them, was introduced by Miss Mollie Duval, and adopted.

A delightful repast of ice cream and cake was served after adjournment, the largest of the Juniors serving as pages.

The next zone meeting will be held at Cold Springs. XXX.

A REVIVAL AT HARMON, LA.

Rev. H. T. Young, a general evangelist for the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, conducted a two-weeks' revival at Harmon, closing Easter Sunday.

In spite of the unfavorable weather, large crowds attended the night services and enjoyed them very much, not many attending the day services, but that doesn't mean that the sermons were not good.

The plan of salvation as explained by Brother Young was so plain that the meeting was indeed very helpful to the community. Many took their stand for Christ who had never done so before, and many rededicated their lives for service. The Christians, too, were so much strengthened. We can't express our appreciation enough for what Brother Young did for us. I know he does good everywhere he goes.

The beginning of a Woman's Bible study class is one of the good results of the meeting. The men also are planning a Men's Bible study class, both of which will be very helpful to the community.

We thank God for Brother Young and the standard of religion he holds up.

IN JAPAN.

It was a rainy day, so the colporteur of the American Bible Society's Japanese agency went to a silk-thread factory. It happened to be a holiday season, and the manager felt it was useless to try to sell books there now. Yet as there were many girls in the dormitory the colporteur pleaded for an opportunity to speak to them.

Finally it was arranged that he might speak before breakfast the next morning. The colporteur was at the dormitory before 7 o'clock. About one hundred and fifty girls gathered to hear his messages. Many of them wept as he told the simple Gospel story. His whole supply of five hundred Gospels was sold at once, and an additional twenty copies sent over later.

PALE & PEAKED

Texas Lady Was Advised by Her Mother To Take Cardui, Which She Did With Good Results.

Hamilton, Texas.—Mrs. Gladys Poitevint, of this city, says: "At times I suffered awfully with pains across my back and through my sides. I would have to go to bed and stay two or three days at a time. It was very worrisome. I managed to keep going, but . . . did not enjoy myself at all.

"One day my mother remarked on how bad I looked. She said: 'You look so pale and peaked, why don't you take a bottle of Cardui?' She had taken it herself a number of times, and it had always improved her health, so she thought I had better try it.

"I got the Cardui and began taking it, and from the first dose or two I could see a change for the better. The first thing I noticed was that my appetite was improved. I began to be hungry and I enjoyed my meals. I slept better at night. My rest was so much quieter that I got the benefit from it. I kept on with the Cardui and took it for several months. The pains in my back and sides grew less until they finally quit bothering me."

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

A Child's Laxative which Mothers Can Rely On

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he constantly advised mothers to give only a harmless laxative which would help to establish natural bowel "regularity."

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin mothers have a regulating laxative which they can depend upon whenever a child is constipated, bilious, feverish or sick from a cold, indigestion or sour stomach. All children love its pleasant taste.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself how perfectly it cleanses and regulates the bowels of infants and children.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Do you know that the offerings from Sunday School Day and Missionary Day have been sent to the treasurer, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Ruleville, Miss.? We need both of these amounts to carry on the work.

Those who are planning to have Cokesbury courses taught should write Rev. E. G. Mohler, Grenada, Miss., as soon as possible. We hope to have from twenty to fifty Cokesbury schools taught during the summer. We are anxious to have the places and dates so teachers can go from one school to another that we may save time and expense.

The school at Iuka, in session at this time, is a great success. The hospitable people of the town have graciously entertained above twenty-five young people from a distance. It would not be possible to help these country churches if the homes of the people were closed against these teachers. Forty are attending who are taking their first course. It is not possible to estimate the good that will be accomplished because of the kindness of the Iuka people.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

A number of schools have observed Sunday School Day and the offerings are coming in. Schools observing the day are urged to send in the offering as soon as possible. If you have not received the program for Sunday School Day, write us and we will send it at once. To date there are seven names on the Honor Roll, and a number of other names are expected to be added soon. Those pastors who have already had an observance and sent in the offering from every school on a circuit, stations or half stations, or have observed the Day and sent in an offering equivalent to ten cents per member as listed in the Journal, have been placed on the Honor Roll. Those names to date are: W. J. Dawson, Shubuta; S. F. Harkey, Bay St. Louis; A. S. Byrd, Oak Ridge circuit; J. L. Carter, Mount Olive; B. M. Hunt, Gloster; J. L. Neill, Yazoo City; O. S. Lewis, Natchez.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE NOTES.

The Lafayette Standard Training School opened on Sunday, May 1, at 3 p.m. We reached Lafayette Sunday morning in time for the Sunday school hour. Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder, preached at 11 a.m., and Rev. F. D. Dawson, Conference Superintendent of Texas, preached at the evening hour. Brother Dawson is teaching in the school. Crowley was well represented at the Training School, and a number of other schools are cooperating. The spirit of the school is fine. The writer enjoyed a stay in the hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Rae Thomas. The faculty is composed of Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., Mrs. R. E. Smith, Rev. F. D. Dawson, and Rev. A. K. McLellan.

On Tuesday, May 3, I attended District Council meeting at First Church in Shrevepirt. This trip enabled me to get a very clear conception of the high water situation up the Red River— in places the water reached the second step of the coach of my train.

The newly-elected Secretary of the Shreveport District, Mr. R. H. Nelson, presided at the Council meeting. Several of the district officers were present with good reports. The matter of the Standard Training School to be held at Mangum Memorial, May 8-13, was discussed. Sunday School Day service was likewise discussed. The Elementary Superintendent of our Conference, Mrs. W. W. Holmes, was present and told of her recent Elementary District-wide conference held at Shreveport on April 29.

In looking over the report of the General Secretary for the past year, we find that Centenary College received 408 Standard Credits in 1926. Duke University made the highest average of the colleges, with 856.

In a recent letter from Mr. L. F. Sensabaugh, of the General Board, he explains a recent re-interpretation of C and B type programs that will be of great interest to our workers. The scoring system is much broader and gives credit for individual points that previously were lost unless certain other things were accomplished by a school. When this new system is explained at your Workers' Council, we feel sure you will find it advantageous.

The recent Lake Charles District Conference elected the following officers: A. M. Mayo, Lake Charles, District Secretary; Mrs. Clarence McCookle, Crowley, Elementary Superintendent; Adolescent, Mrs. J. N. McDonald, Leesville, Miss Mary Cropper, Crowley; Adult, Rev. L. R. Nease, Gueydan; Teacher Training, Rev. J. D. Fomby, Barham; Parent Teacher, Mrs. W. M. Buchannan, Lake Arthur; Missions, Mr. Cromnis.

Dr. B. P. Taylor, Educational Director of the Standard Training School scheduled for Baton Rouge this week, states that he has 125 enlisted for the various courses. This promises to be the largest and best school ever held at Baton Rouge.

We are sorry to report that Rev. Clarence White, pastor at Marksville, has been on the sick list at the Baptist Hospital, Alexandria. Another out-of-town Methodist at the Baptist Hospital is Mrs. Breeden, from Winnfield. We trust that both of these good people will soon be out again.

We have received a check from Vivian covering the Sunday School Day offering, which has been forwarded to Brother Mayo at Lake Charles. We understand that Alexandria's Superintendent asked for $150 on that day, and we trust this goal was reached.

We acknowledge receipt of the Monthly Bulletin of the Campti Methodist Church, of which Brother P. O. Lowrey is pastor-editor. The Bulletin is always full of good things, and we notice they are planning a fine young people's rally to be held at Davis Springs on Saturday, May 21, when Mr. Van Carter will be in charge.

A letter from Brother W. D. Kleinschmidt, presiding elder of the Ruston District, sends a tentative program for his District Sunday School Conference to be held at Simsboro in July, on which the Conference staff will take part, and this promises to be a fine day.

Rev. W. H. Lantrip, of Pollock charge, writes: "We closed a very successful meeting at Pollock last night. Had 20 additions. There were 80 scholars at Sunday school last Sunday."

ELEMENTARY NOTES.

Several departments received recognition for attainment of rank during the month of April. The Cradle Roll Department of the Brandywine Church, Barlow circuit, attained eight points on its Program of Work, and was recognized as Advanced. The Cradle Roll at Flora also received the Advanced seal, and the Junior group there was awarded the red seal certificate for Progressive rank, or the attainment of at least six points on the Progressive Work.

At the meeting of the Elementary Council of the Conference in Jackson this month, Miss Margaret Patterson checked the Elementary Groups of Capitol Street Church. The Cradle Roll group received the first Standard Seal to be awarded to a B Type Cradle Roll Department in our Conference. The Beginners Department, working on the A standard, received recognition for Progressive work. Both Primary and Junior Departments were advanced on the B program.

A number of other groups are going to work on the programs. With several new approved checkers for Elementary Departments more of this work will be done in the various districts.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION ON THE BARLOW CHARGE.

Some months ago an article appeared in the Advocate coocerning a Sunday School Workers' Convention on the Barlow charge, Brookhaven District.

The second convention was held at Lebanon church, and it was a success. The morning was used in talks by prominent Sunday school workers, and these talks were followed by a sermon preached by Rev. O. C. Hull.

There was a good number of people present, among whom were thirty-one Baptists; and several other denominations were represented.

Plans were put forth for a Cokesbury Training School on the charge in August.

Our pastor, W. C. Baker, is well pleased with our work, and asks the prayers of all.

FROM ELLISVILLE, MISS.

We have just closed a most successful meeting at Ellisville, with Brother Claude P. Jones, our Conference evangelist, assisting me; his wife as pianist, and S. C. Flowers, of Laurel, leading in the singing.

This little company of Christian workers soon won the hearts of all the people who heard them, and each in his place was a great force in making our meeting a success.

Brother Jones is a forceful speaker; knows the Scriptures, understands its teachings, broadcasts in good old Methodist style, and presents the truth fearlessly. Sam Jones once said, after presenting a matter concerning some sin he hated so much, and in a most commonplace way resting his chin in his left hand and looking quizically at his audience, "You don't have any trouble understanding me, do you?" You do not have any trouble understanding Brother Claude Jones.

Our meeting lasted twelve days, and our audiences were splendid in numbers and interest all the way through. In the day services quite a good audience each day would sit and listen with the greatest interest and inspiration. The house was filled at evening services with interested audiences.

Brother Jones is humorous, and has a personality all his own, and people of all stations in life become interested from the first service. In his appeals to the audiences he is kind, sympathetic, loving and tender, and filled with the Spirit; thus he gets a response to every proposition. In two of our services, I heard a number say, it was the sweetest service they were ever in.

Brother Flowers' singing was appreciated by all, and every one speaks most heartily in praise of his services rendered, thus adding immensely to the success of the meeting.

Mrs. Jones, always pleasant and happy and courteous, is great in her work with the children, and helping in the music; no one could wish for any better help than she.

Many came reconsecrating themselves to the work of the church, expressing a desire to be of greater service to mankind.

Twenty-six came, offering themselves for life service, saying they wanted to be obedient to the will of our Lord and Savior. Thirty-seven were added to the church, two by letter, and thirty-three on profession of faith. Three of these joined the Baptist church, and one joined the Presbyterian church.

Truly the Lord's Spirit was with us in our meeting, using each one in his work to revive his work here in our splendid town, and to make his church here a great blessing to humanity, and thus to the world. Any one wishing a revival which will last, and which will be a blessing to pastor and people, and leave his church in a healthful, spiritual condition, will not make a mistake in getting Brother Claude P. Jones and his little band to help them. Be sure to write him, if you wish to engage him.

SOME COMMENTS.

My Dear Brother Carley: I have just finished reading this week's issue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. It is an interesting issue for several reasons.

First, I find on the front page your editorial giving statistics of the various denominations for 1926 and lo and behold, our Southern Methodist Church made a gain of only 4,199 with a membership of two and a half million. In other words, it took over 600 members to bring in one other member, or, as we call it in business, "land a prospect." How long do you think a business would last at that rate?

Then I turn to the next page and I find one of our ministers, strange to say, confessing to believe in the first chapter of Genesis as to the origin of man, yet defending the action of the Educational Association's action in condemning legislation against the teaching of evolution in our schools. Personally, I cannot see any more reason why a State cannot pass laws, and justly so, against the teaching of a falsehood that destroys both physical and spiritual lives than any other remedial legislation. The phrase, "separation of church and State," in my humble opinion, has been used too often as a bugaboo to frighten.

Personally, I was not surprised to see the resolution of our Educational Association, for I had heard some of our teachers in our Methodist colleges call Genesis an "inspired myth" (however that could be possible), and from one of our students in such a college I have heard how one of our leading teachers calls the narrative of Adam's fall "an allegory to show that sin was in the world only," etc. But I was dumbfounded when I thought of the boldness of such a resolution in the face of hundreds, yea, I hope thousands, in our church who believe God's Word literally, and are hurt to the "marrow of their bones" to see our great church aiding the Clarence Darrow side of this question against that great Protestant Christian patriot, who virtually gave his life for the cause. I refer to W. J. Bryan. I wonder if teaching of this kind had anything to do with the paucity of gained membership for 1926.

From the above, you realize that I was much pleased to see the next article by Brother J. W. Ramsey, and agree with him thoroughly in his conclusions that if these things are not corrected, "American civilization must go the way of all the nations that forget God."

Thank God for the resolutions of the Columbus District of the North Mississippi Conference, and others, condemning the resolutions of our educational body. I believe they "hit the nail on the head" when they said, "without such laws, unbelievers and infidels are left without rebuke or restraint to continue their faith-wrecking asseverations and denials of Biblical records."

God grant that the rank and file of our church may rise as a whole in denunciation of any teaching, and especially in our Christian colleges, that assails the truth of God's Holy Word.

Yours in His cause,

M. F. WILSON, M. D.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE.

To all Pastors and Epworth Leaguers: We are indeed sorry to have to inform you that on account of our inability to secure the cots we have been using for our Epworth League Assembly, we are forced to limit our delegation to the number Whitworth College will take care of with the regular equipment.

This means that after taking care of the Assembly workers, we will have only space enough for one delegate from each Senior Chapter, or twenty from each district.

Each Chapter must elect the delegate to represent the Chapter and register the name with the District Secretary before May 25. The District Secretary will furnish the delegate selected a letter to present to Miss McMullin at the Assembly, showing that he or she is entitled to a bed as a representative from his or her Chapter. Make sure you have this letter from the District Secretary. Five of the number allotted each district must be boys—only five.

Brother Hardin Provides for Pastors.

Rev. P. D. Hardin has agreed to make provision for pastors who wish to attend the Assembly, provided they advise him of their intention to attend in time for him to make such provision. Pastors who will be accompanied by their wives should advise Brother Hardin of this. Meals, of course, will be taken in the college dining hall.

Any Legauers who can arrage for his or her own cot or bed, can, of course, come and bring such with them and a place can be found to place them; however, it must be understood that Leaguers furnishing their own cots will have to pay as much to the college as the others, as all beds are free, only meals being charged for.

Please give this as much publicity as possible, and see that no Leaguer leaves home without provision for a place to stay.

Bring sheets, pillows, soap, towels, etc.

For any other information desired, write your District Secretary or this office.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE LEAGUE NEWS.

Tri-County Union Meets at Picayune.

The second meeting of the Tri-County Union for this year, Seashore District, was held at the Picayune Methodist church on April 28, with one hundred and three young people in attendance.

The devotional service was held on the lawn, and was in the form of a candle service. A number of Leaguers formed the cross, and all others formed a circle about the cross. Each was given a candle. The leader, Mr. D. C. Camp, led the song, "Let the Lower Lights Be Burning," after which he spoke briefly of the significance of the cross and the burning candles. Miss Cora Weston read an appropriate poem, and Miss Coleta Arren read the Scripture, Matt. 20:19-20. Rev. C. A. Schultz, of Lumberton, prayed, and the quartet sang, "Memories of Galilee." At the conclusion of the devotional service all adjourned to the church for the business session.

The first act of the business meeting was the awarding of the banner to Poplarville League, which had a total of thirty members from a League of forty members. At this session a motion was made and carried that the Union take a share, $10 in the Back Bay Mission, Biloxi. The nominating committee reported the following nominations, who were duly elected for the ensuing year: President, D. C. Camp; vice president, Ellen Olsen; secretary, Myra O'Donnell; treasurer, I. H. Jenkins; corresponding secretary, Fannie Rowlands. The new officers were then introduced to the Union. The retiring president, Miss Weston, was given a rising vote of thanks for her faithful services. After deciding to meet at Poplarville during the month of July, the business session was adjourned, and all Leaguers went gaily back to the lawn for a 45-minute social.

The social hour was in form of a Gypsy social. The Leaguers were divided into groups: Red, Blue, Yellow, Indigo, Purple, Orange and Green, and all were given their colors. A number of games and contests were played: stunt relay, checkers, chalk race. The pastors present were the judges, and at the end of the games the "Indigos" were given first place and awarded a string of beads. The "Reds" won second place, and were given some earrings. The "Oranges" came third, and their reward was a bandana handkerchief. After the prizes were awarded an attractive plate lunch, consisting of chicken salad, potato chips, pickles, crackers and iced tea, was served to the guests.

This was the first meeting of the Tri-County Union held in Picayune since the afternoon we met to organize, and all present voted it a great success.

New Leagues in Jackson District.

Jackson District is the proud possessor of five new Leagues. They are located at Lottville, Madison, Yazoo circuit, Millsaps Memorial (Jackson), and Ridgeland. The secretary of the Jackson District writes that she has found a splendid League at Clinton also. All the new Leagues are doing excellent work and their secretary is indeed proud of them.

Canton League Holds Sunrise Easter Service.

The Canton Epworth League had a "Sunrise Prayer Service" on Easter morning, after which the girls served breakfast. The inspiration for this prayer meeting came from Miss Berta Nall, who told the Leaguers at Institute of the Sunrise Service planned by the Hattiesburg Leaguers. We know of two other Leagues who held Sunrise Services on Easter morn. They are Laurel (First Methodist Church), and Picayune. Those Leagues who have not yet held a sunrise prayer service should certainly plan to do so, in order that they, too, may have this wonderful experience.

AN APPRECIATION.

In view of the love and respect we bear for our friend, Mrs. L. S. Brewster and family, Okolona, Miss., we ask to be permitted to submit a few words in commendation of her son, A. L. Brewster, a very worthy young man, who has made application to and been licensed to preach in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Mr. Brewster was born in 1905. He graduated in 1925 from Okolona, Miss., High School. He spent one year each at Bowling Green, Ky., and Hendrix College, Conway, Ark. He will return to Hendrix for the term 1927-28, to complete his studies, after which, if not providentially hindered, he will take up his life work.

We predict for Brother Brewster a useful career and one significant of good; trusting him to remain, as now, faithful to the orthodox teachings of Christianity as presented by the M. E. Church, South, which we believe he will.

We also take this occasion to speak of Mr. F. De La Bar, formerly of Meridian, Miss, but who is now making his home in Okolona. Mr. De La Bar, having been converted from a reckless railroad life to that of a Christian's, whose interest and influence for good has meant much to Okolona.

We speak of these now, rather than scatter flowers after death.

HOW THE PILGRIM MOTHER

Kept Her Family in Good Health

A statue to the Pilgrim Mother was recently unveiled at Plymouth Rock, Mass. Through her we honor every pioneer woman who endured privation and hardships that a nation might live. Shoulder to shoulder with her husband she built a home in the wilderness and reared her sturdy sons and daughters. She cooked and sewed. She spun and wove for her growing family and when they were ill, she brewed potent remedies from roots and herbs—such roots and herbs as are now used in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

A Massachusetts woman writes:

"I was all run-down, with no ambition. I was tired all the time. Sometimes I would be in bed two or three days at a time, and the doctor would have to give me something to quiet me. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have had wonderful results from it. I felt better after taking the second bottle, and I am never without it in the house now. I have told lots of people about it, and they say it helps them, too. I am willing to answer letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. J. W. Critchett, 2 Hammond Street, Cambridge, Mass.

OUR ABILITY TO PAY IN FULL.

In 1923 the Southern Methodist benevolence dollar was worth 71 cents; in 1924 it was worth 69 cents; in 1925, 68 cents; and in 1926, 67 cents. We have had an increase in membership in these four years of more than 300,000, and a corresponding increase in wealth, yet there has been no material increase in the assessments. In voting not to increase the asssessments, the General Conference did not plan a retreat or merely to hold our own, but to go forward by bringing up the value of the benevolence dollar to one hundred cents.

Are we able to pay one hundred cents on the dollar, to raise the full amount assessed? Let us see.

We have 2,610,620 members (Yearbook, 1926). The assessment for general work is $2,130,000 per year, or only 82 cents per member. The assessment for Conference work is about $2,500,000 per year, or 96 cents per member. The total amount per member necessary to pay both these items in full is $1.78. Add to this the amount needed for district work, which is less than 15 cents per member, and the total is not quite two dollars per member. It will take more than four times the amount asked for in the special million-dollar missionary campaign to pay the benevolences in full, yet a minimum of $2 from each member will do this with a small surplus. Five cents per week per member will pay them in full with a handsome excess. Think of it! Only five cents per week per member! Who will say that Southern Methodism is not equal to such a task?

Again, let us consider this question from the standpoint of the financial resources of our people. What is the annual income of our church as a whole? We can estimate it from the statistics of the per capita income of the nation. The latest figures available on this subject are those compiled by the National Bureau of Economic Research of New York City for the year 1924, which place the per capita income at $554. This includes every man, woman, and child in this country—the immigrant, the Negro, and the driftwood of society. The income of church people is no doubt above this figure. But at $554 per capita the income of our church is $1,446,283,480 per year. The tithe of this amount is $144,628,348. We paid for all purposes last year $42,105,232, leaving an unpaid balance on our tithe of $102,523,116.

As a church we are giving only 2.9 per cent of our income, which is considerably less than one-third of our tithe. We could pay an amount equal to last year's deficit on the benevolences out of our unpaid tithe (1926) and still have more than a hundred million dollars left. Of the money that we do give, only one dollar out of every four goes for work outside the local church. We are spending nine times as much on congregational expenses as we are paying on benevolences. "As much for others as for ourselves" is one of the stewardship goals adopted by our last General Conference. Either a small increase in the percentage of our giving, or a more Christlike proportioning of the money that we do give will make it easily possible to pay the benevolent assessments in full and report a surplus.—Methodist Layman.

FROM THE DENHAM SPRINGS CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: I believe that perhaps you and some of the readers of the Christian Advocate may be interested in the progress that has been made on the Denham Springs charge during this Conference year.

As you know, this is my first year on this charge. Since coming here a new parsonage has been built, which is very comfortable and which has been furnished by the Missionary Societies on the charge. We recently completed also our new church at Denham Springs, and I believe that we have one of the prettiest, if not the prettiest, church in the State for a community the same size as Denham Springs. Since Conference we have organized three Epworth Leagues and one new Sunday school on the charge, and they are all functioning nicely. Last Thursday we held our second quarterly conference, and the reports from all the departments on the charge indicated that good progress was being made. So far we have had the best year financially in the history of the charge.

We have had a number of additions to the church, on one Sunday taking into the church an entire family of five persons, the youngest of whom was 15 years old. During the week preceding Easter Sunday a series of sermons was preached, and they were well attended.

We are now engaged in a revival meeting, and are meeting with good results. Rev. Thomas M. Lemly, of Jackson, Miss., is doing the preaching.

We are planning and doing lots of things in this field of Christian harvest, and the people of the community are behind the work wholeheartedly.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

MUST HAVE HELP.

It is impossible at the present time to give an accurate estimate of the loss that has been suffered in the overflooded sections, but it is evident that the loss is tremendous. It is manifest that this loss will react upon the church, especially in the matter of pastoral support. In addition to our three Conferences—Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi—others have large areas in the inundated territory, so the situation is much more than local.

Some help has already been extended to some of the pastors in the overflowed section, but it has been temporary and inadequate. It is urgently needed that a church-wide appeal be made for help in this extremely serious situation, and that the appeal have all the weight that official authority can give it. We therefore suggest that the College of Bishops, the Board of Missions and the Board of Church Extension gather reliable information at once and appoint a time throughout the church for contributions to be made for the maintenance of our work in the devastated sections.

The time for these contributions should be set for an early date. We believe our people are ready to make liberal contributions and are only waiting for the word to be given. Our brethren in the overflowed sections must be made to know that they have the sympathy and support of the whole church.

HIGH SCHOOL AND COLLEGE.

At this season of the year thousands of our young people are being graduated from our high schools and colleges. Many of them have worked faithfully and have acquired the maximum amount of knowledge and culture that the schools could give them, and all of them have done the work sufficiently well to entitle them to the graduating diploma. They ought to be better prepared for life with this training than they could be without it.

The chief product of our schools, though, should be good character, rather than scholarship and culture. We do not underestimate the value of scholarship and culture; but we do not underestimate the value of character. "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches"—and a wealth of superficial culture is a poor substitute for right thinking, right living, and right acting. Our schools are expected to strengthen their students in all these things.

We are glad to believe that this great company of young people now going out from our schools will be a real addition to the moral forces of the world. Some of them are far from what they ought to be; but most of them have, under skillful and consecrated teachers, been brought to face the real issues of life and have learned that the moral values are the supreme values. The world ought to be better—and we believe it will be better—because of their entrance upon the stage of action.

The graduate that does not show by his whole attitude toward life that his school days have made him serious, earnest, and consecrated as he faces its problems, opportunities, and privileges, confesses to the world that he has missed the great thing he ought to have acquired. The test of what they got from school is in what they give to the world.

"EXACTLY AT THE TIME."

Among the directions given to preachers when they are admitted into full connection is the following: "Do everything exactly at the time."

This is a wise injunction, especially since it has come to pass that a great many things are on the program of the modern Methodist preacher. Unless things are done at the time appointed, it is hard to get them done at all.

We have in mind at this time especially the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment. We are in the midst of the period officially and specifically set apart for the collection of the pledges that have been made to this sacred cause. If all pastors would take this matter up with their people at this, the appointed time, they would be fulfilling their obligations as careful servants of the church, they would be clearing the decks for other important duties that come later, and, above all, they would be ministering beautifully and helpfully to the needs of those who have labored heroically in other days and into whose labors they have entered.

BISHOP WARREN A. CANDLER.
In charge of Episcopal District No. 1, who will deliver the Literary Address at Millsaps College next Tuesday, May 24. He is presiding over the New Orleans District Conference this week.

THE NEW ORDER IN THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS.

We do not know why the College of Bishops, at its recent meeting in Nashville, agreed that the presidency of that body should rotate according to seniority and that a secretary should be elected for a term of four years instead of for an indefinite period. We do not know of any special reason why a change should be made, nor do we see any special objection to the change as made. It seems to us to be merely a detail of organization that the bishops can settle to suit themselves. The church has not conferred any special authority upon the senior bishop and the bishop who holds the office of secretary, so nothing is to be lost by those who have held those positions and nothing is to be gained by those who are elected to them—except, perhaps, an additional burden of routine work. If there is any satisfaction in the distinction of "primus inter pares," we suppose all the bishops should enjoy it in due season.

RECALLING A MISSIONARY.

At the recent session of the Board of Missions, meeting in Nashville, on recommendation of Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, bishop in charge of that field, it was decided to withdraw Walter A. Hearn from the China mission field on account of his "alleged heretical belief." The Christian Advocate (Nashville) of May 13, in an account of the meeting of the Board, says: "He (Mr. Hearn) is reported to have expressed belief in the spiritual resurrection of Jesus Christ, but not in his bodily resurrection, and for such expression he was refused full connection at the last session of the China Conference. The provision is made, however, that Mr. Hearn may present in person additional facts within thirty days after receiving notice of the Board's action if he desires. Mr. Hearn is professor of religious education at Soochow University."

If Mr. Hearn avails himself of the privilege of appearing before the Board to explain his belief and it appears from his statement to the Board that he is out of harmony with the Methodist belief, the Board's action can only be approved and commended. The outcome, of course, will have no bearing on Mr. Hearn's character—a man may be unorthodox from the Methodist standpoint, though a good Christian. The point at issue, as we understand it, is whether or not Mr. Hearn is an orthodox Methodist. We hope he is.

IS THERE PRESENT DANGER OF TOO MUCH FAITH?

By Bishop Warren A. Candler

Jesus seems to have feared that men might have too little faith, and suffer by lack of it.

Often he rebuked his disciples with the words, "O ye of little faith."

These words he used to chide them for their want of filial trust in God's providential care: "Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to-day is and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith" (Matthew vi:30).

Again, when the Apostles were affrighted to the point of despair by the storm on the sea of Galilee, he said, "Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith" (Matthew viii:26).

He closed the parable of the unjust judge and the importunate widow with the solemn question, "When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" (Luke xviii:8).

With these words of warm approval he commended the faith of the Roman Centurion, "Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel" (Matthew viii:10).

To the persistent prayer of the Canaanitish woman on behalf of her daughter he responded: "O woman, great is thy faith; be it unto thee even as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that hour" (Matthew xv:28).

To the nameless "woman in the city," who anointed him with the precious contents of her alabaster box in the house of Simon, the Pharisee, he said: "Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace" (Luke vii:50).

In all the gospels there is not recorded an instance of his correcting any one for having too much faith, nor one case of strong faith which he did not approve.

It may be said, however, that the faith which he so uniformly approved was not any particular article of belief but only personal trust of him. This is quite true, but all personal trust in him must have rested then, as it does now, upon sound convictions concerning his person and character. Any other sort of trust would have been as now, a blind superstition or an incoherent sentiment, or a baseless impulse. We may be sure no such senseless trust met then, or meets now, his approval. No faith worthy of the name can fall short of believing that God "is and that he is the rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Hebrew xi:6).

In keeping with the teaching of their Lord the Apostles and the primitive church put the utmost emphasis on faith, on believing.

In the New Testament there are above two hundred and fifty passages in which faith in one form or another is mentioned and commended, and it is no unintelligent or unintelligible emotion that is thus approved by them. It is always and everywhere a potential force of evangelical belief. By faith hearts are purified (Acts xv:9). The "just live by faith" (Romans i:17). Men are "justified by faith" (Romans v:2). "Righteousness is attained by faith" (Romas iv:5 and ix:30). Souls are "saved through faith" (Ephesians ii:8). Mighty achievements—kingdoms subdued, righteousness wrought, promises obtained, mouths of lions stopped, violence of fire quenched, weakness made strong, and victorious valor in conflict—are all attributed to the power of faith.

Steadfastness of faith is urged, and the loss of it is reckoned as the worst of disasters, even as a "shipwreck" (I Timothy i:19; vi:4;v:8 and 12; vi:10).

In one of the apostolic writings the following words are used, which specifically refer to the deposit of truth committed to the care and protection of the church: "Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write unto you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you that ye should earnestly contend for the faith which was once for all delivered unto the saints" (Jude 3). The writer of this brief epistle then proceeds to show how the most repulsive immoralities and hideous pollutions had issued from rejections of the truth by men, who had "denied the only Lord God and our Lord Jesus Christ;" and that the faithful might escape such dreadful evils he exhorts them "to remember the words which were spoken before the Apostles of our Lord Jesus Christ" and to build themselves up "on their most holy faith" (verses 17 and 20).

In view of all these unquestionable teachings of Jesus and the Apostles, it is amazing that in these latter days men have arisen who seem to feel called to diminish faith, repudiate historic Christianity, and propagate doubt in place of establishing belief in the Christian revelation.

They seem to fear that the present generation may have too much faith and indulge excessive belief.

From pupils and professors' chairs and the periodical press they unceasingly proclaim what they do not believe, and rarely declare what they do believe.

They proclaim the senseless dogma that it makes no difference what a man believes if he only lives right, assuming thereby that error is as efficacious as truth for right living and that the beliefs of the intellect have no effect on the acts of the will.

They never tire of saying that "the Christian religion is a way of life," and not a matter of belief at all.

Christianity most truly is "a way of life," and it is such a way as no man can enter upon or pursue without faith in Christ. It is a narrow way, the gate to which is strait, and only by a strong faith can men walk within it.

St. Paul teaches that with "the heart man believeth unto rightousness" (Romans x:10); and of his own life he says: "I am crucified with Christ; nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me" (Galatians ii:20).

The entire Epistle to the Galatians is a protest against reducing Christianity to "the way of life" which the Judaizers taught as indispensable to the Christian religion; and Paul with equal emphasis would have protested against reducing it to a bare system of earth-bound ethics. Against such impotent legalism he would have leveled his burning words, "Though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that we have preached unto you, let him be accursed" (Galatians i:8).

Paul's remedy for the sin of the world was not contained in a pill-box of ethical "principles," but was powerful faith in an atoning Saviour who was crucified, dead and buried, and whom God the Father raised from the dead and "set him at his own right hand in the havenly places, far above all principality, and power, and might and dominion, and every name that is named, not only in this world, but also in that which is to come; and hath put all things under his feet, and gave him to be the head over all things to the church" (Ephesians i:20-22).

Throughout the preaching and writings of Paul and the other Apostles, whose utterances have come down to us, persists the majestic echo of the thrilling words of John the Baptist, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world" (John i:29).

In comparison with such a heavenly proclamation how puny are the pitiful proposals of mere systems of ethical "principles" as a substitute for the "great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed to us by them that heard!" (Hebrews ii:3).

"Lord increase our faith" that we may embrace it with all our hearts, and save us from the minimizing teachings of men who having "erred from the faith" would have us believe as little as possible!

HONESTY.

By Rev. J. Tillery Lewis.

One of the paragraphs of the General Rules of the Methodist church deals with the matter of honesty. The paragraph admonishes against "borrowing without a probability of paying and taking up goods without a probability of paying for them."

Of course there are some men, possibly many, who are shorter of good judgment, in matters financial, than they are short in honesty of purpose to pay outstanding obligations. It is my humble judgment that there are many folks who borrow money and take up goods, not only with the purpose to meet their obligations when they fall due, but when they borrow or take up goods it is probable, from the outlook,that they will be able to meet their obligations when they fall due. Owing to individual misfortune or a slump in the market like the one we had in cotton last fall, or because of a disaster like the present Mississippi River flood, many good and honest men are rendered unable to meet their outstanding financial obligations. Said honest men endure such a degree of embarrassment, chagrin and humiliation over the fact that they cannot meet their obligations that they are hardly able to face the world. These men are worried over their failure to meet their obligations as much as the normal man worries over other grave situations.

However, honest men do not dodge their creditors. When an honest man either makes a fool of himself by taking too great a risk, or is plunged into financial ruin through some misfortune, said honest man, sometimes with great embarrassment, goes to his creditors, makes a clean breast of his exact unfortunate condition, and gives his word of honor that just as soon as possible he will meet his obligations. Though years are necessary to pay off his debts, the honest man addresses himself thereto with grim determination. Sir Walter Scott, the famous novelist of England, was such a man. Through poor business judgment, Mr. Scott's partner in business failed the firm with a great indebtedness. Though Sir Walter was at that time an old man, he addressed himself anew to the task of writing novels that he might clear his name of debt and hand to his posterity a name untarnished with debt or anything else. Thus it is with honest men.

All Christians are honest men. No man can live daily with the Christ without being an honest man. Jesus does not make companions of us mortals until we allow God to cleanse us from all sin and put within us a heart of purity, truthfulness and honesty. Thousands of dishonest men have been converted, but just as soon as converted these men begin paying their past neglected honest obligations, and they continue therein until all their obligations have been paid in full.

Preachers, officials of church and Sunday school, choir members and the members in the pews (and those who should be in the pews) occupy a peculiar position before humanity and God. God stands for honesty; the church stands for honesty. When either a preacher or a church member fails to ring true to God and the church on the question of honesty, the world thereby has occasion to criticise. Said members (the more prominent the member the greater the offense) who fail in honesty are a stumbling block to the work of the church of God.

In these days all of us must watch ourselves lest we find ourselves driven to financial straits through carelessness. These are hard times in which to live four-square to God and to man in all relationships of life. In the past it might have been (though I doubt it) that humanity did not have to watch, pray and work hard to walk circumspectly as God's children before the world; but that church member, whether preacher or layman, who would to-day stand perfectly before the world as God's representative must concentrate his mind and soul on the one aim of pleasing God and then drive ahead with grim determination to let nothing cause him to fail in his obligations to God and to mankind. Possibly the greatest church tragedy that ever came to any community is a preacher's moral or financial failure. Close up beside that tragedy stands that of an official of the church or any of its organizations who fails either morally or financially. But in the sight of God the tragedy of the unknown member's failure, morally or financially, is as great as is that of a prominent preacher's fall.

For God's sake, because we love him; for the church's sake, because we love the church; for humanity's sake, because Christ died to save mankind, is it not the oustanding duty of all us church members to studiously and painstakingly try to live honestly before God and man? God knows the answer of the soul of each of us to that question. The world will know our reaction thereto by our lives.

GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Grenada District Conference closed its session at Oxford, May 5. The presiding elder, Rev. E. S. Lewis, presided.

A very optimistic note was sounded throughout the conference. The pastors seemed to be pleased with their appointments and the reports indicated that they have been doing good work.

One very interesting feature of the program was the fact that 135 additions to the church on profession of faith were reported. A large number of these were reported by pastors who have not yet held their regular revivals. This report is the more gratifying when we realize that one-half of the Conference year is yet before us.

Another pleasing feature of our conference was the large attendance of laymen. The presiding elder said it was about the largest attendance of laymen that he had ever seen at a district conference, and he has been seeing them for a long time—maybe the editor can remember how long. We also had every pastor in the district present.

Our district is making progress in more than one way. We now have 28 Epworth Leagues, an increase of nine over last year. The reports of the pastors indicated an increase in interest in the work of the Woman's Missionary Society. The building program of the church is also being looked after in this district. Some new churches are being built and others are planning to build.

All our time at the conference was not spent in attending to the business of the church. We had some time for worship. We had two great messages brought to us by two of our own preachers, Brother J. H. Holder and Brother Mellville Johnson. A very fine spirit of fellowship was manifested at this conference. Every one seemed to enjoy it.

Our next district conference will be held at Grenada. W. L. ROBINSON, Sec'y.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Concerning the Memphis Resolutions of Protest to Legislatures of Tennessee and Mississippi.

Whereas it seems prudent and advisable to take some action as a matter of record of position and policy; and whereas the meeting of our church school men in Memphis, Tenn., on Feb. 10, 1927, did pass certain resolution of protest to the Tennessee and Mississippi Legislatures relative to certain statutes prohibiting the teaching in tax-supported schools of the States any theory that man descended from a lower order of animal; and whereas the action taken does not represent the position of this conference, nor do we believe it is the position of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and whereas the action can but divide our forces in the program of religious education and in leadership training in our schools; and whereas the issue is entirely secular and wholly outside of Christian development, not being a law or statute that limits the teaching or Christian liberty in any church school whatsoever; therefore, be it resolved, that—

1. We do not commend or endorse the Memphis resolutions of protest to the Tennessee and Mississippi Legislatures concerning the statutes prohibiting unproven theories of the origin of man being taught the children of the public school grades.

2. We commend the Tennessee and Mississippi Legislatures in protecting our children of the public school grades from the unproven theories of biological science.

3. We urge our educators to face the problems of religious education in an attitude that will strengthen faith in God, and His revelation to us in the book of Genesis.

4. Our educators, whether laymen or preachers, are expected to accept our standards of doctrine in belief and teaching.

5. While we believe in unlimited field in university study in science, we see no good reason for the undue emphasis now being given biological science in college and undergraduate work.

6. Our greatest problem is not science, but sin. The mission of the church school is not to emphasize the origin of man, but his destiny; not so much his creation in Genesis as his re-creation in Christ Jesus.

Concerning the Seashore Camp Ground Property.

Resolved, That this district conference notes with approval the action taken recently by the Seashore District Conference in efforts to keep and maintain the Seashore Camp Ground property for school and Christian assembly purposes.

Resolved (2), That we request the New Orleans and the Alabama Advocates to publish this our commendation of said action.

THE VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Vicksburg District Conference met in the Methodist church at Gloster, Miss., at 8:30 o'clock, May 3, 1927, Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder, in the chair. The devotional exercises were conducted by the presiding elder.

The conference was called to order, and the secretary of the last conference called the roll. On account of the flooded condition of the delta section of the district, about one-third of both preachers and lay delegates were absent.

After the roll call, Rev. J. B. Holyfield was nominated and elected secretary of the conference. The presiding elder announced the usual committees.

The pastors' reports were called for; they indicated a healthy spiritual condition prevailing throughout the district. Most of the charges made a fine response to the mission special; however, a number of them, because of local conditions, failed to put on the every-member canvass. Up to the time of the flood, prospects were good for the best year in the history of the Vicksburg District. The morale of the people of the stricken delta section of our district remains unbroken, and the pastors report that they will come back with their usual degree of courage, zeal, faith, hope and confidence in the future.

Rev. J. E. Williams, of Rolling Fork, preached a very helpful sermon at the 11 o'clock hour Tuesday from the seventeenth verse of the sixth chapter of Galatians.

During the afternoon of the first day's session, Rev. J. C. Chambers, Conference Superintendent of Sunday Schools, on invitation of the presiding elder, addressed the conference on matters of interest pertaining to the Sunday school work in the district. At the conclusion of his address, he introduced Miss Maggie May Jones, Elementary Superintendent of Conference Sunday Schools, who spoke on the observance of Children's Week. At the conclusion of her address, Brother Chambers presented the matter of the goals to be attained this year.

The Committee on Local Preachers made their report, and on recommendation of the committee the following brethren were passed in examination of character and their licenses were renewed: J. M. Griffin, Wesley Ezell, J. O. Gilbert, R. E. Selby, L. L. Stokes, R. K. Scott, J. O. Williams, and J. M. Cowan.

The Committee on Admissions presented the name of Rev. James Oscar Williams to the conference for recommendation to the Annual Conference for admission on trial. The conference unanimously recommended him.

On nomination of the presiding elder, the conference elected as a Licensing Committee the following brethren: G. H. Thompson, J. E. Gray, Otto Porter and J. E. Williams.

On recommendation of the Board of Lay Activities, the lay delegates elected S. W. Sharbrough, of Holly Bluff, District Lay Leader, and J. A. Anders and H. A. Booser, Associate Lay Leaders.

The following persons were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: James Hand, Jr., G. C. Rogers, J. E. Brown, J. R. Bankston, H. H. Crisler, Jr., Vick Robbins, Lyt Lewis, W. E. Potts, and H. A. Booser.

The following persons addressed the conference at its different sessions: Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Conference Lay Leader, on the subject of the benevolences; Miss Boykin, of Whitworth, on the nature and grade of work being done at Whitworth College; Rev. J. M. Morse, of Jackson, on the Superannuate Endowment Fund; Rev. W. T. Griffin, financial agent of the Orphans' Home, on the claims of the Orphans' Home on the generosity of our people; and Dr. D. M. Key, of Millsaps College, spoke briefly on the merits of that institution, and its relation to Christian education.

The question, "Where shall the next ssesion of the conference be held," was asked by the presiding elder. Mr. H. H. Crisler, of Port Gibson, nominated that place, and it was unanimously chosen.

A resolution of thanks and appreciation was presented and unanimously passed, thanking the conference host, Rev. B. M. Hunt, for his untiring efforts in behalf of the success of the conference; and the people of Gloster for their hospitality, and especially the people of other denominations who opened their homes for our entertainment.

J. B. HOLYFIELD, Secretary.

BISHOP GALLOWAY—BISHOP CANDLER'S GREAT BOOK.

I think every Methodist preacher should read the life of Bishop Charles Betts Galloway, which has been so well written by Bishop Candler. Surely all the Methodists in Mississippi will want to read it.

It was quite an inspiration to me to read a history of the life of this heroic soul. The life of a man like Bishop Galloway is a perpetual challenge to the very best that there is in any of us.

I am very grateful to Bishop Candler for this splendid book that he has written.

MINDEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The 1927 session of the Minden District Conference was held at Plain Dealing, on Wednesday, April 20, with our most efficient elder, Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding. By holding morning, afternoon, and evening sessions, all the business of the conference was cared for in due form and order. Some faithful members were kept away on account of the fact that the "Father of Waters" was getting out of bed. The attendance was very good, considering the fact that we practice the Scriptural mode of baptism!

Rev. J. G. Snelling preached on Tuesday evening, and Rev. H. W. Cudd preached on Wednesday evening. Dr. J. E. Crawford stirred the hearts of those present at the 11 o'clock hour Wednesday with a great message on Brotherhood.

All the connectional interests were well represented by duly authorized individuals.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: Mrs. E. L. Cargill, B. B. Dean, J. E. Hoby, C. E. Ives, R. C. Percell, G. A. Rathburn, H. A. Sheppard, R. S. Walsh. Alternates: A. Hoffpauir, J. B. Turnley, Mrs. J. B. Williams, Dr. F. C. Wren.

Judge R. W. Oglesby was re-elected Lay Leader; C. M. Roberts and A. H. Horton, Associate Lay Leaders.

Following is the Licensing Committee: P. M. Caraway, J. B. Williams, H. W. Cudd, T. J. Holladay.

We do not know what is meant by "Plain Dealing," but if it means a progressive little city, where you find a most beautiful church building, just lots of nice homes, and a people whose warm hospitality is second to none, with a "Wynn"ing preacher who is on the job, then the place where we met is well named.

Jena was chosen for the 1928 meeting place.

P. M. CARAWAY, Secretary.

THE NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

True to the promise he made a year ago while persuading the brethren to hold the next district conference at Walnut Grove, Brother Van Landrum and his people had a beautiful new church ready for us. The first session began at 9 a. m., April 27, with an address by our presiding elder, Rev. L. E. Alford, inspirational and heartening. Rev. J. F. McClellan was elected secretary.

A neat program of the conference had been prepared by Brother Alford and distributed.

It is notable that every pastor in the district was present with a lay delegation from his charge. The pastors made their reports rapidly and yet comprehensively, showing in almost every charge some gain both of a material and spiritual sort. Almost every charge had paid the Mission Special in full, and some that had fallen short of their quota promised to undertake to raise the remainder. A letter from Bishop Candler was read to the conference urging the raising of the entire amount asked for this cause.

Sixteen lay delegates were elected to the Annual Conference, as follows: E. M. Luke, R. C. Pugh, G. W. Mars, E. F. Lane, R. L. Abney, J. R. Bridges, Mrs. Floy Loper, W. C. Maybry, Sam Mayo, M. J. Phillips, O. S. Hopkins, G. F. Rice, T. B. Deweese, W. M. Jordan, Mrs. J. F. Ross, P. L. Blackwell.

P. L. Blackwell was elected District Lay Leader, and G. W. Mars, Associate Lay Leader.

Edward Marshall Lane was licensed to preach.

Among the visitors and representatives of our church institutions were Dr. D. M. Key, President of Millsaps College; Dr. J. M. Sullivan and Prof. J. E. Stephens, of the Millsaps faculty; Miss Mamie Boykin, of Whitworth College; Rev. W. T. Griffin, Commissioner of our Orphans' Home.

Miss Boykin explained the new relation of Whitworth as a Junior College, and discussed feelingly the grave needs of that institution. Following a talk by Brother Strait, the brethren pledged loyal co-operation in the matter of sending in names of prospective students and in every way possible.

The evening hour of the first day was devoted to the educational program. Dr. Key and Professor Stephens spoke instructively, and the Millsaps quartet sang several numbers, to the delight of the large congregation. This program was considered one of the finest features of the conference.

Brother Griffin talked of the needs and of the work accomplished by the Home in Jackson.

Mrs. L. E. Alford, District Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society, read an interesting report of the work of that organization.

The preaching of the conference was done by Rev. B. L. Sutherland and Rev. M. L. McCormick, each of whom brought fine gospel messages.

The fellowship of this conference was delightful. The hospitality of the good people of Walnut Grove made us want to go back next year, but, on second thought, Laurel was elected for the next meeting place. Brother Alford seemed to think that this was the best of the four conferences he has held in the district, and some things that happened contributed to that impression, for example, the gift of a nice suitcase that the preachers had "chipped in" and bought, and the eulogistic remarks heard on every side, especially the speech of Brother G. W. Mars. Our old "War Hoss," M. L. White, acted as presiding elder while the brethren "inflicted" the suitcase on Brother Alford, and was so well satisfied with the job that he declared that when he gets to Heaven he expects to be made one permanently.

The district has made a marked growth during the past four years, having built nine churches and had a net gain of 2,769 members. Much credit for this progress is due the self-sacrificing labors of Brother Alford.

REPORTER.

A PASTORAL CHARGE UNDER FLOOD CONDITIONS.

Many have taken in hand to describe disasters that have befallen churches and pastoral charges—fires, cyclones and what not; but I have yet to see a description of a pastoral charge in a flood, except the one in which Noah played a conspicuous part. I am, therefore, undertaking to describe conditions which exist in the Ferriday charge at this moment.

Some weeks ago warning reached us that we were in danger of being inundated by flood waters coming down the Mississippi River; profiting by past experiences, we began to make preparation for the threatened deluge. These preparations consisted of building boats, making scaffolds upon which to bestow our household goods, etc. It is a time when there is no place for the idler—every one must work. I had always been thought of as a very lazy man; but the amount of energy I was able to generate in the face of this calamity was indeed amazing, both to myself and those about me. First, I secured some lumber and made a boat. And in this Noah has nothing on me; his boat was on a more extensive scale, but he had more time and his necessity was greater. Next, I built scaffolds upon which to place the parsonage furniture. These were made five feet high, and when we remember that the parsonage is four feet from the ground, thus making nine feet, and as the water is still rising. I am not sure that they are high enough. The same was done at the church, where the seats, piano and other furnishings were raised five feet above the floor.

To-day there is about fourteen inches of water in the parsonage. The pastor has sleeping quarters in one of the Sunday school rooms at the church, but as there is only about three inches of floor out at the church and the water rising, it is only a matter of a few hours when we will have to abandon these quarters; and it doth not yet appear where we will go from here.

Of course all kinds of industry are completely paralyzed. The only activities are directed to the effort to save what we have. All financial support is cut off, and the people must spend what they have in an effort to save their homes and belongings.

Past experience has shown that it requires from four to six weeks for these floods to recede; then will come the period of rehabilitation, when the people must take stock of what is left. They must return to homes badly damaged by the water—floors with a deposit of silt some inches deep; the walls discolored; doors warped so that they cannot be closed; farms bare, too late to plant a crop and without means if they could; live stock driven to higher ground, where they have been kept and fed only enough to keep them alive, consequently they are very weak, and many will not survive. So the people are demoralized and facing economic ruin.

As for the church and its work, we fear to look at the future, as it is very unpromising. We are determined to carry on, but how and with what success, we cannot tell. I have, however, an abiding faith in God, else I could not remain here in the face of the present outlook.

My family are in Shreveport, only George Andrews (my oldest son) is with me. Brethren, pray for us that we may be able to carry on in spite of this great disaster.

A SPECIAL APPEAL TO THE PREACHERS, LAYMEN, AND METHODIST WOMEN OF THE FIVE HILL DISTRICTS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

We are calling your attention to the following facts: As you well know, the two delta districts, Greenwood and Greenville, of the North Mississippi Conference are suffering great loss occacioned by the recent flood. The Commissioner for the Orphans' Home cannot hope to make collections in the bounds of these two districts possibly during this year. We must not let the Orphans' Home suffer. The need is urgent now for increased maintenance fund and donations with which to pay off the bonded indebtedness. Every member of the church in these districts will, we are sure, see the importance of rallying to the Orphans' Home now. Please put forth your best efforts for the Orphanage and send your donations to Rev. S. A. Brown, Commissioner, Winona, Miss.

Faithfully yours,

THE TIME FOR A REVIVAL.

Dear Brother Carley: Undoubtedly this is the greatest opportunity of the age to do revival work. With the thousands of our people in camps, and, too, in different localities, this is the time to preach the Word, and to teach the people the right way, and get them converted, and to make a start to a better life.

They should be taught that calamities like this great flood are not necessarly from God; it is plain enough to see that this has been brought on by man's merely trifling with a mighty natural force.

I think every available preacher and Christian worker should be used in these refugee camps, and every possble means to comfort the distressed ones and to lead them into the light.

AN OPEN LETTER TO CHARGES OF SOUTHERN METHODISM THAT HAVE NOT YET RAISED THEIR QUOTAS FOR SUPERANNUATE ENDOWMENT

Dear Brethren:

For thirteen weeks I have been pleading for the cause of Superannuate Endowment on this page. With this issue of the Advocate I shall leave the matter with you until the next meeting of your Annual Conference. If you are not now persuaded to raise your Special Effort quotas and pay them before the end of the Conference year, you probably would not be moved even if you were entreated all summer.

Please remember that over 2500 of the Church's aged and used-up servants are looking to you for sustenance. They seek not your charity but what you have agreed to pay them for faithful service rendered. Your debt to them is just as binding as any other promise you have made to pay. Indeed, their helpless and dependent state should establish their call upon you as a preferred claim.

Throughout our Church's history we have temporized with this obligation, until it has become a habit with us to deal lightly with any movement projected in its behalf. We began twenty-five years ago to raise this Endowment Fund, and the $4,000,000 we have actually paid since we started has probably required forty million urgings to pay. What cause of such merit has had to humble itself at the Church's feet begging the crumbs from her table?

We should face this obligation in good conscience and pay the debt we owe in full measure, or else honestly tell our claimants that we have no serious intention to pay. If we desire to draw our success in other things from unkept promises to our superannuates, we can. But, may the Lord have pity on the Church that waves her flag of conquest unmindful of the prostrate forms of her veteran soldiers that lie upon the field of struggle begging "a cup of cold water."

Faithfully yours,
LUTHER E. TODD,
Secretary Board of Finance.

IF I HAD 1000 LIVES TO LIVE, I WOULD GLADLY GIVE ALL OF THEM IN PERSUADING MY CHURCH TO PAY HER LONG STANDING DEBT TO HER SUPERANNUATED PREACHERS.

FROM THE PELICAN PINES.

By Rev. S. A. Steel, D.D.

In spite of old Homer's caution,

"And what so tedious as a twice-told tale,"

Dean Smith, of Centenary College, has had the daring to write a book of travels, entitled "Old Lands—Ever New." He has done me the favor to give me a glimpse at some of the pages before the book appears in print. I began to read them with old Homer's line in mind, and chuckling to myself, I said, "Since Smith has paid me this compliment, of course, I'll read the ms." I had not read far until I said to myself again: "Here, Homer, whether a 'twice-told tale' is tedious or not depends on the telling!" It is certain there is nothing "tedious" in these pages. They vibrate with feeling. It is not an ordinary book of travels, made up of excerpts from guidebooks. Dr. Smith saw with his own eyes, and tells in his own vivid way, of lands, and seas, and cities that can never lose their interest to mankind. If Jiggs were to stroll through the Louvre and amid the statues and famous works of art were to get a whiff of the odor of corned beef and cabbage, he would wink at Dinty, his bewhiskered interpreter, and they would slip out and hike away to the nearest joint! Smith has a sense as keen for the beautiful, the spiritual, the divine, and would leave a banquet on Olympus to gaze on the Parthenon or ramble by the sea of Galilee. His pages bloom like the hills around Nazareth; his thoughts are as rich as the honey from Hymettus; his enthusiasm is as bracing as the breeze that fanned his brow as he looked across the bay at Salamis! He saw things the average traveler never sees, and brings to the description of what he saw a fine scholarship and a chaste literary style; while the glow of a charming personality suffuses his whole book like the blush on the cheek of an old-fashioned maiden that makes you fall in love in spite of yourself. I shall look eagerly for the book.

THE GREAT CENTENARY RECORD OF CARROLLTON AVENUE, NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, La., April 13, 1927.

To the Presiding Elder and Members of the Second Quarterly Conference of Carrollton Avenue M. E. Church, South.

Brethren: As Centenary Treasurer, I wish to make the following report:

At the time of the Centenary Drive, in 1919, the quota of Carrollton Avenue, M. E. Church, South, was placed at $7500, but we oversubscribed generously, and our total pledge was $10,375.

In February, 1925, the Conference Centenary Treasurer, Dr. Briscoe Carter, met with the pastor, Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., and the Church Centenary Treasurer (myself) and revised Carrollton's pledge by eliminating the unpaid balances of those who had died, those who had been lost sight of, whose addresses were unknown, or who for various reasons could not finish paying their pledges.

The revised pledge of this church was $9095.25, which was gradually paid up until, at our last quarterly conference, I was able to report the small unpaid balance of $25.27.

Recently, Mrs. R. S. Crichlow requested the privilege of making the final payment of $25.27 in memory of her father, Rev. Robert A. Davis, which she has done, and the revised Centenary pledge of this church has been paid in full.

It is now my pleasure to turn over to you the record book of the Centenary Treasurer as a part of the permanent records of this church, or for such other disposition as you may order, calling your attention to the final notation of the Conference Treasurer, as follows:

"The above account checked and found to tally with the Conference Treasurer's book in every respect, this 21st day of March, 1927." Signed by "Briscoe Carter, for Centenary Committee, M. E. Church, South."

As there seems to be no further need for such an official, I respectfully suggest, and request, that the office of Centenary Treasurer of Carrollton Avenue M. E. Church, South, be abolished, thus automatically discharging the Treasurer.

This, my final report, is respectfully submitted.

H. J. THOMPSON,
Centenary Treasurer,
Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans.

FRESHMEN MATERIAL AT MISLLSAPS COLLEGE.

By J. Franklin Walker, D. D., Professor of Education, Millsaps College.

That Millsaps College is meeting with success in her efforts to secure quality in her student body is strikingly recognized in the newly-published volume entitled, "A State Educational System at Work," by Dr. M. V. O'Shea, of Wisconsin University.

The volume is the result of a survey of the State school system, inaugurated by the late Governor Whitfield about two years ago, and financed by Mr. B. B. Jones, a Southern educational philanthropist.

In the course of the survey, tests measuring mental ability and others measuring achievement in high school subjects were administered to all college freshmen in the State as well as to children in the graded and high schools.

Summarizing the results of the tests of mental ability, given in February, but which had also been administered to the freshmen in fifty-four colleges outside Mississippi and to Millsaps College freshmen, in September, Dr. O'Shea writes: "Comparing the average or mean score made by the students in each college in the different elements of the examination with the standards for students outside of Mississippi, it can be seen that, with the exception of Millsaps, the freshman students in Mississippi fall somewhat below the standard for freshmen students outside the State." The colleges outside the State were well scattered throughout the United States and Canada and are representative of conditions in American colleges.

A study was made by the survey committee to determine whether or not the relatively higher score of Millsaps College freshmen might be entirely, or largely, due to the fact that the same test had been given to the freshmen in that institution six months before, at the time that the fifty-five American colleges were co-operating in administering it, but the conclusion reached was: "It is still practically certain that the freshmen students in Millsaps stand out distinctly ahead of the students in the other colleges and in the University. It appears that Millsaps has secured a reputation in the State for high scholarship and thorough training and the effect of this is to attract students of a superior ability to do college work of a literary, linguistic and mathematical type. Students of limited ability to do college work would not be likely to seek admission to Millsaps."

It will interest those who feel that Millsaps College should pursue a policy of careful selection of student material to know that about six months ago the faculty of the college voted to advance the standards by raising the number of quality points required for graduation from twenty-seven to thirty-two, and the number required for graduation "with honor" from sixty-four to eighty, while to retain membership as a student, the individual is now required to secure a pass in two subjects and, at least, a condition in a third, at the end of each term.

According to the O'Shea report, there are enrolled in the higher schools of the State of Mississippi this year eight students who have greater natural ability than that of ninety-five per cent of the students enrolled in the fifty-five colleges of America in which the ability test was administered in September, and four of these eight students are enrolled in Millsaps College. No other college or university in the State has more than one of the eight. There are enrolled in Mississippi twenty-two students whose native ability is higher than ninety per cent of the students enrolled in the American colleges tested, outside the State. Ten out of these twenty-two are enrolled in Millsaps College, her nearest rival being Blue Mountain, in which four out of this group are enrolled.

On the other hand, there were one hundred ninety-six students enrolled in Mississippi colleges who were as low in ability as the lowest ten per cent of students in the American colleges, but only two such students were registered in Millsaps College at the time of the February test.

These figures show that the remarks quoted from Dr. O'Shea are based upon actual fact, and this unbiased report is gratifying to those who are advocates of careful selection of student material and high scholastic standards for their attainment after selection has been accomplished, as a policy to be followed by Millsaps College.

ANNUAL MEETING, BOARD OF CHURCH EXTENSION.

The forty-fifth annual meeting of the Board of Church Extension was held in the chapel of the Church Extension Building, Louisville, Ky., on April 28. The bishops are members of the Board, and all were in attendance except three, who were not present on account of illness or absence from the country. The meeting was largely attended, only a few members being absent, and every one present seemed greatly interested in all matters brought before this important body of our church. The most perfect harmony prevailed throughout the entire meeting. It is interesting to note that in former years the annual meetings lasted from two to three days, while the present session finished its business in one day, after giving careful and earnest consideration to all matters presented.

The report of the Secretary, Dr. T. D. Ellis, shows that the loan fund capital was increased during the year by a total of $104,739.63. The total loan fund capital of the Board now amounts to $2,741,854.35. During the fiscal year closing with the annual meeting, the Board granted loans, including grants made by the Appropriations and Executive Committees, amounting to a total of $609,050, and donations aggregating $126,415.58, making a grand total of $735,465.58.

The church will be interested to learn that, due to the increase in the loan funds and despite the fact that the amount for donation purposes is limited because payments on benevolences have fallen far short of the amount assessed, the Board is aiding a larger number of churches and parsonages from year to year. This ought to emphasize the fact that for a church which is at all able to handle a loan, the loan continues to be the best type of aid. The Architectural Department of the Board is rendering an important service to the church in many ways, and more particularly in reviewing plans sent in for constructive criticism and in preparing plans for church buildings.

On the day previous to the annual meeting of the Board, the ninth biennial session of representatives of Conference Boards of Church Extension was held. This meeting was attended by representatives from practically all of the Annual Conferences of the M. E. Church, South, in the United States. Questions concerning the relationship between the General Board and the Conference Boards, together with various church extension problems, were considered and discussed at length by those present. The representatives entered into these discussions in a fine spirit, and the results were helpful in every way. All present seemed anxious to get a better understanding of the duties and functions of the Boards and to develop the greatest possible co-operation between the General and Conference Boards. The conviction grows that these biennial meetings are fulfilling a genuine need in coordinating the work of church extension.

QUIT PUTTIN' OFF.

By Georgina W. Pelton.

Quit a-puttin' on To-morrow
Half the duties of To-day!
Don't you do it any longer,
Quit your puttin' off, I say!

Mr. Morrow'll have his duties,
Quite enough for him to do.
If you pile up trouble on him,
See if he don't punish you!

'Stead of helpin' you right friendly,
Doin' just his level best,
"You let Yesterday off easy,
I'll do half an' leave the rest.

"He had just as many minutes
As have I—you know that's so—
If he wanted rest or pleasure,
So do I, I'd have you know."

So he'll say an' with some reason,
Then he'll pass the word along
To the host of little Morrows
Comin' on, an eager throng.

Like as not you'll call 'em lazy,
Seein' 'em shirkin' many a task,
Just because you've put upon 'em
More than it was right to ask.

Quit a-puttin' on To-morrow
Half the duties of To-day!
Don't you do it any longer!
Quit your puttin' off, I say!

THE STREETS OF "BY-AND-BY" LEAD TO THE HOUSE OF "NEVER."

Some person has written this true little sentence: "By the streets of By-and-by, one arrives at the house of Never."

"George, do you see that man, with his hands and arms almost up to his elbows in his pockets, walking down the street? His hat is on one side, pulled over his forehead; his coat has lost its buttons; his clothes are dirty and torn; he has no collar on and his shoes are tied with some old twine that he may have found along the street."

"Yes, papa, I see him. Why does he walk so slowly?"

"He is going along the street of 'By-andBby.'"

"Why, papa, our street is called 'Washington,' and he is passing our house. Why do you say that he is on the street of 'By-and-by'?"

"I will tell you, my son: When he was a little boy he always had great plans; but when he was told to do anything he would say: 'All right, I will do it some other time, not now.' Other times he would say: 'After a while I will do it,' and sometimes he would say, 'By-and-by I will do it.'

"As time passed on, this way of doing, or habit, grew on him, and he had so much work put off for by-and-by that he forgot one thing after another and some of it he has never done.

"Now he is a man. All his plans are for by-and-by. He thinks and says that he is going to do this and that—but, some other time.

"You can see, by the way his clothes look, that the business on the street of 'By-and-by' does not pay. If it did, he would have nicer and cleaner clothes on.

"All of the people that travel on that street go one way, and that is down, down, down."

"Papa, down where?"

"'Where?' did you say, my son? Why, down to the house of 'Never,' where that man is going."

"Where is that house? I have never seen it, have I?"

"No, my dear boy, you have never see it, and I hope that you never will. The house of 'Never' is not a house; it is where a person gets by putting off, for another time, what he should do right away. When people put work off from one time to another they get so in the habit of saying 'By-and-by' that they never get the work done that is given them to do.

"Do you understand what I mean, my son?"

"Yes, papa. You mean that if a little boy makes excuses when he is told to do anything, and says that he will do it some other time, he will get so in the habit of putting off that he will always think that he has plenty of time to do it, and then forget it and never get it done."

"That is right, George. Always do what you are told, right away, without making excuses or thinking that you will do it some other time, and you will never get on the street of 'By-and-by' that leads to the house of 'Never.'"—Gospel Banner.

THE LEGEND OF THE BELLS.

By Ellen Friel Baker.

In a famous old church in Europe which was erected many centuries before America was discovered there is a wonderful statue of a man with a string of bells about his waist. The garb of the statue reveals the fact that the man was a nobleman and the legend connected with the statue runs like this:

An orphaned brother and sister were the only surviving members of a very wealthy family. They owned vast acres of land and controlled the lives of many peasants who lived on their estates. The sister was beautiful, charming and beloved by all who knew her, but the brother was hot-headed, stern-hearted and dogmatic so that he was not only hated but greatly feared as well.

If anything stood in the way to block any of his plans, he flew into a violent rage, and if a servant dared disobey him, he was immediately struck down. This grieved his sister very much, for despite his faults she loved her brother very dearly. She felt that she would make any sacrifice to cure him of his faults, and she believed that if she could get him interested in some great work this would be accomplished.

"No wonder," she thought, "that my brother is selfish and unkind, when he has so much wealth and lands that he does not know what to do with them."

So she said to him:

"Brother, let us build a great church together, so grand and magnificent that all who see it will respect and think well of us."

The brother agreed and the plan was that each was to build one-half of the church entirely independent of the other.

When the building was well begun it was found that the sister's half progressed much more rapidly than did the brother's. This was because he always quarreled with his workmen.

If one made a mistake, or one was idle, her brother would fly into a rage and act like a madman. Sometimes he struck them and often discharged them and took on others—so that the discouraged workmen could not possibly put forth their best efforts.

The sister, who had foreseen just such a condition when she proposed building the church together, begged him to let her tie a string of bells around his waist, telling him that she believed that this would hasten the work because the builders would always be notified of his approach by the ringing of the bells, and by setting busily to work would save a lot of time.

She believed that this would help sweeten his disposition, because if he found his workmen always at their labors he was sure to be pleased.

The brother was very angry when she first suggested the idea, but her gentleness finally prevailed, and she selected the sweetest toned bells she could find, and, making them into a girdle, put them around his waist.

The plan worked like a miracle. The sweet tones inspired the workmen to their best efforts and also soothed the nobleman's violet temper. He was no longer angered by the sight of loafing or indifferent laborers, and he began to grow very popular with his builders. He praised and encouraged them, where before he had struck and sworn at them, and they—delighted with the change—took real delight in pushing the work forward.

Then his workmen began to vie with those of his sister in an effort to get their part of the church finished first. They ran a merry race as they worked day after day, and finally told the man that his half was finished several days in advance of his sister's. This greatly pleased him, and his sister was secretly pleased also, and overjoyed at the change in her brother. She at last told him of the innocent deception which she had planned to cure him of his ugly disposition.

The nobleman was deeply impressed by the lesson, and he determined to place a statue of himself with the bells around his waist in the church where every one might see it. He meant to remind others of the possibilities of encouragement and also keep himself in mind of his former bad habit.

This story dates back to the sixth century, but it may well be applied to modern times. It teaches a wonderful lesson, and we learn from it that bluster and fury have no force, while gentle persuasiveness may accomplish much. One of the sweetest things that comes to us is appreciation of our efforts—no matter what our method of expression may be.—Kind Words.

THE OAK TREE.

By Margaret D. Plympton.

Once upon a time some squirrels had a cupboard in an old shed. They had stored acorns there from day to day. They did not know they were being watched, but a blue jay knew as much about that cupboard as they did.

One morning the last acorn was put away and the squirrels went to gather black walnuts which they had planned to store in a tumble-down barn.

It pleased the blue jay to have the squirrels stop coming to the shed every day, for now he could go in and out whenever he pleased.

For a few days he enjoyed eating acorns. Then he decided that he would bury them here and there in the ground. As he was moving the last acorn it dropped and rolled out of sight.

Day after day leaves fell until the acorn was deeply covered with them. For three days and two nights it rained, making the leaf blanket soaking wet.

When the sun shone brightly again the leaf-covering began to be warm and steamy. This was just what was needed to help a little sprout break through at the point of the acorn shell. For there is tucked away in the acorn shell the beginning of an oak tree, and this little root sprout is the part that begins to grow first.

As it leaves the acorn point it reaches toward the earth and creeps into it. All the warm moisture of the leaf blanket makes the earth just right for the rootlet to take a strong hold, which it keeps till the winter snow melts.

Then water drops creep down through the leaf blanket to signal a little bud at the acorn point to open and send a tiny shoot up into the air.

All this time the rootlet is growing stronger and longer. As the little shoot, which is to become the trunk of the tree, grows upward, a bud at its tip opens and two leaves appear.

While this growing has been going on, the baby tree has been getting food from the softened meat of the acorn, the shell of which falls off after a time.

All summer, sun, rain, and earth help the little tree.

When autumn comes there will be a tiny oak tree with a stout root, a hard stem for a trunk, and some leaves which will fall off when the time comes for the tree to go to rest for the winter.

After many years there will be a great oak tree under whose branches children will play and watch happy squirrels and birds busy in the way God meant such creatures to be.—The Sunbeam.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The new $12,000 brick church at Centerville, Miss., will soon be ready for occupancy. Rev. H. Mellard is the pastor.

"I do not remember when I did not read the Advocate," writes Mrs. H. S. Crow, of Hanna, La., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate.

Ground was broken at Ruston, La., on May 12, for the new district parsonage, the new building to take the place of the one destroyed by fire last fall.

The "old' Zion's Herald, foremost among American religious newspapers, has adopted a new and, we think, improved form. Zion's Herald was founded in 1823.

Dr. John A. Rice, pastor of Boston Avenue Methodist Church, Tulsa, Okla., has been elected temporary editor of the Oklahoma Methodist, to succeed the late Dr. D. H. Aston.

Rev. J. L. Carter, of Mount Olive, Miss., is assisting the pastor, Rev. J. B. Cain, in a meeting at Lucedale, Miss., this week. The singing is being led by Mr. A. B. Goff, of Lucedale.

Mrs. K. M. Cook, of Ontario, Calif., formerly of Bovina, Miss., is another friend of the Advocate who has read it from childhood. She is a sister-in-law of the late Bishop Charles B. Galloway.

Miss Alicia May Tobin, of Philadelphia, Pa., niece of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Ahrens, of New Orleans, has recently been awarded a scholarship in music which will give her the opportunity of study abroad.

Rev. Percy Vaughn, our pastor at Ellisville, Miss., preached the commencement sermon for the Ellisville High School on Sunday, May 8, at 11 o'clock a. m., the service being held in the Baptist church.

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs was appointed fraternal delegate to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which meets in Kansas City, Mo., in May, 1928, by the College of Bishops at its recent meeting.

Rev. T. B. Cottrell, our pastor at Magnolia, Miss., informs us that Dr. S. A. Steel will preach the commencement sermon for the Magnolia High School on Sunday morning, May 22, and will preach for him at the evening hour.

Dr. W. L. Duren, for six years pastor of Rayne Memorial, this city, but now pastor of St. Mark, Atlanta, Ga., was in New Orleans a day or two last week on personal business. His many friends were glad to see him again.

Rev. C. C. Miller, our pastor at Franklinton, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call one day last week. He was in the city to consult his physicians. The brethren will be glad to know that his health is steadily improving.

The work goes well on the Ackerman charge, North Mississippi Conference, Rev. C. A. Northington, pastor. Eight infants have been baptized, and thirty-one members have been received into the church, sixteen of them on profession of faith.

Mrs. R. R. Bridges, of Crystal Springs, Miss., is another long-time reader of the Advocate. She first became acquainted with it in the home of her grandfather, Rev. D. S. Goodloe, a local preacher, and it has been in her home for all these years. Blessings upon her!

Miss Grace Carley, sister of the editor of the Advocate, and Mr. J. A. Bradford were quietly married at Laurel, Miss., on Friday, May 13, Rev. B. L. Sutherland, pastor of the First Methodist Church, officiating. After a short automobile tour, they will make their home at Laurel.

The committee appointed by the New Orleans Methodist Preachers' Meeting to secure contributions for the relief of Louisiana pastors in the flooded sections has been active, especially the secretary, Mr. H. H. Ahrens, and the response from those approached has been quite generous.

One of the most successful revivals in the history of the Methodist church at Amory, Miss., came to a close on Sunday night, May 8. There were thirty-six additions to the membership of the church, twenty-two of them on profession of faith. The preaching was done by the pastor, Rev. W. R. Lott.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Columbia District, North Mississippi Conference, has been kept busy preaching commencement sermons. He rendered this service for the Lynn Creek High School on April 24, for the Becker High School on May 8, and for the Caledonia High School on May 15.

We learn with sorrow of the death of Mrs. C. W. Paris, mother of Mrs. C. W. Lahey, wife of our pastor at Colfax, La., at Oakland, Calif., on May 6. The burial took place at Maxville, Ind., Brother and Sister Lahey attending the funeral. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends.

Rev. J. Tillery Lewis preached the commencement sermon for the Tupelo High School in the First Baptist Church, Tupelo, Miss., on Sunday morning, May 8. The Tupelo Weekly News says: "The speaker based his excellent remarks on the theme, 'Service,' and his address was most interesting and inspirational."

Rev. Dan E. Kelly, general evangelist, who is spending the month of May resting at his home in Hattiesburg, Miss., states that his singer, Rev. Otis Spinks, whose address is Box 506, Shreveport, La., is available during the month of May for meetings, assisting pastors or evangelists in their revivals. Brother Kelly commends Brother Spinks to any brother who may need help.

Rev. J. B. Cain, our pastor at Lucedale, Miss., writes: "Rev. J. H. Jolly, pastor of our church at Poplar Springs, Meridian, preached the commencement sermon for the Lucedale High School on Sunday morning, May 8, to a large and appreciative audience. The sermon was thoughtful, spiritual, and appropriate, and was well received by the graduates and their friends and relatives."

Rev. Leon I. McCain, our pastor at Minden, La., has had printed an India paper edition of his sermon on "Tithing and Christian Stewardship," which he is offering to the brethren at 60 cents a dozen, or $3.50 a hundred. As a result of the preaching of this sermon by Brother McCain, thousands of people throughout Louisiana have pledged to tithe. We hope it will have a wide circulation.

Rev. W. W. Murray, of the Coalville charge, Mississippi Conference, writes: "Things are moving along fine on the Coalville charge. The mission special will all be paid in full. We had a very fine meeting at the Coalville church—eight additions on profession of faith. Rev. H. M. Ellis, Conference evangelist, did the preaching. He is fine help. The meeting here was said to be the best in years."

The George Tucker evangelistic party has been conducting a county-wide tent meeting at Calhoun City, Miss. Several special trains were run by the Mobile and Ohio Railroad Company from neighboring towns. With the exception of an open date in August, caused by cancellation of a date in the overflowed district in Arkansas, the Tucker party has a full slate. Brother Tucker's address is 2914 Nelson Avenue, Memphis, Tenn.

Received too late for mention in last week's Advocate, we have the sad news of the death of Mrs. W. W. Simmons, widow of the late Rev. W. W. Simmons, of the Mississippi Conference, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. O. O. Conerly, Gloster, Miss., on May 8. She was advanced in years, a saint ready for the rest prepared for her. The funeral service was conducted by her pastor, Rev. B. M. Hunt. She was the grandmother of Mrs. E. C. Gunn, wife of our pastor of Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the family and friends of the deceased.

A. L. Stevenson, of Duke University, Durham, N. C., and Bruce O. Power, of Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex., were awarded second and third prizes in the recent South-wide theme contest among college students, conducted by the Commission on Inter-racial Co-operation, with headquarters in Atlanta. Miss Elsie B. Stewart, of Berea College, Kentucky, received the first prize. Fifty-five papers were submitted in the contest, representing thirty-three colleges in fifteen States. The winning papers were on the subject of "Justice in Race Relations," and dealt with education, health, housing, protection of life and property, and other phases of Negro welfare.

Sunday, May 29, will be observed as "Decoration and Home-coming Day" by the Adams church and community, Auburn, Miss. This is a historic community and church in Mississippi, and a fitting program has been prepared for this notable day. The memorial sermon will be preached in the forenoon by Rev. C. M. Crossley, of Columbia. In the afternoon, adddresses will be delivered by Mrs. L. W. Alford, of McComb; Hon. R. E. Bennett, Prosecuting Attorney for the Sixth Judicial District, Meadville; Hon. George H. Butler, former Assistant Attorney General, Jackson, and Hon. E. Douglas Kenna, Jackson. The speakers are all products of the Adams community. Dinner will be served on the ground. The invitation committee is composed of Rev. F. J. Jones, Mrs. W. E. King, Mrs. J. R. Coker, Mrs. S. L. Bufkin, and S. E. Carruth.

"REPUDIATING WESLEY."

What matters it whether the quotation was from one book or from another book, so long as Wesley's words were quoted? To have taken the quotation from the original abridgement of Bennet's treatise, or from the evolutionist who first published the quotation, could not have added to nor taken from the exact question any of its significance. As a matter of fact the quotation was not taken, inadvertently or otherwise, from either of these sources, but from the Quillian Lectures, delivered before the Candler School of Theology, Emory University, Atlanta, Ga., Methodist Episcopal Church, South! In any case the quotation establishes beyond controversy that one may accept the theory of evolution and be a Christian.

What matters it that Wesley gave his explicit endorsement to the idea of the evolution of man long before Darwin?—and in more minute terms than Darwin ever did. As to the evolution of man, Darwin, coming long after Wesley, was a mere piker.

I take no stock in higher critics who repudiate the Bible, and quote Scripture to contradict Scripture—no more in higher critics who repudiate Wesley, and quote him to make that good, wise, learned, devout, devoted, orthodox, evangelical Christian blow hot and cold in the same proposition.

J. R. BINGHAM.

METHODISM'S FIRST KNIGHT OF THE GOLDEN CROSS.

By Dr. Charles C. Jarrell, General Secretary, Hospital Board.

There is now a Knight of the Golden Cross.

This highest distinction of the Golden Cross Society has been conferred on Mrs. Elizabeth W. Bates, of Atlanta, Ga., by the General Hospital Board under authority of the General Conference.

This honor has been conferred on Mrs. Bates in view of her deep and abiding devotion to the hospital cause, recently manifested in the gift of $5,000 to Wesley Memorial Hospital. Mrs. Bates is a niece of the late George W. Winship, long time patron of Emory University, for whom the Winship Dormitory is named.

This knighthood is not for ornament and show. It is a recognition of some definite and distinguished service rendered for the relief of human suffering. There will be other Knights of the Golden Cross. This order of Methodist chivalry will become honorable among us. There ought to be a group of them by the next General Conference, and that body should invest them with some symbol of this order and adorn them with the insignia of the Aristocracy of Service.

A REMINDER—SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

Lest you forget, Seashore Divinity School's spiritual banquet is set for June 14-28. The feast is for all—

For the Wide-Awake Preacher, who aspires to see more clearly and work more efficiently;

For the Lethargic One, who needs awakening and stirring to a sense of responsibility and vision of opportunity;

For the Worn and Weary One, exhausted by faithful labors and needing rest and fellowship;

For the Young One, trying to master his Conference Course and plan best his life's work;

For the Elderly One, needing to break out of his ruts of mind and methods;

For the Empty One, needing to be filled, directed and inspired;

For the Full One, able and ready to share liberally with his brethren.

And, if you are none of these, come anyhow, and go fishing and take a bath—a sea bath.

Undergraduates can find no better place or way of finishing their year's course. Here are competent instructors, class fellowship, and (if the books have been previously read) examinations.

The Expense is Small. A session fee of $2.50.

Board and lodging at Keller Lodge for $1.50 (two in the room) a day; at the White House, $2.50. Other good places as reasonable.

Bring the family and rent an apartment or cottage on the grounds. How the folks will enjoy it! Leave the dog at home.

Bishop W. A. Candler will lecture at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. through the first week.

Dr. Harold Paul Sloan will have the same hours through the second week.

This is guarantee of a feast for those whose mental digestion has not been wrecked.

We are looking for those who know a "Good thing."

Why sure, that's you—or ought to be!

Now, don't forget—June 14-28.

There is a missionary who can go where I cannot; who can do what I cannot. He is not a churchman; he is not a dissenter. He is not a Calvinist; he is not an Arminian. He is not an American, nor an Englishman, nor a Scotchman, nor a Hollander. He seems to hate sects, and many of the most prominent sects he never even mentions. That great missionary is the Bible.—David Abeel, quoted by Willard Price, in the Voice and the Book.

MRS. MARY COPE BRECKINRIDGE was born in Uniontown, Ala., Sept. 22, 1855, and died July 30, 1926. She was the daughter of H. A. and Sarah Cope. Her parents came from Raleigh, N. C., about the year 1850. She was educated in the high schools of Uniontown, Ala. In after years her parents moved to Washington County, Ala., near Old St. Stevens. On Feb. 19, 1885, she was married to A. A. Breckinridge, then of Isney, Ala. To this union were born two children, Arthur C. Breckinridge, of Laurel, Miss., and Mrs. Irene Schoff, of Chicago, Ill. After their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge engaged in the mercantile business at Isney, Ala., Raleigh, Miss., and later at Montrose, Miss., where they lived for a long period of years, moving to Laurel, Miss., about twenty years ago. Mrs. Breckinridge was a faithful worker in all the organizations of the Methodist church, of which she was a member, and side by side with her husband she toiled for the Master till He said, "It is enough, come up higher." She has left a noble heritage to her family, and while the home is made sadder and more lonely, yet Heaven is richer, and no doubt she is standing at the Pearly Gates looking and watching for the coming of her loved ones and friends. The writer has lost one of his best friends, and sorrows with those of the family in the going of this good woman. To the grief-stricken family, we would commend you to the Savior she loved so well.

P. L. BLACKWELL.

IN MEMORIAM.

(Needham E. Pall.)

By Rev. James M. Lewis.

One year has passed since the voice of my beloved friend has been silenced in death. How long and yet how short has seemed the year. Time is a great healer, and it is a great eraser, but time can never erase from the memory of those who knew him, the goodness and the greatness of Needham E. Pall.

He had one of the most lovable dispositions of any man I ever knew. His was a happy, congenial spirit. He made friends wherever he went—they were numbered by the thousands.

He was the greatest man I ever knew for settling disputes between parties out of court. He was endowed with the "gift" of a peacemaker. Many people rise up to-day and call him blessed, because of the personal interest he took in bringing about a satisfactory peace between them and their neighbors. It is no small job to settle difficulites between parites; but he counted it a joy and pleasure to enter into tangled and difficult situations and straighten things out. Our community has found no one to take his place. A pall of sorrow still hangs over us as we weep for one we loved and so sorely miss.

I am a better man to-day because he crossed my path. There burns in my heart a glow that was lit from the flames of love in his soul.

There is still the sweet aroma of the beautiful flowers he so freely scattered in my pathway while he was still alive. He loved and praised his pastor, and gave us such enrouragement that I can never forget. With his devoted loved ones my heart weeps, and through my tears I see him on that other shore waiting and watching for us.

Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, School of Missions, July 20-Aug. 3.

Emory, Virginia, Pastors' School, Aug. 15-27.

Lakeland, Florida, Pastors' School, Aug. 29-Sept. 13.

Courses of study will be offered as follows:

I. General Missionary subjects selected from the curricula of all Schools of Missions and Pastors' Schools, such as:

Present Rural Conditions and Problems.

Social Teachings of the Prophets.

Missionary Message of the Bible.

International Aspects of Christianity.

Story Telling in Religious Education.

II. Mission Study:

The Current Mission Study Texts for Adults.

The Current Mission Study Texts for Young People. (Except at Oklahoma City.)

The Current Mission Study Texts for Children. (Except at Oklohoma City and Lakeland, Fla.)

III. Organization and Methods:

Organization and Methods of work for Adults.

Organization and Methods of work for Young People. (Except at Oklahoma City.)

Organization and Methods of work for Children. (Except at Oklahoma City and Lakeland, Fla.)

IV. Social Service:

Social Organization. (Except at Oklahoma City and Lakeland, Fla.)

Racial Studies. (Except at Oklahoma City and Lakeland, Fla.)

When twelve subjects have been successfully completed, a diploma will be given.

These courses will be taught by missionary leaders of experience.

There will be opportunity for discussion of your needs and problems.

Platform hours will be in charge of missionaries and distinguished church leaders of America.

Comfortable accommodations will be available at all schools at reasonable rates. There will be no registration or tuition fees.

Begin now to make your plans to take advantage of this opportunity for training for missionary service in one of these schools.

ZONE MEETING AT GREENWOOD, MISS.

The zone meeting of the Methodist Missinoary Society met in the First Methodist Church yesterday, with Mrs. P. R. Arrington, of Schlater, president, presiding.

This zone is composed of the following auxiliaries: Itta Bena, Greenwood, Schlater, Moorhead, and Minter City.

The following program was very inspirational and beneficial to all present:

Devotional, by Rev. T. E. Gregory, of Itta Bena.

A few well chosen words of welcome were given by Mrs. S. I. Osborn. Response by Mrs. P. R. Arrington.

"Why Have Zone Meetings?" by Mrs. John W. Holloman, of Itta Bena.

The duties of the officers of the Auxiliary were given by Mmes. J. C. Clark, E. F. Glaser, T. E. Gregory and Flora Roe.

"Law Enforcement," by Mrs. J. F. Cortner, of Schlater.

Mrs. W. V. Bailey, district secretary, stressed the "Standard of Excellence."

Then the audience was favored with a lovely solo by Mr. Johnson, who is leading the singing at the revival at the First Methodist Church, with Mrs. John Petty at the piano.

After the reports, and all showed splendid work being done, Mrs. C. E. Wright very sweetly sang "Come Ye Blessed."

Rev. S. A. Brown, who is connected with the Methodist Orphanage, told briefly of their work and needs.

The meeting closed with a vocal duet by Mmes. R. C. Reese and J. L. Haley, with Mrs. Pate accompanying.

The next zone meeting will be some time in June, and will be held in Minter City.

ELZA-STEPHENS-REMMEL HALL, MOUNT SEQUOYAH, ARK.

The Board of Control of the Woman's Building held two important meetings in the Washington Hotel, Shreveport, La., during the week Council was in session, March 9-16.

The first meeting was called by Mrs. Fred Lamb, vice president, for the purpose of electing officers. The result was: Mrs. E. R. Steele, of Little Rock Conference, President; Mrs. J. W. Mills, of Texas Conference, Vice President; Mrs. E. F. Ellis, of North Arkansas Conference, Treasurer; Mrs. M. E. Mackey, of Oklahoma Conference, Secretary.

The gift of $5,000 from Mr. H. L. Remmel as a memorial to his wife is much appreciated. The building shall be known as the Elza-Stephens-Remmel Hall. This name is added in loving remembrance of Mrs. Remmel.

Dr. Miller was present at one meeting, making a strong appeal for the need of such a building. The May edition of his paper, the Arkansas Methodist, will be a feature number of Mount Sequoyah as a training center.

Of the twelve contributing Conferences in this Western Division the following have responded: West Oklahoma, East Oklahoma, Texas, Northwest Texas, North Arkansas, Southwest Missouri, St. Louis, and Little Rock. The latter has $10,000 in hand for use April 1.

Ten names have been placed on the Memorial Roll.

A dollar per member is needed for this splendid project. The foundation, with a sub-floor, is finished. It is necessary that the walls be erected and under roof by Christmas of this year. The entire building may then be completed in the spring of 1928, ready for the Jubilee celebration. The dollar drive is on now. Will you do your part?

MRS. F. H. NAYLOR,
Publicity Chairman.

FINE MEETING OF PEARL RIVER AVENUE AUXILIARY.

At the monthly buiness meeting, May 9, the Pearl River Avenue Missionary Society, of McComb, Miss., held a very interesting meeting. This meeting was held on May 9, at 7:30 p. m., instead of May 2, at 2:30 p. m., in order that the ladies could invite their husbands and the officials of the church. A goodly number attended this meeting. Some very interesting reports were made. Among them were the reports of each lady's talent and how she made it. Each lady took an amount of money to use in making more for the Society. On April 4, the talent money amounted to $22; at this meeting it amounted to $28.50. Total amount collected at this meeting was $45.45.

Another interesting report was from our advertising sale, which we had April 15-16, which amounted to $257.

Another interesting feature of this meeting was a splendid talk by our pastor's wife, Mrs. J. F. Campbell (whom we all love very much), on "Talents."

Several new members were enrolled. Quite a number of sick visits, trays, and flowers were reported.

We feel that our Society is progressing real well, considering we are only a few in number. We are anxious to have every lady that is a church member a member of the Woman's Missionary Society. We have our weekly meetings, carrying out each program of the work.

At the close of the meeting, Brother Campbell made a talk to the men about organizing a Wesley Brotherhood.

Refreshments were served, and each one went home feeling "That it was good to be there."

Secretary.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

"Purges" and "Physics" Bad for Old Folks

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to "regulate" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each dose helps to strengthen the bowel muscles, shortly establishing natural "regularity." It never gripes, sickens or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

If past fifty, buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

I long to see my friends and coworkers in the overflowed section of our Conference. I know a little of what they are going through with in this trying time. They will come back with renewed vigor, with smiling faces, and a determination to go forward in recuperating their lost fortunes. "All things work together for good to them that love God." We are with you, brave, noble people, and will stand by you to the limit of our ability. May God bless you more abundantly and keep you strong and hopeful.

The Aberdeen District Standard Training School is a distinct success in attendance and in the character of work done. Rev. R. G. Moore has labored unceasingly for its success. Eight preachers have been in attendance, two superintendents, sixteen schools represented. Again we have been surrounded by high water, cut off on account of bad bridges, etc. We have gone ahead and have done the work in spite of many hindrances. We expect to issue fifty credits to-morrow.

Any one interested in the success of the Conference Training School to be held at Grenada, June 6-11, can have a poster made and put in a conspicuous place in the building, announcing the date of the school. This poster will cause some one to make inquiries as to the courses, way of getting to the school, expense, etc. Begin to work to have your best young people to attend, as well as your teachers. Rev. W. R Liming has every school on his circuit represented in the Aberdeen school. He worked at the job constantly until he succeeded. One of the most effective ways of working against your church is to let things drift. The truth is, I had rather a man would come out in the open and fight with all his might than simply toss the plans of his church aside. About the least one could do is to send me a list of names that I may mail to them an announcement of the school.

We have the promise of a good attendance at Sardis, May 23-28. Whenever T. M. Bradley gets behind a proposition, something is bound to happen. Sardis, Batesville, Como, and the other charges adjacent to Sardis are supporting this enterprise. "United we stand; divided we fall." Factions, divisions are not born of the Spirit, nor are they led of the Spirit. There is one way, and only one way, to know that a man is born of the Spirit. What did the Master say? What did John say? What did Paul say? What do you say?

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE NOTES.

An interesting letter has been received from Mrs. J. B. Fulton, superintendent of the Campti Sunday school, in which she states they have gone over the top in the Ten-to-Win-One campaign. She is asking for literature for organizing six Wesley classes, and says she is using the "C" type wall chart. Mrs. Fulton is enthusiastic over the work of her school, and we are glad to have such fine report from her.

Mr. W. S. Holmes, of Baton Rouge, First Church Sunday School, has set as an increase quota in the Ten-to-Win-One campaign, 400 new members.

* * *

We spent Sunday and Monday, May 8 and 9, in Baton Rouge. At 10 a.m. we visited the Adult Department of First Church. This is no doubt the best equipped adult department in the State at this time. Mr. A. A. Wren is superintendent of the department, and is a good one. At 11 a.m., we worshiped with the Keener Memorial congregation, and heard a beautiful Mothers' Day message from the pastor, Brother Tucker. The writer was a guest in the Tucker home for luncheon following this service, and was delightfully entertained by the fine parsonage family, which includes three boys and a young lady of high school years. At 3 p.m. we went to First Church again for the classification and enrollment meeting of the Standard Training School, which promises to be one of the very best, with nearly 150 enrolled at the start.

Following the enrollment meeting the writer participated in a beautiful baptismal service, when the young son of Mr. and Mrs. George Treyevant Owen, Jr., was baptized. The mother of this baby, who was Miss Kitty Lou Barron, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Barron, of Baton Rouge, was baptized by the writer in her infancy. A very impressive part of the service was when the father of the boy was also baptized, thus completing the consecration of this little family.

Thursday, May 21, we made a trip to Shreveport to attend the West Shreveport Standard Training School at Mangum Memorial. Dr. W. W. Holmes, Educational Director, and Mr. A. McGuirt, Chairman of the Board, were highly pleased with the spirit of the workers. The largest class enrolled was in the course on worship, taught by President Raulins, of Mansfield College. The other instructors are Dean and Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Harwell, all of Shreveport. Mangum Memorial has recently built a tabernacle for the Men's Bible Class. The goal of this Sudnay school is 1000 members.

En route to Shreveport we had a conference with Rev. L. I. McCain concerning the Minden Standard Training School booked for June 5-10. The following courses have been decided on: Bible, Old Testament, Dean Smith; Story Telling, Mrs. W. W. Templeton, of Atoka, Tenn.; Primary Pupil, Mrs. Byron Harwell, of Shreveport, and the Course on the Pupil, with the instructor to be secured.

Francis Ruth Atkinson, our daughter, has attained her thirteenth birthday, which arrived on Friday, the thirteenth day of May. We are glad to relate that she entered her teens on this supposedly unlucky date without any fear whatever in regard to the old superstition.

The writer acknowledges a telephone invitation from the Sunday school superintendent at Barham, to attend on next Sunday a rally that comes as an aftermath of the attend ance contest between Barham and Hornbeck. We are sure this will be a great occasion.

Mrs. J. H. Carter, District Secretary of the New Orleans District, writes that the Sunday school hour at the district conference will be at 3 p.m. Saturday. He says: "We will have Sunday School Day at Carrollton, and I think at many other schools in New Orleans on the 15th." The Board of Managers for the Standard School will meet May 22, afternoon.

Epworth League

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE NEWS.

Meridian Epworth League Union Meets.

On the fourth Sunday in April the City Epworth League Union met and elected officers. Miss Lilybec Phillips was re-elected president of the Union. Other officers elected were: Jean Selby, vice president; Helen Curtis, secretary, and Lester Wolf, treasurer.

The main feature of the program was a debate, "Resolved, That it will mean more to the young people of the Epworth League to plan their own devotional program than to follow those in the Era." The affirmative was represented by Mr. Jean Selby and Miss Minnie Lea Davis; the negative was taken by Miss Johnnie Vandevender and Mr. Waldo Haynes. The negative side won. The judges decided it was better to "stay by" the Epworth Era programs.

Mr. Hawkins gave a brief sketch of the Epworth League Pilgrimage for July 14-29, urging any Leaguers that could to make the trip.

Installation Services at Ridgeland and Millsaps Memorial Churches.

On Sunday, April 10, the Jackson District Secretary attended installation services at Ridgeland and Millsaps Memorial Churches, of which Rev. T. O. Prewitt is pastor. She writes that Brother Prewitt preached two excellent sermons, and two very promising sets of officers were installed.

Poplarville League Has Social Hour Before Service on Sunday Night.

On Sunday evening, one-half hour before the League meeting, the Poplarville Leaguers arrive at the League room for a social hour. Refreshments are served, and a varied program given. As soon as this is over they have their devotional services. The newly elected officers are: Louis O'Donnell, president; Mattie Lee Clary, vice president; Grace Gandy, secretary; Helen Howard, treasurer, and Bertha Provost, Era Agent. The department superintendents are: First, Myra O'Donnell; second, Evelyn Spottswood; third, Alenle Lanier, and fourth, Irene Simmons.

MRS. W. W. SIMMONS.

Mrs. Perneacy Parker Simmons was born in Hinds County, Miss., July 25 1838, and departed this life May 8, 1927, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ollie Conerly, Gloster, Miss.

She was married to I. W. Hays, April 30, 1857. To this union two children were born, the late Mrs. J. E. Cammack, of Fayette, Miss., and Mrs. Mollie J. Cammack, wife of Rev. W. W. Cammack, of Fayette, Miss.

Mr. Hays died Feb. 2, 1863, and the subject of this sketch was left a widow in early life.

On Nov. 1, 1866, she married William Winans Simmons, a Confederate veteran. Mr. Simmons was licensed to preach Nov. 18, 1876, and two weeks later was admitted into the Mississippi Annual Conference, and rendered valuable service to the church he loved so well. Two children by this marriage survive her: Mrs. Ollie Simmons Conerly, of Gloster, Miss., and Willie Woodford Simmons, of Houston, Tex.

The benign influence of this homemaker has a living monument in the lives of her noble family. There could be no more eloquent testimonial than this which comes within the immediate family circle when sons and daughters go out to bless the world. Many rise to call her blessed, even to the third and fourth generation, for she is a great-great-grandmother. It was fitting that she should enter the Eternal Home on Mothers' Day.

Her husband, Rev. W. W. Simmons, died March 2, 1924, and since then Mrs. Simmons had made her home with her daughter, Mrs. O. O. Conerly, in which home her influence remains a holy benediction. Her loved ones delighted to honor her, and lavished affectionate attentions upon her.

Mrs. Simmons committed her life to God very early, and from childhood was a faithful member of the Methodist church. She had read the New Orleans and the Nashville Christian Advocates for more than half a century, and was intensely interested in the activities of the church.

The funeral service was held Monday morning, May 9, 1927, at the Gloster Methodist church, and interment was made in the local cemetery.

During her long and useful life she fought the good fight, she kept the faith and transmitted it to others; henceforth there is laid up for her the crown of righteousness.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

Her pastor,
B. M. HUNT.

MIDDLE AGE BRINGS NEW INTERESTS

For Women in Good Health

MRS. HARVEY TUCKER
408 WALKER STREET, SHELBYVILLE, IND.

"Grow old along with me,
The best is yet to be"

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women of middle age, say they owe their vigor and health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Those who have learned through their own experience the merit of this dependable medicine are enthusiastic in recommending it to their friends and neighbors.

"I had been in bad condition for three months. I could not do my work. One day I read what your medicine had done and just had a feeling that it would help me, so I sent and got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had only taken half a bottle when I got up and started to do my work. It gave me an appetite, and helped me wonderfully. I can not praise this medicine highly enough. I surely will advise all women and girls to take it, and they don't have to use rouge to look healthy. My two daughters are taking it now and one is also using the Sanative Wash. I am willing to have you use this testimonial and I will answer letters from women asking about the medicine."—Mrs. Harvey Tucker, 408 Walker St., Shelbyville, Indiana.

"I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the little books you give away and began to take the medicine. After the first few bottles I began to feel better and could eat better and had fewer headaches. I feel like a different person. At anytime that I don't feel good I take the Vegetable Compound again, as I always keep a bottle on hand. You may use this letter for every word is true. I will answer any letters sent to me."—Mrs. Jennie Bollerman, 516 Smith St., West Hoboken, N. J.

FROM PURVIS, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Just a few words from the Purvis charge. We are having a wonderful time among these good people. They are so considerate and thoughtful of the comfort and happiness of this preacher and his wife. They have just bought more furniture and put into the parsonage, and a bathtub and kitchen sink have been installed. I tell you, it makes us happy, and we feel like the very best that we can do for them is not enough. I have never served better folk than these people. I find myself loving them more and more.

We have received into the church since Annual Conference, eleven by baptism and vows, and seven by certificate, making a total of eighteen members.

Our revival meeting will begin at the Purvis church Sunday, May 22, and run through Sunday, June 5, with Rev. C. Norman Guice, of Conway, Ark, doing the preaching. Come over and be with us some if you can. We hope to have a real revival of old-time religion, where men and women, boys and girls, are born into the kingdom of God.

Yours cordially,

C. W. WESLEY, Pastor.

MOTHERS' DAY AT ROCHELLE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: To-day has been a very wonderful Mothers' Day with us here at Rochelle. Our Sunday school surpassed all previous records, with an attendance of one hundred and thirty.

To-night marked the close of two-weeks' revival campaign, with Brother P. M. Caraway doing the preaching. It has truly been an inspirational meeting. The spirit of God has been much in evidence, and Brother Caraway has done some powerful, soul-stirring preaching. At the two services to-day we received thirty-one into the church, twenty-seven of them were by profession of faith. There were ten others who were prevented from attending church to-day and failed to be received, but will be in a short while, making a total of forty-one additions to the church, or thirty-three per cent increase of our membership, which before was one hundred and twenty.

I wanted to give you and the other brothers in Christ a chance to rejoice with us in this glorious victory for the Master.

Yours in his service,

JAMES T. HARRIS.

BACK BAY MISSION IN BILOXI.

We are trying to complete the church building at Back Bay Mission.

We want to put the corner stone under the church; have six more pews made to fill out the vacant space, have pulpit made, and put a new roof on church of galvanized iron. The paper roof gave way and the church is being damaged very much.

This will cost about $275. We made a drive among the church members, and have secured about $100 of this amount, and it looks as if this is all we can do among our church members, as the factories are closing down and they are out of steady work.

So I am appealing to our good friends to help us out by sending me the other $175.

The Lord will bless you to help in this great missionary work that we are trying to carry on here.

I also ask you to pray for me and the work.

H. L. DANIELS, Pastor,
932 Davis Street, Biloxi, Miss.

FROM PRICE MEMORIAL, GREENWOOD, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: If space will permit I would like to tell a little about our work at Price Memorial.

We are in the midst of our third year, and in many respects it is the best year we have had. We have just completed the work of an addition to our church of five Sunday school rooms, which give us a very convenient and pretty little church. Our new furniture will be set up this week we hope—it has been shipped from factory. We have bought pews, pulpit, chairs, and communion table.

We have had seven additions to the church this year, five on profession of faith. We had two really great services on Mothers' Day.

Our Sunday school has increased about twenty-five per cent over last year in numbers, and possibly more than that in efficiency. Our prayer meetings are fairly well attended. We are almost having one hundred per cent of our membership attend the church services. We have not yet planned our revival.

The Lord has been wonderfully good to us this year, yet we want you to pray for us that we may accomplish more of the work that is needed so much in our charge.

Yours in him,

J. O. DOWDLE.

MOTHERS' DAY PROGRAM, MORTON METHODIST CHURCH.

Special Mothers' Day services were held at the Morton Methodist church on Sunday, May 8, when the following program was rendered:

Song by choir; prayer by Rev. T. A. Ferguson; reading by four girls—Nadine Rigby, Margaret Herring, Vivian Madison and Elain Whatley; reading by Miss Zelda Moss; duet by Misses Lucile and Mary Whatley; reading by Clois Noel; song by Sybal Sanford, Grace Bennette, Lois Johnson, Panzy Schaeffer, Grace Windham, Mildred Goza, Margetett Myers, Alta Gillis, Nancy Kelley; reading by Miss Floy C. Wood; song by Mrs. W. O. Felker; reading by Dorothy Peek, Ruth Gillis, Beatrice Hughes and Aline Clearman; reading by Booth Sanford; quartet by Messrs. A. S. Byrd, Jr., B. B. Hollingsworth, and Misses Lucile and Mary Whatley. Mrs. J. C. Mc Gough presided at the piano.

The entire program was rendered very beautifully, and the tributes paid our mothers were grand indeed. The program was followed by a 25-minute sermon by the pastor, Rev. T. A. Ferguson, who praised the mothers in very glowing terms.

Our Sunday school attendance continues to climb; the average for April was 140, which was a 12 per cent increase over the same month last year. Let every person who reads this article pray that the Lord will direct the officers, teachers and pupils of the Morton Sunday school into greater usefulness in his kingdom.

Mississippi Lady Says She Took Black-Draught for These Symptoms and Was "Greatly Relieved."

Starkville, Miss.—"I have been a user of Black-Draught for about twenty years," says Mrs. C. E. Buntin, of R. F. D. 5, this city.

"I used Black-Draught first for constipation," continues Mrs. Buntin. "I would feel dull, stupid, and have severe headaches, even feverish. I had an uneasy, tight feeling in my stomach.

"I read quite a bit about Black-Draught. I began using it and soon my bowels acted regularly and I was greatly relieved. I used it every once in a while for about eighteen years.

"About two years ago I found I was having indigestion, a tight smothering in my chest, then severe pain, especially after eating sweets. I commenced taking just a pinch of Black-Draught after meals and by doing this I could eat about anything.

"I gave Black-Draught to my children for colds and headaches. I can certainly recommend it."

Thedford's Black-Draught is recommended by thousands of others for the relief of indigestion, biliousness and simple ailments due to constipation. Safe, easy to take. Costs only 1 cent a dose. NC-171

SOUTHERN GOODWILL INDUSTRIES.

The year 1926 was the most successful yet experienced by the Southern Goodwill Industries. We now have ten plants in the following cities: Nashville, Chattanooga, Memphis, Richmond, Dallas, Norfolk, Fort Worth, Atlanta, Shreveport and Winston-Salem. The two last named were established in March, 1926.

It will be remembered that the Goodwill Industries is one of the youngest activities of the Home Department of the Board of Missions, the first plant being established about five years ago. It has as its principal objective furnishing a self-respecting chance for the needy, the handicapped, the unemployed to work out their problems of subsistence under Christian influences. The slogan, "Not Charity But a Chance," expresses tersely the ideals upon which the program is founded. The further away from charity we get the surer we feel of our ability to be of real service to the individuals and families with whom the Goodwill comes in contact. It is too well known by social workers that a taste of charity is as dangerous as the first shot of "dope." Therefore, we should not subject any one unnecessarily to anything so dangerous.

The plan of operating workrooms for repairing and remodeling discarded articles of all kinds, clothing, shoes, furniture, stoves, etc., has been a great blessing to the unskilled, who first of all feel the effects of unemployment. Through this process it is possible to "turn junk into jobs and waste into wages." Hundreds of other poor persons avail themselves of the privilege of purchasing for a small amount, in the Goodwill stores, the materials which have been reconditioned, and thus furnish the money with which to pay the wages of the opportunity workers. Properly promoted, large numbers of needy, discouraged, helpless and often hopeless people may be helped to help themselves. This is the best help that can be given to any one who has a spark of will power left. Often this help is their restoration and salvation.

Then, too, there are perfectly normal people who are faithful members of the church who from sickness, accident or being thrown out of employment suddenly for a time, are in a very bad plight. If they are able to get work right away, they will soon be able to recover; if they cannot, many of them will "go the way of all the world." And once the "going begins" it is very difficult to call a halt. At this point the church has a great responsibility. If she stands by these brothers and sisters in their times of need and embarrassment, some good people have been saved. If not, quite likely another charge has been furnished society. The Goodwill Industries has had the very great privilege of furnishing emergency work to a number of persons in this condition the past year. Those assisted cannot get through expressing their appreciation for the opportunity afforded them. There should be the closest co-operation between our churches and the Goodwill Industries so that practically all our people in times of misfortune may be assisted before the crisis comes in their lives. We should never lose sight of the fact that an ounce of prevention is worth a long ton of cure in social work. At the same time, as long as there is nee.. we must continue to do redemptive work as well.

Briefly, the report for the year shows that we gave 860 different persons a total of 22,934 days' work, paying them $34,612 in opportunity wages. There were 405 conversions. We have always tried to put emphasis on the spiritual side of the work, since often the greatest need of the most needy people is Jesus Christ in their lives. He inspires them to clean up both inside and out. He is their inspiration for a better and higher life for the future. Social work that does not put Jesus first is likely not to put him at all. Most of the conversions have been in the chapel services, the Goodwill Mission in Memphis, and the prisons and institutions of Richmond. In this city a very extensive program of religious work is carried on in the institutions in connection with our Goodwill Industries and many profess conversion during the year. Many of these converts, after they have served time in prison, are given their first job in the Goodwill, and when they have proved themselves are recommended to others.

The progress which we have had the past year represents at least fifty per cent increase over the preceding year. But we have only begun this great work in our church. Many other cities in the South should take it up, and many other features and activities will be added from time to time. Many have been looking for a practical interpretation of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. It seems that we have it in this program.

Those desiring to help in this work and living in towns and cities not large enough to support a Goodwill Industry may assist greatly by sending boxes and parcels to the plant nearest to them.

A REVIVAL AT GANDY, LA.

On April 27, Rev. L. R. Sparks closed a ten-day revival at Gandy. A wonderful revival spirit was shown among the Christians, and new souls were born into the kingdom. We had an addition of ten members to our church—seven by baptism, one by vows, and two by certificate. Four infants were baptized during the meeting.

THE HOSPITAL ASSOCIATION OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH.

By Dr. Charles C. Jarrell.

A year ago the General Secretary of the General Hospital Board invited the representatives of our hospitals to come together in Atlanta to talk over their common tasks, and if deemed wise to organize a hospital association for our church. About ten persons came together, spent a highly interesting day and unanimously decided to favor such an organization. A tentative organization was effected and a provisional constitution agreed on.

The President, Rev. C. C. Jarrell, called the second meeting for April 19, at Atlanta, Ga., in connection with the meeting of the General Hospital Board on April 20.

The attendance this year was more than double that of last year. The three sessions were deeply interesting and marked by intense application and intelligent enthusiasm. Southern Methodism is "on the way" with her healing program.

The president had arranged a program which was carried out with skill and intelligent enthusiasm by the hospital workers of our church, and found its climax in Bishop Candler's address at the dinner at the Henry Grady Hotel.

Striking features of the session were as follows: An address by the President on hospital program in Southern Methodism during the last year, showing over $2,000,000 of hospital property put into service, an address by Miss Lake Johnson, of Lexington, Ky., followed on "Tendencies in Nursing Education." She said there are 150,000 trained nurses in service now, and 15,000 enter training each year.

Dr. L. H. Burlington, of St. Louis, read a thorough, scientific paper on "The Problems of the Hospital Superintendent." The publication of this paper was requested. Mrs. Plato Durham pleased and informed her audience with her address on "The Woman's Auxiliary of the Hospital." Dr. J. H. Groseclose, of Dallas, Tex., made a virile address on "Raising Hospital Funds." Dr. R. H. Oppenheimer told "How to Keep the Hospital Out of Debt." Dr. D. H. Hotchkiss, of Houston, Tex., told how he raised $8,000,000 through the Golden Cross last year. Dr. F. W. Brandon, Associate Secretary of the General Hospital Board, read an eloquent paper on "Methodism and Health," and its publication was asked for.

At the dinner Dr. J. L. Campbell read a paper on "Methodist Hospitals and Medical Education." The publication of this paper was requested. Then Bishop Candler kept the dinner group of twenty-five laughing and thinking and visioning the future as he spoke on "The Future of the Hospital Cause in Our Church."

C. C. Jarrell, of Atlanta, was elected President; John S. Jenkins, LaGrange, Ga., Vice President; and F. W. Brandon, Atlanta, Secretary. The next meeting will be held at Barnes Hospital, St. Louis.

HOW TO GET BEER AND WINE—A PRACTICAL METHOD.

The question, 'How can beer and wine be brought back?" is one of great concern to some people in America. The New York World gives a practical answer to the question: "If the United States wants wine and beer, the Anti-Salooon League must be put out of commission."

That is straight and to the point, and it is true.

According to the New York World, beer and wine cannot be brought back, no matter how the wets organize, and no matter how much money they spend in propaganda, as long as the Anti-Saloon League is on the job. "The Anti-Saloon League must first be put out of commision," and then it will be easy to break through the wall and liberate the flood of beer and wine.

The New York World goes on to tell just how this is to be done: "Close the doors and pulpits of the evangelical churches against the representatives of the Anti-Saloon League"—which is being done in some instances—thereby cutting off financial support, and informed moral support, at the same time.

Get the Christian churches to withdraw their moral and financial support of the Anti-Saloon League—starve this child of the church, and the beer and wine flood will again overflow the land. Yes, and whiskey, too, for saloons will again flourish as of old.

Will you make the sacrifice with the rest of us, to help make and keep Louisiana safe for our boys and girls? Preachers can and ought to help by opening their church and pulpit to the representatives of the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League. All can help by giving the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League moral and financial support.

Our Slogan is, "The bootleggger must go." Please help us drive him out. Send your check to the Louisiana Anti-Saloon League, 703 New Orleans Bank Building, New Orleans, La.

Yours for a dry State,

O. L. JONES, Superintendent.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A SUGGESTED FINANCIAL SYSTEM.

If anybody is satisfied with the present financial system of the church, we do not know who it is. There is general agreement that more money is necessary for carrying on our whole program efficiently than is being received; and there seems to be, too, a pretty general agreement that it is becoming increasingly hard to raise the assessments laid upon the church.

We have not heard anybody say that the church is asking for more than it ought to ask for, or that our people are giving beyond their ability. In fact, it is pretty well agreed that we are not giving as much as we ought to give. What, then, is the trouble?

The most frequent answer to this question is, "We have too many collections, coming too close together, for too great a number of causes." In further explanation, it is said that a state of mind has arisen which makes it seem that the church is more concerned about raising money than it is about anything else.

The fact that the church is not more concerned about raising money than it is about anything else does not alter the case—a state of mind is a hard thing to deal with when there is apparent cause for its existence. We need to change this attitude and bring about a state of mind that will make it possible for the church to secure such financial support as its great work entitles it to receive and as its needs demand.

Without too great insistence upon the plan we have it in mind to suggest, especially as to details, we propose the following for the consideration of those who will have to face this whole financial situation in the next General Conference.

1. Let the General Conference recommend and urge the setting apart of two periods in each year when the financial obligations of the local church shall be provided for. Let the first period be in the early part of the year, for securing pledges to meet the budget for local needs and the Conference Work; let the second period be later in the year for securing pledges to meet the assessments for General Work.

2. Let the General Commission on Budget at the next General Conference find the average amount collected each year during this quadrennium on assessments for all the causes with which it deals, and let this amount be the assessment for those causes during the next quadrennium.

3. Let the General Conference direct that no special church-wide financial appeal be made for any connectional cause during the next quadrennium.

4. Let the General Conference further direct that henceforth not more than one special church-wide financial appeal be made for connectional interests in any one quadrennium.

5. Let the Conference Commission on Budget follow the same plan as laid down for the General Commission on Budget.

6. Let the General Conference authorize a Commission on Christian Stewardship whose duty it shall be to carry on a definite campaign of education throughout the church concerning the duty and privilege of giving, but without reference to any particular cause to be supported or fund to be raised.

We do not claim that this suggested plan is perfect by any means, but we do believe it has some features at least that commend it. We manifestly need a better financial system than the one we now have.

A BETTER TRAINED MINISTRY.

We are glad to note that the College of Bishops, at its recent meeting, acceded to the request of the Board of Education to issue an open letter to the church on the subject of theological education, the letter to be written by Bishops Candler, Mouzon, and Dobbs. The church maintains two great schools of theology—one at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, and the other at Emory University, Atlanta—and it is at these schools that our young preachers should pursue studies that will better qualify them for the great work to which they have been divinely called. We hope the time will come—and that right early—when no young preacher will feel that he is fitted for the work of the pastorate until he has made every possible effort to make full use of the means of preparation the church has provided for him. These institutions are not maintanied "just for the fun of the thing;" they are maintained to give the church a trained ministry. If a young preacher does not want the training, we can hardly see how he can be willing to undertake the work.

A SUNDAY LAW FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

We understand that the District of Columbia, if it has any law at all on the subject, has a very weak law providing for Sunday as a day of rest. A bill is now pending—H. R. 10311—that undertakes to supply this lack. The bill is certainly liberal enough in its provisions; in fact the chief objection to it on the part of those who favor Sunday as a day of rest will be that it is too liberal. The fight of those who will oppose it will doubtless be directed against the provision that it shall be unlawful to carry on commercialized sports and amusements on Sunday. There are those who are lovers of money more than they are lovers of their fellow-men, and they will fight this law in Washington, as they fight it everywhere else. We hope it will be adopted.

GIVING AS JESUS GAVE.

Under the caption, "Measuring Methodism," the Western Christian Advocate of recent date has some searching words that are worth meditating upon. We quote:

"Methodism has not been measuring much in sacrificial life in the last few years. We have been giving out of our treasury while rolling in surplus. It has been acknowledged, it continues to be so, that we have not given sacrificially. The majority of us do not give out of our incomes, which scarcely cover our budgets, but we give freely, even indifferently, out of our surplus; if we have none, we give sparingly—cautious giving, divided out for the Lord after we have carefully considered our own interests. Give with the sacrificial needle-point at our hearts, as the way Jesus Christ gave himself on Calvary. He gave at the point of the sharp thorn; he gave himself so fully that after he had given, he had nothing of earth left. How few of his followers ever find it in their resolution to give as he gave! Perhaps we should not expect a believer to do as he did, for only a God could give as Jesus Christ gave. For this we should be thankful and seek to give ourselves as he gave himself. That was what he came for. What do you, as follower of Jesus Christ, come into the Kingdom for? During the World War a youthful American soldier lay wounded unto death on his cot. When he was told he would live only twenty minutes, he gave words to be carried to his mother and father, closed his eyes, turned his face to the wall as though ready to go. After a moment he turned his face toward the nurse and whispered, 'Well, after all, this is what I came for.' Why did you, follower of Christ? What did you come into the Kngdom for? Why did you enlist?"

THE SUN KEEPS SHINING.

Sometimes the sun is hid for days at a time. Thick clouds hang low over the earth, and at intervals the rain descends in torrential floods. The birds cease their singing, sitting drearily on dripping boughs and gloomily preening their moist feathers. The flowers droop their heads, showing signs of the wear and tear of the elements. It is a time of sadness and melancholy.

But in due course the sun shines again. The clouds clear away and the blue sky stretches away beautifully overhead. The birds remember their songs, and the flowers stand erect, rejoicing in the light and warmth of a brighter day. Men walk the streets with heads up and a smile on their faces—for the sun is shining again. To-day may be dark—but joy will come with the morrow.

I WENT FOR A WALK AND I SAW—GOD.

By Rev. John L. Williams.

I went for a trip in the fall of the year which carried me to Pittsburgh, Penn. While gazing at the marvelous developments of that great city, I saw God as revealed in art, science and the works of human hands.

I went for a walk in this great city and I saw God—the majestic revelation of God's power and of his influence and of his work by the children of men. I visited the Carnegie Institute and Museum where I discovered what science was doing to tell us of the wonders and mighty works of Jehovah as science revealed the mystery and wonder of his presence. In this museum, builded by Mr. Carnegie, I found that art and science and philosophy had contributed to the sources of wealth in the production of the master paintings of Europe in bringing to the vision of Americans the wonderful paintings of the art galleries of Europe which had been reproduced and exhibited in this great gallery for the education and development of powers of men. In this mighty and wonderful exhibition, I saw in my walk—God.

I went for a walk again and I saw the great University of Pittsburgh and the majestic building which is being erected of fifty stories wherein shall be domiciled all of the departments of the forty-million-dollar university of Pittsburgh.

I went for a walk and I saw God, as he was revealed in the great steel mills in the great city of Pittsburgh where the modern machinery of the world is being rapidly dispatched. In all this could be seen a vision of God.

I again went for a trip to Philadelphia, where I went for a walk and I saw God, in the great modern city life with its glory and splendor in beautiful buildings and glorious history.

I went for a walk and I saw God, when I visited the great department store of John Wanamaker and observed for a time its mighty enterprise and wonderful movements. Here I saw ten thousand uniformed sales ladies and gentlemen; as it were, one great piece of machinery revolving and speaking out the thoughts and ways of providence.

I went for a walk and I saw God in Liberty Hill, the birthplace of the American Republic. I stood with bared head and profound silence in the place where once stood the founders of our great Republic. It was herewith I saw God revealing the process of a providence which gave birth to the greatest nation that has ever existed in the history of the race of man. It was here that I saw the old bell which rang out the birthtime of this freedom and this liberty, guarded so carefully by two soldiers, that what is left of the fragments of this early civilization may be looked upon by the generations to follow, that God and right and a nation to carry forward his commands may still live in the years to come.

I went for a walk and I saw God in the Centennial celebration, with its wonderful buildings, represented by every nation upon the habitable globe. Here I saw God as portrayed in architecture, literature, in art, in civilization, in the religion which God had given to our forefathers, and which has been the solace and comfort of succeeding generations.

I went for a walk and I saw God in the great City of New York, with its teeming millions of inhabitants, with its commercial buildings and its institutions of learning, with its great commercial display and exhibits on every hand; in my walk I saw God in this wonderful providence for man.

Again I went for a walk and I saw God in the great Columbia University, with its thirty thousand students from every section of the globe, with its numerous and wonderful buildings, with its large group of educated leaders, with its determined spirit of Americanism, the great outstanding feature of the university.

Again I went for a walk and I saw God in the great churches of New York, one of which I went into and worshiped at its shrine. In this great cathedral I heard music that thrilled my soul and gave me a new vision of life. I heard a great message in my walk, from the man of God who seemed to be hiding behind the Cross. It was a message of cheer and hope. It was a message of peace, a message of happiness, a message which pledged a new vision of God to the followers of God. I arose from the pew in this, God's house; walking away I felt that I had really seen God, that I had heard his music, that I had heard his words, and that to me it was a majestic display of his nature and of his mercy and compassion for men.

I went for a walk and I saw God. I went for a walk to an orphanage where I saw more than a thousand children clothed and fed and cared for by loving hands. Herein I saw, as it were, the kindness and goodness of a kind providence which had so amply provided for the destitute poor in such a splendid manner.

I went for a walk and I saw God. In one of the parks of a great city, I saw two lovers sitting on a bench. They were not frivolous, they had progressed too far for that, but the winsome look on the face of the lad as he gazed at one whom nature had definitely attracted to him, and the almost mystical faraway gleam in the gaze of the girl reminded me of the plan of love which the great Creator had written large in his providential scheme.

I went for a walk and I saw God—men walking upon streets as trees. Many of them seemed not to have in their minds a fixed purpose—they were simply walking, walking to nowhere, to somewhere, unconsciously and unmindful of the eternity to come.

I went for a walk and I saw God, for it was a rainy and stormy day. The sun was darkening, the black clouds rolled ominously, fiercely the lightning flashed in jagged streaks of light which are terrifying to those who do not stop to think; the thunder roared and crashed in staccato and crescendo fashion. To me it was a majestic display of the God of nature on a glad and mighty holiday.

I went for a walk and I saw God, for the winter was coming on. The snow was fast falling in stinging blasts. It made me think that in the realms of life there is a time when "winter comes." It did not come to me with any thought of terror, because I knew that every winter changes to spring in the course of time.

I went for a walk and I saw God. It was a walk to a hospital. I saw a little wagon being hurriedly wheeled past the door. I heard the cries of a woman, which pierced the depths of my soul, and I said to myself, "some one is dying." Upon further inquiry, I found that I was wrong; some one was not dying, but, instead, some one had been born. The travail of that woman indicated that a soul had been born. For all that is true, does not the wisdom of the ancients assure us that death does not differ at all from life?

I went for a walk and I saw God. I went for a walk and I saw God forever making all things new, forever giving mankind another chance.

I went for a walk and I saw God, victorious over all, in all, through all. I saw him bringing, so many times, health out of sickness, light out of darkness, joy and patience and peace out of sorrow, heaven out of hell.

I went for a walk and I saw God as I came speeding my way over hill and mountain vale toward the land of the Sunny South, where from my infancy I had been taught by my mother that I was the consecrated property of the Most High, to the land of my fathers, to my own native land, where I felt in my heart like uttering the song which the Scottish Baird uttered when he said, "Oh, Scothie, my dear native land, name ever dear to thee."

I went for a walk in my dear native land and I saw—God. Since God is and since God is everywhere, my heart shall not fear, for I shall know the things for me are always greater than the things against me, for it doth not appear what we shall be, but when he shall appear we shall see him as he is.

New Orleans, La.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS, MAY, 1927.

Bishops Present.—Except Bishop Cannon, who was in Africa, and Bishop Beauchamp, who has recently been ill, all the active bishops were present on May 2, 1927, when the College of Bishops met.

Communications.—Many communications to the College were received, and Bishops McMurry, Dickey, and Hay were appointed a committee to give careful consideration to all these communications and to bring recommendations for action to the College.

Courtesy.—On many occasions Miss Flossie Cloyd has adorned the room in which the College met with beautiful flowers, and for her gracious kindness the members of the College placed on their records and communicated to her an expression of appreciation.

Publicity.—As on other occasions, Bishop Du Bose was appointed the representative of the College to give information to the daily press.

Assignment of the Bishops.—Because of the absence of Bishops Cannon and Beauchamp, who would this year have been members of the Committee on Assignment, Bishops Dickey and Hay were added to Bishops Darlington, Du Bose, and Ainsworth to compose the Committee on Assignment. Next year Bishops Cannon and Beauchamp will take their places on the committee. No changes were made in the fields of labor agreed upon in May, 1926, for the several bishops.

Forms.—Because some of the forms on which official reports are made and actions recorded are not satisfactory Bishops Mouzon, Du Bose, and Dobbs were appointed a committee to recommend needed changes in our forms.

Legal Questions.—No bishop had given an official decision during the year, consequently there were no legal questions to consider.

Ecumenical Methodist Conference.—In answer to a communication touching an Ecumenical Methodist Conference in 1931 it was agreed to appoint Bishops Du Bose, Boaz, and Darlington to confer with like committees from other American Methodist Churches.

World Conference on Faith and Order.—Vacancies in the delegation to the World Conference on Faith and Order are to be filled by the reserves already elected. Rev. John W. Pearson, of Springfield, Mo., was elected a reserve delegate to this Conference.

Fall Meeting of the College.—The invitation from Dallas, Tex., to hold the fall meeting of the College in that city was accepted, beginning at 9:30 a.m., Friday, Dec. 16, 1927.

Wesley's Rooms in Lincoln College, Oxford.—The rooms occupied by John Wesley during the years that he was a fellow of Lincoln College need repair, and it is proposed that several Methodist bodies in the world shall participate in the expense necessary to restore these rooms to their original condition. The proportion of this fund asked of our church is $2000, and each bishop in charge of the home Conferences is expected to raise $200 and to report at the fall meeting.

Reorganization of the College of Bishops.—The following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That beginning with this the first annual meeting of the bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, following the General Conferences of 1926 the following shall be and is hereby the order of the bishops concerning future meetings:

"1. The presidency of the College of Bishops shall henceforth be held by all the bishops in the order of seniority, each bishop serving from the close of one meeting to the close of the next meeting. It shall be the duty of the president to call meetings as provided, be responsible for securing a suitable room in which to hold the meetings, preside at the sessions, and discharge all the duties of the president of the body.

"2. Beginning with this meeting, a secretary shall be elected by ballot, without nomination, during the first annual meeting of the College of Bishops following the General Conference, to hold office for four years and to assume the duties of his office at the conclusion of the said first annual meeting after the session of the General Conference. The secretary shall send to the several bishops copies of the minutes of the meeting at as early day following the meeting as may be practicable.

"3. Communications in the hands of the secretary and others for the consideration of the College shall be referred at the first session of the meeting to a committee of three, to be appointed by the president, who shall consider them and report their recommendations thereon to the bishops at the earliest possible hour.

"4. The committee on the course of study shall be named at the first annual meeting of the bishops following the General Conference, and shall serve through the quadrennium.

"5. That a Committee on Program, consisting of the president, the retiring president, and the next to occupy that office, shall be created, whose business it shall be to determine in the interim of the meetings all matters pertaining to the next meeting, public functions, etc., for the College.

"6. There shall be a Committee on Assignments, consisting of five bishops in the order of seniority, who shall serve through the year from the beginning of one annual meeting to the beginning of the next. This committee shall receive all communications relating to the assignments and shall prepare the plan of episcopal visitation and submit it to the bishops for their final determination. During the interim of the meetings of the bishops this committee shall have power to assign a bishop or bishops to the presidency of any Conference or Conferences that for any cause may be made vacant during the year. In cases of emergency the majority of the committee shall have authority to make the assignment."

Signed by: W. F. McMurry, John M. Moore, H. A. Boaz, Edwin D. Mouzon, Hoyt M. Dobbs, H. M. Du Bose, Sam R. Hay.

The following resignation was submitted and accepted:

"To the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—

"Brethren: That the majority of the College may be relieved from every possible embarrassment in the accomplishment of its wishes and purposes, I resign the position of secretary to take effect at its pleasure. COLLINS DENNY.

"Nashville, Tenn., May 3, 1927."

Bishop Denny, in submitting his resignation as secretary, announced that he was perfectly willing to continue to act as secretary during this annual meeting, to reply officially to all communications, and to prepare the official report of the actions of the College or that at the pleasure of the College he would give way at once. The College requested Bishop Denny to continue to act as secretary through this annual meeting, to answer all the official communications, and to prepare the official report.

Bishop Moore was then elected secretary.

Course of Study.—The College elected the following members to serve as a Committee on the Course of Study: Bishops Candler, Denny, Mouzon, Moore, and Dobbs.

Fraternal Delegate to the Methodist Episcopal Church.—Bishop Dobbs was elected to represent our Church at the next General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Submission of a Constitutional Question.—It was agreed that the constitutional question referred to the Annual Conferences by the last General Conference should be submitted in the third year of this quadrennium.

Colored Methodist Episcopal Church.—Rev. J. A. Martin, Sunday School Secretary of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, came before the College and spoke in the interest of Paine College. That college in order to continue the great work in which it has been engaged, to enable it to keep pace with other institutions for the training of preachers and teachers for our colored people is in need of new buildings and additional endowment. Already in Virginia a committee has been appointed to visit the cities and towns within the State in the interest of this college. Most cordially our College of Bishops endorsed this movement and recommended to our Church that Paine College should be aided to enable it to continue, and indeed to improve the great and commendable work it has been doing from the time of its organization. So notable has been the work of Paine College that not even one of its graduates has ever been brought before the courts for any breach of law. In addition to such scholars as the late Professor Gilbert, Paine College has equipped a large number of the leading officers and preachers of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. Our College of Bishops earnestly hopes that our people will count it a privilege to continue and to increase the aid our Church has been giving to this institution.

The Superannuate Endowment Fund.—The bishops in charge of the home Conferences were requested to stress the immediate collection of the subscriptions made to the Superannuate Endowment Fund and to give suitable time during the meeting of the Conferences for the presentation of this cause. The College unanimously agreed to co-operate heartily and fully with the Board of Finance in this matter, and Bishops McMurry and Dickey were appointed to prepare a statement to our Church in the name of the College of Bishops.

RULES FOR MAKING A GOOD CHURCH MEMBER.

Number 10.

By "Rev. Ichabod Crane."

A good church member will pray daily for his church and pastor.

"Now, I beseech you, brethren, for the Lord Jesus Christ's sake, and for the love of the Spirit, that ye strive together with me in your prayers to God for me." Rom. 15:30.

It is altogether fitting that we should close this series of articles with an exhortation to pray daily. Most of our difficulties could be easily overcome if we spent more time in fervent prayer. A task is made easier when we go to it "on our knees." If I could carry but one message to my brethren, it would be, "Pray without ceasing."

DEPARTMENT OF PROMOTION AND FINANCE.

The Board of Education at its recent annual meeting authorized the development of a Department of Promotion and Finance whose work will be twofold—cultural and financial. The people called Methodist have not yet come to the point where they have "an adequate appreciation of the importance of Christian education." They will reach it only by slow degrees. A beginning has been made. "Line upon line and precept upon precept" will be necessary. It takes a long time to develop an apple orchard to the fruit-bearing stage. The only hope of a crop is to grow strong, vigorous trees. This means slow, tedious cultivation. Likewise, much cultivation is needed to make our people educationally-minded and educationally-fruitful.

The financial feature of the department has to do with gathering the fruit. It is no small task to harvest a crop after it matures. It has to be done at the right time and in the right way, lest the fruit be damaged and the trees injured to the detriment of future crops. So it is with gathering financial harvests in church work.

It is the purpose of the Board to establish this department on sound business principles in harmony with Methodist ideals and polity. No high pressure methods will be employed. The usual inflated boosting with consequenting collapsing and more or less general bad effects will be avoided. Only such methods will be used as will leave permanent results and steadily advance the interests of the kingdom.

Incidentally, it is expected that this department will render valuable help to other church activities by assisting them in raising funds for their enterprises, such as hospitals, orphanages, and church buildings. There is no desire or expectation of making any money for the Board out of this department. On the contrary, the Board will furnish the overhead supervision to the local enterprise, leaving only the field expenses connected with the campaign, such as salary of financial director and other workers, publicity, etc.

If you want to raise funds for your school, to endow a chair, build a dormitory, pay a debt; or, if you want to build a hospital, an orphanage, or a new church, let the Baord of Education know about it. They can help you and will be glad to do so.

H. H. SHERMAN,
Associate Secretary, Board of Education.

BIBLE READING.

By F. Burdine.

Who May Receive the Holy Spirit?

1. Believers: Acts 11:17; 8:12, 15; Eph. 1:13.
2. Sons of God: Gal. 4:6. As the Son is the Gift of God to the world, so the Holy Spirit is the Gift to the whole circle of believing ones.
3. Obedient ones: Acts 5:32.
4. Asking ones: Luke 11:13.

II. How to Receive Him:

1. By prayer. Luke 11:13; Acts 8:15; John 14:16.
2. By Faith. The sinner receives the Savior by faith, so the believer receives the Holy Spirit by faith.

III. Hindrances:

1. A lack of teaching. Faith comes by the Word. We cannot believe what we are ignorant of.
2. A lack of definite prayer and personal faith.
3. A lack of earnestness.
4. A lack of desire—a self-satisfactory life—not torn up. Matt. 5:6.
5. A lack of consecration. Jesus cannot baptize with the Holy Spirit unless yielded to him and pliable in his hands. God will not take possession of that which has not been deeded to him.
6. A lack of proper motive. Acts 8:21; James 4:3. It must be for the glory of God and not for an experience and self-glory. "Not I, but Christ." Must be willing to walk by faith.

If the kingdom of God is to be realized on earth, its soldiers need a rallying standard—and that with inspiration not limited by time or place. For this nation or for that, in one age or in another, an eagle, a flag, or a battle-song has had the magic to make men more than men; ask we a standard potent for every race and in every age? That standard is the cross of Christ; its legend, Follow me.—Burnett Hillman Streeter, in Reality.

JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

By John D. Ellis, Secretary.

The Jackson District Conference was held at Flora, Miss., May 10-12, and accomplished its work according to Disciplinary requirements.

A printed program, prepared in advance by Rev. J. L. Decell, the thoughtful presiding elder, was made the order of business for the entire session. The pastors also, at his request, used the printed district conference forms, in making their reports, which was expeditious and helpful to committees.

The conference met in a good place, among hospitable people, and was an enjoyable occasion.

Preachers and delegates were fraternal and brotherly, and nothing occurred to indicate ill temper or unsuitable spirit.

At the noon hour each day the ladies of the local church and community set up a cafeteria in the Sunday school rooms, and served the preachers and delegates according to their tastes and propensities. After tasting the propensities increased, and some returned with plate or cup, and made candid acknowledgment of augmented propensity.

W. E. Harris spoke words of welcome to the conference, and presented to each delegate a cedar souvenir made with his own hands; to the presiding elder, a gavel and key; and to the secretary a pen, all of which is beautiful in workmanship! Befitting responses were made by L. L. Roberts, J. L. Decell, and by the secretary. Brother Harris may not possess the skill to devise the cunning work in gold, silver and stone that Bezaleel possessed under the power of God's Spirit (Exodus 31:1-4), but he knows how to devise cunning work in cedar, and his souvenirs will ever remind the brethren of his excellent Christian spirit, and of a pleasant sojourn with him, and the good people of Flora. The wish is sincere that they may grow like cedars in Lebanon, and forever flourish in the courts of our God.

The sermons by Revs. C. C. Clark, T. M. Brownlee, V. G. Clifford, and H. J. Moore were more than graceful gestures; they were full of gospel meat, and showed much thought and study.

The speeches of all the laymen who were on the program showed thoughtful preparation, and nothing was pulled off in an indifferent, careless manner.

The chairman superintended even in advance, and gave satisfaction through the qualities of courtesy and efficiency. Nature cut him out with her sharpest pair of scissors to fill every niche of leadership with affability and fruitful competency.

Dr. J. R. Lin spoke with such illumination upon the subject, "What the Church Must Do to Win the World," the conference requested him to publish his splendid address in pamphlet for distribution and preservation.

Good speeches upon the varied interests of the church were made by J. M. Sullivan, L. L. Roberts, W. D. Hawkins, Miss Maggie Mae Jones, John C. Chambers, Mrs. Steward Dunning, V. G. Clifford, J. M. Morse, S. B. Watkins, H. G. Hawkins, W. T. Griffin, O. S. Lewis, J. C. Wood, and D. M. Key.

When Rev. C. H. Ellis was speaking, he was asked about his age, but he replied that he refused to practice upon himself the psychological feeling that he is growing old.

A. P. Hamilton was helpful to the conference in leading the music.

Among the visitors was Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District. One-third of Brother Leggett's district is under water, and many of his sheep are scattered, Four or five pastoral charges in the Jackson District are also affected by the flood.

The conference, by prayer, resolution, and appointment of a committee, showed sympathy for the people who are in trouble and sorrow.

By resolution, sympathy was expressed for the editor of the Christian Advocate, and all the members of the family, in the passing of Rev. Lyman Carley, an esteemed member of the Mississippi Conference.

Local deacon's credentials were restored to J. N. Hall.

Wm. Rufus Hummontree was licensed to preach.

Frank A. Calhoun was recommended for admission into Annual Conference.

Delegates were elected to the Annual Conference as follows: J. S. Williams, J. A. Lindsey, I. O. Brown, H. O. Middleton, Mrs. W. H. Watkins, C. L. Ray, G. M. Lester, A. B. Kling, H. L. Clark, W. E. Harris, D. M. Key, J. M. Sullivan, J. C. Wood, Miss Daisy Stevens, and J. C. Thomas. Alternates: O. H. Wingfield, W. H. Bradley, M. S. Enochs, H. T. Newell, and W. M. Price,

The conference voted to hold its next session at Florence, Miss.

SUGGESTS A CONFERENCE-WIDE APPEAL.

Dear Dr. Carley: In view of the fact that we have in the Mississippi Conference eight or ten preachers whose pastorates are in the flooded section of our Conference, and whose people were forced to move out to high ground, scattered here and there over the country, waiting for the time to come when they can return home and begin all over again; and knowing, too, the preachers who serve these charges doubtless have no way to support themselves and families during this period of waiting, and when they return to their charges it will be to a people many of whom will have to have financial aid;

Therefore it seems to me it would be the proper thing for the presiding elders to call a meeting among themselves and each one agree to appeal through the pastors to every charge and church in the Conference for a free-will offering for these preachers whose work is in the flooded section.

So far as I know not one of them will receive a penny from the flood relief fund, and almost every one of us has made some offering to that cause. Now let us think of our brethren. We preachers are just waiting to hear from you elders. Are you going to take care of these, our brethren? We will tell the Bishop about every one of you if you don't do something. Let it be a Conference-wide appeal.

C. A. SCHULTZ.

IN REPLY TO REV. W. T. BAZZEL.

By Hon. T. M. Evans.

I read in the New Orleans Christian Advocate under date of May 5, 1927, an article from Rev. W. T. Bazzel, in which he said: "I am not in favor of passing State laws forbidding the teaching of the evolution theory of man's origin in our schools and colleges. I have never been in favor of such laws." And then he assigns several reasons, and in the fourth reason he says:

"I fear that all this agitation over the questions at issue between 'Fundamentalists' and 'Modernists' may drive more young people away from the church than any erroneous theory of the origin of man, studied and taught as a theory, could ever do. And those who would inject the matter into politics and make it a subject for arbitrary legislation may succeed in driving thousands of our young people to renounce the faith of their fathers. Youth is an iconoclastic period. As the wide-awake boy pursues his studies he learns to think for himself. Above everything else he wants to do his own thinking, and form his own conclusions. He takes peculiar delight in ridding himself of childish notions and discarding childish delusions. With the zeal of a crusader, he demolishes old traditions—Santa Claus, fairies, mermaids, sea-serpents and ghosts.

"Then he turns a critical eye upon the doctrines of revealed religion, ready to reject whatsoever may seem superstitious or fanciful therein. This is inevitable. The only possible way to prevent it is to refuse to educate him, and keep him in profound ignorance. Now, if the young student has a Christian teacher to guide him, and is in an institution of learning which has a Christian atmosphere, we may safely leave teacher and student together, free from all legislative restrictions, to pursue their researches in philosophy and science. But if we have hedged Christian teaching about with legal restrictions, and tried to protect our tenets by civil law, seeking to chain his mind to our own interpretation of the first chapter of Genesis, why should we wonder if he rebels? And if we have proclaimed and declared, and have written it into the laws of the State—that he who rejects our pet theory of man's origin rejects the whole Christian religion, why should we be amazed if he discards the church and turns atheist?"

Now I am led to inquire as to where a minister ordained by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, acquired the authority to refer to the account given in the first chapter of Genesis of the creation of man as our "pet theory" of man's origin?

The brother should not have confused a statement of fact with a theory. A theory is a conclusion arrived at through process of reason which is not susceptible of being established by positive evidence.

A witness is not permitted in a court of law to testify to his theories or conclusions, but is only permitted to testify to actual facts within his own knowledge.

There is nothing contained in the first three chapters of Genesis that indicates that it was the theory of any man, but the first three chapters of Genesis purport to be a statement of fact, made by God himself, who can swear by none greater than himself, as to acts he did prior to the creation of man, prior to the time when he breathed into the man's nostrils the breath of life and he became a living soul, when there was no human being present to testify to the acts that were done. There is not a suggestion of reason or logic, but a statement of fact.

When a witness testifies in a court that does not understand his language, he speaks through an interpreter, so that when the human family forgot God and could no longer converse with him, it became necessary for God to speak through an interpreter, holy men, prophets and apostles, and finally through his Son, who declared that you have Moses and the Prophets with you, and if you will not hear them ye will not hear though one should rise from the dead.

Mr. Blackstone says that "law is divided into three classes: First, divine or revealed law, which is the law of God imparted to man by inspiration; second, natural law, which is also the law of God imparted to man by the light of reason, and, third, the statute law, which is the law enacted by man through legislation. So we see that the Divine Law of God revealed by inspiration is given us by a positive declaration and is not to be ascertained by reason or logic and, therefore, cannot be considered as synonymous with a theory, while knowledge of natural law is acquired by the light of reason, which renders it susceptible to many theories.

Now the statements contained in the first three chapters of Genesis are positive statements of fact and are not conclusions arrived at through reason or logic, and the first three chapters of Genesis are the three first chapters of the first book adopted in Article 5, Section 11, of the Discipline as the Holy Scripture in the following language: "In the name of the Holy Scripture, we do understand those canonical books of the Old and New Testament, of whose authority was never any doubt in the church."

It will be observed that this paragraph concludes with the following words, "was never any doubt in the church," and then names the books of the Bible, beginning with Genesis. Before a person is ordained as a minister in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, he must answer affirmatively the required order of faith, as follows:

"Do you trust that you are inwardly moved by the Holy Ghost to take upon you the office of the ministry in the church of Christ, to serve God for the promoting of his glory and the edifying of his people?"

Ans. "I trust so."

The Bishop. "Do you unfeignedly believe all the canonical Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments?"

Ans. "I do believe them."

The Bishop. "Will you diligently read or expound the same unto the people whom you shall be appointed to serve?"

Ans. "I will."

And then he is ordained as deacon as follows:

"Take thou authority to execute the office of a deacon in the church of God; in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen.

"Take thou authority to read the Holy Scriptures in the church of God, and to preach the same."

And then before he is ordained as an elder he is required to answer further:

"Do you think in your heart that you are truly called, according to the will of our Lord Jesus Christ, to the order of elders?"

Ans. "I think so."

The Bishop. "Are you persuaded that the Holy Scriptures contain sufficiently all doctrine required of necessity for eternal salvation through faith in Jesus Christ? And are you determined, out of the said Scriptures, to instruct the people committed to your charge, and to teach nothing, as required of necessity, to eternal salvation, but that which you shall be persuaded may be concluded and proved by the Scripture?"

Ans. "I am so persuaded, and have so determined, by God's grace."

The Bishop. "Will you then give your faithful diligence, always so to administer the doctrine and sacraments, and the discipline of Christ, as the Lord hath commanded?"

Ans. "I will so do, by the help of the Lord."

The Bishop. "Will you be ready with all faithful diligence to banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrines contrary to God's Word; and to use both public and private monitions and exhortations, as well as to the sick as to the whole within your charge, as need shall require, and occasion shall be given?"

Ans. "I will, the Lord being my helper."

Now has the time come when the men who have taken these vows and who have been ordained by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to read the Holy Scripture and preach the same dare to refer to the testimony of God contained therein "as our pet theory," or to speak of the same in comparison with childish notions and childish delusions and old traditions as Santa Claus, fairies, mermaids, sea serpents, and ghosts?

I yield to no man in reverence for the true minister of the gospel who holds to the faith once delivered to the saints, but there are many instances contained in the Bible as well as profane history that are not very complimentary to the pacifists and those ministers who were not firm.

The brother says that he is opposed to civil government interfering; now if he will refresh his reading of the Holy Scripture, which he took a vow to read and to preach, he will find that when Moses, the Law Giver and the head of the civil government, retired to the mountain to commune with God, Aaron, the High Priest and head of the church, gathered all the gold that the people had and moulded a golden calf for the people to worship, and that it was only the strong arm of the law administered by Moses as the civil ruler that saved the children of Israel from then and there becoming an idolatrous nation of people.

And again in Ahab's time you will find that there were fifty orthodox priests, but pacifists, who preferred to hide in caves and to be fed from the King's table to taking up their cross and confronting their enemies, and that there were 450 priests of Baal slain in one day, all of whom were being supported by the government.

It may be time now for the civil government of the State to intervene and save future generations from the idolatry being taught in our schools and colleges now, and sometimes preached from our pulpits and also published in our church papers.

It is as easy for an ordained minister of a Christian church to become a prophet of Baal as it was then in Moses' day. He would require no new ordination.

"ANATHEMA."

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

Paul, in the closing sentence of his great first Epistle to the Corinthians, just before he pronounces the Apostolic Benediction, utters this startling sentence: "If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be anathema." Some Greek copies and some English versions leave out the words Jesus Christ. Instead of a fearful denunciation, as it seems to be, it is really a very strong statement of a very glorious fact. It means that our Christ is so superlatively lovable that he who does not recognize the fact and yield the naturally due tribute of love, is so slow in thought, in feeling and in life as to be by the nature of things accursed. It means that no sweet child of celestial innocence, no lovely woman of surpassing beauty and tenderness, no kingly man

"On fortune's crowning slope
The pillar of a people's hope,"

no angel of the poet's dream, ever did or ever will present us any Being so lovable as is our Christ.

Although the Christ was unquestionably modest, yet he threw down this challenge: "He that loveth father or mother, * * * son or daughter more than me, is not worthy of me." He could consistently say this because he demonstrated in his life on earth, that he was higher in lovableness than any father, mother, son or daughter of earth; and that he has done infinitely more for all of us men and women of earth than has any other being in all the universe. The story of his incarnation told in the New Testament—foreshadowed in the Old—presents him as this world's one superlative wonder; and its sole ideal of lovableness; and the whole story of Redemption so largely, so strongly and so plainly presented in the Bible, calls for all the gratitude and admiration and devotion possible.

That, however, which is most concrete, hence most plainly seen and readily apprehended, and which touches us most deeply, is the immaculate Christ toiling, suffering and dying for us. He stands out in the Gospels as

"The wisest and the best
That ever lived in all our lands and years"—
"The chiefest among ten thousand, and altogether lovely"—

"This godlike One,
This spotless, stainless, sinless, blameless Christ
Whom none did once convince of one small swerve
From perfectness; nor ever shall; * * *
* * * he, who, in all the worlds
Was highest, holiest, purest, noblest, best—
More taintless than the morning star, more kin
To heaven than light of heaven or proudest plumes
Of angel and archangel,"

died for us. The sinlessness of his life so gloriously immaculate, and the majesty of his manhood unmatched on earth, were not all the elements of lovableness that were his. His kindness, strong as God, yet tenderer than womanhood, was lovely beyond expression. He shared every woe native to humanity; he healed every sufferer he met, and comforted every sorrow he found; he mended every broken home he entered, as at Bethany, Nain, and Capernaum; he helped the needy and set the world hunting and helping the helpless all along the ages since; he heard the sighs from millions of hearts, and felt the agony that racks all souls; he died to lift sin's awful curse from the world and bring deathless joy to mankind.

His patience was as marvelously beautiful as his kindness. The dullness of his own chosen apostles, the persistent misconception of his mission which everywhere prevailed, the indifference of those who should have been most interested, the suicidal opposition of those who should have been the first to receive him, and the insane fickleness of the vast majority of those who did follow him, would have dethroned the patience of the meekest man of earth: but he bore it all with sublime equanimity; and when those to whom he brought infinite benefits turned against him with an ingratitude black as hell ever saw, he met it all with a pity and sorrow that uttered tears instead of impatience.

Grander in its import and lovelier in its expression than any other element of his supreme loveableness, was his astounding self-sacrifice. Calvary's story has no parallel in all eternity and all worlds: the sacrifice of home, when home was heaven, a sacrifice of all joy when that joy was supernal, a sacrifice of life when that life was the best and the richest and lordliest ever known—the sacrifice of it all for ungrateful but needy men, women, and children was the meaning of Calvary.

Notwithstanding this infinite tenderness, patience, and self-sacrifice, yet he was strong and kingly beyond any hero earth ever saw. There is nothing weak about him. "King of kings and Lord of lords," he rules the rolling round of suns and planets. We look up to him out of every midnight of sorrow or disaster, out of every valley of danger and unrest, and we believe with surest faith that he is able to deliver us—aye we know it.

"Christ is able:
The thunder in the crashing skies announce it as they roll;
The lightnings on the black stone wall write it in vivid scroll;
And stars repeat it down the dark in jeweled light—
The Urim and Thummim on the breastplace of the night—
And strong Orion shouts to us, what slumbered in old fable:
And the echoes from eternal night-vaults answer, Christ is able!"

Such is our Christ, as the Bible presents him, and as we who know him, have found him. Such was the Christ that Paul knew, and trusted, and preached to others; and this great philosopher of the New Testament era could not understand how any man of his time and information could fail to love, honor, obey and trust such a Christ: and so he wrote: "If any man love not the Lord Jesus Christ, let him be anathema." There is nothing else for such a man. What of the man of to-day with all its splendor revealing the Christ, as he was never before revealed, if he loves not the Lord Jesus Christ? what must be the natural result of failure to love such a Christ? Paul answers: "Let him be anathema." It must be.

A CORRECTION.

Rev. James M. Lewis, Tylertown, Miss., requests us to call attention to the fact that the name in the article, "In Memoriam," appearing on page 10 of last week's Advocate, should have been Needham E. Ball, instead of "Needham E. Pall." The error was due to the fact that Brother Lewis' typewriter does not function properly in making all the letters. We regret the error.

A doctor may give a wrong prescription for health, but that does not mean that there is no right prescription. A lawyer may give a wrong impression of justice, but justice still remains a reality. So wrong impressions of religion do not destroy the fact of the beauty and power of a true religious experience.—The Rev. A. Price Hughes.

THE NINTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOARD OF FINANCE.

By Luther E. Todd, Secretary.

The annual meeting of the Board of Finance convened at the Missouri Athletic Club, Room A, St. Louis, Mo., April 25, 1927. The following members of the Board were in attendance: Bishop W. F. McMurry, Senator X. P. Wilfley, Rev. Luther E. Todd, Mr. John W. Fristoe, Rev. C. W. Tadlock, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, Bishop S. R. Hay, Rev. R. A. Clark, Rev. Frank P. Culver, Rev. D. F. Ellisor, Rev. H. E. Draper, Rev. W. A. Cooper, Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev. S. P. Cresap, Mr. Addison Maupin, Mr. J. R. Dominick, Mr. W. Stackhouse, Mr. W. E. Brock, Mr. W. G. Hardy.

Rev. T. S. Hamilton was unable to be present on account of sickness, and Mr. R. P. Brewer was detained at home because of pressing business matters.

The Board was saddened by the absence of Mr. J. T. Catlin, Sr., who died Dec. 27, 1926.

This annual meeting in many ways was the best in the history of the Board, being chacraterized by perfect harmony and forward-looking plans in behalf of the great movement for Superannuate Endowment. The Secretary's report revealed many interestiing facts which the church will be pleased to have, as follows:

I. Concerning Matters of Finance.

1. Superannuate Endowment: It was shown that the total Superannuate Endowment in the hands of the Board as of March 31, 1927, was $4,153,324.78. Of this sum, $2,671,182.60 was General Fund Endowment and $1,482,142.18 was Conference Funds Endowment. The General Fund Endowment was increased during the fiscal year by the sum of $544,817.71; the Conference Funds Endowment was increased during the year by the sum of $346,177.87. The difference in the increase of the two accounts was due to special gifts, chiefly on the annuity plan, to the General Fund. Of the total endowment in the hands of the Board, as stated above, the sum of $382,075.83 is subject to annuity.

2. Endowment Income: For the fiscal year which ended March 31, 1927, the Board was able to earn 5.8 per cent on the total endowment capital for the time it was in hand.

On July 1, 1927, the Board will be able to distribute direct to the claimants, on the basis of years of service, the sum of $141,551.38, as compared with $116,057.24 so distributed a year ago, or July 1, 1926.

The Board will also be able to send to the Annual Conferences at their next meetings, for distribution among their claimants on the basis of necessity, the sum of $76,123.48, as compared with $52,334.16 sent to the Annual Conferences at their last annual meetings.

Thus the Board is distributing this year for the claimants' support a grand total of $217,674.86, as compared with a grand total distributed last year of $168,391.40—an increase for this year of $49,283.46.

3. Annual Conference Endowment: So far as the Board has been able to obtain information on the subject, the Annual Conferences now have a total endowment of $3,834,698. Of this sum, $580,600 is in 156 superannuate homes owned by the Conferences, $1,771,956 is in various securities handled by the local trustees of the Conferences, and $1,482,142 is in trust with the General Board of Finance. The value of the Publishing House, the net income from which should go to the Annual Conferences yearly for the support of the claimants, is not included in the figures given. Furthermore, it is doubtless true that the Annual Conferences have some other assets equivalent to endowment which the Board is not able to report for lack of definite information concerning these holdings.

4. The Investment Reserve Fund: The Board is striving to build up a Reserve Fund out of concessions of a fractional per cent allowed to institutions such as ours in the purchase of securities. This Reserve Fund will be used as necessity may arise to protect the endowment capital against any losses which may come from investments that do not work out as expected. This fund was started April 20, 1924, and it has grown steadily. At the close of the fiscal year, which ended March 31, 1927, it amounted to a total of $25,464.61. The Board hopes this fund will increase from year to year until it is sufficient in amount to guarantee the keeping of the endowment capital at 100 per cent.

5. Superannuate Endowment Bequests: The Secretary's report revealed that the Board has evidence in its files of bequests that have been made to Superannuate Endowment of a total estimated value of $500,000. This item is not included in the report given hereinabove of the total endowment actually in hand. It is, however, an item of interest. Furthermore, it should be noted that these bequests are those which the Board has knowledge of. It is undoubtedly true that a great many other bequests have been made to this sacred cause which have not as yet been reported to the Board.

In this connection, it should be stated that there was received during the past year from bequests as follows: From the estate of Warren C. Bird, deceased, formerly of Baltimore, Md., the sum of $7,128.50; from the estate of Miss Alice Barnard, deceased, formerly of Franklin, Ky., the sum of $500; from the estate of T. C. Ellerbee, deceased, formerly of North Carolina, the sum of $1,179.52—a total of $8,808.02. The total sum received from bequests is included in the report of the endowment assets.

6. Contributions on the Annuity Plan: It is gratifying to report that during the year the Board received $159,165 from contributions on the annuity plan. This sum, addded to that formerly received on this plan for the endowment, makes a total now in hand of $382,075.83 subject to annuity. The annuity bond of the Board of Finance appeals strongly to those who wish to contribute to a worthy cause in this way. The entire resources of the Board are back of these bonds, thus making them an absolutely safe investment. It is not surprising, therefore, that these bonds of the Board of Finance are being purchased more and more by discriminating people who want to make contributions to a worthy cause and at the same time retain for themselves the annuity until death.

7. Collections on the General Conference Assessment: The Board has a General Conference Annual Assessment of $200,000 on the whole church. Of this amount there was collected $131,292.78, or nearly 65 per cent.

8. The Total Support of the Claimants: The Secretary reported that there were 1,020 superannuates and 1,486 widows of preachers, a total of 2,506 claimants. The total amount paid these claimants during the past year was $725,918. The average per capita amount for the superannuates was $372; and the average per capita amount for the widows of preachers was $233.

9. Expenses of the Board: The expenses of the Board proper for the year ended March 31, 1927, amounted to $22,295.48. Of this sum, $17,642.65 was for office expenses; $2,958.67 was for general expenses; and $1,694.16 was for travel expenses.

The expenses for the year of the Special Effort Department amounted to $21,875.47. Of this, $1,400.80 was for special service; $1,682.16 was for travel expenses; $9,687.33 was for printing and general publicity; $1,352.08 was for Conference Organ publicity; $4,816.55 was for clerical help; $1,020 was for rent; $127.71 was for supplies; $953.49 was for postage; $6.56 was for express; $200.86 was for wire service; $65.78 was for equipment; $118.62 was for sundries; and $443.53 was for the expenses of the Directing Committee. Thus it is shown that the Special Effort Department, not countling the printing and publicity expenses, operated throuhout the year for $10,836.06.

II. Concerning the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment.

The Secretary's report brought to light many facts conerning this movement which are worthy of emphasis.

1. Status of the Conferences on Quota Payments: It was revealed that in three years, or to March 31, 1927, all of the Annual Conferences had paid on Special Effort quotas the total sum of $2,722,536.83. Inasmuch as the expenses of the movement were paid from the collections on the General Conference assessment, the entire sum paid on the quotas by the charges had been credited 100 per cent to Endowment.

The Florida Conference has the distinction of being first in the per cent paid of the amount due in three years, having paid 60.9 per cent; the Southwest Missouri Conference is second, having paid 58.3 per cent; West Texas Conference is third, having paid $57.1 per cent. The entire table, showing the standing of the Conferences on quota payments, will be published at an early date in the Christian Advocate.

2. Comparative Study of the Cnarges on Quota Payments: It was shown that twenty-six charges of the whole church have paid the five-year quota in full; that 432 charges have paid three-fifths of the five-year quota; 3,419 charges have each paid over $100, but less than three-fifths of the five-year quota; 1,843 charges have paid $100, or less, of the five-year quota; and 802 charges have paid nothing of the five year quota.

3. Future Plans for the Specail Effort Movement: The Board spent considerable time in a study of future plans in behalf of the movement for adequate Superannuate Endowment. A plan for the fifth year was unanimously decided upon, and it will be presented to the Annual Conferences in the fall of 1927. The usual methods of collecting quotas will be pressed until then. It is hoped that during the fourth year of the movement, and operating in the uual way, the charges will contribute more to the cause than any year hitherto.

III. Miscellaneous Matters.

1. New Member of the Board: The Committee on Nominations recommended that Mr. J. T. Catlin, Jr., of Danville, Va., be chosen as a member of the Board to succeed his father, Mr. J. T. Catlin, Sr., deceased, and he was unanimously elected.

2. Meeting of Representatives of Conference Boards: The annual meeting of the Board, being apprised of the fact that the representatives of the Conference Boards of Finance would hold a meeting in St. Louis two days later, expressed satisfaction that these leaders of the cause in the various Annual Conferences were coming together at this time to consider ways and means to help the movement for Superannuate Endowment.

A WASTED DAY.

A squirrel frisked through the woods one day, and his mind was bent on nothing but play. But a startled jay cried, "Go 'way! go 'way!" And from that moment—oh, welladay!

The pewees shrilled, "Oh me! ah me!" and the blackbirds came crying, "Let's see! let's see!" and the winds in the treetops shrieked, "Whee! ho whee!" All the woods folk came running the trouble to see.

Then bawled and bellowed the farmer's cow. The cat on the fence yowled, "A row! a row!" And a dog in the distance growled, "Now! right now!" Till the hills echoed back, "A row! right now!"

Almost dusk, an owl came out. Said he, "Pray what's this roar? what's all this rout?" The answer came back in a surprised shout, "Why, we none of us know what it's about!"

Then the wise owl winked. "Most quarrels, I say, are apt to begin in that very way!" Then the woods folk were sorry they'd forgotten to play, that they'd quarreled and snarled and wasted their day.—Children at Work.

THE HAPPY CAMPERS.

With eyes swimming in tears against which he manfully struggled, Bobby Dick stumbled up the back steps and into the house. Coming into the room where his aunt sat in a low rocking-chair beside the geranium-filled window darning stockings, he leaned against her comforting knee.

"What is the matter, sonny boy?" she asked, laying down her sewing that she might stroke his soft curls.

In spite of his manful efforts, Bobby Kirk's chin began to quiver.

"The fel-fellows are playin' cowboy," he swallowed, "an-and they won't let me play."

Auntie's hand slid from Bobby Dick's hair to his shoulder, which she patted encouragingly.

"They won't?" she asked. "How is that, dear?"

"They say I don't look a cowboy, an-and anyway I haven't got any red bandana, and all cowboys have to have red bandanas."

"Dear me," exclaimed auntie, "no red bandana! Well, never mind," she went on reassuringly. "Suppose you and I go out in the back yard, make a fire, and play we are campers."

A beam of sunshine broke over Bobby Dick's face, chasing away the tears. "O, auntie," he cried, "you do think of the bestest things!"

Busily they set to work building an oven with some old bricks, and soon had a fire cracking cheerily within it.

"Bobby Dick," said auntie as she bustled about, "you run into the house and get some potatoes, some onions, and that half box of bacon. Jane will give them to you."

As Bobby Dick, with arms piled high, returned from his errand one of the cowboys, riding his steed at a furious pace down the alley, caught sight of him. Passing, he peered through the panels of the gate. "What you doing?" he asked.

"Playing campers," shouted Bobby Dick as he dumped his burden beside the oven and hastened after more sticks.

With nose thrust between the palings, the rider watched with eager interest. At last he edged into the yard. "Say," he asked, "can I play campers?"

"Certainly," came auntie's hearty reply, and, dropping his stick, the boy set to work with a will on peeling potatoes.

A second boy astride a stick horse came to a sudden halt as he appeared around the corner of the house. Wistfully he stood gazing upon the happy campers about the fire.

"O, Jack," cried Bobby Dick, catching sight of him, "We're having such fun! Don't you want to come and play?"

Jack needed no second invitation, but rushed eagerly forward to join in the game.

"Dear me," cried auntie, "we have forgotten the bread! Jack," she added, "suppose you run in the house and ask Jane for a loaf of bread."

My, how busy they were! And how good the smell of the frying bacon, onions, and potatoes! Drawn by the appetizing odor, one by one the rest of the cowboys abandoned their horses to join the campers.

Aunty cut the bread, piling each slice high with bacon, onions, and potatoes, and Bobby Dick passed them around.

"This is lots more fun than playing cowboy," said one of the boys as he reached for his slice. "How did you ever think of it, Bobby Dick?" and he gazed admiringly at the curly headed lad, who, to his shame, looked nothing like a cowboy and who, alas, possessed no red bandana.

"Auntie thought of it," cried Bobby Dick, smiling joyfully at his auntie as she passed on her way into the house to glance over the happy group, "she always thinks of the bestest things!"

And auntie, with a smile playing about her lips, repeated softly the following lines which you will have to have mother explain to you:

"They drew a circle and left me out,
Heretic, rebel, a thing to flout.
But Love and I had the wit to win.
We drew a circle and took them in."

MILDRED'S NEW VIEWPOINT.

By Susan Hubbard Martin.

The Home for the Aged stood on the corner. A big, roomy building that, in spite of its stateliness, looked bleak and desolate at this time of the year, for the fountain no longer played, the trees were bare of leaves, and the lawn brown.

Mildred, hurrying by, heard some one calling her.

She looked up. There, on the porch beckoning her, was a little, thin, frail white-haired figure.

Mildred quickened her steps.

"Why!" she cried, as she hurried up to where the little white-haired woman stood, "it's Mrs. Higby, isnt it?"

The wind even on the porch ruffled the white hair. Little Mrs. Higby nodded.

"Yes, its me, child," she replied.

She paused.

"Are you going down past the minister's?" she asked.

Mildred smiled. "Why, yes," she answered.

A look of relief dawned on the old wrinkled face.

"It's all right, then," she replied.

And then she handed to Mildred a dollar bill with the creases carefully smoothed out of it.

"It's for missions," she explained, her face lighting as she spoke. "And if you'll be so kind as to hand it to the minister, he'll know what to do with it.

"My niece, Sally Plummer, out west, sent me that dollar bill," she went on. "She said she wanted me to buy something for myself; but, land sakes! I couldn't spend it that way, when we are recallin' some of our missionaries because there ain't money enough to pay 'em, and cuttin' salaries of them that does stay twenty-five per cent. I'd cut a pretty figure, buyin' myself something with that dollar bill, when things are in that shape."

She smiled at Mildred.

"You just give it to the minister and tell him I sent it for foreign mission," she added, happily.

A moment later Mildred was on her way, with the dollar bill tucked snugly in her purse. There were other bills besides that one in the pretty little handbag, for Mildred was going to buy herself a suit, and father had been more than generous.

She did not really need a one, of course. Still, when one could pick up a bargain, one was foolish not to do it.

But, somehow, as she walked along, Mildren wasn't thinking of a new suit. She was seeing instead a little, thin, feeble, old woman, with white hair, and that eager light on her wrinkled face.

Did people really love missions like that? Love them enough to give up their last cent, and be glad they had it to give?

Mildred knew that in the Home for the Aged a dollar bill had its uses. Fruit, for the bill of fare in the Home was always plain. What could be nicer than that? Then there were magazines, for most of them in the center table in the big hall were old. Flowers, for the great rooms were singularly bare. Yet, notwithstanding these conditions, here was old Mrs. Higby, cheerfully foregoing all that dollar bill would buy, and giving it to missions.

She supposed she ought to be more interested in them herself. What was it Mrs. Higby had said? That they were recalling some of the missionaries because there wasn't money enough to pay their salaries. And cutting those who remained twenty-five per cent?

She supposed she could do without that suit. Still she didn't want to do it. She had not yet made up her mind when she arrived at the parsonage. At any rate, she would deliver Mrs. Higby's dollar bill.

But, as she rang the parsonage bell, a miracle happened. Old Mrs. Higby's little, thin figure faded away, and in its place, there on the busy street, Mildred, light-hearted, gay, untouched, careless, found herself looking into the sorrowful face of one who said centuries ago: "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

A moment later she stood before the minister.

"Mrs. Higby, up at the Home for the Aged, sent you this dollar bill for missions," she began.

And then, the first thing she knew, she was pouring into his hands the contents of the pretty little handbag. There were crisp bills, silver dollars, quarters and dimes.

"And here is mine to go with it."

But to herself she was saying: "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."—Kind Words.

THE MISSIONARY BOX.

By Elizabeth Donovan.

When Mary Slessor, that brave missionary who worked all alone in a wild part of Africa, was so worn and tired that her friends made her go away for a rest, her great trouble was what to do with "her children."

These children were little girls whose lives she had saved when they were tiny babies. They had been thrown away by their parents. She kept them in her wee little house and loved them just as dearly as if they had been white instead of black. She managed to find places for some of them to stay while she was away, but she felt that four of them she must take with her or she could not go. But how could she travel with them across the ocean to Scotland? And how could she get clothing for them? She had been sick and the ants had eaten all the extra clothing, so they had only what they had on.

But she started to get ready to go, and one day a missionary box came to her from the church in Scotland. She opened it eagerly, and in the box she found clothing for herself, and a great quantity of warm flannel and cloth. Missionary friends who had come to help her soon made out of the flannel and the cloth neat, warm clothes for the little girls.

How people stared when she reached Scotland to see a little, frail old lady with a family of four bright-eyed black children! Jean was the oldest and she was a great help in taking care of the others and in showing to the people of Scotland what Mary Slessor was doing for the poor people of Africa. The four happy children were a living sermon to all who saw them.—The Sunbeam.

THE NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The New Orleans District Conference was held at the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church on Friday and Saturday of last week. The most gracious hospitality was extended by the pastor, Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, and his faithful members, men and women. The ladies served a delicious lunch on both days. Dr. R. H. Harper, the presiding elder, presided with dignity and ease, and business was carried on expeditiously. Rev. S. A. Seegers was the efficient secretary.

Prominence was given to religious services, and well prepared and inspiring sermons were preached by Rev. F. J. McCoy, Dr. J. B. Mitchell, and Rev. T. F. King.

The attendance was good, though some members of the conference were unable to be present on account of impending danger from the overflow. The laymen's meeting on Friday evening, presided over by Dr. R. S. Crichlow, District Lay Leader, was especially well attended, and the program, consisting of addresses by Dr. Crichlow, Dr. M. F. Wilson, and Rev. J. G. Snelling, was unusually fine.

A special feature of the occasion was the meeting of the Elementary Sunday school teachers of the district on Saturday afternoon, preceded by a most delightful luncheon, presided over by Mrs. R. H. Harper.

Rev. Robert W. Vaughan, superintendent of the Louisiana Methodist Orphanage, was the only "connectional" visitor able to reach the conference, others being kept away by high water. He delivered a forceful address on Friday morning. Dr. W. W. Holmes, presiding elder of the Shreveport District, and Rev. H. N. Brown, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, were visitors.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: Dr. M. F. Wilson, J. H. Carter, Chas. O. Chalmers, Miss B. Ellison, Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, Capt. H. J. Thompson, M. B. De Pass, and H. H. Ahrens.

Bishop Candler was unable to be present on account of the illness of his wife. The conference sent him a telegram of sympathy and regret.

The conference next year will meet at Covington.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. J. B. Mitchell, D. D., pastor of Rayne Memorial Methodist Church, New Orleans, preached the Commencement Sermon for Millsaps College, Jackson, Miss.

We learn from press dispatches that Bishop W. B. Beauchamp, who has been seriously ill in the Wesley Memorial Hospital, Atlanta, Ga., has recovered sufficiently to be removed to his home.

Rev. and Mrs. H. P. Lewis, Ruleville, Miss., are happy grandparents—a fine daughter was born to their daughter and son-in-law, Rev. and Mrs. S. E. Ashmore, of Carrollton, Miss., on May 18, at the Methodist Hospital in Memphis. Congratulations!

We thank our young friends, Miss Mary Kathryn Sparks and Miss Hazel Ione Hebert, for invitations to attend the graduating exercises of Mansfield College on Tuesday morning, May 31. They are members of the fine class to receive diplomas this years.

Rev. Osmond S. Lewis, pastor of the Jefferson Street Methodist Church, Natchez, Miss., preached the commencement sermon for the high school at Fayette, Miss., on Sunday evening, May 15. Rev. George Fox, of Ferriday, La., filled his pulpit at the same hour.

The Court Street Methodist Church, of Lynchburgh, Va., of which Dr. E. K. Means is pastor, is preparing to erect a Sunday school building of the most approved type, at a cost of $60,0000. The building will provide completely for a school of eight hundred.

Mrs. A. P. Holt, of 1129 North Nevada Avenue, Colorado Springs, Colo., in renewing her subscription to the Advocate, sends greetings to her many friends in Louisiana. Mrs. Holt, before going to Colorado Springs for her health, was one of the most efficient church workers in Louisiana.

Rev. W. W. Perry, our pastor at Sulphur, La., writes: "We have had with us for one month's service Rev. W. E. Thomas, general evangelist, and Rev. M. V. Lewis, choir director. They did splendid work, which has resulted in quickening the church and adding 50 new members thereto."

Mr. H. H. Ahrens, secretary of the committee for raising funds for the relief of Louisiana preachers in the overflowed sections of the State, reported on Friday of last week that he had received up to that time the sum of $865. Doubtless other amounts have come in since then. This is indeed a fine report.

One of the finest annual publications that we know anything about is the Blue Book of Southern Progress, issued by the Manufacturers Record, of Baltimore. A study of this book will open the eyes even of many Southerners to the great resources and great progress in all lines of the South. The cost is nominal for such a store of information.

Dr. H. E. Woolever, editor of the National Methodist Press, the Washington press bureau of the Methodist Episcopal Church, mourns the passing of his mother. She was a lifelong member of the Methodist Church, a noble Christian character, who found her greatest joy in doing for her family and her church. She left a priceless heritage to two sons and a daughter who survive her.

Rev. W. F. Baggett, of Saucier, Miss., writes: "We are getting on very nicely on the Saucier charge. We have just closed meetings of two of the churches that we hope did great good among our people. Preachers who want a song leader and religious worker with children and young people to help them in meetings, will be pleased if they can secure Harmon L. Smith, of Ellisville, Miss. He has some open dates in June and July."

The West Point Leader, West Point, Miss., makes complimentary editorial mention of the Mothers' Day service at the First Methodist Church and the appropriate sermon preached by the pastor, Rev. E. Nash Broyles. Brother Broyles took advantage of the occasion to speak on the subject of marriage, emphasizing the place of the mother in helping to correct some of the evils of the present day. The church was crowded to capacity for the service.

Arrangements are going forward for the annual meeting of the Sardis District Missionary Societies, which will be held in the Methodist churches at Longtown, May 31, and Olive Branch, June 1. Mrs. R. M. Short, Como, Miss., is District Secretary, and will preside, while the program will be varied and participated in by representatives of the anxiliaries throughout the District. A large attendance is indicated. The program will begin promptly at 9 o'clock with devotions by Rev. A. C. Johnson, at Longtown, and Rev. G. H. Boyles, at Olive Branch.

Rev. J. L. Sells, presiding elder of the Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, in sending in the announcement of his third round of quarterly conferences, says: "So far, the work on the district moves well. We are yet lacking a small sum on our mission special, but we hope to secure that without any trouble, and make it in full. Several gracious revivals have already been held, and we are expecting many more during the coming quarter. The Seashore Camp meeting will begin on July 1 and continue for ten days. The preachers will be men from within the district, and it is being planned to have the Epworth Leaguers, the laymen, and the ladies of the Missionary Societies along the coast to take an active part in the services during the camp meeting."

"Reporter," writing of the Sunflower Ministerial Association, says: "The Association held its May meeting in the quiet and beautiful little town of Schlater, Miss., with Revs. J. J. Brooks and J. B. Conner as hosts. Thirteen preachers were present, and three wives of preachers. The discussions of the program were full of interest. All present felt the power and uplift of the meeting, and many remarked that it was the best we have yet held. The members of the Association were entertained at the noon hour by the ladies of the Missionary Society with a delightful plate lunch. Fried chicken was on hand in abundance, all from the yard of our 'Grand Old Man,' J. J. Brooks. The next meeting will be held at Tutwiler, with 'Mister' Shipman and his people."

WHEN THE FLOODS RECEDE SANITATE AND VACCINATE.

By Dr. Oscar Dowling, President, Louisiana State Board of Health.

1. Water Supply. The most immediate and urgent need will be to put in proper condition the water supplies contaminated by flood waters so as to avoid typhoid fever, dysentery and diarrhea. A sick man cannot work, and it is going to be a big job to work back into normal condition. All supplies which have been affected by overflow should be chlorinated. The State Board of Health will furnish chlorinators and chlorine for city supplies. The pumping plant should receive the first attention. The fire department and equipment should be used to wash away accumulations of mud, etc. A liberal use of water for this purpose will speed up cleaning the community and will at the same time serve to flush out the water supply system.

Wells and cisterns should be disinfected by chloride of lime. Chloride of lime is not ordinary lime, but is a different compound. It can be obtained from drug stores. It is sometimes called chlorinated lime; laundries use it under the name of bleach. Use an ounce of chloride of lime to 1,000 gallons of water. First make a paste of the chloride of lime with a small quantity of water; dissolve this in a few gallons of water and then mix thoroughly with the water in cistern or well.

This is a heavy dose, but it is better to be sure than sorry.

2. Sewerage. Breaks in sewer line should be promptly repaired. Sewage treatment plants should be put in proper working order. Sewer lines should be flushed out. If a line is not completely blocked accumulations of mud may be removed most rapidly by the following method:

Insert in sewer line at upper manhole a wooden ball whose diameter is a few inches less than the diameter of the sewer. A light rope should be fastened to the ball so it can be withdrawn if needed. Flush behind ball with stream from fire hose if flow in sewer is not enough to keep ball moving. The ball will float causing sewage and water under it to scour sediment on bottom.

In places without sewage flyproof pit privies should be built. Plans will be furnished by health officers on request. Don't let the typhoid fly finish what the river has left.

3. Waste Disposal. Dead animals should be removed promptly from the community and buried or burned. Animals outside communities should be disposed of where found if possible. Get rid of these as promptly as possible before the buzzard has a chance to spread infection of anthrax and hog cholera all over the territory. Burn all debris, but be careful not to set the house afire.

4. Malaria. The falling waters will leave many pools, blocked drains and containers filled with water. These mosquito breeding places should be eliminated or oiled as promptly as possible to avoid a possible epidemic of malaria. The use of waste oil and used crank case oil from garages and filling stations for this purpose will help.

DISTRICT CONFERENCE AT POTTS CAMP.

District conference will convene at Potts Camp, at 7:30 for the opening service, Tuesday evening, May 31.

License and Recommendation—T. H. Dorsey, W. H. Mounger, J. A. George.

Deacons' and Elder's Orders—A. T. McIlwain, J. W. Raper, C. Wesley Baley.

Other committees will be provided for and announced at opening session.

Will the brethren please see that quarterly conference records are brought to the conference, and advise brother Rogers when and how you and your delegations will arrive that he may make provision for all who attend? Kindly have your local preachers furnish written reports and requests unless they are to be present. We anticipate large attendance and a profitable session. Let us all work and pray to that end. Judge Foreman, Conference Lay Leader will be one of the speakers. Dr. Luther E. Todd, will be present and many others.

SLOVENLY SERVICES.

By a Layman.

I am proud of the history and achievements of the Methodist church. No one who knows anything about it can doubt that it "is of God." In intellect, in culture, in high moral character and purpose, and in spirituality, Methodist preachers compare most favorably with those of other denominations. Modesty forbids my saying more.

A lifelong member of the Methodist church, I have sat under the ministry of some of its foremost preachers, and I have also had as my pastors young men on trial, some of whom have risen to eminence, and some of whom have not. But I cannot help wondering why so many of them were, and are, careless and indifferent in their conduct of public worship. It is true that the Methodist church is not a ritualistic church, but that is no reason why such forms and ceremonies as we have should not be conducted decently and in order and with due regard to the proprieties of time and place, or why the sensibilities of those in the pew should be shocked by the lack of dignity and taste of those in the pulpit.

I was more than 30 years of age before I ever saw a Methodist preacher conducting the Sunday services clothed in anything but the conventional black. But now they enter the pulpit wearing business suits, and those not always such as a conservative business man would choose for himself, with ties that remind one of those which the jokesmiths allege are given by wives to their husbands for Christmas presents. In a large and influential church I actually saw the pastor at the 11 o'clock Sunday morning service wearing a frock coat and tan shoes. Of course, there is nothing irreligious in tan shoes, tweed suits or pink ties; but did not our Lord indicate that one should dress appropriately, and with due regard for the occasion, when he spoke the parable of the man who had not on a wedding garment? One should look as well as act one's part.

The Hymns. We have a hymnal unsurpassed by that of any church, containing over seven hundred of the choicest hymns of the ages. Some preachers use only from seven to seventeen, and those not always the best or most appropriate. Sometimes they seem to be selected from the indexed first line only. That was evident on an Easter Sunday morning in a large and important church, when the hymn, "Hail the day that sees him rise," was sung. It is true the first line suggests an Easter hymn, but the most cursory reading of the rest of it would show that its theme is the ascension and not the resurrection. Not long since on Temperance Sunday in a prominent Sunday school, the hymn "I've Reached the Land of Corn and Wine," was sung. Hymns are not only songs of praise to God, but prepare the heart and mind as only they can for the reception of the truth, and for inspiration to high Christian effort, and therefore the most prayerful care should be used in their selection. But how can appropriate selections be made haphazard, and without an intimate acquaintance with the hymnal and due appreciation of its contents?

And then the Scripture lessons. We believe the Bible is the Word of God. Neither sermon, nor hymn, nor prayer, which are the expressions of men, are therefore of equal importance with the reading of the Scriptures. But is any one likely to get that idea from the way the Bible is used in many of our church services? Instead of reverently opening and reading from the large pulpit Bible, "a few verses," without indicating book or chapter, are read from a small limp-backed Bible, a pocket Testament, or even a little paper-covered copy of one of the Gospels, and the reading is frequently without any emphasis or expression. I like the present order of worship, but unfortunately the responsive reading of the Psalms has done away with the "Lesson from the Old Testament," and nowadays one rarely hears anything read from its historical or prophetical books, and, to tell the truth, we do not hear many of the Psalms. There are few finer passages than Joshua's farewell address, and yet I once heard a preacher read "a portion of it," and without announcing what he was reading, begin with the words, "Ye cannot serve the Lord for he is a holy God." There is no more touching address in the Scriptures than the farewell of St. Paul to the elders of Ephesus, and yet I once heard "a few verses" read from that in a monotone which showed that the reader had no appreciation whatever of its beauty or deep feeling. One need not be a professional elocutionist in order to bring out at least some of the beauty of a passage of Scripture.

We will pass over the uncontrolled vociferation in preaching and praying, and the undue familiarity with the Deity which are characteristic of so many, to something of which, it seems to me, more of our preachers offend than in any other, and that is the use of the Ritual. Our ritual ceremonies are not long, but are dignified and reverent, couched in rich and stately language, many of their expressions having their roots deep in the past, and voicing most adequately the needs and feelings of the soul. But to numbers they seem a mere pious rigmarole to be gotten through with as quickly as possible. Important passages are left out. From the way they are read one would never suspect any meaning was to be attached to them; words are dropped and others substituted without reason. To the sensitive soul, appreciative of the deep significance of baptism, of church membership, and of the communion, ceremonies so conducted are anything but a means of grace. Perhaps the most frequently used of our ceremonies is the communion. It can be read through, every word of it, in ten minutes or less, and yet how frequently it is mutilated to "save time." I believe there is only one thing about it of which some are absolutely sure, and that is the rubric which says that "if the elder be straitened for time he may omit," etc. Some elders are always "straitened for time," and always "omit" to the detriment of the service. No wonder church membership is lightly esteemed when members are received into the church "in any old way." There is nothing impressive about their reception, and sometimes their names are not even gotten right on the Register.

But what I have said is not true of all. There are some who make divine worship a delight. I have in mind one whose services it is always a privilege and a means of grace to attend. Of impressive figure, plainly but appropriately dressed, reverent and dignified in bearing, mindful of time and place, his hymns and Scripture lessons are carefully chosen, the hymn not infrequently a beatiful one not often heard; hymns, prayers, special music, Scripture lessons and sermon all co-ordinated, his services are artistic unities. If persons are to be baptized, members received, or the sacrament administered, the full service is used without abbreviation, and every word read as printed, clearly, reverently, and with full appreciation of their deep significance. Why can't there be more like him?

I love the Methodist church, and therefore want it to always appear at its best. Whatever may be the power of its preaching, or the learning and eloquence of its preachers, its influence and attractiveness will always be impaired by carelessness and inattention to the details of its services, and sincere men and women will be repelled, as they have been; but reverence, dignity and adequacy of expression are always attractive and never repellant. What I am asking, and what thousands like me are asking, involves no hardship and no surrender of principle, but only the use of what we have and to which we are pledged.

Dr. Nolan B. Harmon, Jr., dedicates his recently published masterly work, "The Rites and Ritual of Episcopal Methodism," "To his father, by whose invariable example as a leader of public worship, I was surely and consistently taught that decency with a due formality is in no wise incompatible with the vital piety of Methodism."

That example and its lesson are worth pondering. What is worth doing is worth doing well. "Perfection is made up of trifles, but perfection is no trifle."

Except in extraordinary cases, a man once accepted for the Methodist ministry is accepted for life. No other single factor in the organization of Methodism counts so much as its ministry. Can any expenditure of energy, thought, or money be too great to secure that the door into the ministry should be carefully guarded?—The Methodist Times.

Now abideth these three: Pattern, Friend and Saviour—and the greatest of these is, "He is Saviour."—The Rev. C. W. J. Parry.

On Friday, April 29, 1927, MRS. SALLIE MARTIN STAPLES, aged 25 years, wife of R. H. Staples, died at the family residence in Castor. She was before her marriage Miss Sallie Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Martin, of Grove, in Webster Parish. She was married to R. H. Staples, of Castor, on March 24, 1918, and to this union was born one child, a daughter, Myrna, 7 years old. Besides this daughter and her husband, she is survived by her parents and two brothers and three sisters, and a host of other relatives, most of whom live in Webster Parish. Her friends were limited only by the circle of her acquaintance, for all who knew her loved her. The remains were interred in old Castor cemetery on Saturday, April 30, 1927. The funeral service was conducted by Rev. L. I. McCain, of the Minden Methodist church, in his usual impressive way, and the large concourse of friends and relatives at both the church service and the cemetery attested the love and esteem in which she was held by those who knew her. Loving friends covered the grave with beautiful floral offerings. The beautiful Christian life of this devoted wife and mother will live on to comfort the loving relatives and friends who will so sorely miss her earthly presence. At the age of 21 she united with the Castor Methodist church, where she was one of the active workers in the various activities of the church, and was secretary of the Sunday school until the illness to which she finally succumbed overtook her. A beautiful Christian life has been brought to an earthly end, but those who knew her best are comforted with the knowledge that what seems to us mortals to be a premature ending of life, is but the beginning of a more beautiful life in that home not made with hands, from whence the influence of this beautiful life will shine down to influence the course of those left here to mourn the loss of her earthly existence.

J. F. McINNIS.

Minden, La.

On the morning of March 15, 1927, the spirit of SALLIE T. HINTON left its earthly habitation and went home to God, whom she had served so faithfully all the long years of her useful life. She was born and reared in Mount Pleasant, Miss., but had made her home with her brother's family in Collierville, Tenn., for the past twenty years. She was a lifelong member of the Methodist church, was teacher of the Bible class in the Sunday school, and president of the Woman's Missionary Society in Collierville at the time of her death. Forty years of her life were spent in the school room as teacher, part of that time in Mississippi and part in Tennessee. For many years she has been a member of the faculty of the high school in Collierville. She was truly a great teacher, not confining herself to the text book before her, but ever striving to instill into her pupils the great principles of life so necessary to a noble character. Her life was one of real service, whose worth and true value can never be estimated. A godly life and its influence is immortal. What we do lives after us, and is not buried with our bones. The worker passes on, but the work continues with every increasing power throughout the endless ages, and eternity alone will reveal the beauty and grandeur of her Christian life. Heaven seems sweeter when our loved ones are there, but Oh! how our hearts are saddened because of their going away. We are sorely bereaved. Among those who mourn the loss of this loved one are three sisters, Mrs. H. A. Person, Mrs. M. B. Lofton and Mrs. J. B. Gunn, and many other relatives and friends. May we all be as faithful to our Lord and do our work as nobly and worthily as she did; and may his all-sustaining power and spirit comfort our hearts and keep us soul and body in the fullness of his grace till we reach that upper and better kingdom of peace and joy.

ST. MARK'S, NEW ORLEANS.

We saw thee standing there so fine
In every angle and each line,
Suggestive of thy usefulness;
Within your walls are those who serve
Day in, day out, throughout the years,
And many a soul has seen the light
Because of thee, St. Mark's, St. Mark's.

Friday evening, May 6, from 7:30 to 10:30 o'clock, there was open house at St. Mark's; not that it is not always open to all who need physical as well as spiritual help, but it was more of an anniversary celebration, as it has been four years since we moved into our new St. Mark's Community House on Rampart and Governor Nicholls Streets. The beautiful building is, without question, the finest in the South, and was made possible by the Centenary pledges.

It was a gala night. Every department was represented on the program as far as possible. The Campfire Girls gave a delightful play; the boys an indoor baseball game; swimming stunts in the beautiful pool by the two young ladies who give their time and talent to the swimming classes. There was a splendid display of sewing and embroidery and woodwork by the science classes.

The guests were shown over the entire building, and the most careful housewife could not but exclaim over the beautiful order everywhere. Miss Ellison was assisted by Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Giles, Misses Sargent and Rickey, Mr. and Mrs. Gauche, and members of the Board in receiving and entertaining the many guests who called.

MRS. RAY TORIAN.

REVIVAL AT AMORY, MISS.

One of the most successful revivals in the history of the Methodist church at Amory, Miss., came to a close, Sunday night, May 8, after a duration of two weeks. It began Sunday, April 24, one week after the opening of the new and magnificent $80,000 church building. There were thirty-six additions to the membership, fourteen by letter and twenty-two on profession of faith.

The preaching was done by the pastore, Rev. W. R. Lott, who is serving his fourth year at this place. Never has it been the privilege of this people to hear and enjoy finer, better or more earnest preaching of the gospel than at this time. Each and every sermon carried its message of truth and power of conviction into the hearts of the people. During his faithful pastorate here, Brother Lott has completely endeared himself to the hearts of his congregation and to the people in this community, by his consecrated life, his earnest zeal for the truth in Christ Jesus, and the promotion of God's kingdom among men.

The love and confidence which he commands were evidenced by the large and attentive congregations at the services. Many people from other towns, among whom were several from Holly Springs, Miss., who came in a body on Tuesday morning of the second week, to hear their former pastor again. There was a record attendance at the morning services throughout the entire period of the revival. Prayer services were held by the ladies of the town each afternoon in the homes, and a men's prayer service every day in the business section, all being largely attended.

Every organization of the church is deeply enlivened. There were five hundred and twenty in the Sunday school the past Sunday.

One of the features of the revival was the hearty co-operation of the local churches, the regular attendance of the pastors and members. All evening services elsewhere were called in, evidencing a sympathetic interest. There is a fine spirit among the churches in this place, and a marked congeniality among the pastors.

Rev. W. C. Newman, pastor of the Methodist church at Houlka, Miss., directed the music. His soul-stirring, gospel messages in song added much inspiration to the services.

It may be truly said that the church is greatly strengthened in every way, individually and collectively, for the task ahead, as a result of this revival. The influence and far-reaching effect upon the churches and people generally, is inestimable.

ZONE MEETING AT POPLAR SPRINGS, MERIDIAN.

At Poplar Springs Methodist Church, Meridian, Miss., on May 12, 1927, at 10 a.m., the zone meeting was called to order by the zone chairman, Mrs. E. B. Key. The pastor, Rev. J. H. Jolly, led the devotional service, and with appropriate hymns interspersed, prayer was offered by Dr. Rolfe Hunt and Rev. Waldo Moore. A vocal solo was given by Mrs. A. C. Bryan. An interesting program was given. Mrs. H. P. Green read well "Our Stewardship of Personality." Mrs. M. P. Johnston ably discussed "Stewardship and Tithing." Mrs. Stanley Wilson, Superintendent Children's Work, clearly outlined the three departments and urged adult auxiliaries to arrange to sponsor the work among children. Miss Trawick, of Wesley House at Meridian, told of their varied work in a most helpful way, and then introduced Mrs. C. W. Cochran, of City Mission Board, who, in an enthusiastic way, told of future plans for enlargement of quarters at Wesley House and possible enlargement of activities.

A delicious luncheon was served on the church lawn at noon and a pleasant social hour enjoyed.

The afternoon session was most helpful. Devotional conducted by Dr. Rolfe Hunt. A reading was given by Miss Pace. Mrs. Hagnemeyer gave a talk on "Why a Woman Should Enter Service Through the Missionary Society." Mrs. W. B. Jones read a paper on "Through the Missionary Society—Where?" Mrs. A. F. Watkins discussed "Why Have Zone Meetings?" She was followed in an interesting talk by Rev. Robt. Selby on "What the W. M. S. Should Mean to the Pastor." A lively round table discussion on "Why I Belong to the W. M. S.," led by Mrs. Raulston Huggins, District Secretary, then followed.

Daleville was chosen as the next place of meeting. Benediction was pronounced by Rev. W. A. Hays.

MRS. ROLFE HUNT, Sec'y.

UP AND DOWN THE BAYOUS OF LOUISIANA.

By Dr. Elmer T. Clark.

Traveling up and down the bayous of Louisiana in the mission boat, "The Methodist," organizing a church here, a Sunday school there, and a day school in another place, serving as both teacher and preacher, the Rev. Leon Picone, Methodist missionary to the Italians of Louisiana, goes about spreading the glad good news among the people that live along these Southern bayous.

At Bayou Shaeffer, in the heart of Terrebonne Parish, a section without roads, mail service, churches, or schools, Mr. Picone found fertile soil in which to sow the seeds of the gospel. Here, under the shade of the mighty live oaks, on the 9th of May, 1926, he organized the first church among the people of this section. Here ninety persons took the vows of the church, and here the Lord's Supper was administered under the trees, the people all standing reverently.

But a church must be provided for the new congregation, and at Bayou Shaeffer there was no building available. At last one was found that could be used for a church, but it was at Bayou Long, some forty-five miles away. Undaunted, the members of the new Bayou Shaeffer church raised the $40, the purchase price of the building, and went to Bayou Long, loaded their new church on a barge, and literally dragged it those forty-five long, weary miles to Bayou Shaeffer.

Underneath those old live oak trees the church was located, and here the people living up and down the bayou come in their boats to the Sunday service, some traveling as far as twelve miles to church and twelve miles back home again.

But a church was not the only need at Bayou Shaeffer. Little children all around were growing up in ignorance and the mothers and fathers themselves could neither read nor write. Why could not the new church building be utilized on week days as well as Sundays? The idea appealed to the members, and Mr. Picone, encouraged and aided by Dr. Harper, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and Rev. R. M. Brown, pastor at Morgan City, La., organized a day school and enrolled fifty-one pupils. Eager to learn, they came in crowds, their ages ranging all the way from 6 to 26; but no matter what their age, they must all join the A B C class together, for these splendid young men and women have never before had an opportunity even to learn their letters. Many of the fathers and mothers also come to school with the children in the mornings and remain during the religious exercises. It is the special delight of one of the oldest men of this section, the father of twenty-two grown children, to come to school with the boys.

At Persimmon Pass the entire congregation were Roman Catholics when the first service was held, but soon they said: "We want to get Methodist," and they were baptized and received into the church. In all there were twenty-four ex-Catholics baptized.

There is no school whatever at Bayou Buttie. Here children are fast growing to manhood and womanhood who have never attended school a day in their lives. In this place services must be held in the open air, as there is no church building, but the number attending has grown from a very small group to a large one, often numbering forty or more people.

Still "The Methodist" is traveling up and down the bayous of Louisiana, carrying its master into out-of-the-way places where the need is great. Since the meeting of the Louisiana Annual Conference in November, 1926, Mr. Picone has opened work at five new points. They are:

Pilot Town, at the mouth of the great Mississippi River, ninety-four miles from New Orleans. Through this town pass numbers of the great ocean-going steamers. Although it takes three days to reach this far-off spot, Mr. Picone believes it is well worth the journey to meet this faithful little band of twenty-five or thirty who never fail to come together for service. A little chapel would be a great blessing to this neighborhood.

Pointe a la Hache, the county seat of Plaquemine Parish, about forty-six miles from New Orleans. The people of this place are anxious to hear the gospel, and about thirty come to the services every time the missionary arrives. There is no chapel here, but they meet in the home of a friendly sister.

Whyclosky, a community greatly in need of the gospel. There is no meeting place except a private home, where about twelve people come together to worship.

Reserve, where the largest crowd gathers for service. This work has already been turned over to the pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Church, New Orleans. All the people of this section seem delighted to welcome the Methodist church, and already several hundred dollars have been subscribed toward the erection of a church here.

Grand Island, a community without religion, separated from the mainland by Barataria Bay. There are in this community about 400 people, who are in great need of everything, Bibles, a chapel, the gospel, and prayers. Eighty attended the first service held by Mr. Picone in this neighborhood, and forty the second. "It takes two days to make the trip,and costs $8 each time," says Mr. Picon, "but it is well worth while, for the field is ripe unto the harvest."

Sunday School

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The eighth session of the North Mississippi Conference Standard Training School will be held in the Grenada College building June 6-11. The following courses are to be offered:

Beginners Department Administration, Mrs. W. W. Adams, instructor; Primary Department Administration, Miss Lynda Ramey, instructor; Junior Department Administration, Mrs. W. F. Cann, instructor; A Study of Early and Middle Adolescence, Dr. N. E. Richardson, instructor; Rural Sunday School and Church Management, Dr. A. W. Martin, instructor; Bible, St. Mark's Life of Christ, Dr. Davidson, instructor; The Christian Religion, Dr. J. M. Culbreth, instructor; Evangelism, Dr. E. B. Chappell, instructor.

We have arranged for Rev. Charlie D. Tillman and his daughter to conduct the singing in our worship services. Mr. Tillman will give instruction in congregational singing to all who care to learn this art.

Rural Sunday School Management is a specialization unit under the general unit, Organization and Administration of the Sunday school. This course will take in the management of the country church as well as the Sunday school. This course is required for one who is to be approved as an instructor in Cokesbury courses. The instructor, Rev. A. W. Martin, is one of the best prepared men in the Church, to lead a group of men in the study of the rural church and its opportunities. It is probable that forty or fifty will be in this class.

The folder announcing the school has been mailed to several hundred of our people. If any pastor cares to have sent to him a number of these folders to give to his teachers they will be mailed upon request.

Rev. H. D. Suydam sent his dollar to Dr. Countiss saying that he and ten of his people would attend the school. Suydam is in the overflowed section of our Conference. The water has been over all his territory, but it was not wet enough nor deep enough to dampen his ardor and abate his heroic spirit. Thank God for such a noble spirit.

The question is frequently asked, "Well, how many are you going to have at training school this year?" No one can know until June 6th. One thing I do know is that if we had twenty men like some we do have Grenada could not take care of them. My hope is, we will have two hundred. If we do some one will have trouble in securing a room with a bath. One last word, the personal, earnest appeal of one who knows what these schools mean will be worth more than any appeal that can be made through a circular or letter. Try your personal influence on one or more of your friends and see what can be done. Money will be well invested if schools that are having a hard time controlling boys and girls from twelve to seventeen should send one or more teachers to take the course under Dr. Richardson. I am quite sure this course will not be taught by this man in Grenada for some time to come.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The past week Mr. Hull has been in a Standard Cokesbury School on the DeSoto charge. He reports a good school and much interest.

Saturday and Sunday, May 21 and 22, the Smith County Sunday School Institute will be held. This means much for the work in Smith County. Brother Hull has brought to them a fine proram and he is to be complimented upon his efforts in the matter.

Tuesday, May 24, the Leake County Institute will be held. Brother Hull has promoted this Institute in a very fine way and from indications, this will be the best Institute held for our Methodist people in Leake County. On Thursday, the 26th, the Neshoba County Institute will be held at Philadelphia, and the Newton and Hasper County Institute will be held Saturday and Sunday, May 28 and 29, at Montrose.

Brother Hull has secured the assistance of Rev. John L. Ferguson, Jr., for this series of Institutes and it is hoped that each of them will be better than any we have been able to hold until this time. Brother Ferguson is a fine worker and the Mississippi Conference and particularly these Institutes should be very happy to have him at this time.

These Institutes in the past have proven very helpful and the number of persons taking part have much to do with the sustained interest in these series of meetings.

Miss Jones held an All-Day Institute at the Hebron Church on the Taylorsville charge Sunday, the 15th. The Institute was largely attended and much interest was taken in the work. Hebron has had a long and honorable history and we trust that the Sunday school may create an interest that will make them happy to maintain a Standard Sunday school.

I was at Raleigh for a Standard Cokesbury School from the 13th to 18th. We had 14 enrolled and nine credits. Brother Alford is doing a fine work on the Raleigh charge and the people are responding in a most gracious way.

We have 45 names on our Leadership Training Honor Roll at this time, which is 5 names less than last year at the Annual Conference. We are trusting that we will reach the goal of 75 names on this list this year.

We have four Standard Training Schools for our Conference this fall. This will give us eight Standard Training Schools this year. We trust that each of these schools will come up to the expectations of those who are promoting them.

We have 12 names on our Sunday School Day Honor Roll, which is a little in advance of the Honor Roll last year. The total amount of our Sunday School Day offering is not quite up to the amount of last year.

The work of the Board is progressing in a very fine way and we are very thankful and grateful for the good things that have come our way.

Pray for the workers and the work.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Mr. John R. Pepper of Memphis writes: "Many thanks for copy of your excellent 'Sunday School Outlook' just received. I heartily congratulate you on the splendid success of your Monroe Conference."

We have just received a fine check from Rayne Memorial, sent to us by Mr. H. M. Caldwell, treasurer, in the sum of $88.25 to cover the Sunday School Day offering from his school. We acknowledge this offering with thanks.

Mr. S. H. Porter, superintendent of the Zwolle Sunday school, has written for programs, and plans to observe Sunday School Day in his school in June.

We acknowledge receipt of a call issued by our District Secretary, Brother A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles, to all the District Council members to meet at Broad Street Church in Lake Charles on May 27 at 10 a.m. We trust that this will be a splendid meeting.

We are glad to note that our District Secretaries are beginning to function in an official manner, and feel sure of a fine work from them. On Mothers' Day, Mr. H. W. Rickey, of the Alexandria District, worshiped with the Hineston people and had a fine day. Dr. Wren of the Minden District writes that he is planning to be with the Pollock folk on the first Sunday in June. No doubt other District Secretaries are planning meeting dates with various schools in their districts.

We have before us an official report from the "East Shreveport" Standard Training School, just closed, where they made a splendid record of 42 credits out of an enrollment of 48. The school was held at Mangum Memorial. The Educational Director, Dr. W. W. Holmes, writes us that exceptional work was accomplished in the school.

Baton Rouge reports 76 credits from its recent Training School, which is an excellent record, especially in view of the high water conditions surrounding them.

Mothers' Day found the writer worshiping with the congregation of First Church at Baton Rouge, wearing a white flower in memory of my mother. A few days later I was privileged to make my annual pilgrimage to her grave, which is located in old Mount Zion Church Yard near Vernon, La., in Jackson Parish. The greatest tribute I can pay to my mother is that she was a praying mother. One of my earliest recollections was my ability to go back to sleep in the night after having said my prayers at her bedside. On the last evening she spent with us, I conducted my first family prayers in our home, but she passed away before she knew that my intention was to become a minister.

On Monday, the 16th instant, I left for Baton Rouge District Conference by way of Lake Charles, due to the flooded conditions around Melville. I had a most delightful visit in the parsonage at Lake Charles with Dr. and Mrs. Wynn, and went over with Dr. Wynn the plans for his new church. He is much encouraged over his work in Lake Charles and the fine spirit of co-operation given him, which he says is beautiful. Brother Wynn tells me that he has something like $75,000 in subscriptions toward the building of his church, but, according to the estimate of the architect, will need about $130,000.

I reached Amite, the seat of the conference, by way of New Orleans. While in the city I had short conferences, by phone, with some of the leaders there, including Dr. Harper, Mr. J. H. Carter, the District Secretary, and Rev. B. C. Taylor, our Superintendent of Adolescent work in the State.

Rev. William Schuhle preached the opening sermon at the 11 o'clock hour of the district conference. Rev. H. N. Brown, presiding elder, was in the chair, with Rev. J. H. Bowden as secretary. We listened with a great deal of interest to the fine reports of the pastors. Rev. R. L. Clayton, the young pastor at Denham Springs, received a loud applause when he had finished the report of his work. Rev. J. H. Bowden of Jackson reported many good things also, and especially a large attendance at the mid-week prayer meetings. The pastor at Amite, Rev. B. H. Andrews, plans a two weeks revival with Brother Dan Kelly leading.

The hour from two to three in the afternoon was given over to Sunday school work and the writer had an opportunity to present the cause. Mr. W. S. Holmes, member of the General Sunday School Board, gave a fine word concerning the recent meeting of the

The Louisiana people appreciate the many expressions of sympathy coming from our friends and co-workers of other states. Mrs. Cora T. Court writes from Nashville to express concern at the distress of our people in the flood and storm swept area, and adds: "Please know that we are amazed at nature's persistent power and man's effort at control. May there soon be calm."

We are in receipt of last Sunday's Bulletin from the Broad Street Methodist Church of Lake Charles that is filled with interesting items. The main feature of the day was the presentation of the "Story of Progress" as the Sunday School Day program, in which every feature of the Sunday school work was depicted, including the working methods of the Conference Superintendent and his helpers, the Extension Secretary, the various departmental Conference Superintendents, and the office secretary. The first scene of this interesting program showed a session of the Workers' Council consisting of the pastor, the superintendent, general officers, teachers, and members from some of the classes. Then came the glimpse of the Conference Superintendent's work, and the final scene represented the reassembling of the Workers' Council in the new Church, under improved conditions. We think this is a splendid way to present this story of progress, and congratulate Brother A. M. Mayo, the superintendent at Broad Street Church.

Virginia Lady Tells of Taking Cardui and Says She Has Since Recovered Perfect Health.

Lynchburg, Va.—"I have taken Cardui several times for a run-down condition and have found it perfectly splendid," says Mrs. Lee T. Marsh, 715 First Street, this city.

"About ten years ago," she explains, "I became so weak I could not go about. I looked like a skeleton and . . . was dreadfully worried about myself. A friend suggested Cardui and I decided to try it. . .

"I kept up the medicine until I had taken six bottles. It regulated and built me up. I improved greatly.

"Last year we drove up here through the country from Florida. I was exposed to the weather and must have taken cold, for I became ill . . . I got run-down, lost flesh, . . . could not sleep and had no appetite at all. I was so nervous that I did not know what to do.

"I thought of Cardui. I began to take it regularly and it was not long before I began to feel better. I took six bottles, one after another, and at the finish of the last one was perfectly well again. Since then I have continued gaining in weight and all winter have been in perfect health."

A LETTER TO THE ALUMNAE OF WHITWORTH COLLEGE.

Dear Alumnae: You should have been here during the Woman's Missionary Conference in March. There was so much enthusiasm for Whitworth manifested. The conference passed a resolution granting our Alumnae leaders the privilege of appearing before every local organization of the Missionary Society to present the cause of the Whitworth endowment, and to take an average freewill offering of $5 per capita, for five years from the individuals. This will give us a goal of $100,000. We want to begin this Conference-wide campaign just after commencement.

The first thing we have to do is work up enthusiasm among our own Alumnae members. With this in view, we have planned for annual Alumnae meeting to be a rally day. The date has been changed to Saturday, May 28. Our program will be given in connection with a luncheon at the Methodist church. The plates are each $1. The luncheon will be followed by our annual business meeting. We are so anxious for you to be here. If you can come, please sit down now and send your name and $1 to Mrs. W. D. Davis, Brookhaven, Miss. Do your best to influence ten others to come. We are going to count the attendance by districts, and I am sure you want your district to make a good showing. If you have a car, fill it up and come through the country, for "All roads lead to Brookhaven." For the members of the Alumnae who live too far to return home the same day, provision will be made for the night, provided they notify Mrs. Davis one week before hand.

Don't forget to send your dollar and name to Mrs. W. D. Davis, for it is very important that we know the number to expect.

We do hope you can come.

With love,

JOSEPHINE LEWIS,
President of Whitworth Alumnae.

MARJORIE BENZLER,
Corresponding Secretary.

NOTES.

The faculty and students of Whitworth College were given a treat on the afternoon of May 5, when Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Moreton, of Brookhaven, had the crowd as their guests the whole afternoon at Smith's Lake, a beautiful piece of water two miles from Brookhaven. About twenty-five automobiles were provided by friends for the purpose, and all the privileges of the lake, including boating and swimming, and privileges of skating were provided free, and the afternoon closed with a bounteous supper.

A unique entertainment was given by the Whitworth College Physical Education Department from 5:50 to 7 p. m. on the evening of May 6. A large crowd assembled, some in their automobiles on the adjoining streets, others on seats provided on the East Campus, where the exhibition was given, consisting of sixteen numbers, including wand, Indian clubs, and dumbbell drills, imitation of the National Game, Zouave drill, etc. The crowd was very enthusiastic over the perfect movements of the classes in their various costumes.

In the Whitworth College chapel, on May 7, a debate was held on the subject: "Resolved, That the United States should cancel France's war debt," with the following speakers: Affirmative, Miss Bernice Dupree, Miss Myrtice Meader, and Mr. Virgil Ellis; negative, Miss Rene Wright, Miss Virginia Lenoir, and Mr. Walter Terry. Mrs. T. Brady, Jr., presided on the occasion, and Rev. P. D. Hardin, Mr. Charles Hermon Dean, and Miss Mary Byrd served as judges. The decision was rendered in favor of the negative. Mrs. Brady, the chairman stated that it was the finest debate she had ever heard at Whitworth College, the speakers evincing much study of the subject.

THE MANSFIELD ASSEMBLY—JUNE 7-14.

The ninth annual Assembly and twenty-eighth annual conference of the Louisiana Epworth League will convene at the Mansfield College, Mansfield, La., June 7 to 14. The program, beyond a doubt, promises to be the best if any of the past years, the general theme being, "The Christian Life," with a slogan, "All for Christ and Christ for All."

There have been a great many changes made in the regular class work of the Asssembly, with a great many additions of special features; and with a much larger faculty than before, there is no reason why this Assembly should not surpass in spiritual power, instruction and consecration, any meeting of its kind held in Louisiana. The Assembly is known as Methodism's largest gathering in Louisiana, and there is no question about the fact that the pastors who prayerfully select delegates for this Assembly are always repaid fourfold for their co-operation in securing their delegations.

A few of the texts that will be taught in the Assembly this year are: "Men Who Dare," by Trumbull; "The Most Beautiful Book Ever Written," by Hayes; "The Spiritual Life," by Parker; "The Methodist Armour," by Hudson; "Young Islam on Trek," by Matthews; "The Choice of a Career," by Evans and Brown; "Money the Acid Test," by McConough. In addition to these, there will be a class in Departmental Methods, and as a big special feature, Dr. W. W. Holmes, member of the General Epworth League Board, will teach a class for the pastors, entitled, "The Pastor and His Young People."

Miss Julia Reid, who was recently consecrated at the Woman's Council in Shreveport for service in Cuba, will lead the Morning Watch daily. Miss Ina C. Brown, who is in charge of our Missionary Cultivation Department, of Nashville, Tenn., and the author of "The Choice of a Career," will teach this class, and speak to the Assembly at large on several occasions.

Rev. Marion S. Monk, who is a power in evangelism and our own pastor at First Church, Monroe, will teach a class in "The Spiritual Life," and will preach an evangelistic sermon to the Assembly each evening.

Miss Lillie Mae Platt, a student of Mansfield College, and a very accomplished musician, will be the pianist, while Rev. Jimmie Harris, of Rochelle, will be the leader of song.

Other instructors who will lead our young people are: Rev. D. B. Raulins, Rev. W. C. Childress, Rev. R. L. Armstrong, Rev. C. K. Smith, Rev. Don Dulaney, Rev. Guy Hicks, Rev. B. C. Taylor, Dr. M. F. Wilson, Miss Consuela Martinez, Mrs. Robert Jackson, Mrs M. G. Brown, Miss Elizabeth Langford, Miss Agatha Brewer, Miss Charles White.

Those who have been selected as prayer group leaders are: Mrs. R. G. Holt, of Rayne; Mrs. J. M. Alford, of Vivian; Mrs. B. C. Taylor, of New Orleans; Mrs. Marion S. Monk, of Monroe, and Mrs. M. G. Brown, of San Antonio, Tex. These ladies will be assisted by four of our outstanding young people. There will also be five young men and pastors who will serve as prayer group leaders for the boys' section.

There are many other interesting points on the Assembly program that we might mention; but we will be delighted to mail a program direct to any one who will write for same.

Let us urge that every pastor communicate with his local chapter at once and see that a delegate is selected and provision made for their expense, sending their names in advance with the required reistration fee of $2 to the District Secretary of their respective districts.

SUGGESTIONS FOR A MISSION STUDY CLASS.

(Handed in by Miss Sue Shroder, Mangum Memorial Church, at a Fourth Department Class at the Shreveport District Institute.)

If I were Fourth Department superintendent and going to organize a Missionary Study class, I would first select a book for our study, look over it, decide on a question for debate, assign the leaders for each side of the question. Then, going before the League, would very briefly talk to them enough to arouse their interest in the question that has been presented for debate.

Next, I would invite them to the home of one of the Leaguers, stating that after the debate there would be an hour of games, and refreshments.

After the debate is decided on and over, then present the books to be studied, asking them to come again next week for a few minutes' study, then a social hour, and that the first chapter of a story would be read. One of the Leaguers in the group had consented to write the chapter, but no one knew who it was. So each must come and see if he could guess who wrote it, telling them that once a week we would meet for an evening to study, play, and to hear a new chapter of the story for a period of six weeks.

At the end of that time a reward would be given to the one selecting the best name for the story, and also to the ones guessing correctly who were the authors of the six chapters

From this first class on, I would select a member of the League to take charge and teach the lesson, a different Leaguer teaching each time under the careful leadership of the superintendent of the Fourth Department.

A variety of entertainment would be planned, and refreshments would always be served. Everything would be centered around the idea of interesting each one present in the chapter studied, and yet give him a nice social hour.

LOUISIANA LEAGUE ASSEMBLY TO HAVE SPECIAL FEATURE FOR PASTORS.

The program of the Mansfield Assembly, June 7-14, has been so arranged that the pastors who attend the Assembly might not only have the privilege of studying the great Bible and mission texts, but also have the privilege of a special course, entitled, "The Pastor and His Young People," which will be taught daily by Dr. W. W. Holmes, a member of the General Epworth League Board and presiding elder of the Shreveport District. This is a great addition to the Assembly program, and we urge that the pastors of our Conference who can arrange to attend the Asssembly, send in their registration and enter into the wonderful privileges there.

TWO HOMES MADE HAPPY

By Women Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I think it is the most wonderful medicine I ever tried," is the statement made by Mrs. Goldie Shoup of May View, Illinois. She declares that after taking the Compound she is in better health than before.

Mrs. J. Storms of 29 Lane Street, Paterson, N. J., writes: "I can not speak too highly of your medicine and I recommend it to all my friends."

These statements were taken from two enthusiastic letters which tell of the help that has been received from using the Vegetable Compound. Both Mrs. Shoup and Mrs. Storms were in a run-down condition which caused them much unhappiness. When women are suffering from lack of strength and from weakness, their own life and that of their family is affected. When they feel well and strong and are able to do their housework easily, happy homes are the result.

Thousands of testimonial letters have been received from women in different walks of life, stating that the Compound has helped them.

Women Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

Countless girls and women now know how foolish and needless it is to "purge" and "physic" themselves to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, sallow skin, colds, or sour, gassy stomach.

They have found that Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those heretofore chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens or upsets the most delicate girl or woman. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

Dr. Caldwell's SYRUP PEPSIN

COKESBURY TRAINING CLASS AT HOUMA.

During the week of May 9 to May 13, Mr. McClellan came to the MacDonell School to conduct a small Sunday school class. There were fifteen who joined the class, which was held at 3:45 each afternoon and lasted till 5:45.

We took the night to visit our rural section. Monday night we went to Labadieville, a little place twenty-seven miles from Houma, a newly converted place. There was a good attendance waiting for us at the little chapel. We sang a few songs and had a prayer. Then Mr. McClellan showed some pictures about how to organize and conduct a school. I think it was a good help to the people who are interested in Sunday schools.

Tuesday night, we went to Griffin, and held the same service in the house of Mr. W. Griffin. They have no church there. They are planning to build one soon.

Wednesday, we went to Bayou Blue, to conduct a lecture. The church was crowded with people, and I think the pictures were a great help to the teachers and the rest of the people. Bayou Blue is one of the oldest churches in the French field.

Thursday, we went to Lockport. The attendance was good, and we had the same proram. It meant so much to the people to have the pictures as an illustraction, for these people cannot read.

To-night, Friday, we shall go to Point Chine. It is twenty-seven miles from Houma, and we have seven miles of dirt road besides. They have a nice little chapel built there, and the people are very faithful to their church. Most of them can neither read nor write. I am sure they will enjoy the pictures.

This course will mean so much for those who took it, and the night programs have helped the teachers and adults at all these Sunday schools. They need so much help.

MRS. G. A. LaGRANGE.

ANOTHER PASTOR TELLS OF THE OVERFLOW.

Dear Dr. Carley: Just a word of conditions on the Columbia charge. The flood situation has about destroyed everything at my Hebert church, on Boeuf River. All have been driven from their homes, with almost a total loss, and are now on the government for something to eat.

At Columbia, on the Ouachita—well, I will not try to describe the condition. All are in the overflow, and no one who had anything but that is a heavy loser. The water is almost to the top of the store doors. How much they will lose cannot be fully estimated, for most of their goods will be damaged badly, besides the great damage done to property, both stores and residences. There is hardly half a dozen families now in the town. I had to move out Friday and am living in the high school building here at Grayson, La., which happens to be one of my monthly appointments. We are fairly comfortable. The outlook for the pastor of Columbia charge is not encouraging. More than three-quarters of his support is gone. What they may do will indeed represent a high degree of self-denial. However, I feel assured the Lord will provide in some way or another, and, having food and raiment, therewith be content.

This is the greatest flood and disaster these people have ever seen or experienced. I trust you are well and that the Lord hath comforted and doth comfort you concerning your great loss of your father. God bless you.

S. S. BOGAN.

A LOVER AND BUILDER OF THE CHURCH.

About noon on Monday, May 9, the spirit of Brother E. D. GILMORE, one of our most faithful laymen, went back to God. For some weeks we had been expecting him to leave us, for he had been sick during a long period. He suffered much, so death has relieved him from the pain and no doubt his Master has received him into the place of rest.

Brother Gilmore was 72 years of age. He had been a steward in the Amory church thirty-three years. At the time of his death he was a trustee and a Sunday school teacher. The Bible class which he taught will bear his name: "Gilmore Bible Class." He was a member of the building committee of three of the four church buildings which have been built by the Methodists of Amory.

The church in Amory will feel keenly the loss of this good man, who at all times stood in the midst of the efforts to advance the work committed to its care. Whether it be a revival meeting, building a church, training teachers, in all he stood for the best that could be done. This section of Mississippi will not see his like again.

He spent money to advance the three types of service in the church, by building a hospital for the sick, sending out Christian teachers over the territory to teach the Bible, and providing equipment for holding tent revivals in this eastern section of the State.

Often he expressed a desire to live until the present new church was completed. It was completed, and his was the first funeral to be held from it. Brother J. H. Felts, of Greenwood, came and assisted the pastor. The church was crowded to its capacity, for the friends came from far and near to pay respect to the life of a good man.

The youth of the present generation, as far as I know, and I know five hundred of them very intimately, are on the way to great discoveries, have made a step toward happiness and a step toward self-government far ahead of anything we had in our youth. They need very careful handling. They need all the love and affection that a man can give them, and they are going to bring this old world of ours one step nearer heaven in the end.—Mather A. Abbott, headmaster of Lawrenceville School.

Facing Your Responsibility

As Sunday school teacher or officer it is one thing to make the claim that the job's too big, that your materials are insufficient, that the whole thing is just hopeless. It's another thing to avail yourself of every piece of literature within your means that pertains to the subject, to study your Sunday school and your own class as you would your own business, in fine, to face your responsibility squarely.

A suggestion for a good start in this latter direction is

The Workers' Council

(A monthly magazine for Sunday school teachers, officers, and workers.)

HERE IS WHAT IT WILL DO:

It will keep you informed of the latest and best developments in Sunday school work.
It will help you work out your own problems by telling you of successful methods used in the same situations in other schools.
It will give you appropriate worship programs for your department or for the entire school.
It will furnish you with suggestions for conducting the weekly meeting of workers and teachers.
It will offer helps that will make "special days" in the Sunday school a joy instead of a bother.

Now, Honest! Can Your Officers Afford to be Without It?

Include in Your Next Order for Literature Sufficient Copies for Your Officers. 20 Cents per Quarter in Clubs. A Dollar for Single Subscriptions.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE AGENCIES THAT HAVE HELPED.

The present overflow is one of the greatest disasters that have ever befallen any section of the United States. The tragedy of it would have been immeasurably greater if the forces of relief had not functioned so efficiently. The loss of life has been comparatively small, and food and shelter have been adequately provided for those whose homes and possessions were swept away.

It is impossible to mention by name all the agencies that have helped in taking care of the desperate situation; but some of them are so outstanding in their work that they should receive full credit for what they have done. Among these are officials of the National Government, designated for the task by the President; the Governors and other officials of all the States affected; the American Red Cross, which has never functioned more efficiently in any calamity; the railroads and other transportation agencies, and the telephone and telegraph companies, all of whom have placed their equipment at the disposal of those in need; the Salvation Army, which has distributed food and clothing; local relief committees, on which men and women have labored day and night to meet the exigencies of the situation; the American people, who have supplied millions of dollars for relief through the Red Cross. In addition to these, every community affected by the overflow can supply the names of many organizations and individuals who have played heroic parts in relief work.

We are passing through a great calamity; but the tragedy of it is relieved somewhat by the beautiful spirit of helpfulness that has reduced the suffering to a minimum and that is making possible a program of rehabilitation that will soon restore the devastated areas.

SUMMER OPPORTUNITIES.

Summer is the time—and rightly so—for a vacation, for rest and recreation after the strenuous work of the preceding fall, winter, and spring. Not everybody can take a vacation, but it is a good thing for those who can afford it.

But a vacation should not be a period of mere idleness. Doing nothing is about the most tiresome occupation there is. A vacation of idleness usually leaves the vacationer in poor condition, physically, mentally, and spiritually, for the performance of the duties of his vocation. So a vacation should combine pleasure with profit.

Methodist people of Mississippi and Louisiana are fortunate in opportunities they have of getting a vacation along with helpful preparation for more efficient work after the vacation is over. Consider the attractions of these gatherings: North Mississippi Conference Standard Training School at Grenada, June 6-11; Mississippi Conference Epworth League Assembly, Brookhaven, June 6-10; Louisiana Conference Epworth Assembly, Mansfield, June 7-14; Seashore Divinity School, Biloxi, June 14-28. Those who have read the programs of these gatherings know that provision has been made for an enjoyable and profitable time. A vacation with profit—this is the opportunity we have this summer.

THE MEN'S LOYALTY CONVENTION.

Last week there was held in New Orleans, at the First Presbyterian Church, a Loyalty Convention, under the auspices of the Laymen's Missionary Movement. Distinguished speakers were heard on vital themes of aggressive Christianity, and it is not too much to say that a new vision of world need and world opportunity has come to those who attended the meetings. Dr. O. E. Goddard and Dr. J. E. Crawford, of our own church, were among the speakers. Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, who was on the program, was unable to be present on account of a recent operation for appendicitis. The actual enrollment of delegates went above 1600, more than nine hundred of them being men. This gathering was immensely worth while to the city of New Orleans, for it has strengthened the forces of the Kingdom of God in these parts.

BEAUTY CONTESTS.

We are again in the nauseating period of bathing beauty contests. Young women whose love of notoriety exceeds their sense of modesty are permitting themselves to be exhibited in scanty attire to the gaze of the public under the thin guise of an artistic contest. It is generally believed that commercial interests are back of these contests, furnishing merely another illustration of the fact that the love of money is the root of all kinds of evil. If there is a single good reason for these "contests"—they are generally thought of as public exhibitions of the female person—we do not know what it is. Having no reason for being, they should be stopped.

NEWSPAPERS AND CONTROVERSY.

Every now and then we are running across the statement that controversy is the life of a newspaper, especially a religious newspaper. The contention is probably based on the fact that people like to see a fight, to "see the fur fly," and a religious fight is about as diverting as any other kind.

The value of a controversy depends upon its nature. If competent writers are arrayed against each other in discussion of subjects upon which good men may differ, and if these writers employ sound argument to sustain their own positions or controvert those of their opponents, light is thrown on the whole situation, and good results. We rather like this kind of controversy.

But when so-called controversial writing takes the form of personal abuse, unkind insinuations, unbrotherly charges, impugning of motives, and a harshness of spirit that wounds, we cannot see the value of it. Dullness is pretty bad—but some things are worse. Anyhow, a writer can be sprightly without being spiteful.

AN ASSISTANT EDITOR.

The editor of the Advocate has accepted an invitation from Dr. F. N. Parker, dean of the Candler School of Theology, Emory University, to occupy the chair of Homiletics in that institution during the summer quarter. Before accepting the invitation, the editor made sure that the Advocate work would suffer in no particular.

The work of teaching is so arranged that ample time will be given for the usual amount of editorial writing. In addition, the editor has been fortunate enough to secure the assistance of Dr. R. H. Harper, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, in taking care of the office end of the work. Dr. Harper is a member of the Publishing Committee of the Advocate; he is abundantly qualified to perform all the editorial functions, and he is not without experience in editorial work, having at various times rendered most acceptably the kind of service he is now engaged to do. The Advocate will be the gainer by having the additional services of such an accomplished assistant editor.

After June 10, the editor's address will be Emory University, Ga. Purely personal communications should be addressed to him at that place. All matter for the Advocate should be addressed as usual to 512 Camp Street, New Orleans, La.

MISUNDERSTANDING AND MISREPRESENTING JOHN WESLEY.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

It is frequently said that Mr. John Wesley cared nothing for religious opinions but insisted that the Methodists "think and let think." That phrase occurs in his article entitled, "The Character of a Methodist;" but detached from its context it utterly misrepresents Mr. Wesley.

Let us see what he did say. His words are as follows:

"The distinguishing marks of a Methodist are not his opinions of any sort. His assenting to this or that scheme of religion, his embracing any particular set of nations, his espousing the judgment of one man or of another, are all quite wide of the point. Whosover, therefore, imagines that a Methodist is a man of such or such an opinion, is grossly ignorant of the whole affair; he mistakes the truth totally. We believe, indeed, that 'all Scripture is given by the inspiration of God;' and herein we are distinguished from Jews, Turks, and infidels. We believe the written word of God to be the only and sufficient rule both of Christian faith and practice; and herein we are fundamentally distinguished from those of the Romish Church. We believe Christ to be the eternal, supreme God; and herein we are distinguished from the Socinians and Arians. But as to all opinions which do not strike at the root of Christianity, we think and let think."

With the reading of the full passage it is perfectly plain that Mr. Wesley was opposed to all the loose rationalistic notions now current and which seek to take shelter under this oft-quoted and misquoted phrase, "think and let think."

In a letter to Joseph Benson written in 1773 he spoke as follows:

"God has made practical divinity necessary and the devil controversial. Sometimes we must write and preach controversially, but the less the better. I think we have few, if any, of our traveling preachers that love controversy; but there will always be men whose mouths it is necessary to stop, Antinomians and Calvinists in particular. By our long silence we have done much hurt both to them and the cause of God."

With these two passages in sight can any man say Mr. Wesley was indifferent to religious opinions and creeds?

The most marvelous misrepresentation of Mr. Wesley which has appeared in recent years is one in which it is asserted that he believed in the doctrine of evolution. A quotation from Wesley's abridgement of "The Contemplation of Nature" by Bonnet has been used in a most misleading fashion. The paragraphs quoted are as follows, which are found on page 102, volume 12, London Edition of 1784:

"By what degrees does Nature raise herself up to man?

"How will she rectify this head that is always inclined toward the earth? How change these paws into flexible arms? What method will she make use of to transform these crooked feet into supple and skillful hands? Or, how will she widen and extend this contracted stomach? In what manner will she place the breasts, and give them a roundness suitable to them?

"The ape is this rough draught of man; this rude sketch; an imperfect representation, which nevertheless bears a resemblance to him, and is the last creature that serves to display the admirable progression of the works of God."

Neither Wesley nor Bonnet whose work he abridged were evolutionists. All that Bonnet taught and Wesley accepted was that God had created all things, especially living things, in a series of gradations or scales. This is evident from two other passages taken from the volume quoted. On page 58 we read as follows:

"The whole progress of Nature is so gradual that the entire chasm from plant to man is filled up with divers kinds of creatures, rising one above another, by so gentle an ascent that the transitions from one species to another are almost insensible. And the intermediate space is so well husbanded that there is scarce a degree of perfection which does not appear in some. Now since the scale of being advances by such regular steps as high as man, is it not possible that it still proceeds gradually upward through beings of superior nature? As there is an infinitely greater space between the Supreme Being and man than between man and the lowest insect."

On page 110 it is said:

"The scale of creation does not terminate at man. Another Universe commences there, whose extent, perhaps, compared to that of this, is as the space of the solar vortex to the capacity of a nut. There shine the celestial hierarchies like glittering stars."

Can any sane man infer from these paragraphs that Wesley and Bonnet taught that an evolutionary process which extended from the lowest forms of life on earth, which did not terminate at man but evolved from man and above man "the celestial hierarchies?" Must it be assumed that these great men believed that anthropoid apes were the ancestors of angels as well as the forbears of men?

Darwin's hypothesis rests on his dogma of the transformation of species, and all the numerous and variant theories of evolution which have appeared since Darwin proceed on this dogmatic theory or some modification of it.

But on page 75 of Wesley's abridgement of Bonnet's treatise the transformation of species is flatly denied in these words: "The immutability of species abides amidst the perpetual motion that reigns in the universe."

Again, in Wesley's well known treatise on "Original Sin" he said: "God made Adam by immediate creation." And "Adam came directly out of the hands of God without the intervention of any creature."

Wesley's discussion of "Original Sin" was written to refute the essay of Dr. John Taylor of Norwich upon the same subject; and a part of what he says of Taylor's essay is pertinent to some conditions now prevalent:

"It may be doubted whether the scheme before us be not far more dangerous than open Deism itself. It does not shock us like barefaced infidelity. One who would be on his guard in reading the works of Dr. Middleton, or Lord Bolingbroke, is quite open and unguarded in reading the smooth, decent writings of Dr. Taylor; one who does not oppose (far be it from him!), but only explains, the Scripture. Who does not raise any difficulties or objections against the Christian revelations, but only removes those with which it has been unhappily encumbered for so many centuries!"

These words which Wesley applied to Taylor may be most aptly applied to some who, having abandoned the teachings of Methodism, are still ambitious to claim the name of Methodists for themselves.

"THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF ATHEISM, INC."

By Rev. John D. Ellis.

In the May number of World's Work magazine, there is an informing article by Homer Croy which tells the reader about the organization in New York City, October, 1925, of the "American Association for the Advancement of Atheism," generally referred to as the "4 A's."

It is a chartered association, with Charles Smith, president, and Freeman Hopwood, secretary, and its object is to "undermine the churches," and "atheize America."

It publishes an atheistic weekly paper, and its name is The Truth Seeker, George M. MacDonald, editor.

According to Homer Croy, some of the statements of the president and secretary are as follows:

"We can do it (undermine the churches), because the churches are already slipping, and when we show the reason to the people who have been humbugged by preachers and priests, they accept it. We have found putting over atheism in America much easier than we anticipated." (Hopwood.)

"We had no idea when we started how easy we could begin the pyramid." (Smith.)

Smith claims that there are 100,000 "avowed atheists" in America and forty millions of others who are not members of churches. "We expect to use them (the one hundred thousand) as the nucleus." (Smith.)

"In three hundred years there won't be a church in America." (Smith.)

"They (the churches) all bow down to something that we haven't one shadow of proof exists. Of course it does them some good—so does morphine. It keeps them quiet, makes them shell out money, and keeps them from thinking. The last thing the preachers and priests and rabbis of America want is for people to think. Where would their jobs be?" (Smith.)

"The idea of God is as little necessary to ethics as it is to Christianity. In fact, we hold that people are more moral if they get rid of the idea that some big man up in the sky somewhere is going to punish them if they do something wrong." (Smith.)

"We can work in harmony toward doing away with people's belief in the Bible as an inspired book, and the wiping out of the God myth." (Smith.)

"People seem to think that we need a God and a Bible to keep us from stealing and lying. Faith in the supernatural does nothing to promote good conduct." (Smith.)

"The number of prominent people in America who are atheists is a tribute to the intellect of this country." (Smith.)

"One of our interesting works is checking up on crimes of preachers. We have a department devoted to this. A noteworthy phase of this is that 40 per cent of clergy crimes are connected with sex." (Smith.)

"The beauty of it is that we have so many atheists in the college faculties in America. But of course they can't say much about it, as they would be thrown out, and then where would their living come from?" (Hopwood.)

"Atheists haven't long, doleful faces, and aren't afraid of a whiskered old man up in the sky somewhere who is going to strike them dead if they don't get names that tickle his vanity." (Hopwood.)

"We don't care what they call themselves (chapters of the association) as long as they knock the fear of God out of people, and tell the truth about the cesspool of Asiatic superstition and so-called Holy Bible." (Hopwood.)

"Most children's minds are closed on the subject of religion by the time they get to high schools, but by working hard we hope to open up their skulls, and let out Catholic superstition and Christian bunk, and insert logic and truth." (Hopwood.)

"If somebody should come along and present a single laboratory proof of the existence of God we would pay a million dollars. Of course, we haven't got the million, but we could get it. And also for one authenticated answer to prayer." (Hopwood.)

"There is practically no evidence for the existence of God. I will go farther and say there is no evidence in the laboratory sense of the word." (Smith quoting Irwin Erdman.)

"One of the illusions that the church hugs is that there is no conflict between science and religion." (Hopwood.)

"The churches have done some very nice work—for instance, visiting the sick, sending flowers, and helping the poor. But that is wholly secular. Atheists' organizations will do just as much. There is no single thing that the church does that a body of freethinkers cannot do." (Hopwood.)

The 4 A's is striving for nine objects as follows:

"1. All churches shall be taxed.

"2. Chaplains in Congress, legislatures, and in army and navy shall be done away with.

"3. Appropriations of public money for sectarian use shall be stopped.

"4. The bootlegging of the Bible and religion into the public schools of commerce shall cease.

"5. No religious festival or fast shall be recognized by the State.

"6. The Bible shall no longer be used to administer an oath.

"7. Sunday as a religious Sabbath shall no longer be enforced by law.

"8. Christian morality shall be done away with. In its place shall be natural morality, equal rights, and impartial liberty.

"9. 'In God we trust,' shall be taken off coins."

Judging by Mr. Croy's article (which states facts without bias, or opinion), the A. A. A. A. is active in every direction, has made a good start, and will invade the South.

It has "established atheist chapters in 20 colleges and preparatory schools in the United States, put them into three high schools; founded a junior atheistic movement," etc.

"It discovers men and women who have no belief in God, and who are willing to combat the churches: these are then examined and trained, and put to use."

"A chapter in Los Angeles rejoices in the name 'The Devil's Angels.'"

At the University of Rochester, N. Y., they are known as the "Damned Souls" Society.

The A. A. A. A. should adopt for its emblem a donkey on whose back the devil rides, and guides at will. Its multiplicity of A's is prophetic of the future, out of whose depths many "ahs" will arise. Ah alas, alas ah!

The pages of history do not count with atheism, neither does the date it prints upon its literature.

Any argument which might be made from effect back to cause, or from cause to effect is too absurd for its logic.

The heavens do not declare the story of anything except the glory of nothin' which originated sum'fin'. Atheism has always denied the existence of Jehovah, because he cannot be found by physical analyses, or apprehended by the senses.

In the estimation of atheism, there is no God, because he cannot be reached with a pair of forceps, or drawn out in some laboratory like molasses from a barrel.

If atheism had a pure heart, it might see him; and if atheism had a hungry soul, the Spirit of God might come to dwell therein.

Were atheism to meet Scriptural conditions, out of a rich experience it might say, "Glory."

If atheism were less sensual and voluptuous, it might become more spiritual and ethereal.

Atheism demands so much liberty, it regards the moral law of God as slavery, and grieves because it cannot graze in every pasture.

THE SARDIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

By Rev. W. W. Jones, Secretary.

The fifty-seventh session of the Sardis District Conference met in the Methodist Church in Hernando, Miss., at 2:30 o'clock, May 10, 1927, and closed on May 12, at 12 o'clock noon.

All the preachers of the district were present with one exception, Brother J. H. Bass, of Mount Pleasant, who was detained on account of illness in his home.

The reports of the pastors evidenced interest and progress in the entire program of the church.

All of the laymen seemed to be real enthusiastic. They are assuming the obligations of their respective offices in a very practical manner. Many of them made excellent reports, and, in their addresses befroe the conference, manifested great sincerity. In fact, many of the laymen made great speeches, and, judging from the reports, they are living up to the speeches they make at district conference.

Our presiding elder, the Rev. T. M. Bradley, was right there, with unassuming air and executive ability, directing the affairs of the district with that rare dignity that makes no attempt to advertise itself.

The Rev. E. S. Lewis, presiding elder of the Grenada District, was a very welcome visitor. (I think he was taking items on how to run a district conference.)

President J. R. Countiss, D.D., of Grenada College, was with us and brought a very gratifying message from that great institution of learning. Prof. J. E. Stephens, of Millsaps, was present and represented our college for boys and young men.

The Superannuate Endowment Cause was very ably represented by the Hon. John W. Kyle, who, from his great heart, addressed the conference at some length in behalf of the superannuate preachers. It was a great appeal, worthy of publication.

Mrs. R. M. Short, district secretary, W. M. S., and Mrs. O. R. Cummings represented and presented the work of the Woman's Missionary Society in the district. The report of this work was very inspiring. Untold good is being accomplished through the medium of the zone meetings.

Prof. J. R. Fewell and the fine representation of laymen and laywomen, in all their activities, evidenced sincere interest in the promotion of all the enterprises of the church. They elected a splendid delegation to the coming Annual Conference, as follows: R. A. Meek, Herbert Holmes, N. E. Wilroy, L. L. Minor, John W. Kyle, J. R. Fewell, J. E. Birmingham, Mrs. R. M. Short, and J. D. Turley.

Prof. J. R. Fewell was re-elected District Lay Leader, with L. L. Minor and John W. Kyle Associate Leaders.

Progress was noted in the increase of subscriptions to the New Orleans Christian Advocate; money paid to Mission Special; number of Woman's Missionary Societies organized, and interest in Grenada College. I believe our people are becoming more enthusiastic about our Conference college for girls and young women. One of the outstanding addresses of the district conference was that made by J. T. McCafferty in behalf of Grenada College. We are sorry, Mr. Editor, we cannot furnish it, just as delivered, for publication. It was so thoughtful, practical and powerful—just common sense.

The spiritual atmosphere of the conference was wholesome. Devotional exercises at the opening of each session were well attended by both laymen and preachers. These services were inspirational, being conducted in the spirit of reverence and devotion that becometh such occasions. Each man chose well his theme. We had preaching at the customary hours. On the evening of the first day, a fellow by the name of Jones preached to a good audience. On the evening of the second day, Rev. J. M. Bradley filled the pulpit, and on the third day Rev. J. T. Lockhart preached the closing sermon; both brethren, with that Christian fervor characteristic of the men, preached inspiring sermons to large and appreciative congregations.

We were so royally entertained by the pastor, E. B. Sharpe, and people of Hernando, that we all wanted to go back next year, but accepted an invitation from Tyro to hold the 1928 session in that prosperous little town.

Mr. Editor, you missed a great meeting in not being there. You should have heard the representative of the Advocate, Rev. W. W. Hartsfield, as he addressed the conference in the interest of our valued Conference organ.

BATON ROUGE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Baton Rouge District Conference met in the Methodist church at Amite, La., May 17, 1927, with Rev. H. N. Brown, presiding elder, in the chair.

The presiding elder called attention to the fact that this district was particularly blessed because, as yet, none of it had been touched by the high waters of the Mississippi.

The preachers were all present with the exception of Rev. H. W. May, of Zachary, and Rev. B. W. Waltman, of Plaquemine. Brother May was kept away on account of the severe illness of Mrs. Dr. Wall, a sainted member of his church at Slaughter.

With but few exceptions the pastors made splendid reports, showing a healthy spiritual condition of the churches of the Baton Rouge District. I think it rather exceptional, since but few churches had held their revivals, that the increase since Conference in membership was 379. All the pastors had either held or planned to hold revivals.

All of the interests of our church were well cared for in the program of the Baton Rouge District Conference. Brother R. W. Vaughan and Brother C. D. Atkinson brought us stirring messages on the work they are interested in. Dr. Briscoe Carter was unable to attend the conference as he had planned.

The preaching during the conference was done by Dr. B. P. Taylor, Rev. Wm. Schuhle, Rev. T. G. Stamp and Rev. R. W. Tucker. All of them brought us splendid messages.

On recommendation of the Board of Lay Activities, the lay delegates elected J. R. Ables, of Ponchatoula, District Lay Leader, and C. S. E. Babington, of Franklinton, and W. H. Underwood, of Watson, Associate Lay Leaders.

The following persons were elected delegates and alternate delegates to the Annual Conference: Delegates, K. I. Bean, W. S. Holmes, J. R. Ables, Walter Green, Colonel I. D. Wall, J. H. Rhodes, H. Broyles, Miss Stella Murphy, Mrs. L. A. Simms, Mrs. B. W. Jane, Judge Charles Kilbourne, R. L. Clayton, local preacher. Alternate delegates, Mrs. A. J. Coburn, Colonel W. T. Holland, J. W. Harper, Mrs. I. G. Gayden, S. M. Russ and B. W. Newsom.

On the recommendation of the Committee on Admission the conference recommended the following for admission on trial to the Louisiana Annual Conference: D. W. Milton, Baton Rouge, La.; J. P. Bonnecarrere, Gonzales, La., and D. W. Poole, Walker, La.

The conference seemed to be enjoyed by all, for Rev. B. H. Andrews and his committee on entertainment did their work well.

The conference, upon invitation of Rev. B. D. Watson, voted to hold its 1928 session at Clinton, La.

J. H. BOWDON, Secretary.

OVERFLOWED PREACHERS NEED HELP.

Dear Dr. Carley: Thank you for your wise and timely suggestion that an appeal be made for funds to help the pastors of our church who are serving charges in the overflowed sections of our connection. Many of these brethren, with their families, will suffer for the necessities of life unless help comes to them from outside the flooded area. I made a mild suggestion through last week's issue of the Advocate that our people come to the relief of the pastors of our own Conference who have suffered the loss of practically all they had in this flood; but I have had only three replies. A good brother from the State of Georgia sent me a check for $5; Brother M. M. Black, our pastor at Richton, Miss., sent me a check for $10, and Brother H. M. Ellis, one of our Conference evangelists, sent me a check for $10.

When I made the suggestion that we help these brethren, I had an idea that money would flow in from the four corners of the earth, but it didn't. Why? Well, it just didn't. However, I have not lost heart, for I believe that if the people can visualize the tragedy of the situation as some of us have seen it, they will not hesitate to respond. I want our people to know that I am still in a state of eminent receptivity, and that their money will go to the relief of those who need it.

Yours most sincerely,

J. T. LEGGET, P. E.,

Vicksburg, Miss.

A DREAM.

By Rev. A. Y. Brown.

Though the Scripture says it is the "old" men who shall dream dreams, I was granted a foretaste of that felicity of the future and dreamed a dream a few nights ago. Believing that we should endeavor to use all our experiences for good, I have tried to draw a helpful lesson even from this one.

I dreamed that I stepped off the train one bright sunny morning in some distant State—I only know it was not in Mississippi according to the dream. As I walked up a beautiful street I noted that I was refreshed by the exhilarating effect of the atmosphere, and observed the sprightly step which characterized those who passed me by. The beautiful little city, apparently a place of seven or eight thousand inhabitants, became a revelation of beauty upon the turn of every corner. Snug, modern bungalows, and spacious, comfortable homesteads lined its avenues. The yards and lawns were as continuous parks with their well kept carpets of green. Revolving fountains cast their sprays into the glittering sunlight. Flowers were in profusion. Canopied swings were rightly located. Water oaks, weeping willows and other beautiful trees swayed in the gentle zephyrs. Beautiful and carefree little children played and sang in the shade of these trees, and many-colored birds fluttered among their branches and poured forth their throbbing notes to a joyful world.

The business houses of the town were massive and stately structures. The courthouse was an edifice of beauty, resembling the palaces of which we read in story books. As I passed by a dignified and magnificent house of worship, epitome of a place of reverence, I observed that it was the First Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The show-windows of the stores were of great interest with their artistic decorations. The sidewalks were busy with shoppers hurrying in and out of these stores. Only beautiful cars and heavily loaded trucks passed along the wide streets. Business was splendid.

I walked into a cool, artistic drug store, and a man who had been one of my former faithful stewards stepped from behind a counter and grasped my hand. As we chatted a few minutes I looked about and began to recognize old acquaintances and friends. Fellows whom I had known in school kept coming in. Those I like to be near were living in that little city. I made enquiry about special friends and found they were there. The best church workers in charges I have served had all moved to this beautiful little city and were in business there and connected with the church.

And the church—they told me of its glowing interest. People could hardly wait for Sunday to get there. The beautiful new church I saw had been paid for, and besides they told me the parsonage was an attractive new brick bungalow, complete in every detail and comfort. The church had a very fine pipe organ and one of the best of choirs. In fact, I learned the best singers I have known in other choirs were now members of this one. There was no debt in any department of the church. Even the Superannuate Endowment five-year quota was already paid off. The Woman's Missionary Society held the Conference banners. The Sunday school and Epworth Leagues were teeming with interest and under efficient and trained leadership were functioning as efficiently as business corporations. There was wonderful spiritual fervor and manifestation in the church. Large crowds attended prayer meeting and took part in the service.

And then my friend, the druggist, asked me how I happened to be in town, and I told him I had decided to leave Mississippi. The old State had gone down. The low price of cotton had demoralized our people and hindered our work; then there came the flood, which made the situation look hopeless for years to come. Earthquakes and tornadoes had occurred so close to us recently that I felt it was dangerous to stay in that locality. Then the churches didn't have the interest in them I wanted to see. There was debt, a lack of leaders, and benevolences seemed too high, and we had gotten behind with the Superannuate Endowment—so I had asked for a transfer to another Conference, and they had sent me there to be pastor of that church! And such a welcome as I did receive! I only regret that the dream did not last long enough for me to preach one time in that beautiful church.

Now, as I have thought of this dream I have thought of how unlikely such a city will ever be found till we reach that City "whose Builder and Maker is God." And should it not cause us to realize that every place has its faults? We shall never find one exactly right in every detail. And if such a city should be found, it would not be my place, for the Master said, "They that are whole need not a physician; but they that are sick." And as he came, so I am sent, "not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance." "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me; because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek: he hath sent me to bind up the broken-hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound."

And, if we have had our floods and cyclones, how we should rejoice that God has yet been so merciful to us! And as James tells us we should "Count it all joy when ye fall into divers temptations; knowing this, that the trying of your faith worketh patience." No, I do not want to run and believe that all is gone when the floods come and debts are upon us, and demands are great, and there are many obstacles to overcome. For when we build up that Utopian city above these things I believe it is going to be more beautiful and better than the one of which I dreamed. I thank God for this dream and take it as inspiration to endeavor to come into its reality through faith in him, not in a far away place, but right here.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION.

(Adopted by the Aberdeen District Conference, in session at Fulton, Miss., May 24-25. Published by order of the body.)

We, your Committee on Education, beg leave to report as follows:

We note with much pleasure and great pride the fact that both Millsaps College and Grenada College are doing most excellent work, which is evidenced by the high standing of the graduates of these colleges in the communities in which they live. We thank God for the fact of the grade and character of work that is being done by those who are the product of our Methodist colleges in Mississippi.

We are glad to be able to say to our Methodist people of Mississippi that while some educational institutions of our land are suffering from a decided tendency toward modernism on the part of the faculties of certain educational institutions, still we of Mississippi have every reason to believe that the faculties of Millsaps and Grenada Colleges are devout believers in the faith of our fathers. At Millsaps Colllege every member of the faculty prays in public and will lead in devotional services.

We are especially pleased to publish the fact that Dr. Oshea, of the Michigan University, who made an intelligence survey of the schools and colleges of Mississippi under the direction of the late Governor Whitfield, places the students of Millsaps College far in the lead of all the other colleges of the State as to their intelligence and moral standing.

In view of the great work being done both at Grenada and Millsaps College, we heartily and earnestly beg that every possible effort be made to collect the educational assessment. Especially do we thus urge since a large section of the North Mississippi Conference is in the flooded area of our State and since these good people will be able to pay but little, if anything, on this or any other cause.

We urge our Methodist people to cultivate the spirit of boosting our church and her institutions rather than to give place in their lives to the spirit of knocking and criticising. Paul, under the influence of the Holy Spirit, wisely admonishes Christians thus: "Whatsoever things are true, whatsoever things are pure * * * if there be any virtue, if there be any praise, think on these things." We as Methodists need to exercise more faith in God, and we need to have more faith, trust in and love for one another. This policy of trust and love, the one for the other, and in the leaders of our church and in her institutions, will lead our church into the greatest possible avenues of glorifying God and in the service of humanity. The cultivation of the spirit of suspicion and distrust can but lead to the wrecking of our own faith and in blocking the progress of the kingdom of God on earth. May the good Father pour out upon us and all his church his soul-cheering and uplifting spirit of love!

J. TILLERY LEWIS,
For the Committee.

THE DIRECT TESTIMONY TO THE RESURRECTION OF JESUS.

By Rev. Charles C. Jarrell, D.D.

Belief in the physical resurrection of Jesus was not a late aftergrowth in the Christian church. Faith in the risen Lord was the foundation of Christianity, and it was this faith which created the church. No one can seriously doubt that the apostles themselves believed in the reality of the resurrection. Baur, Strauss, and Renan held this to be unassailable and sought to account for this faith on some rationalistic basis. In the words of Strauss, "The apostles firmly believed that Jesus had risen."

Faith in the resurrection is the base line that runs through the entire New Testament. There are six explicit accounts of it by five different authors and over one hundred references to it. It is everywhere viewed in the same light. It is the foundation of the faith, the basis of doctrinal teaching, the subject of apostolic testimony, and the ground of the believer's hope. It is thus expounded or referred to in the Gospels, the Acts, Romans, I and II Corinthians, Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, I Thessalonians, II Timothy, Hebrews, I Peter, and Revelations.

This base line binds together the four great divisions of the New Testament, the Gospels, the Acts, the Epistles, and Revelation, just as the Messianic thread binds into one the three divisions of the Old Testament. The fact is no sooner believed than it is enmeshed in history and interwoven in correspondence. No better evidence of its historical character could possibly be conceived. If it had first been heard of some generations after its supposed date, it might be called a "late aftergrowth." But this faith goes to making history at once; and the primitive church is ready with a historical book written in the lifetime of Christ's contemporaries, which takes the thread of Christian history from the death of Judas to the planting of the gospel in Rome. The literature of the church is enriched in the same generation with a wealth of correspondence which glows with faith in the risen Lord. It is easily seen from this that not merely do these divisions of the New Testament support the resurrection, but the resurrection faith binds them into a unity in which each finds support and strength.

The direct testimony in the New Testament to the resurrection of Jesus is as explicit and as ample as the evidence that he was crucified by Pontius Pilate. There is also indirect evidence of striking and convincing character; and there is circumstantial evidence of the strongest kind to corroborate and illumine all the rest. This article will consider simply the direct testimony.

This direct testimony rests on the authority of Matthew, Mark, Luke, John, and Paul. Matthew records the earthquake, the empty tomb, the angel's announcement, the appearance of Jesus to the two Marys and his appearance to the eleven disciples in Galilee.

Mark records the empty tomb, the announcement by the young man in white, and the appearance of Jesus to Mary Magdalene, to "two of them" as they walked into the country, and to the eleven as they sat at meat.

Luke records the empty tomb, the announcement by two men in shining garments, the appearance to the two disciples as they walked to Emmaus, to the eleven in Jerusalem, and the ascension at Bethany.

John records the empty tomb, and the appearance of two angels to Mary Magdalene; the interview almost immediately after between the Magdalene and Jesus; the appearance of Jesus among the disciples in the closed room, the evening of the same "first day" of the week, Thomas being absent; another appearance eight days later (Thomas now being with them); and a later appearance to the disciples at the sea of Tiberias.

Luke's Second Book—the Acts—contains seventeen references to the resurrection. Prof. Ramsay and Prof. Harnack have convinced the serious scholarship of the world that Luke wrote both books and that he has high character as a historian.

"The Acts of the Apostles in the multiplicity and variety of its details probably affords greater means of testing its general character for truth than any other ancient narrative in existence; and, in my mind, it satisfies the tests fully." (Lightfoot on Galatians, quoted by Dr. Alexander in "Son of Man.") This is the book with seventeen references to Christ's resurrection, the book in which the apostolate becomes conscious of itself and feels that its mission is to bear witness to the resurrection, and the book whose preachers all preach "Jesus and the resurrection." The writer does not claim to have been an eyewitness, but to have gotten his material from those who were the original eyewitnesses and ministers of the Word. He declares that he commits his record to writing, that in the midst of many oral and written accounts his friend and disciple, Theophilus, might have certain knowledge of gospel truth. He says that he had been careful to trace the course of things—to trace the course of things from the first, to trace the course of all things from the first, to trace the course of all things accurately from the first. (Dr. Alexander, "Son of Man.") Luke informs us, Acts 1:3, that there were other appearances of Jesus probably not recorded in any of the Gospels. "* * * he showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them freely forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the Kingdom of God." John intimates the same thing when he says (John 20:30): "And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book."

We come now to the remaining witness, Paul, whose testimony is critical and convincing. Pauline Christianity is historical—the larger part of his writings were not denied him even by Baur—and no one has yet been able to drive a wedge between the Christianity of Paul and the Christianity of the Gospels. Paul gives a summary of our Lord's appearances in I Corinthians 15:38. Here Paul assures us that Jesus had been seen alive after his crucifixion by above five hundred believers and that most of these original eyewitnesses were alive at the time of his writing and could be questioned if his readers were so disposed. Paul himself came into immediate contact with immediate disciples of our Lord, notably Simon Peter and James, the Lord's brother.

In verse eight Paul claims to have seen the Lord with his own eyes in such a real and literal fashion that it constituted the last of our Lord's appearances and is thus to be sharply distinguished from the mere visions that came to him afterwards. In I Corinthians 9:1 he lays this experience by the side of John's or Peter's testimony and claims that he had the same basis for his apostleship as they had, for he, too, had seen the Lord. It was the fact that he had seen the Lord that changed the cruel and conscientious bigot and the self-righteous Pharisee into the passionate lover of Jesus and the untiring apostle of the righteousness which is by faith and of the love that never faileth. Every outlook in life, every inducement of fortune, and every quality of mind and heart impelled him to reject the new faith until he became convinced that beneath it was the bedrock of reality. This reality was to him the resurrection of Jesus from the dead.

A careful study of the recorded appearances of our Lord will reveal minor differences on almost every point except that the stone was rolled away, that the tomb was empty, and that Jesus by "many infallible proofs" convinced the disciples that he had risen from the dead. John mentions Mary Magdalene; Matthew says Mary Magdalene and the "other Mary." Mark has Mary Magdalene, Mary (the mother of Jesus) and Salome. Luke mentions Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of Jesus, Joanna and the "other women." As to time, John says "while it was yet dark;" Matthew, "as it began to dawn;" Luke, "at early dawn," while Mark says "when the sun was risen." As to events in the natural realm, Matthew says that there was "a great earthquake, and an angel rolled the stone away;" while the other three simply say that "the stone was rolled away," or words to that effect. Matthew says that an angel was seen; John says that two angels were seen; Mark simply says that a young man in white appeared and spoke to the women; while Luke says that two men in dazzling apparel were seen. The recorded sayings of the angel or angels do not differ much, except that some are longer than others. The message is the same: "He is not here; he is risen. Go, tell his disciples." We note that Jesus says to Mary, "Touch me not," in John; while Matthew says that the two Marys "took hold of his feet and worshiped him."

Such a survey demonstrates that we have here four separate and independent accounts. Such narratives could neither have been manufactured in collusion nor could they have been derived from one another. The differences are too marked and too many, and they lie on the surface. The harmony is at the heart and must be studied out. Had the stories been manufactured in collusion, the harmony would not be on the surface, and the discrepancies would come out under the cross-examination. The harmony and the differences are precisely such as would be expected when four separate and independent witnesses report on one and the same stupendous event.

Such stories could not have been fabricated independently of one another. The agreements are too numerous and fundamental. Separate and independent forgers reciting what never occurred could never have attained the fundamental harmony of events, atmosphere, and emotion that pervades these narratives.

The careful reader will not fail to note how these accounts are given in a straightforward and artless manner. Events that are stupendous are told with a simplicity and a naturalness that belong to eyewitnesses of the truth. There is no setting of a stage as in the drama, no coloring of the picture as in fiction, no eulogies or exclamations of wonder, no mysticism of the religious fanatic, no vision as of the spiritual genius. All breathes the sober air of fact and the manner of eyewintsses telling the truth.

The transforming passion to bear witness to the resurrection manifested by the disciples is a fact of supreme importance. It establishes beyond question the fact that the disciples themselves believed with absolute certainty that Jesus had risen, and this became the consuming conviction of their lives.

The question now arises as to what is the reasonable explanation of this faith. The resurrection of Jesus completely satisfies the facts in the case, and nothing else will. The resurrection is indeed above reason and supernatural, but every other proposed explanation of the facts is unnatural and unreasonable. The fact of the resurrection is the only reasonable explanation; and it is the explanation given by the disciples themselves, whose character and conduct commend their testimony. The testimony and circumstantial evidence combined make such a demonstration as no man can doubt, except on the basis of a priori prejudice against the event in question. To argue the evidence is to admit the fact. To reject the fact is in effect to say that no amount of evidence can establish such an event, which is really to say, "I would not believe it if I saw it with my own eyes." Reason cuts its own throat when it refuses to consider reasonably the evidence for the resurrection of Jesus from the dead.

How pitiful and paltry seem all the efforts of skepticism to satisfy the facts in the case and leave the miracle out! As Dr. Bruce says: "All naturalistic attempts to explain away the resurrection up to this date have turned out failures. The physical resurrection remains." (Quoted by Dr. Alexander in "Son of Man.")

AN INTERESTING REVIVAL.

Twenty-five years ago intercollegiate oratorical contests were great events. The annual State or regional oratorical contest was the outstanding event of the year in many colleges in the closing years of the nineteenth century. But to the students of this generation such contests, with their accompanying enthusiasm and college spirit, would seem marvelously strange.

To the Nashville Banner, an enterprising newspaper of Nashville, Tenn., is due the credit for what seems to be a successful effort to revive these intercollegiate oratorical contests which were a quarter of a century ago so popular and so useful a part of student activities. The terms of the contest were announced in March. Undergraduates in every four-year college and university of the South were eligible. The subject to be used by every contestant was "The Progress, Resources, and Needs of the South." An unanticipated response from the entire South came to the appeal made by the Banner, and when the entries were closed it was found that fifty colleges and universities in fifteen Southern States had selected representatives to compete in this South-wide contest.

On May 7 the semi-final contests were held at Memphis, Atlanta, Shreveport, and Emory, Va. At these semi-finals scores of young men and eight young women contested for the honor of representing their respective regions—each region being composed of four States—in the final contest which was held in Nashville, Tenn.

On the evening of May 21, in the large War Memorial Building at Nashville, the four successful contestants in the semi-finals competed for the Banner's four prizes aggregating $975. No one of the two thousand people who heard the speeches of those four young men would dare say that the day of oratory was over. In both content and delivery these orations measured up to the best of those of the nineties when oratory was in vogue on every college campus. The winner of first honors and the $500 prize was Mr. Gordon Fuller, of the University of Oklahoma. Mr. Wallace M. Alston, of Emory University, was a close second and received the $250 prize.

The Banner has announced that the second "Know the South" intercollegiate contest will be held in 1928. It is significant that two Southern Methodist institutions—Emory University and Emory and Henry College—had representatives in the final contest, in which there were four contestants. There is every reason to believe that there will be a much wider interest in the 1928 contest than there was in the one just closed. Let every Methodist college co-operate with the Nashville Banner in its commendable effort to develop a better trained leadership in the South.

MISSISSIPPI METHODIST ORPHANAGE TO ERECT A NEW BUILDING.

Dear Brother Carley: During the early part of this year Mr. O. L. Biedenharn, of Shreveport, La., in company with his brothers, tendered to the Methodist Orphanage, Jackson, Miss., the sum of $20,000 for the erection of a brick building on our farm for the occupancy of our boys, this building to be a memorial to their mother, formerly of Vicksburg, who was one of the most ardent supporters of this home during its early days.

At the annual meeting of our Board of Directors, held in the reading room of the Orphanage, Thursday, Mr. Biedenharn's offer was accepted, a vote of thanks tendered him for his generosity, and steps taken looking to a very early erection of this home. The following Building Committee was appointed: Rev. V. C. Curtis, of Starkville; Mr. J. H. Sherard, of Sherard; Mr. M. S. Enochs and Mr. W. M. Buie, of Jackson, and a request was made of Mr. Biedenharn for him or one of his brothers to accept a position on the Building Committee that their wishes might be carried out as far as possible.

While no date has been fixed for the first meeting of this committee it is understood that at no distant date they will be called together and work begun very soon thereafter on this structure. It is hoped to have the building ready for occupancy by winter.

I would like to say in conclusion that Mr. Biedenharn is one of the regular contributors to the support of our Home, his check having been received the first of each month for many years past.

Sincerely,
B. F. LEWIS, Supt.

DARK AND BLOODY GROUND.

By Dr. R. H. Bennett.

The dread of a bachelor's life is that some woman will slip up behind him and marry him befor he knows it. But take notice, bachelors, and let your hopes rise. There is an old law in France, to-wit: "Whosover attracts into the bond of matrimony any male subject of his majesty by means of powder, perfume, false teeth, false hairs, steel corset, hooped petticoats, high heels, or false hips, will be declared null and void if the accused is convicted."

This law, passed in 1770, is still on the statute books and could be appealed to by the present-day complainant. It seems to show that mere man in King Louis XV's time had some protection from the wiles of women. And the new civil code of 1804 left it in force under the section dealing with "Fraud in the Quality of Merchandise."

Now, I am hardly diagnostician enough to know just what happens to gentle woman when she is declared "null and void." But whatever may be the interesting result—for all things that have to do with the ladies are interesting—it is emphatically true that that sentence has been passed by the American people upon the arch humbug and chronic criminal of all time, the liquor traffic. It has been declared null and void. We are impressed with the fact that the friends of liquor are not entirely pleased with the sentence. That appears to be the drift of their remarks. Nor do they seem to break into the Halleluiah Chorus when the Volstead Act is mentioned. If they wish to change the Constitution and remove from it the Eighteenth Amendent, that is their right. No one would deny it to them. And there is a proper method by which to effect this end. But having been so overwhelmingly defeated by the ballot and knowing the impossibility of removing the law, they have bluntly resorted to nullification of the Constitution of the United States, and have defiantly resolved to flout and trample upon the law of the land.

This is a far more serious question than even the great question of prohibition of the liquor traffic. Call a witness on this point. Whom shall we call? Let the man occupying the highest judicial position in the world, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, testify. Ex-President and Chief Justice Taft has well expressed it. He was personally opposed to the Prohibition Amendment, but now that it is the law of the land the question, he says, is settled for all law-abiding citizens, and is one of loyalty to one's country and of obedience to its laws. And no question can be more serious. The future of our nation is involved in it. Democratic government is at the cross roads. Is our country to find its Waterloo in the Eighteenth Amendment? For if a people cannot enforce the laws that they enact, the end has come, and we are no longer a nation, but merely a horde, like Russia. And if a bitter and rebellious minority can set aside one article of the Constitution, they will thus destroy the validity of the entire Constitution. If our Republic falls, as most other republics have, it will be because patriotic citizens surrendered to such lawlessness. The great principles of free government won at such costs are at stake.

Why do we abhor lynching? Not only because the lyncher commits murder, irrespective of the guilt or innocence of the wretch slain, but because he murders the law, the courts, the Constitution, the Government, and says, "I am the State, I will do as I choose." And the man who violates the Eighteenth Amendment has fallen into the same sin. He says: "Away with your laws, overboard with the court, down with the Constitution, perish the State. I will do as I choose."

The definance of any law is an assault upon the whole fabric of constitutional government. The bed rock upon which our nation rests is that when a constitutional majority adopt a law in proper manner it is sacredly binding upon all. And when the proud and haughty declare that they "will have their liquor, Constitution or no Constitution," that is nullification, that is treason pure and simple—and a bid for the return to the jungle. And any man who espouses nullification, whether he be Governor or University President, is not a good citizen of the Republic. He wants all the blessings of society on the one hand, and all the freedom of the savage on the other. Let us be patriots and not traitors! For the man who violates the Eighteenth Amendment drowns his patriotism in his love of liquor and sells his country, not for thirty pieces of silver, or his birthright for even a mess of pottage, but often for a bottle of poison that may blind him for life or kill him in an hour.

Here is a man who breaks one law because he loves liquor. Here is another who breaks another law and murders because he loves money. Assign the aliquot of blame if you can.

And this law-breaker will do well to take warning. For by his unleashing of the dogs of lawlessness he brings all law into contempt. He cannot complain if a burglar robs his bank, or a fire devil burns his house or a fiend attacks his home. He himself is in their class, a lawbreaker and an enemy of his government. And a man who breaks one law will break another when it suits his tastes or stands in the way of his desires. If a man does not approve of the laws of the country in which he lives, he should be manly and honest enough to go to a country whose laws suit him. And our nation is already taking steps to assist such in their departure, in the bill now before Congress to deport alien born bootleggers.

Upon the floor of the last session of the United States Senate, Senator Borah said, "Obedience to law is the rock foundation on which our nation rests. To violate it is to strike at the life of the nation, to disregard it is to spell the end of order and representative government. Nullification is a monstrous thing. It is national self-abasement before the world. Nullification is the slinking, silent, cowardly sapping of the foundations of all order, all dignity, all government. It is the furtive, evasive betrayal of a nation. It poisons the very fountain source of national power, to-wit, respect for law and obedience to the expressed will of the majority. It is the spirit and motive of anarchy without either its courage or its faith. Bolshevism in Russia, Fascism in Italy, military dictatorship in Poland, promised dictatorship in other countries, increase of aribtrary power everywhere, and nullification openly preached in the United States—they are all whelps from the same kennel—they are barking at the same thing, Constitutional government."

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

I suppose I am a Democrat, as are most of the men and women in this Southland. It is because we are fairly well convinced that this party stands for the things social, political and civil that we want. But hear me, fellow-citizens, we have a great President. Hon. Calvin Coolidge is discharging the duties of his high office, and acquitting himself as befits his position in a way that calls for admiration, endorsement, and praise of every right-thinking man. Clear-headed, calm, dispassionate, his speech in New York at the Biltmore Hotel, a few days since, was a model of sound statesmanship and a note of encouragement and cheer amid the discordant howlings of jingoes and selfish partisans. This latter class with axes to grind want Uncle Sam to furnish the grindstone and do the turning. But we are not in the business of grinding axes, nor furnishing implements of war and oppression against other peoples. We have a pretty big job on hand just now in taking care of affairs at home, and as for me, I am perfectly willing for China and Mexico to work out their own salvation, even if they have to do it with fear and trembling.

A lot of this sensational stuff bruited abroad in the newspapers reminds me of what an argumentative friend of mine said when I counselled him to read the Bible. He exclaimed, "What do I care about what St. Paul said to the Philistines?" He was surely bringing the centuries together in his ignorance, and a lot of the things some would have us believe is just as bad, or somewhat worse. And so I am grateful to Almighty God for the blessings and privileges of American citizenship and that we have at the head of our great American commonwealth a statesman and a Christian gentleman. Read what he said in the aforementioned speech, and you will see and hear more good, sound political doctrine than anything that has come our way recently.

I do not like to be, or appear to be, narrow, bigoted and intolerant. But what is one to do when the most cherished interests of life and well-being are assailed, and the principles upon which one's best and highest welfare is grounded are counted for naught? The devil and some of his lieutenants take a delight apparently in deriding the churches of our land, and falsely perverting or misrepresenting the conduct and actions of our preachers and people.

It has come to pass in these latter days that a man has to be a right good Christian to be a good citizen, even. For the things our faith stands for and the things our laws and institutions stand for are so closely related that you can hardly think of the one without the other. Was it not Washington who ordered on nights of special danger when the enemy was near at hand, "Put only Americans on guard?" I want to be large-hearted, international and tolerant in my religion, and will be, if these rascals will let our churches and country alone and not push me in a corner.

An aged Scotch minister, about to marry for the fourth time, was explaining his reason to an elder. "You see, I am an old man now, and I cannot expect to be here very long. When the end comes, I wad like to have some one to close my eyes." The elder nodded and said, "Ah! weel, meenister, I have had twa wives, and baith of them opened mine!"—Exchange.

The Home Circle

"I DON'T CARE."

By Emma Carson Taylor.

"Be careful, dear," the Little White Grandmother said to Mary Lou, who was eating a little spread of bread and jelly, "Don't spill the jelly on the nice clean dress and spot it while it is yet so new."

"I don't care," said Mary Lou. "I won't spill it," and she shook her little head of golden curls laughingly.

"But Dearie, we want you to stay sweet and clean, and you know you would care if you ruined the dress."

"Oh, I did spill it," said Mary Lou as a big sploch of jelly slipped through her fingers and straight on the front of her dress, leaving an ugly purplish stain as she brushed it off.

"But I don't care, mother can clean it off I guess," and she ran gaily out the door.

The Little White Grandmother shook her head sadly. "Mary Lou doesn't understand," she mused. "But that is an ugly way to feel about things. We must see if we can't break Mary Lou's habit of saying 'I don't care.' We must teach her to care."

The door slammed noisily and Mary Lou came bounding through the rooms shouting as she ran, "Say, Mother, where's my hat? I want to go to town with Billy."

Mother Dear peeped out of the nursery, a warning finger on her lips. "S'sh Darling, not so loud. Baby Brother is just asleep. You'll waken him."

"I don't care, where's my hat? Billy's in a hurry."

Mother Dear found the hat, gave it to Mary Lou, and then—"Hurry Home, Little Girl. Mother likes for you to help her on Saturdays, and, too, there's the dime you earn when you help real good. You know how badly you want that?"

"Aw, I don't care," sang Mary Lou, and bounced out as noisily as she had entered.

Mother Dear looked sad, as she watched Mary Lou skipping so light-heartedly down the walk with Billy, the little next-door neighbor boy.

"What are we going to do with Mary Lou, Grannie?" asked Mother Dear perplexedly.

"Teach her to care," answered the Little White Grandmother. "She doesn't understand the trouble she causes by being so careless. We shield her too much. Why not make her suffer a wee bit for the things she says she doesn't care?"

Just then Baby Boy began crying so loudly, Mother Dear had to rush back to the nursery and she didn't answer Grannie.

Mary Lou didn't hurry home as quickly as she could have, and then she and Billy played so long outside that she didn't get to help Mother Dear that morning at all.

Baby Brother had just been put to sleep again after dinner when Billy called outside. Mary Lou as usual forgot about being quiet and rushed out to him, slamming the door as she went and calling loudly, "What you want, Billy?"

The noise awakened Baby Brother and so he cried. He wasn't well and was feeling badly anyway.

Mother Dear was tired, as she had worked hard all morning. She didn't feel like worrying with Baby Brother. She looked at Grandmother and smiled sadly. "I'll have to do something about Mary Lou. Little girls shouldn't be so thoughtless."

So when Mary Lou came bouncing back in to ask if she could go to the picture-show with Billy, Mother Dear said "No," and Mother Dear meant it.

"But why, Mother?" Mary Lou begged.

"Do you hear Little Brother crying?" Mother asked. "You waked him because you made so much noise, so you must put him to sleep again."

"Oh, I can put him to sleep right quick, then I can go. Billy will wait."

"No," said Mother Dear. "You don't get a dime to-day for helping Mother. You didn't help, you played. How can you go to the picture show, you have no money?"

"Aw, I don't care, Mother Dear, you'll give me the dime this time anyway, won't you? Please. I'll help real good next Saturday. Honest I will—Please!"

But Mother Dear only shook her head. "No, Mary Lou, I'll not give you the money. You go to Baby Brother, try to get him to quit crying."

Mary Lou's lower lip quivered. She knew Mother Dear really meant what she said. But oh, how she did want to go with Billy!

"I'm sorry, Billy, but Mary Lou can't go with you this afternoon," Mother Dear called to the little neighbor boy who was waiting.

Mary Lou went in to Baby Brother to try to put him to sleep. A big tear rolled down one cheek. Baby Brother was so cross it took a lot of rocking and talking and singing to get him to quit crying. She wished a long time before she got him back to sleep that she had been quieter and hadn't wakened him. And she couldn't keep from thinking about Billy downtown without her, and there was to be a parade, too, that afternoon, she was going to miss that.

Finally Baby Brother went to sleep. Mary Lou was very tired. Her arms ached, she had held Little Brother so long and he was such a fat baby.

"Mary Lou," Mother Dear called from the Sun Room, "come here."

In the Sun Room sat the Little White Grandmother and Mother Dear both sewing. Grandmother, with the mending in her lap, and Mother Dear was making a pretty new dress for Mary Lou.

"Yes, Mother Dear," answered Mary Lou as she appeared in the doorway.

"I don't like that ugly stain on your clean dress, Mary Lou. What is it and how did it get there?" asked Mother Dear looking up.

"It's jelly, I spilled it this morning," answered Mary Lou. "You can get it out, can't you?"

"It's not easy to get out, Dear. Mother's busy. You dropped it on the dress, I guess you'll have to try to get it off if you want it off. There's warm water in the kitchen."

Mary Lou couldn't understand. She looked at the big spot on her dress. It was ugly—but she was tired. Mother Dear hadn't smiled though, she had been so serious. Perhaps the Little White Grandmother would fix it. She often helped her out.

"Grannie," Mary Lou turned to her hopefully. "You'll fix it, won't you?" she begged. "I can't, Grannie."

But the Little White Grandmother only shook her head, making the little white curls dance. "Can't do it, Mary Lou. You know you really don't care. I can't help little girls who don't care."

Mary Lou bit her lower lip hard. She didn't want them to see her cry. Out in the kitchen with a soft rag and warm water she rubbed and rubbed on the ugly spot, but it just wouldn't come all the way out. True, it did look better but the dress was almost ruined. And oh, she did care horribly—she had liked that dress.

That night Mother Dear tucked into bed a rather tired, wistful looking Mary Lou.

"Mother Dear," she whispered, "stoop low, I want to tell you something. I'm sorry I didn't help you this morning, and that I wakened Baby Brother by being so noisy—and I'm sorry I spilled the jelly on my clean dress and spotted it. I don't want to be ugly any more, and I am going to try not to say 'I don't care' so much 'cause I do care, Mother Dear, I do! Tell Grannie I'm sorry, too."

Then Mother Dear kissed Mary Lou one great big kiss and hugged her tight. "Mother knows you do, Dear, and she's glad you told her. We'll all be happier now. Goodnight, Little Girl, happy dreams."—Texas Christian Advocate.

THE NEW TENANTS.

By M. Wilma Stubbs.

"I can't think which house it could be, can you, Dorinda Mae?" Babbs settled Dorinda Mae comfortably in the miniature perambulator that looked so much like little sister's. Then she set out for her chum's home.

Tulips blazed in the gardens of the pretty suburban homes. Out in the street the big sprinkler rumbled by. It was Saturday and Ardelle had asked Babbs to come over for an introduction to new tenants that had just moved into their neighborhood.

"I've gone over every one of the houses," Babbs confided to Dorinda Mae, "and there isn't one that isn't occupied by home folks, folks that own their homes and wouldn't move away. Still, somebody must—else how could there be new tenants?"

Once more Babbs went through the list. But the result was as before. And now she had reached the rock wall that shut away the orchard of Ardelle's home from the street. Beyond the wall stretched inviting green depths, crowded with trees just bursting into bloom. Many were the summer afternoons Babbs and Ardelle had spent there with their dolls and their games and books.

Ardelle was waiting at the gate.

"Oh, I'm so glad you've come. They're just as interesting—"

"The new tenants?"

"Yes. I've been watching them all the morning."

"Why, Ardelle, how impolite! But I s'pose you didn't let them know you were watching."

"No, indeed. That wouldn't do at all. But I have seen a lot for all that." This last in a whisper. "Now don't speak or move. See, over there."

"Why, what—" A soft hand over Babbs' mouth put an end to further words.

But if Babbs couldn't talk, she could see—and hear. What she saw was a partly built nest. It was fastened to a forked bough of the big McIntosh red and was the prettiest, neatest affair you ever saw. What she heard was the joyous return song of Daddy—. But that would be telling the new tenants' name.

"Oh, Ardelle, who are they?" Babbs whispered, as a bird in olive-green and dull yellow, with dusky, white-banded wings, flew to the nest and began weaving into the basket-like affair a fresh grassblade from the spring carpet covering the orchard. By and by there would be just the sweetest, softest cradle of new-mown hay.

"Who are they? Cousins of the blackbirds and grackles."

"Oh, you must be mistaken."

Just then the songster arrived and took his turn at the weaving. He, too, was olive-green and dull yellow, but with a black tie at the throat.

"No, I'm not. They are orchard orioles and this is their first year at home-making. Daddy Oriole's dress shows that. Grown-ups are chestnut and black."

"Won't we have good times watching them!" breathed Babbs.

"And listening to them," Ardelle answered, as Daddy Oriole's song, sweet, ringing, clear, filled the orchard.—Zion's Herald.

"TIME OUT."

"Eat up your rice pudding, dear." "No, mummy, I don't like rice puddding." "Well, dear, just pretend you like it." "No, mummy, I'll pretend I'm eating it."—The Progressive Grocer.

"Say, Bill," begged a friend, "I'd like to know why you married that Cooper widow?"

"Well," said the newly-wed frankly, "I had a car and she had a filling station."—Good Hardware.

Little Elsie was inconsolable when her pet monkey died. Next day at school she declined a playmate's invitation to a party.

"Why can't you go, Elsie?" asked the teacher.

A little fist dug into a tear-stained eye as she sobbed: "'Cause you d-don't go to p-parties when s-s-some one of your folks is dead."—Selected.

MILLSAPS COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The commencement of Millsaps College this year was a delightful occasion in every way. The editor of the Advocate was unable to attend all the exercises, being present only at the alumni banquet Monday night and the graduating exercises Tuesday morning, but he heard many good things of all the features of the occasion. Especially did he hear good reports of the commencement sermon on Sunday, preached by Dr. J. B. Mitchell, pastor of Rayne Memorial Methodist Church, New Orleans, an alumnus of Millsaps, who was pressed into service when Dr. Charles L. Goodel, of New York, found it impossible to be present.

The alumni banquet was largely attended, a delicious meal was served, and a fine spirit prevailed. Mr. George B. Power, the president, was an ideal toastmaster. It was noted with interest that one of his daughters was graduated from Millsaps last year, and another was a member of the graduating class this year. The announcement that Dr. D. M. Key had been re-elected president of Millsaps College for a term of five years brought forth prolonged applause, a token of the confidence the alumni have in the leadership of this able, scholarly, devout educator.

The college auditorium was unable to contain all those who came to the graduating exercises on Tuesday morning. The program was all that could be desired. Bishop Warren A. Candler delivered the commencement address. Those who have heard Bishop Candler on similar occasions do not need to be told that his message was eminently appropriate. We have had the pleasure of hearing him many times, but we doubt if he ever gave a greater address than he gave on this occasion. The distinguished Bishop is easily one of the greatest men Methodism has produced.

A class of sixty-one received diplomas. It was a fine class. Their record throughout their college course is proof that Millsaps College this year made a contribution to the citizenship of the State that will tell for good in many ways in years to come. The pouring each year into the sea of life of a great stream of cultured, trained, consecrated young people is a sure promise that the world will grow richer and better all the time. Some of these graduates may not measure up to their privileges and responsibilities—but we believe most of them will. The class will not soon forget President Key's affectionate words of farewell.

In honoring Professor G. W. Huddleston with the degree of Doctor of Literature and Rev. C. A. Bowen with the degree of Doctor of Divinity, the college honored itself. Dr. Huddleston has been a teacher for fifty years, and the work of those fifty years has been a constructive force in the upbuilding of the moral life of a great State. Dr. Bowen, son of the late Rev. J. A. Bowen, as teacher, preacher, and writer, has won a high place among those who are leaders in the field of religious education.

Dr. A. F. Watkins, president of the Board of Trustees of the college, made announcement for the Board, indicating that great forward steps are to be taken by the college in the near future.

Mississippi Methodism has one of its greatest assets in Millasps College. The institution deserves the loyal support of its constituency.

ANNUITY BONDS

SAFETY is the first requisite of an investment with a view to regular income.

ANNUITY BONDS have advantage over other investments in that they provide an income that cannot shrink.

YOU may in your lifetime without loss of income or any risk pay over to the Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the amount that you had intended leaving in your will to be used in sending the Gospel "to every creature."

YOU may avoid taxes, various fees or any litigation in connection with your benevolent gifts which sometimes greatly reduce one's bequest. Annuity Bonds enable one to be the executor of his own will.

ALL THIS—and at the same time you enjoy during your lifetime an income that cannot shrink—an income that stands between you and want.

The Missionary Society at Lauderdale, Miss., recently gave to the parsonage two porch rockers and a good refrigerator, which will add to the comfort of the parsonage home.

The greatest revival in the history of the Pineville Methodist Church, Pineville, La., came to a close recently with the addition of a large number of members to the church. The preaching was done by Rev. Claude K. Smith, the pastor.

Rev. Roy H. Kleiser, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, now pastor of the Park Methodist Church, Lexington, Ky., preached the commencement sermon for the University of Kentucky on last Sunday.

Dr. F. N. Parker, dean of the Candler School of Theology, Emory University, passed through New Orleans on Saturday of last week en route to Brookhaven, Miss., to preach the commencement sermon for Whitworth College. He honored the Advocate office with a call while in the city.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation from Mr. Inman Ueber Townsley, San Bernardino, Calif., to attend the graduating exercises of the high school on Thursday evening, June 2. Mr. Townsley is a son of Rev. and Mrs. A. Inman Townsley, formerly of New Orleans.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation from Mr. Robert Paine Neblett, Jr., to attend the graduating exercises of the Kosciusko High School, on Friday evening, May 27. Mr. Neblett is a son of Rev. and Mrs. R. P. Neblett, of the North Mississippi Conference.

Dr. James M. Doran, the new National Prohibition Commissioner appointed by President Coolidge, is a product of a Methodist parsonage, his father, Dr. Frank Doran, having been a member of the Minnesota Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, for fifty years.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation from Miss Nellie Mae McCormack, Franklin, La., to attend the graduating exercises of the Franklin High School on Thursday evening, June 2. Miss Nellie Mae is a daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. McCormack, Brother McCormack being our pastor at Franklin.

Rev. A. M. Martin, of St. Martinville, La., writes: "My address is now Lafayette, La., general delivery. We moved from St. Martinville on account of the flood situation. All of St. Martin Parish will be inundated. The fifty miles along Bayou Teche where our work extends, will be covered by water."

Rev. F. B. Hill, our pastor at Merryville, La., preached the commencement sermon for the Merryville High School this year. The graduating class had seventeen members. The parsonage at Merryville is being remodeled, and the outlook for the charge is bright. Brother Hill takes an active interest in all matters of public interest, having done his part in flood relief work.

Rev. C. C. Wier, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, writes: "Brother J. A. Knight, Melville, and Brother P. S. Carpenter, Lottie, are entirely in the flood area. Brother C. B. White has two churches of the five on the Evergreen work that did not go under. Brother Thomason, of Boyce, will suffer indirectly, as Boyce was saved, but some of the section suffered."

The vested choir of the First Methodist Church, this city, gave a sacred concert at the Second Methodist Church on Wednesday evening of this week. The work at Second Church goes forward under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. A. M. Serex. The prayer meeting attendance has been above the hundred mark for several weeks.

The George Tucker evangelistic party recently closed a successful county-wide tent meeting at Calhoun City, Miss., with some eighty additions to the membership of the churches and thirty-three family altars etstablished. The party has an open date in September, due to the cancellation of a meeting in the overflowed section of Arkansas. Brother Tucker's address is 2014 Nelson Avenue, Memphis.

The many friends of Brother J. B. Holland, Meridian, Miss., will learn with sorrow of the death of his wife, Mrs. Mabel Ethel Holland, who passed away a few days ago. The Advocate joins his other friends in sincere sympathy in this dark hour. Brother Holland was for some years secretary of the Y. M. C. A. in Meridian and is now Chancery Clerk. He has been superintendent of the Fifth Street Sunday school for more than twenty-five years.

Dr. R. H. Harper, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, preached the commencement sermon of the Louisiana Polytechnic Institute, Ruston, La., on last Sunday. He also delivered the commencement address for the schools at Monroe on the Friday night preceding, and took part in the program at the laying of the foundation of the M. E. Dodd College for Girls at Shreveport on Saturday.

Rev. Paul H. Grice is back home at Collins, Miss., after more than three weeks spent at the Methodist Hospital, Memphis, where he had a double operation that he feels was succcessful. Brother Grice hopes to be able to resume his pastoral duties in about ten days or two weeks. He speaks very highly of the Hospital and the splendid service the patients receive. Brother Grice says that he is serving a very appreciative congregation at Collins, who are standing by him in every way.

TO THE PREACHERS OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Our pastors in the flooded section of our Conference are in distress and need your help. The Methodist people who have been liberal supporters of the church, are financially prostrate, and are unable to pay the salaries of their pastors. Help must come from outside the flooded area, or the pastors must seek other means of support for their families. The latter we ought not to consider. To desert the people in their helplessness and distress would be nothing short of a tragedy.

If each pastor in the Mississippi Conference will present this matter of relief to his congregation on June 5, the result will, no doubt, help to relieve this distressful situation. I appeal to you to come to the relief of your brethren. The Northern Methodist Church is asking for one hundred thousand dollars to take care of the work in the flooded area of the South.

I shall await, with some anxiety, your response to this appeal for help. May God bless you.

Sincerely your brother,

J. T. LEGGETT,
Presiding Elder,
Vicksburg District.

AS BAPTISTS SEE IT.

At the last annual meeting of the Educational Board of the Southern Baptist Church, a committee composed of five educators of that church was appointed to prepare a "Message to Southern Baptists." This message on the present and future educational program of that great church has been prepared and published. Since the Southern Baptists and Southern Methodists have many educational problems in common, some of the conclusions reached by this committee of Baptist educators should be of vital interest to Methodists who are concerned about our own educational program. They are given herewith:

1. The only field still open for Christian education is the college. Primary and secondary church schools should, therefore, be gradually given up.

2. The denominational colleges cannot compete with those of the State on a financial basis. In order to live they must, therefore, offer a better education than the State can give—better in the essential qualities of an education.

3. As a rule vocational and technical training should be left to the State. The Christian college should specialize and gain mastery in the field of training spiritual leaders and teachers—here it has no rival.

4. In several States the church has more colleges than it can adequately support. What to do with its surplus colleges is one of its greatest problems. Larger liberality or fewer colleges must soon become the church's policy.

5. The church is not giving to the cause of education its proportionate share of funds raised for all purposes. The development of young men and women of the South's Christianity and culture is a most important service to the world.

6. The church needs a South-wide graduate school for the training of teachers and others in post-graduate work.

7. The junior college is too new to determine just what its rise will mean in the educational field. It is important to realize that unless the college work done by junior colleges is real college work, all standards of education will be weakened and cheapened. Academies that can no longer live as secondary schools cannot become junior colleges with only minor changes in faculty and equipment. The church should be chary of attempting to make junior colleges out of our academies. A better plan would be for the non-standard four-year colleges to be transformed into junior colleges.

8. Church colleges must endow or die. In order to live these colleges must have more and more certain income.

9. Church colleges must be genuinely and actively Christian in spirit, control, faculty, curriculum, and objectives, otherwise there is no reason for their existence and can be no permanent place for their work.

A similar committee of Methodists would doubtless reach about the same conclusions as to the educational program of our own church.

RESTRICTION UNIVERSAL.

By Rev. A. H. Williams.

The United States President takes the rigidly binding "oath of office." Good men, eminently prepared, fill that responsible place, which fact indicates the intelligence and wisdom of the American people.. Many kinds of "public servants" are selected—in all instances they are hedged about with rstrictions which may not be disregarded. The Divine Master himself said, "I came to do the will of him that sent me."

The teaching people are a great fraternity, profoundly respected and generally trusted. The thinking public, however, and parents of the young people do not need, as a consequence, to be sleeping upon the educational interests of the country.

Physicians of skill are tremendously appreciated, and possess, eminently, the confidence of civilized people; and yet it must remain true that no enlighted parent could count it a virtue to be absolutely indifferent to the type of medical treatment administered to a member of the family.

The specialist is supposed to know. The parent and the nurse, however, for best results, would be fully alive to the situation, and the patient, of course, could not be indifferent. In fact, the physician can only succeed, in finest form, with these properly concerned.

The pew does not create sermons, nor specialize in theological studies, though the people of the congregation readily know if the pulpit preparations are defective, and if the church life is less than normal, and very quickly would the entire audience rise up and condemn a discourse filled with hurtful teachings.

The public school is a creature of the State, and the church school originates from the church, and each alike would materialily be subject to regulations for largest good to the pupils and patronage, and the interests of the State and of the church would of course have consideration. Intellectual poison is dangerous, just the same as bad medicines for the physical needs.

The things put into the school must, in time, take effect, and appear in the character of the people, and also of the nation. As every one knows, knowledge possesses power, and some have said, "knowledge is power." "We pray for power, on occasions," said Bishop Hoss, "when, in fact, defective knowledge is the supreme distress."

The kind of knowledge, however, is important for consideration. The wrong kind could easily inspire and qualify for destruction; the proper kind could equip for finest efficiency in honoring and useful service, and prepare finally for the royal splendors of a never ending heaven.

When Mr. Darwin's "missing links" have been discovered—and the gentleman who swings by his "caudal appendage" from the limbs of the African forest, has reported on the "distance of the stars," and developed competency for the American presidency, and the capacity for the ordinary business pursuits of civilized life, then we may pause to consider briefly his claims as a "Son of God," and ancestor to the human race.

In the meantime, let him flourish in the "kind" to which he belongs, and in which he shall probably linger, until the story of redemption is spoken around the globe, and until the "sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty" shall have sung "the songs of Zion" in the languages of humankind, and even until it shall be said, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

GALA DAY AT WINNFIELD, LA.

Saturday, May 14, was a gala day for the ladies' Bible class of the Methodist Sunday school; though losers in the contest with the ladies of Arcadia, they feel they were winners in having the pleasure of entertaining such a band of Christian workers.

On the arrival of the visitors, they were greeted by the teacher of the class, Mrs. J. W. Teddlie, registered, and welcomed by the receiving committee. During the social hour, a musical program was rendered by Mrs. Alewine, which was enjoyed and appreciated.

At 12:30 o'clock all were invited to the basement of the church, which was artistically decorated with ferns and lovely cut flowers, where the banquet tables laid for 100 guests were beautiful with low floral bowls. Before being seated at the tables, Mrs. J. R. Watts gave thanks. The plate favors were "poppies," causing quite a great deal of amusement. Mrs. A. E. Scott at piano, accompanied by Miss Beville, violinist, gave several appropriate selections between toasts, given in the following order:

Welcome, Mrs. J. W. Teddlie.

Response, Mrs. Couger.

"To the Winners," Mrs. Shirley Jackson.

"How We Won," Mrs. Hine and others.

"To the Teachers," Mrs. Mike Bozeman.

"Why We Won," Mrs. McConathy.

"To the Pupils," Mrs. J. R. Hall.

"To Our Absent Husbands," Mrs. A. L. McDonald.

The pageant representing the Sunday school teachers since the sixteenth century was given during the ice course, followed by a reading by Miss Daisy Glenn Ewing, accompanied by Miss Alice Stewart Oglesby, piano, and Miss Maurine Davis, violin. Mrs. P. M. Caraway was toastmistress.

The entertainment of the day closed with a Bible contest, won by the visiting ladies, who were presented with a miniature Bible.

MRS. J. T. WOOD.

A SILENT ASSISTANT PASTOR.

How many a weary pastor, at the close of a long and hard day's work seeing so much of his work undone, has wished in his heart for an assistant.

I am pleased to be able to state that every pastor can have an assistant, however poor or weak his church may be, and that without extra burden to his church.

Assistant pastors usually are young, callow, and without experience. This assistant that I have in mind is experienced, trained, and fitted to the work.

Assistants often are ill-balanced and lack in judgment and tact. This one is level-headed, prudent, careful, and reliable.

Assistant pastors often are forgetful and absent-minded and overlook important engagements. This assistant can be relied upon not to forget a point or miss an engagement.

The average assistant can be in but one place at a time. This one that I think of can be in many, as many indeed as are arranged for.

In the deep experience of life the assistant pastor is often superficial and helpless. This one touches all sides of life and sounds all its depths with a trained and practical hand, using the wisdom of many wise ones.

The assistant pastor in a large church very often cannot reach the homes where he is needed. This one, however, can easily reach them all, however many there are, once a week.

The assistant in a visit or call can discuss but a few subjects, and these but briefly. My assistant takes time and space to consider thoroughly all phases of the Christian life and work.

And this assistant will frequently supplement the pastor's sermons and prayer meeting talks, and thus emphasize all these means of grace.

The assistant pastor usually calls in the homes of the church when but a few of the family are at home. This one meets and converses with all of the members of the household.

This assistant will prepare the people for the pastor's preaching by making them more intelligent and hungry to hear the Word.

This active assistant will tell the people so much about the things of the kingdom that they will become eager for its prosperity and become helpers of the pastor.

And this eager assistant pastor will so instruct and inform the people in regard to every department of the church's activities that it will be a simple task to round up the benevolent collections.

This assistant will so educate the people in regard to the claims of the gospel that the church receipts will silently grow with this increasing light.

Our assistant will add to the intelligence and strengthen the hands of all the willing workers in the Sunday schools, the Epworth League, the Ladies' Aid, and all of the missionary societies.

With the spread of knowledge the fraternal bond will grow, and harmony will increase in the church.

And, finally, I may safely say that this faithful assistant will so instruct and care for the children and youth that they will naturally and easily be led into the membership and work of the church.

I find that I have not thus far named this valuable assistant pastor, who will do so much to help the pastor, and build up the church. And now I have no hesitancy in doing so. It is the Advocate. I am sure that it will do all and more than I have indicated. If you don't believe it, pastor, just place it in every home in your church and note the results that follow.—California Christian Advocate.

DRY LAW GETS LAVISH BOOST.

Prof. Irving Fisher, of Yale University, told the American Economic Association in convention in St. Louis, Dec. 28, that although he had made a thorough canvass of the members he was unable to get any speaker who would attack prohibition on purely economic grounds.

Professor Fisher, a dry advocate, who conducted a round table on prohibition, added, however, that there are many economists who oppose prohibition on other than economic grounds.

One of those who spoke in favor of prohibition was Henry M. Leland, of Detroit, eighty-three-year-old founder of the Cadillac Motor Car Company.

"My very decided views on the dry law," Leland said, "are based on my experience in operating large plants employing from 1,000 to 6,000. I am convinced that the open saloon, the brewery, and the distillery are far and away the most wasteful, the most destructive forces in our country.

"I am also convinced that the Eighteenth Amendment has already been a great blessing to the United States, that it is largely responsible for and should be credited with many of the elements of present prosperity."—Exchange.

PRAYER.

"If ye ask * * * I will do" (John 14:14).

As We Pray God Works.

God, the eternal God of the universe, stands, as it were, like an almighty servant and says: "If you, my child, will only pray I will work; if you will only be busy with asking I will see to the doing." Not only does he bestow at our cry, but he acts. Not only does our praying evoke his bounty, it sets in motion his omnipotence. Wherefore, as we enter into the secret chamber of prayer, nothing will so stir us to mighty intercession, nothing will so soon make us master-pleaders with God for a lost world, as to whisper to our own soul, again and again, this wonderful truth, "While I am praying God is really doing that which I am asking!"

Thus to a child of God bowed in prayer that the gospel may be sent to the dark lands, though he may not see it, yet as he prays God baffles the powers of darkness; as he prays God moves the hearts of kings; as he prays God breaks down the barriers to evangelization; as he prays God loosens the bands of superstition; as he prays God opens up the pathways to forbidden lands; as he prays God unclasps the purses of his children; as he prays God raises up and thrusts forth the gospel messengers to the whitened harvests. As he is praying God is doing. This is explicitly asserted. "Search my word," says our Lord. Find out clearly in it what my will is concerning the world. Pray according to that will. Then as you pray "Lord thrust forth laborers into the harvest," I thrust them forth! As you pray "Lord break down the obtacles," I break them down! As you pray "Lord stir men's hearts to give," I stir them! Whatsoever ye ask in my name, I do." Beloved, what a tremendous responsibility is ours! What a unique privilege! That all the power of an omnipotent God is ready and waiting to be put into triumphant, irresistible action at the prayer of one of his children! That the very hosts of heaven are marshaled against the powers of darkness at that importunate call of yours which is according to the will of God!

If it be true, then, that God's omnipotence is placed at our disposal, we are as responsible for its exercise through prayer as though we possessed it ourselves.

Behold here the shame of an unevangelized world, of two thousand years delay, of our cowardice and faltering in the presence of difficulties. For though we have had no power to do, yet the mighty God, linking himself with us as a real yoke-fellow and co-worker, has said,

If ye ask—I will do.

—James J. McConkey.

ZONE MEETING AT SIBLEY, LA.

A meeting of zone 2, Minden District, was held in Sibley, April 1, 1927, Mrs. L. Perryman, zone leader, in the chair.

Mrs. Boyett, of Sibley, gave the devotional reading, a portion of the second chapter of Mark, making beautiful comments on same.

Mrs. Perritt, in a few well chosen words, welcomed the meeting to Sibley.

Mrs. Gallion, of Ringgold, then gave "Echoes from the Council." She said the Woman's Missionary Society started with fifty-four members; today they have 300,000. She told us of the Jubilee and the five objectives of same. The outstanding work of the past three years was the Belle Bennett Memorial; during that time the women of Southern Methodism raised over $600,000 for the memorial. Dr. McAfee, of New York, said the world must learn the proper use of charity, the proper use of religion. Dr. Jesse Jones said the eyes of the world were on the South, depending on the South to solve the race problem.

Mrs. Gallion then told of three missionaries, Miss Virginia Atkinson, of China; Miss Worth, of Japan, and Miss Meyers, of Korea. Miss Atkinson has been in China forty-three years. Time and space forbid my giving you any more of Mrs. Gallion's talk, but it certainly made you feel as if you had attended Council.

A discussion on social service was led by Mrs. Woodard, of Ringgold; others taking part were: Brother McCain, pastor of Minden church, and Brother Dodson, the presiding elder of Minden District. "In My Neighbor's Garden," a piano solo, was given by Mrs. Hodges, after which we were dismissed for lunch.

After lunch we re-assembled, and Mrs. Blake, president of Minden Auxiliary, gave an account of the Mansfield Conference. She told of Julia Reed and Ora Hooper, our own Louisiana girls, and said she would never again feel sorry for a missionary, because these girls semed so happy.

"Our Opportunity in Missions" was the subject of Mrs. Woodard's talk. She said our missionary outlook is brighter than it has ever been before. She also called our attention to the fact that we can do missionary work right at home among the colored people.

Mrs. J. R. Miller, of Minden, then gave "Echoes of the Council" as she heard and saw it. She, too, told of Julia Reed, and brought the following to be used as our motto: "Do what you can, with what you have, where you are to-day." After another beautiful piano selection by Mrs. Hodges, the meeting was dismissed by Brother Sheppard.

ZONE MEETING AT CRYSTAL SPRINGS, MISS.

The auxiliaries of the Northern Zone of the Brookhaven District held their second quarterly meeting at Crystal Springs, Miss., May 26. A short missionary talk was given by Rev. J. G. Galloway. The visitors were welcomed by Mrs. W. D. Ross, president of the entertaining auxiliary. Mrs. C. H. Trawick, of Gallman, made the response. A piano selection, "Heart's Message," was rendered by Miss Lillian Folkes.

Mrs. Frank Decelle, who has resigned as zone leader in order to take up the work as district secretary, gave a brief resume of the work and emphasized the duty of the strong auxiliaries, which is to look after and aid the weaker organizations. She then turned the leadership over to Mrs. J. E. J. Ferguson, of Gallman.

A count of the representatives from the different auxiliaries was made, which follows: Crystal Springs, 35; Hazlehurst, 18; Hazlehurst, Y. W., 8; Hazlehurst Y. P., 1; Georgetown, 4; Pleasant Valley, 6; Gallman, 12; Centerpoint, 4; Barlow, 5; Mt. Pleasant, 1.

"Why Have Zone Meetings?" was ably discussed by Mrs. J. L. Miller, of Hazlehurst.

A round table discussion of "What the Meetings Have Meant to Me" followed. A representative from each auxiliary responded.

"How the Missionary Society Can Help the Pastor in a Benevolent and Spiritual Way," was the next subject for discussion. The pastor's greatest need is time. The society can meet this need with prayer, presence and purse. It can furnish information and help in an educational way with its mission study classes.

Vocal solo by Mrs. Frank Carney.

Mrs. W. L. Powell, of Gallman, talked of "Giving." She reminded the

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

Mother! It's Cruel to "Physic" Your Child

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even if the child is chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens or upsets the most delicate system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Dr. A. B. Davidson, who has the chair of Religious Education in Woman's College, Montgomery, Ala., will teach "The Life of Christ" as recorded by St. Mark, in place of Dr. A. E. Barnett, at Grenada, June 6-11. Dr. Barnett regrets he cannot be with us, but we are fortunate in securing the services of Dr. Davidson to teach this important course in Bible.

Rev. R. A. Tucker has been ordered by his physician to go to Hot Springs for treatment for several weeks. We shall miss Brother Tucker and his wife at training school. Rev. R. G. Moore, vice chairman of the Board of Missions, will look after the duties of Brother Tucker in his absence. The course, "Rural Church and Sunday School Management," will mean much to the preachers of the Conference, especially the men who are dealing with the most talked-of problem we have, namely, the country church.

The Sardis District Standard Training School has enrolled, auditors and those taking credit work, one hundred. Thirteen preachers are in attendance, sixteen churches are represented in the school. A profound and lasting impression has been made upon those taking work for credit. Brother Bradley has done a fine piece of work in securing such a large enrollment. He has seen enough of the training work to know its value. Criticisms from those who have taken not less than four courses are much appreciated by those of us who are responsible for the results in building God's kingdom. So far, the Sardis District School has the largest enrollment of any we have held this year. School commencements were in full blast at Sardis, Batesville, and Como, or else the attendance would have been beyond the hundred mark. We are hoping Kosciusko will surpass Sardis in the good work.

Attention, men, please send your Sunday School Day money to Rev. H. P. Lewis, Ruleville, Miss. You know we must have this fund to carry on our training schools and training classes to be held on the circuits during June and July. Brother Mohler has lined up about twenty classes. We hope to issue 500 Cokesbury credits during the year. Help us reach the people with our training work. We are making progress, but we can do more if we have a larger number of men cooperating with us. Let us pull together on this proposition.

A VOICE FROM THE FIELDS.

"The Workers' Council is absolutely necessary to make a Sunday school go. I would not attempt to maintain a Sunday school without my Workers' Council."—Rev. W. C. Newman.

"Before we adopted the Dual Mission Special in our school, we were always at least one quarter behind in our finances; since we began to observe Missionary Sunday we have been a quarter ahead in our finances—that is the difference. It works, it gives new interest and life and variety. We heartily recommend the adoption of the Dual Special in our schools."—Mr. O. E. Mattox, Superintendent Methodist Sunday School, Fulton, Miss.

"We voted last Sunday to pay the expenses of any of our Sunday school teachers who would attend the Conference Training School, Grenada, June 6-11."—Hon. J. L. Carleton, New Albany, Miss.

Columbus, New Albany and Potts Camp have recently joined the list of the worthies now observing Missionary Sunday, giving missionary instruction and remitting the fourth Sunday offering to Rev. H. P. Lewis, participating in the support of the Conference Sunday School Board's missionary program. Line up, brethren, and have a part in this work. It will increase and stimulate interest in your local school and make it possible for us to carry on in Europe and to give vital assistance to the rural sections of our great Conference. In so doing you are helping to make possible Cokesbury schools, institutes, etc., in the remote parts of your Conference. We have scheduled, so far, thirty Cokesbury schools for the summer months in addition to the many institutes ahead. The Leadership Training program is vital. We must develop a trained leadership or go out of business. Altogether true.

We are spending this week with our good friends, Rev. Guy Dean Burt and wife, in Hickory Flat, conducting a Cokesbury school. Twenty Sunday school workers have enrolled, and we will issue ten or more credits at the close of the session. Brother Burt was thoughtful and lenient in arranging Sunday's schedule for the writer. Here it is: Teach a Men's Bible class, 9 a. m.; preach, 11 a. m.; teach a training class, 2 p. m., and preach at 7:45 p. m. We got through some way and enjoyed the day. Our training school was well advertised and worked up by the pastor and wife. Interest and enthusiasm and faithful attendance have been maintained all through the week. The preacher and good wife have given us every aid and are busily engaged prosecuting an intelligent program in building wisely the kingdom of our Lord. We are all learning that the kingdom cannot be built in a haphazard way, but requires definite, systematic planning, prayer, hard work, and much study.

We had the pleasure of seeing our new churches at New Albany and Potts Camp. Great are Dorsey and Rogers and their good people! What a monument to their splendid leadership! We really envy them. The church at New Albany could hardly be finer. It is a dream, a beauty, a joy, a delight. The one at Potts Camp would do credit to a much larger town. It is great for God's people to "put first things first"—to venture, to build wisely. Hats off to Curtis, Raper, Dorsey, and Rogers—to the good, faithful people of Starkville, Kosciusko, New Albany, and Potts Camp. The writer does not know about other new churches, but he is told the saws and hammers are busy. Thank God we are making progress along all lines. Meet me, brethren, at Grenada, June 6-11, at one of the largest and best Training Schools yet.

E. G. MOHLER,
Extension Secretary.

A tabulation of the office records shows that your Conference Superintendent has traveled nearly twelve thousand miles since the Annual Conference meeting in November.

May 22 and 23 found us in the hills of North Louisiana, yet we were not running from the flood, as we have ridden through water up to the second step of the coaches, and passed over the ill-fated Atchafalaya bridge at Melville only a day before it went out.

On arrival at Minden Saturday afternoon late, we found that Rev. L. I. McCain, the pastor, had been called to Lafayette to assist at the funeral of one of the official members of the Methodist church there, whose former pastor Brother McCain was.

On Sunday morning we visited the Sunday school in Minden, with special visits to the two Bible classes, the ladies' meeting in the parsonage, and the men in the theatre. These are two of the outstanding Bible classes of North Louisiana, and the writer thoroughly enjoyed taking a peep at them. The pastor returned in time to deliver the 11 o'clock message, which he took from the book of Psalms.

Minden, noted for its scenic loveliness and beautiful hospitality, is always a delightful place to visit. The writer enjoyed spending the time in the charming home of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Stewart, Jr., and in the lovely old home of the Miller family.

We went to Haynesville in the afternoon of Sunday, reaching there in time to visit the Epworth League, and to preach at the 8 o'clock worship hour, at which time there was a large and appreciative conregation.

These visits had to do with matters pertaining to the approaching Training Schools, one to open at Haynesville on Sunday, the 29th instant, and the other to be held at Minden a week later. After the evening service the superintendent, Mr. Tom Camp, called a meeting of a fine crowd of those interested in Sunday school work.

I enjoyed in Haynesville the gracious hospitality of the parsonage, and a pleasant visit with the pastor's family, which includes a fine boy and a fine girl.

On Monday morning Brother Johnson and I went to Homer, where we had a visit with the pastor there, Brother Lee, in the new $6,000 parsonage, which he claims to be the finest in the State. So beautiful is the parsonage that the same builder has been engaged to duplicate it for the district parsonage at Ruston. The writer has not seen all the gardens of the preachers this year, but Brother Lee has the best garden we have seen, and has not in any way fallen down in his reputation for raising fine tomatoes.

We spent the morning working out the Standard Training School program, as Homer will join with Haynesville in the school beginning on the 29th. The noon hour was spent in the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McKinsey, who served us a delightful lunch.

Returning, we stopped at Ruston and had interesting conferences by telephone with the presiding elder, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, and Dr. W. W. Drake.

The last school to send in Sunday School Day offering is Ida. We understand that Homer plans to observe Sunday School Day on May 29.

* * *

The office is interested to receive a group picture of the splendid Bible class at Mangum Memorial. Brother Nelson, the teacher, tells us that the average attendance of the class is greater than the recorded membership, and this is due, they believe, to the slogan used by the class, "Every man bring his neighbor." There were 220 present in the class the day the picture was taken, with the assistance of three ladies to help put the program over. Brother Nelson tells us that the pastor at Mangum Memorial, Rev. R. M. Brown, has been the inspiration of this class, and that with his continued interest they expect to continue in growth.

* * *

We are glad to record that Mrs. Add Thompson, of Ruston, has been added to the Elementary Council as superintendent from the Ruston District. Mrs. W. W. Holmes, State Superintendent of Elementary Work, tells us that Mrs. Thompson's letter of acceptance of this additional task is one to "warm the heart," and we rejoice with Mrs. Holmes in having Mrs. Thompson on her staff.

* * *

Mrs. R. F. Harrell, of Many, La., was elected recently Superintendent of Elementary Work for the Lake Charles District. Mrs. Harrell is the wife of our pastor at Many and is a born leader.

* * *

The Minden Standard Training School will open Sunday night, June 5, at 7:15 o'clock. The date of the Natchitoches School is Sept. 18-23, and the Ruston, Sept. 25-30.

* * *

We noted the presence of so many children and young people last night at the special Thanksgiving service of 2,000 or more at the high school building in Alexandria. This was a united service of all the people of Alexandria and Pineville.

COKESBURY INSTRUCTORS.

With launching of the Cokesbury Training Course in the Louisiana Conference, there was opened an added opportunity for reaching and training for more efficient service in that large constituency of people responsible for Christian training in the small Sunday school.

To do this most effectively, we must have a large corps of approved instructors for the proper promotion of this work, that it might most effectively reach the smaller schools and render the service in training for which it was launched.

How may one become an approved instructor in the Cokesbury Training Course? One must have credit for the following courses in the Standard Training Course: "Sunday School Organization," "The Pupil," "Principles of Teaching," and "Rural Management." When this has been done, on recommendation, the Training Section at Nashville may approve or disapprove.

For the benefit of the large number of Sunday school workers in the Louisiana Conference who are interested in becoming approved instructors in the Cokesbury Training Course, the Conference Sunday School Board is sponsoring the Course on "Rural Management" in the Standard Training School at Rochelle, La., June 26-July 1.

The good people of Rochelle are planning to provide entertainment for those who wish to take this course. So we are especially anxious that there be a large number in attendance taking this course looking forward to becoming approved for teaching in Approved Cokesbury Schools.

The Rev. Clem Baker, Conference Superintendent of the Little Rock Conference, is to teach the course in "Rural Management." This is enough said—a great treat in itself. So plan to be there and take the course on "Rural Management," Rochelle, June 26-July 1. For reservation write Mrs. S. M. Able, Rochelle, La.

THE EXTENSION SECRETARY IN THE FRENCH FIELD.

One of the special features of the Sunday School Extension Work conducted by our Sunday School Board is its missionary phase. It seeks to reach into the missionary areas of our Conference and strengthen the Sunday schools already in operation.

The most profound experience that has come to the Sunday School Extension Secretary was encountered in our visit to our mission field of which Houma is the center.

Let me pay tribute just here to the great and splendid work being carried on by Miss Hooper and her corps of efficient workers. It is astounding, the marvelous results these patient, loving workers have brought about in the development of Christian character and consecrated workers through a teaching ministry.

On Monday afternoon, May 9, we began a Cokesbury One-Teacher School with fifteen enrolled. We met in one of the class rooms of the McDonald school, where for two hours we studied together. After supper with a member of the class, Miss Hooper and myself traveled by Fords twenty-eight miles to our church at Labadieville. Here a large crowd greeted us. In the service conducted we sang songs, prayed, and gave an illustrated lecture on Sunday school work.

Each day thereafter we taught for two hours in the afternoon, and visited each night the following places: Tuesday, Griffin; Wednesday, Bayou Blue; Thursday, Lockport; Friday, Point au Chene.

There were many things that happened in the course of these visits which one would be unable to find adequate words to relate them on paper, or to describe them in an understandable way. In every one of these meetings there were quite a few who could understand very little English. But there was the closest attention on the part of every one. Though they might not known what was being said—every word—yet they knew it had to do with the Sunday school work and we had come to visit them.

Whatever success these visits attained, much credit is due Miss Hooper for her valuable understanding of these people and her ingenuity in fixing up electric lighting for the Baloptican. Brother and Mrs. La Grange were a great help in carrying on this work. Mrs. La Grange went with us each time, rendering a real service in leading the songs and prayers and talks in French.

Twelve credits were given to those taking the Cokesbury Course.

MEETING OF SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS AT BARHAM, LA.

Sunday, May 15, was, indeed, a gala day for Barham and vicinity. As a culmination of a special effort made by Sunday school workers to increase attendance on the Sunday school session a splendid program for Sunday school workers was held in both morning and afternoon sessions. At the noon hour a sumptuous fare for those present was spread, with food enough and to spare.

The program began at 10 a. m. with Mr. R. W. Cronin, superintendent, presiding. The worship service was conducted in a quiet and reverential atmosphere, consisting of songs by choir and congregation. Scripture readings were given by Rev. J. D. Fomby, the pastor; Rev. A. K. McLellan, and R. W. Cronin. The invocation was given by Rev. A. K. McLellan, Extension Secretary, Louisiana Conference Sunday School Board.

One of the most striking features of the program was the beautiful singing given by visitors from the Frist Baptist Church of Lake Charles, La. Miss Alice Walker gave a most inspiring solo, after which Rev. A. K. McLellan spoke on "Missions and Sunday School Extension." Mrs. M. H. McGregor charmed her audience with a beautiful solo; Mrs. S. A. Carroll accompanied on the piano. The Rev. J. D. Fomby, preaching a very appropriate sermon, gave a splendid appeal for trained workers in the Sunday school and a greater vision on the part of all for service in the Sunday school.

At the noon hour the crowd was quickly and easily refreshed with barbecued meat and other edibles prepared for them.

The program for the afternoon session was no less attractive than that of the morning session. As a special number, Mrs. McGregor, accompanied by Mrs. S. A. Carroll, gave a most inspiring solo that completely captivated her hearers. At this point on the program quite a number were given opportunity to say a few words. Quite a few responded, expressing their appreciation of the "doings of the day," and, also, mentioning the splendid co-operation of all denominations working together in the Barham Sunday school. Rev. L. L. Lemon, pastor First Christian Church, Leesville, La., spoke very forcibly on the "Contests of Life." Mr. Cronin, in introducing Mr. Van Carter, Secretary Louisiana Council Religious Education, said: "The best always comes last." Mr. Carter spoke as only "Uncle Van" can speak on "Our Obligation to the Youth of Our Country for Religious Education."

Too much credit cannot be given Rev. J. D. Fomby, the pastor; Mr. R. W. Cronin, superintendent, and his faithful corps of teachers for this splendid program and the enthusiastic increased interest in Sunday school work. A very commendable feature was the orderliness of the crowd. Visitors from Lake Charles were: Mr. and Mrs. B. M. Talbot, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Talbot and children, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Carroll, Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Mcgregor, Miss Alice Walker.

A WORKER.

May 20, 1927.

RALEIGH, MISS.

Raleigh is just a little country town—
Nothing much to see;
But in the country you have lots of fun,
And it's good enough for me.

Way out in the country, most everybody's friendly,
And, oh so awful kind;
Even the first week or first few days,
You don't so much mind.

We came here for God;
We'll do our best,
And when we've done all we can,
God will do the rest.

IDA LOUISE ALFORD.
Aged 11 years.

My experience of life has taught me that if there were no pain it would be necessary to invent it.—James Douglas, editor of London Daily Express.

FROM GREENWOOD, LA.

Dear Mr. Editor: Just a few lines to let your readers know something of our work.

Brother A. K. McLellan taught a class here for us with an average attendance of fifteen. This was a great inspiration to our Sunday school workers, and I am sure that it will result in greater and better work. We were greatly pleased with Brother McLellan and his work.

We followed this with a fifteen days' meeting, with Brother A. M. Shaw, of Mooringsport, to lead us. We were delighted with him and his preaching, and I am sure that the meeting will long abide as a living force in the experience of my people. I received eleven persons into the church as part of the fruits of it, and others are pledged to come in soon. This makes an increase of 20 per cent since I came to the work, and more than that in the Sunday school here.

We thank God for his blessings, and press on.

Fraternally,

W. E. AKIN.

AN OLD SUBSCRIBER WRITES.

Dear Dr. Carley: I have been a reader of the Advocate since childhood, and now, if you can spare the space, I should like for you to print this short note.

My parents, Virginians, came to Mississippi by private conveyance in 1845. The family grew to a dozen, five boys and five girls, all grown before the first break in the family. We are three now—the oldest boy, the youngest boy, and myself.

I was greatly honored on my eighty-first birthday, which has just passed—May 5—when Mrs. S. R. Lee, a good neighbor, entertained her little grandson, Sidney Peacock, and me at a big dining. My cake was beautiful with its eighty-one candles, and Sidney's was just as pretty with its seven or eight candles.

But when the editor makes a mistake—good night! — Christian Register.

NOTES.

Books and Supplies.

Rev. L. F. Alford will have for sale at the Assembly all the books that are to be studied, as well as all books to be used in the various departments of the Epworth League; pencils and tablets. If you wish you may order the books from the Publishing House and begin your study now.

Registration Fee.

Every one registering at this Assembly for class work, or for whom room and board are provided, will be required to pay a registration fee of one dollar ($1). This is in addition to the regular charge for board and lodging provided for in next paragraph.

Accommodations.

The entire equipment of Whitworth College is turned over to the Epworth League Assembly for the session. A charge of $6 for session will be made for table board and room; for less than the session, $1.25 per day. However, delegates and visitors should bring the following with them: napkins, pillows and cases, sheets, towels and soap. These can easily be packed in your suitcase.

Chapter Record Books.

Each Chapter should be sure that the'r secretary's record book is sent to the Assembly, to be examined by the Committee on Records. Your Chapter cannot receive its proper standing until this book has been examined.

Certificates of Credit.

Certificates of Credit on the Christian Culture Diploma will be issued and every delegate over fifteen years of age will have the opportunity of getting two units at the Assembly; however, to obtain credit on the Christian Culture Course, a delegate must take the same classes all the way through. There can be no shifting from one class to another.

Chapter Certificates.

Each League will be awarded a Certificate according to the way they measure up to the "Standard of Efficiency," but please remember, you must have your Chapter record books

MRS. BASSETT ALWAYS TIRED

Now in Good Health by Using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lansing, Michigan.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound whenever I needed it. When I first used it I was so bad I could hardly walk across the room without crying. I was tired all the time. I think my trouble was coming on me for six months before I realized it. I read of your wonderful medicine in the paper, and * * * my husband bought me a bottle, and after the first few doses I felt better, so kept on taking it until I was well and strong. I take it at times when I feel tired and it helps me. I will always have a good word for your medicine and tell anyone what good it has done me. I recommended it to my neighbor for her girl, who is sixteen years old, and it was just what she needed. She is feeling fine now, and goes to school every day."—Mrs. E. F. Bassett, 216 South Hayford Avenue, Lansing, Michigan.

Do not continue to feel all run-down and half sick when Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is sold by druggists everywhere. It is a root and herb medicine and has been used by women for over fifty years.

at the Assembly in order to be eligible for this Certificate.

Who Should Attend.

The delegation is limited. Be sure to take this up with your District Secretary at once.

African Special.

Be sure that your pledge for the African Special is paid before the Assembly if possible; if not, be sure it reaches the Assembly before it adjourns.

Next Year's Pledge to the African Special.

Each Chapter should decide how much it wishes to pledge, and give the amount pledged to the representatives so that they can make the pledge when the time comes to make the pledge to the Assembly, and if your Chapter is not going to be represented, please write to your District Secretary, or the Secretary of the Assembly, giving the amount you are willing to pay for 1928. This is very important, do not overlook it.

Chaperonage.

The Assembly will be properly chaperoned with Mrs. W. D. Hawkins, chaperone in charge of the entire Assemly, and an assistant chaperone for each floor.

Exhibit Room.

Will have a room in which you can exhibit anything of special interest—picture, stunt, play or pageant, placard used to announce your meeting, picnic or hike or some helpful program rendered or a picture of some group.

Our Own Girls.

We are very happy to have two of our own girls on the faculty—Misses Rosa McNeill and Helen Sells, of Scarritt College. Some of us once taught them. Now it is our joy to learn of them. We are proud of them.

Plan to Stay the Entire Time.

Plan to remain through the entire Assembly, for this is the only way to get the best results.

Pray for the Assembly.

We covet the prayers of the church for the success of the Assembly, that God's will be worked out through our lives.

Bring a cot—and you will be entitled to another delegate.

In other words, for each cot you can have an extra delegate.

GULFPORT LEAGUE.

Distribution of the work of the League so that each member of the chapter will have an opportunity to participate in the program as often as possible has been set forth as one of the aims of the officers of the Gulfport Epworth League. A chart showing exactly what has been done by each Leaguer is being kept, and prospective leaders may select at a glance those who have not taken part in some time.

Officers for the coming year have been elected, and were formally installed Sunday night, May 10. The entire evening service hour was devoted to the installation, which was held in the main auditorium and witnessed by the evening congregation. Dana King, who had completed an unexpired term as president, was re-elected as head of the chapter, while Anderson Netterville, former treasurer, was selected vice president.

Excellent work has been done by the recreational branch of the third department in providing for tennis court for the Leaguers. Members of the chapter constructed the court during spare moments, and now since it is completed young people gather every afternoon to play.

Gulfport expects to be represented by several members at the Assembly to be held in Brookhaven. Notification has been received that due to the paucity of equipment chapters will be limited to one delegate unless additional representatives provide their own cots. The local chapter expects to take advantage of this provision, and four or five Leaguers have hopes of attending.

With an excellent president, a faithful cabinet, and a dependable group of Leaguers, the Gulfport chapter is looking forward to a banner year in League work.

RUTLEDGE.

INTERMEDIATE LEAGUE CAMP, AUG. 29-SEPT 3.

The Intermediate camp will be held at Camp Dantzler, about twelve miles from Hattiesburg, Miss. We are anxious that every Intermediate League in the Conference be represented. A splendid program has been arranged. Mr. B. Frank Pim, Intermediate Secretary, from Central Office, is to be with us. Each League is requested to send an exhibit, posters, booklets or any clever idea that the League can work up.

Now, Intermediate Leaguers, it is time for you to begin your plans for the Intermediate camp. Don't forget the date.

BERTA NALL.

Hot Weather Dries Out Your Kidneys, Liver and Bowels

Perspiration carries off body moisture and the liver and bowels become dry and constipated. Then—biliousness, headaches, sour stomach; the heat makes you drowsy and lazy, and your skin breaks out with pimples and boils.

Don't take calomel. That's wrong—calomel is mercury—a dangerous drug. It jars the liver and cleans the bowels, that's true. But the damage it does to them, ugh! It crashes into your system like a charge of dynamite and makes it numb. It stifles the muscles of the stomach and bowels, takes YOU a day to recuperate and no telling how long for your bowels.

All you need is Dodson's Liver Tone. Take a spoonful at night and you wake up feeling great. It doesn't upset you, but cleans you out good. You don't lose a day from your work and you can eat anything you want.

Get the big bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone from your nearest store. They all have it. Keep it in the house so you will have it handy to take nights before going to bed.

ANOTHER PASTOR TELLS OF THE OVERFLOW.

Dear Brother Carley: It seems that the pastors who are in the flooded districts are writing the facts about their charges. I decided to write you the conditions that exist on the Evergreen charge at present. My work consists of five churches, in Avoyelles and Pointe Coupee Parishes. Four of these churches are impossible to be reached. The Evergreen church is the only one I can get to. Althought the town is surrounded by water, many of our members are in critical conditions, having lost their crops, and their homes being damaged. Refugees are camping in and around Evergreen.

The Bay Hill church is marooned to itself. The entire membership is badly hurt. Many have moved to refugee camps or are visiting relatives. The conditions that exist here are critical.

Marksville is not flooded, but is surrounded by water. It is impossible for me to get there at present. Many of the members are in refugee camps. There is a refugee camp in Marksville.

The parsonage and church at Simmesport are flooded. The street is several feet deep in back-water. The entire membership of this place is suffering.

The Jacoby church, in Pointe Coupee Parish, was safe until yesterday. The McCrea levee, which is one mile and a half from Jacoby, gave way. The church is flooded by now, and the entire membership is critically hurt.

I have been unable to visit the entire charge since the flood, but I have talked with members who have seen the results. They are distressing. This is the richest farming land in Louisiana, known as the "Sugar Bowl." Hundreds of acres of beautiful sugar cane and corn are swept away, homes totally destroyed, and thousands of people homeless.

It is hard to think of the future of these churches, for many of the members have nothing left; but we are determined to go forward. I believe these conditions will prove a blessing to us. Light can burst through the darkest clouds. It will take several weeks for the water to go down. It will be quite awhile before the members are settled again and begin the regular church work anew.

Fraternally,

FROM MAGEE AND SANATORIUM CHARGE.

Dear Dr. Carley: Just a line from Magee and Sanatorium. We have just closed a very fine revival meeting at Magee. We used our home talent for the singing, led by our lay leader, Brother J. B. Vinson. We had the best singing and the most thorough co-operation from other denominations that we have ever had here. The preaching was by our near neighbor, Rev. V. G. Clifford, who expounded the Scripture and preached the gospel to the satisfaction and edification of all who attended.

On Sunday, the 15th, we had the great pleasure of baptizing our grandson, Gayle C. Beanland, Jr., son of Rev. Gayle C. and Lillian Williams Beanland, of Cameroun, W. Africa. Also Mary L. Howell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Howell, whase grandmother and great-grandmother were present to witness this dedication. Ten children were received into the church at the same service.

At the evening service the officers of the Epworth League were installed.

This meeting left our whole community closer together and closer to our Lord.

Our friends gave this pastor a surprise birthday party on Thursday, the 19th, from 7 to 10 p. m. This was indeed a happy occasion. Friends of all denominations gathered to wish him many happy returns of the 19th day of May. Hon. R. C. Russell, district attorney, and Dr. T. J. Burnham made talks; Mrs. E. L. Walker read an original poem dedicated to the pastor, and presented him with an elegant pen and pencil from the Woman's Missionary Society, and Rev. Mr. Morris, pastor of the local Presbyterian church, offered the prayer. Punch was served and a large cake, baked and presented by Mrs. E. L. Walker, was cut by marriageable young ladies for the ring, dime, button, and thimble. The pastor told the good people that his Heavenly Father would have to extend his life another seventy years to enable him to have time sufficient to show his appreciation and repay them for their expressions of love and kindness to him. We had all our children with us except Frank Starr and family, who are in Belgium attending the International Rotary convention, which meets in June.

The Lord has been good to us all these years. Therefore we can trust him unto the end.

The work and demand for more service at the Sanatorium grows. While I give from four to six days in each week during the afternoon visiting period, that is not enough to visit and have service with each of the three hundred patients once a month. Think of a sick person away from home and friends and not having a minister to visit him once a month!

Every preacher and layman should visit this Sanatorium.

W. M. WILLIAMS.

MORE MONEY

If your Church, Ladies' Aid, Sunday School, Epworth League or Missionary Society needs MORE MONEY I will be glad to tell you of a successful plan of raising it. Write me today and I will send you the plan in detail. It always produces results.

audience of the pleasure of giving by quoting a number of familiar quotations.

Following this talk, an invitation to lunch was extended. Over one hundred guests enjoyed the delightful lunch and music of the orchestra.

The afternoon session opened with devotional exercises.

A motion was made by Mrs. C. W. Crisler, seconded and voted, that the women conduct the devotional exercises of all the zone meetings.

The duties of the officers were not discussed as previously planned, but the need of the Red Cross to meet the present emergency of the flood sufferers was told by Mrs. Crisler.

Mrs. B. W. White, of Hazlehurst, talked of the children's work. She thinks one of the greatest menaces to the church is the lack of reverence. This is to be corrected through the children.

The work of the Wesley Houses at Meridian, Biloxi, and Back Bay was told by Mrs. C. C. Herlong, of Hazlehurst. At these places babies are cared for during the day while the mothers are working in the factories.

A reading, "The Vision," was given by Miss Pearl Barlow, of Gallman.

Georgetown invites the auxiliaries for the next zone meeting in August.

MRS. A. V. ZAMA,

ZONE MEETING AT ELMORE, LA.

On May 13, our second zone meeting for the Ruston District was held at Elmore.

The meeting was presided over by our zone leader, Mrs. J. C. Baker, in her usual gracious manner.

The meeting was opened with singing, Scripture reading, and prayer by Mrs. Fred Calloway.

"Importance of Bible Study" was given in a very impressive way by Mrs. J. J. Allen.

"How to Have an Ideal Mission Study," was ably discussed by Mrs. A. A. Meredith.

Mrs. W. W. Kavanaugh made a brief but forceful talk on "Why Every Woman Should Belong to the Missionary Society."

One of the main features of the program was a talk on "Stewardship," by Mrs. Fred Calloway.

Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Shows had an interesting discussion on "Why I Belong to the Missionary Society," and "Why I do Not Belong to the Missionary Society." Then Mrs. Winfree gave a splendid talk and expressed the appreciation of the Society for the program rendered, and welcomed the meetings to Elmore.

There was a unanimous vote to organize a Woman's Missionary Society and the following were elected: Mrs. Mayo, president; Mrs. Winfree, vice president; Mrs. Hinton, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Sam Bernard, recording secretary; Mrs. Ruth Kavanaugh, treasurer; Mrs. J. F. Kavanaugh, superintendent of Study; Mrs. Head, superintendent of Social Service, and Mrs. Clinton, superintendent of Local Work.

The next zone meeting will be with Eros.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

DOING THE BEST YOU CAN.

Success in life is not to be measured so much by the actual results accomplished as by the way life's work was done. A man of many talents, without much effort—without half trying—may seem to have done marvelous things; yet, if he had really made the best possible use of his powers, he would have accomplished a great deal more. He is not to be judged by what he did, but by what he might have done. On the other hand, a man of one talent may seem to have accomplished very little; but when it is realized that he used that one talent to the full limit of his powers, he is to be counted as one who has attained.

The greatest tragedies of life are not those of men who apparently have done nothing worth while; they are those of men who have consciously failed to do the best they could with the resources at their command.

"LUCKY" LINDBERGH.

We do not suppose any other man in the history of the world has received the praise for a single exploit that has been accorded Charles C. Lindbergh for flying alone from New York to Paris. And we do not suppose anybody else ever did such a marvelous thing. Lindbergh has been given nicknames that are supposed to indicate the cause of his success—"Lucky," and "Flying Fool." These terms express a kind of popular affection, to be sure; but it would be a grievous error to imagine that it was "luck" or the fortune of a "flying fool" that enabled him to make that memorable flight. Lindbergh "knew his stuff," to begin with, and he had a heart of steel that carried him safely through unknown perils without a tremor. Those are the things that count—knowledge and courage. To these add strong moral character, and we have a real man among men. We do not know much about Lindbergh as a man; but we noticed that he did not drink the wines and champagne that flowed so freely in celebratoin of his achievement, and he did not waste his energies by engaging in the dances that were part of the social functions to which he was invited. It seems, too, that he is not going to be turned from his serious purpose in life by the lure of the dollar. He is a remarkable young man in more ways than one.

"WHERE IS THIS BOOZE?"

Under the above caption, J. Horace McFarland, in the June number of the American Review of Reviews, gives an account of an interesting experience he had early this year in trying to find evidences of the floods of liquor that are said by the wet advocates to be flowing into the United States in total disregard of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act. He made a pretty complete tour of Florida, traveling 3,745 miles in fourteen days, looking for liquor all the time—not surreptitiously trying to buy it, but looking for evidences of its use on the train, in the hotels and in the clubs he visited. He found none. We quote the concluding paragraph of his article:

"The truth is, after all, that the prohibition laws are being enforced a great deal better than most people believe, and I think on the average quite as well as are the laws that punish arson, crimes of violence, and the social crimes. That booze and narcotics can be had by those who seek them I do not doubt, just as I am quite sure that those who wish to steal, burn, and do other mischievous things in defiance of law can and will continue to do them. They are outlawed, and John Barleycorn is outlawed, and that is the one biggest thing that has happened in, to and through the United States since Columbus landed."

A NOTABLE ACCOMPLISHMENT.

The report of the recent meeting of the Board of Missions, appearing in this issue of the Advocate, will be read with interest, we are sure, by many of our people. The outstanding feature of the report as we see it is to be found in the fact that the debt which threatened for a time to embarrass very seriously our missionary activities, has been reduced to a point where it is no longer embarrassing and where it can be fully liquidated in the regular course of events. Credit for this accomplishment is due the Board itself for its economical and efficient management of affairs, and to the members of the church who have responded generously to the special appeals that have been made for the missionary work. With this debt out of the way, we can hope that we shall never have to face another such embarrassment.

A WORTHY APPEAL.

We hope the pastors of the Mississippi Conference gave heed last Sunday to the request of Rev. J. T. Leggett, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, to give their people an opportunity to contribute to the needs of those preachers who serve charges in the overflowed territory of the Conference. There is no question of the loyalty of those congregations in the overflowed sections; they will do the best they can to take care of their pastors; but they have suffered such financial losses as to make it practically impossible for them to meet their financial obligations. It will be a beautiful thing for those who have not suffered such losses to help those who have thus met misfortune. We have found that the people thus appealed to will respond generously. Such an appeal made by the committee in New Orleans, not through the pulpits but privately, resulted in securing $1000 within a few days for the aid of the Louisiana preachers in the overflowed area of the State. The appeal is a worthy one, and the response should be immediate and liberal.

SCENE AT HOLLY BLUFF, MISS.

DUTY'S CALL.

By Mrs. Laura M. White.

Do the task that lies the nearest,
Trusting Jesus all the while,
Meeting duty where 'tis clearest,
Finding strength in Christ's own smile.

Be thou faithful to thy mission,
Given thee by God alone;
He will give thee power and vision,
Then, at last, His own "Well done."

THE MEETING OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS.

By Dr. Elmer T. Clark.

The annual meeting of our Board of Missions was held in Nashville on May 3-4, and at this session the first annual report of the present administration was made to the church. This is a crucial day in all missionary matters. In the first place, the tremendous social upheavals that are taking place in all the lands wherein Protestant missionaries are working, are taxing missionary statesmanship and strategy to the utmost. This is especially true for our church in China and Mexico because of the revolutions in the one and new laws in the other, but in all of our fields the problem of nationalism or the insistence on the part of the native Christians upon a large degree of influence and authority in their own religious affairs, presents an acute problem. The second is the financial handicap under which our own church, along with nearly all of the other denominations in America, has been laboring for several years. On account of this situation, the administration of our Board of Missions, which came into office one year ago, has been peculiarly difficult; but it is a matter of great gratification that the reports made to the recent meeting indicate that a better day is dawning in this the most important of all the phases of work in which we are to be engaged.

Dr. Cram's Report.

The report of the General Secretary, Dr. W. G. Cram, elicited from the Board a special vote of appreciation for its statesmanlike character. It gave a swift review of the work of the year, made some announcements of first importance, and offered some constructive recommendations looking to a greater missionary progress.

Perhaps the outstanding achievement of the year was the substantial reduction in the indebtedness of the Board. At the beginning of the last fiscal year this debt stood at $1,658,541.11; at the close of the year it was only $783,952.11, having been reduced by $874,589. Of the remaining indebtedness $520,000 is carried by the Lambuth Building, and will be paid in fifteen years by the income from the building; $123,952.11 represents inter-departmental obligations which will be adjusted in the regular course of administration, and this sum is therefore not regarded as an obligation of the church at large. The actual bank indebtedness is to-day only $140,000, and Dr. Cram stated that this would likely be paid soon by Centenary returns and unsettled bequests.

The adjustment of the heavy debt which for a time threatened the very existence of our missionary work constitutes one of the most remarkable administrative achievements of our history. It is the more notable in that while these payments were being made our work was maintained without a deficit for the first time in several years.

Dr. Cram further reported that the work during 1927 would be operated without a deficit, carefully adding the qualifying phrase, "however, we must proceed with caution." In order to safeguard the current budget and prevent the probability of a deficit due to unforeseen events in China, Dr. Cram asked for and obtained permission to make private (not public) appeals for funds to bring our missionaries home from China should this become necessary and require funds not available in the budget.

It was estimated that at least $700,000 in cash would be received from the special maintenance appeal made in February. Already about $450,000 has been paid in.

In order to more nearly balance the annual budget a reduction of $110,000 was made in the appropriations. The budget of the General Work Section for 1928 will be $1,393,000. Even with such a drastic reduction, however, it was possible to increase the salaries of all missionaries.

A New Policy.

The General Secretary, in his report, made four recommendations to the Board, all of which were adopted. These recommendations constitute the missionary policy for the year. They indicate constructive statesmanship in administration and are of the utmost importance to the church. These four recommendations are as follows:

1. The budget of the Board of Missions must be balanced by bringing the Board's income and its expenditures to a common level. As is well known, there is now a difference of about one million dollars between what the Board receives from the assessments and what it must expend to maintain our work. The money from the assessments is not available until the fall, and it has always been necessary, therefore, for the Board to borrow large sums in order to conduct its affairs until the asssessments were paid. According to the policy announced, an effort will be made to equalize income and expenditures, not of course by reducing our work to such a degree that it can be maintained on the assessments alone, but by developing a regular income from Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, Specials, and free-will offerings in addition to the assessment so that the budget will be balanced. The General Secretary was also authorized to create an operating or revolving fund of $200,000 so that the work may be placed on a cash basis, thereby avoiding debt and the payment of interest.

2. A most important section of the new policy is that which announces that an emphasis is to be placed on an evangelistic advance in all of our mission fields at home and abroad. "We are well equipped with schools and hospitals and other buildings in most of our fields," declared the General Secretary. "We need now to lay emphasis upon extending the borders of the church."

3. A more nearly adequate support is to be given to all of our missionaries. Our workers in all fields have suffered greatly during the days of financial stringency. The Board this year granted an increase of salary to all missionaries, and this was done in spite of the fact that the appropriations were decreased more than $100,000.

4. The year 1928 is to be observed as the Jubilee Year of the Woman's Missionary Societies, in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of our organized Woman's Work.

New Missionaries.

A new departure, which was made by the present administration of the Board of Missions, provides that all missionaries must be accepted by the Board of Missions itself in full session. Formerly, the missionaries were accepted by the Candidate Committee, but the importance of this function is so great that it was felt that all candidates should appear in person before the Board, which is composed of all our Bishops and the various General Secretaries of the other Boards, in addition to representatives from all Annual Conferences.

For the first time, therefore, all candidates appeared this year before the Board, were formally accepted by vote, and their assignments were read. This was the high point of inspiration of the entire meeting. Thirty-nine new home and foreign missionaries, most of them the Seniors from Scarritt College, faced the Board while Bishop Denny fervently prayed for them and their work.

The Hearn Case.

Some time was devoted to a consideration of the case of Rev. W. A. Hearn, of China, who was not received into full connection by the China Conference because of a statement of his belief concerning the resurrection of Christ. Bishop Ainsworth had recommended his withdrawal from the field. The China Mission, however, had asked for a delay in order that additional information might be laid before the Board. Mr. Hearn was not present and had had no opportunity of personally stating his case or his beliefs to the Board. Several members felt that he should be allowed to state his views in person lest his position be misunderstood and an unwitting injustice be done him.

The Board, therefore, took the following action:

1. Mr. Hearn's travel to the United States is to be paid and his salary kept in force for six months.

2. Unless he indicates to the General Secretary his desire to present further facts he is to be considered withdrawn from the field.

3. If he does within thirty days after notice indicate a desire to present further facts, the entire case is to be heard by a special committee composed of the Executive Committee and Bishops Candler, Boaz, and Mouzon, these being the Bishops on the Foreign Work Committee. This committee has power to pass finally on the matter.

4. Should Mr. Hearn avail himself of the privilege of coming before the committee, his status pending a final decision will be that of a missionary on furlough.

Little White Russia.

For the past two or three years, the church has been aware of the great opportunity waiting for us in Little White Russia, a province of Poland, to which we have been invited by some of the most representative citizens of the province. Unfortunately, we have been forced to refuse this appeal for lack of funds. At the same time our work among Russians in Harbin, Manchuria, has not borne the fruit we expected because the laws passed by the Bolshevik regime in Russia have prevented us from using Harbin as a base of supplies from which to enter Siberia.

The Board of Missions has, therefore, given authority for the gradual transfer of our workers and appropriations from the Russian work in Manchuria to Little White Russia in Poland. When this transfer has been made and we are thereby able to launch an evangelistic activity among the white Russians, we may expect to witness great gains.

The Commission on Nationalism.

As stated above, one of the greatest and most pressing missionary problems of the present day is that of nationalism, which is stirring in every field. In some places it has become very acute. In Mexico, for example, the laws now make it impossible for foreigners to exercise certain religious and educational functions, and we have already completely nationalized the Mexican Conference by withdrawing all our American evangelistic missionaries. The work in Mexico has, therefore, been placed entirely in the hands of the Mexican Methodists, and indications point to the fact that they will bear the responsibility well. In China, as the result of the present revolutions, we may expect similar adjustments. No foreigner can be the head of a school in the zone of the Cantonese armies in China, and all presidents and principals of our institutions have resigned. These are but examples of the spirit that stirs in various countries.

The last General Conference provided that a Commission on Nationalism should be created to study this entire problem. At the last meeting of the Board of Missions, this Commission was created. It is composed of twenty-five members from our own church in the United States termed the Central Committee, and fifty-two members from the foreign fields termed the Field Committee. This Commission is expected to find, if possible, a solution to the present problems.

The Centenary Commission.

An interesting side-light of the meeting was the report of the Centenary Committee, which showed that $112,244.73 had been collected on the old Centenary pledges since June 1, 1926. The persistence and tenacity of the Centenary giving is one of the most remarkable facts of our history. The Centenary has been referred to as "dead" by its critics for five years. All publicity on the subject was stopped more than a year ago. Yet it survives and continues to bring in sums which before it was launched would have been regarded as vast liberality. All hail to the Centenary, most successful of all similar movements!

Dr. Andres Osuna.

Another interesting feature of the recent meeting was the address of Dr. Andres Osuna, our distinguished representative in Mexico, who in these uncertain days mediates between our church and the Mexican government. His address cast a flood of light upon a much misunderstood situation.

Dr. Osuna reported that plans are under way for vesting the titles of our property in Mexico in a "Foundation," or holding corporation, which will safeguard our interests and at the same time comply with Mexican law.

Woman's Work.

One of the outstanding achievements of the year was the completion of the Belle Bennett Memorial fund for Scarritt College. The women were asked for $500,000 and paid $633,000, thus providing for one of the most modern and beautiful college buildings in America. By resolution the Board committed the General Work Section to wholehearted support and patronage of Scarritt.

Our Woman's Work has no debt and no annual deficit. It is progressing all along the line and made this year appropriations for advance work, over and above its Centenary program, for the first time since Centenary was launched.

The appropriations of the Woman's Work Section for 1928 total $998,279.15. When this sum is added to the $1,388,486.55 appropriated by the General Work Section it is seen that the entire budget of the Board of Missions next year will be $2,386,765.70.

ABERDEEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Aberdeen District Conference met at Fulton on Tuesday morning, May 24, in the Methodist church. The conference was opened with the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, followed by organization of the conference. The majority of the ministers of the district were present at the first roll call, and a large number of the delegated laymen were present. Following organization of the conference, at 11 o'clock, Rev. J. J. Baird, of Pontotoc, preached the opening sermon.

The afternoon session was given to the program of the Aberdeen Methodist Ministers' Association. From 4 to 5, the conference proceeded with the buiness. In the evening at 7:30, Rev. F. H. McGee, of Okolona, preached to a large congregation.

Wednesday was laymen's day of the conference, and there was a large group of delegates and other laymen present. Hon. J. M. Foreman, Conference Lay Leader, was to have delivered the address at 11 o'clock, but was detained. The conference remained in business session through the hour appointed for his address. Conference adjourned after a short evening session Wednesday, after which Rev. J. W. York preached a very forceful sermon to a large congregation.

The reports from pastors and committees were very encouraging, and indicate that much work has been done and real progress made throughout the district. The number of revival meetings reported with excellent results indicate that the evangelical spirit has gripped the hearts and minds of both pastors and laymen. The spiritual interest of the entire district is commendable. Next in importance to the spiritual interests stands the material development. General improvement in church buildings and parsonages was reported, and in several cases new modern church buildings were reported. Brother Carter, of Mathiston, reported a new parsonage.

Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues, Missionary Societies and Lay Activities all show marked progress. The finances of the district are well paid up for this time of the Conference year, and indications are that there is a stronger effort than usual on the part of the pastors and laymen to raise the benevolences.

During the session the following resolutions were made and unanimously adopted by the conference:

Resolutions.

This is the last district conference to be held by our present presiding elder, L. P. Wasson, who has labored most faithfully among us these four Conference years.

Be it resolved, therefore: First, That we extend to him our love and good wishes for a fertile field within which to work, and many faithful and loving friends where his labor shall be spent.

Second, That we extend our appreciation of his tireless labors for the church, for his country, and for God.

Third, we express our gratitude that those in authority have left him here these four years, during which time he has been patient and tolerant of the shortcomings of his brethren, yet militant in the observance of church laws and for enforcement along all lines of Christian endeavor.

Fourth, That we wish and pray for him and his family health, happiness, and a pleasant place in which to labor and advance the kingdom.

Signed: GEO. J. LEFTWICH.
JNO. W. BELL.
MRS. T. C. LAUDERDALE.
MRS. J. J. GARNER.
MRS. VERNA COOPER.

Resolutions.

Be it resolved, That this district conference shall by this means give voice to a sincere expression of appreciation for the splendid reception accorded us by the people of Fulton.

To the pastor-host, who has exhausted every effort to make these days pleasant and happy; to our individual hosts and hostesses who have evidenced such fine hospitality in throwing open their homes and hearts to us; and to all who by many courtesies of word and deed have warmed our hearts.

God grant that these hours of fellowship shall have brought to you some word of cheer, some bit of joy, some new touch of the Spirit of God.

Signed: W. C. NEWMAN.
W. R. LOTT.
F. H. McGEE.
W. L. PEARSON, Secretary.

A NEW BULLETIN IDEA FOR PASTORS.

The Layman Company is now putting out its Tithing Tabloids in four-page bulletin form, printed on two inside pages only, other two pages blank, for local material. The cost will give a saving of at least $5 per week to any pastor who uses four-page bulletins in his Sunday services. A good opportunity for five or ten weeks of tithing education without expense or special distribution. Twenty subjects to choose from. Sample set, 15 cents. Prices, 40 cents per 100; $3 per 1,000.

Address THE LAYMAN COMPANY,
730 Rush Street,
Chicago, Ill.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

When one has been soundly converted, has a conscious knowledge of sins forgiven and realizes through the blessed ministry of the Holy Spirit that he is a child of a merciful, all-wise Heavenly Father, and then continues in this faith and acceptance through years, it is difficult to shake him loose from his spiritual anchorage and send him adrift on the wild sea of materialistic unbelief. He has fed upon the ripe fruit of the tree of life, lived the fellowship with the Master so long, that all other attempts at spiritual life and knowledge are inane and unsatisfactory. I am not narrow or crassly dogmatic in this statement, but to my mind it is a righteous conclusion, from years of experience and observation in spiritual things, that are intimately related to the kingdom of God.

Much of the unrest among the churches to-day, I fear, comes from some who have not a full realization of what God the Father is willing to do for them in the realm of spiritual life. Is it not then well, in fact indispensable for success in the winning of souls, for our Lord's kingdom that we be sure of these things first, last and always? One's close relation to the kingdom counts for more than what one may read concerning the same in the current literature of the day. For after all the teaching, religion as we ordinarly use the term, is intensely personal. Deeper than the deepest sea, higher than the highest hill, vaster than the reaches of the broadest plain, are the desires, the hopes, the experiences of the soul of man. To know God is the greatest knowledge, the Alpha and Omega, the keynote of the vaster harmony that bears, brings and breathes the peace passing understanding.

Sidney Lanier in that exquisite poem, "The Marshes of Glynn," gives us a thought worth well the treasuring—

"As the marsh hen secretly builds on the watery sod;
Behold I will build me a nest on the greatness of God,
I will fly in the greatness of God, as the marsh hen flies,
In the freedom that fills all the space 'twix the earth and the skies:

"By so many roots as the marsh grass sends in the sod,
I will heartily lay me hold on the greatness of God:
O, like to the greatness of God is the greatness within,
The range of the marshes, the liberal marshes of Glynn."

Modern astronomers, Magellans of the skies, tell us of a limitless universe, where vast planetary systems with their suns, like unto the one to which our little earth belongs, move and have their being beyond, and yet beyond, in unmeasured reaches of space. It seemed that when the psalmist sang of sun, moon, and stars, he was only touching the edge of things.

"What is man," he asked, "that thou art mindful of him?" What is God, we ask, that thou art unmindful of him? Unmindful of his creative power, unmindful of his wisdom, unmindful of his greatness. Light years are too brief to measure his distances; numbers, as we know them, too small to mark the enormous abysses where lie these splendid orbs of his creation. Lost are we in wonder, love and praise; for thy glory hast thou made all, Oh Lord. Yet amid it all he cares for you. The thought is enough to stagger us. But as his children, we bow before him, and in one sense lose ourselves in the greatness of God. What magnificent unfolding there will be when we shall know even as also we are known! We can then sing the Gloria anew.

AS THE WATERS RECEDE.

Dear Dr. Carley: I am home again, thank God, but feel very much like an island, entirely surrounded by water. The floods abate very slowly —an inch and a half per day of twenty-four hours will about measure its decline. It has truly been a devastating flood. Much water is still in Greenville and the surrounding country. I have been cleaning house, and it was the worst spring job I have ever had. The water came over the floors in the district parsonage a foot and a half deep, and the house is a little more than four feet high above ground. It well nigh ruined the floors, causing them to crumple and cup until they truly resemble cotton rows. Not a door in the house will open or shut, so swollen and awry are they. The water is still a foot and a half deep in Alexander Street, and a foot deep under and all around the house and yard. And still worse, a seven-foot rise on at Cairo! When we saw that, we could almost wish there wasn't any Mississippi river.

Thousands of refugees are still in camp here on our levees; white and yellow government tents greet you all up and down the levee for a couple of miles or more. It's a city within itself, but very sanitary, and the health is wonderful considering the privations and lack of many needful things. The doctors have been so careful and made the people so, by instructing, vaccinating and guarding against every appearance of trouble. Many of the refugees have been able to go back home, and many have gone out on the farms where the water has receded sufficiently to enable them to resume farming operations. They are following up the retiring floods with planting and cultivation of crops.

The losses suffered, the hardships endured, cannot be chronicled. The stories that one hears would fill a volume and bring tears to eyes unaccustomed to weep. Many have lost all, wearing apparel, houses, stock, everthing but life and hope and pluck. It would do your soul good and warm your heart to see and feel the unbroken, unconquered resilience of their faith and heroism. I have sometimes been made to marvel and left to meditation. The world's heroes were not all at Waterloo or Bannockburn or Thermopylae or any other field of warring hosts, but here, there, and yonder, scattered among the lowly, the poor, the rich, in households and by the way, where stress and storm, cyclone and earthquake, disease and pestilence lurk in ambush and are to be met with the fiat of human will and energy, sheer pluck and dogged tenacity. That terrible night of April 21 will never be forgotten by thousands who heard the shrill and weird and deathlike siren and the quick, impulsive ringing of the phone and the honking of automobiles galloping up and down telling the night sleepers that the old Mississippi had burst her confines and was on her way of death and ruin to hundreds of thousands. The most hideous night that one could pass was on us. We knew the flood stage was the highest in the history of that terrible stream, and when the frail barriers were swept away, all men with their genius, skill, science and power were as straws before a cyclone, as a baby in an ocean.

But now the time for patience has come and we must wait till the flood subsides for a new start in life.

The people are busy and enthusiastic and heroic in following up the destruction with new plans and enlarged determination to recoup their lost fortunes and re-establish their business and homes.

The Greenville station parsonage suffered almost annihilation. The pastor, Brother C. A. Parks, lost his piano and most of his furniture. The house is just about non est or words conveying identical ideas.

The levee known as "the protection levee," which is a circular levee coming out from the main river levee and extending one mile and three-quarters around the city to the dump of the C. and G. R. R., gave way before the rapidly rising and torrential flood, and hence Greenville was flooded anywhere from two to ten feet deep. The waters from the break in the main Mississippi levee at Mound's Landing are still pouring into the city through this broken protection levee. Now, hundreds of men are busy closing up the breaches in this levee to stop the water from coming into the town. They are driving piling and boxing it in and filling with sacks of gravel. Forty thousands sacks, the engineers figure, will be necessary to fill the gaps.

The Red Cross and the American Legion did faithful and heroic work, feeding the starving thousands and keeping order and rendering all kinds and degrees of courteous and sympathetic service.

I have a letter from Brother Galceran the happy news that the waters did not get in his parsonage at Leland; the same good news from Brother Suydam at Arcola, and the same from Brother L. A. McKeown at Hollandale, but all these towns went under very largely and the damage to live stock and property was very great.

I have not heard one solitary word from Brother Golding at Glen Allan, although I have written to him twice to know his state and damage. I rather surmise, knowing the topography of Glen Allan, that water did not get in his house, but am sure if it did not, it scared him out of fifteen to twenty years' growth.

Now, this flooded area is hit so hard that we will need help from the Methodists of more favored sections, where they have not had floods or cyclones or earthquakes. I do not know yet how much help, no estimate having been made, and cannot be till the waters are gone and all is known.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The Whitworth Colllege commencement preacher this year was Rev. F. N. Parker, D.D., of Emory University.

The sixty-eighth session closed with impressive graduating exercises May 31, in the Lampton auditorium. Wearing cap and gown, and carrying bouquets of Premier roses and ferns, the candidates for the degree of A.B. and B.S. entered in procession and occupied seats on the platform. The march, from Tannhauser, was played by Misses Fox, Covington, Mack and Lewis. Rev. W. H. Lewis, district presiding elder, made the opening invocation. Miss Juanita Fox played "Turkish March," by Donizetti. The appropriate baccalaureate address was delivered by Hon. Forrest B. Jackson, of McComb. Rev. H. G. Hawkins, president of the college, made a brief address on the ideals of unselfishness and service before presenting diplomas and certificates and announcing honors.

The degree of bachelor of arts was conferred upon Gladys Breland, Mary Alfreda Corley, Vonceil Cox, Christine Ferguson, Frances Foster, Irene Griffin, Mary Hobbs, Ruth McKay, Dorothy Middleton, Mamie Meyer Penn, Florence Russ, Wei Lien Wu, and the degree of bachelor of science upon Velma Grace Thompson.

A post-graduate certificate in piano was awared Irma Welborn; diploma in piano, Anna May Mack and Juanita Fox; diploma in English, Dorothea Jean Cohn; diploma in expression, Ida Mae Corley; diploma in physical education, Wincie A. Carruth and Billie Bethea Griffin; diploma in home economics, Wei Lien Wu; certificate in public school music, Catherine Giles, Margaret Grady, Anna Mae Mack; certificate in bookkeeping, Ruby Allgood; blue seal diplomas in religious education, Hattie Rae Lewis, Florence Russ, Frances Foster, Swayse, Annie Maxie Thompson, Velma Thompson.

Catherine Ross was awarded the prize of $5 given by the McComb W. C. T. U. organization for the best essay submitted in the college on "What the Elimination of the Drink Habit Is Doing for Society."

High honors, indicating an average of 92 or above, were won by Catherine Ball, Wincie Carruth, Vonceil Cox, Elizabeth Dakin, Marie Dean, Juanita Fox, Lucy Neblett, Catherine Sells, Wei Lien Wu. Honors indicating an average from 87 to 92 were won by Camille Ball, Annis Neva Ball, Frances Bennett, Blanche Blue, Elaine Bomar, Gladys Breland, Corrie Lee Byrd, Hardy Cole, Alfreda Corley, Gertrude Corley, Alma Crout, Lucile Daniel, Bessie Day, Bernice Dupree, Lovey Julia Ellis, Ouida Ellzey, Agnes Eubanks, Christine Ferguson, Margaret Grady, Billie Griffin, Margaret Griffin, Irene Griffin, Mary Hudson, Nellie Khayat, Hattie Rea Lewis, Pattie Lewis, Myrtice Meadow, Dorothy Middleton, Thelma Miller, Mamie Penn, Warrene Ramsey, Catherine Ross, Eva Louise Simmons, Arlie Smith, Inez Smith, Jennie Beth Swayze, Annie Maxie Thompson, Velma Thompson, Frances Tredick, Elizabeth White, Rene Wright.

First honors for the senior class were won by Wei Lien Wu, of Soochow, China, a student at the college for the past three years, and winner of first honors in the junior class last year. Second honors in the senior class were won by Vonceil Cox. In the junior class, first honors were won by Marie Dean; second, by Elizabeth White; in the sophomore class, first honors went to Catherine Ball, and second to Juanita Fox; in the freshman class first honors were won by Elizabeth Dakin and Catherine Sells; second, Lucile Daniel, Nellie Khayat, Myrtice Meador and Frances Tredick.

W. D. Davis, for the board of trustees, announced the change of status of the college to a standard junior college and the determination to secure an endowment which will enable it to become a recognized senior institution. The Alumnae are undertaking to raise $100,000, and the commencement really began with an Alumnae banquet held Saturday noon in the sub-story of the Brookhaven Methodist church. Mr. Davis announced that the board had elected Mr. Hawkins for an indefinite period.

Rev. H. E. Bush made a talk commendatory of Whitworth and church education, and Rev. P. D. Hardin pronounced the benediction.

In the expressions heard at commencement there was praise of the work hitherto accomplished by the college and hope and determination to secure the funds which it should have.

Improvement of the campus by the planting of shrubs and flowers under the direction of Mrs. Hawkins, wife of the president, was noted from the platform, as also the erection of brick columns at the southeast entrance to the campus by the staff of the Leofost, the students' annual.

METHODIST STUDENTS IN LOUISIANA STATE UNIVERSITY.

By Dr. B. P. Taylor, Pastor, First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge.

The Methodists of the Louisiana Conference may be surprised to know that there are about 400 Methodist students in our State University located at Baton Rouge. About 75 per cent of these students are members of the Methodist church, the others are from Methodist families.

The pastor and members of the First Methodist Church in Baton Rouge have given some serious study to the problem of how to minister to these students in their social and religious life while they are in school here.

The splendid new church building, which has been in use for over a year, has proved to be a more efficient factor in our work for students than we had anticipated. One whole floor, including an assembly room seating 300, and eight large separate class rooms, has been given over for the accommodation of these students in their work in religious education.

Besides this whole floor or section of the Sunday school buildings, our large and beautifully furnished parlor and the fully equipped kitchen and dining room are used by these students for social and recreational purposes.

During the school term of nine months Miss Irene Helms, graduate of the University of Oklahoma City, has had charge of the religious work among the students of Louisiana State University.

Mrs. Dan Runyan, pastor's assistant, has given considerable time to the interests of students attending our church. The pastor has assisted in the organization of all work among the students, and has kept a close oversight of the work throughout the year.

Bible Study in the Sunday School.

In our Young People's Department of the Sunday school, graded courses in Bible are provided. The Freshmen, men and women, are offered courses in the New Testament; the Sophomores, courses in the Old Testament; and the two upper classes may study such subjects as the "Social Teachings of Jesus," "Religion and Economics," "Missions," etc. This year we have had two "study groups" for Seniors.

Special sermon themes have been presented by the pastor, having in purpose some of the difficulties incident to student life and experiences.

Various features of the age-old problems, such as the "Bible and Science," "Morals Among Students," "What Shall I Do With My Life," etc., have been considered for the special benefit of the students of the university.

Social Activities.

At the opening of the fall term of the university special meetings for social enjoyment are conducted by the Epworth League and the Sunday school. At these socials or "mixers" the students get acquainted with each other and with the members of the local church. Throughout the year "a pleasant Sunday evening" is provided for all who attend the League meetings and church. For these meetings the spacious parlor is used for their games and other amusements. Light refreshments are served every Sunday evening in the dining room.

Students in Baton Rouge Homes.

The Director of Student Work in our church has used various methods of introducing out-of-town students to the Methodist homes of Baton Rouge.

There are about thirty co-eds or young lady students among the Methodist group. Some mother in our church here is selected to be "student mother" for each one of these co-eds. These student-mothers invite the girls to their homes for meals, look after them when they are ill, and offer any help or advice necessary.

Many of the young men are invited to share the home life of certain families in the city. Just recently thirty-five or forty students from foreign countries were entertained at dinner in the homes of Baton Rouge.

A Challenging Opportunity.

The members of the First Methodist Church feel that there is a most serious responsibility for them in providing religious care and instruction for so many young men and women who are away from home, many of them, for the first time. Already the board of stewards are working out plans to have a thoroughly trained Bible teacher for next year. This teacher will have academic standing equal to that of members of the university faculty. He will teach courses in Bible for which the university will give credit toward degrees in the university courses.

The pastor of the First Methodist Church and the members in general desire the fullest co-operation on the part of parents of these Methodist students to take advantage of the religious training offered by this church. We invite parents to come to Baton Rouge and worship with us and their sons and daughters who may be here. Write your sons and daughters and urge them to attend Sunday school and church. We want to help your children. Help us to help them.

AFTER TWENTY-THREE YEARS.

Twenty-three years ago, May 27, I undertook to preach my first sermon. On Monday, May 30, Memorial Day, I took my time and tried to find some of the sacred spots on the old home place in Pontotoc County, where I, in prayer, meditation, serious study, and determination, settled two things: (1) To pay the price for the wonderful experience that John Wesley called "The Great Depositum of Methodism" (Entire Sanctification), and (2) The call to preach. A little more than a year prior to my first sermon, while living on the old place, these two things were definitely and everlastingly settled.

For the first time since leaving the old farm, on the above mentioned date, I had an opportunity to try to find these sacred haunts of blessed memory. I could locate only one—an old stump on the way from the house to the field, where I have knelt hundreds of times seeking God's will and imploring his gracious help in my life's work. As I knelt at the old stump on Memorial Day, I renewed my covenant with God to continue to proclaim, in preaching and in song, full salvation until I am called to my reward. And the waves of glory, waves of Heavenly peace, waves of persecutions, waves of adverse criticism, waves of ethereal joy, and waves of blessed happiness that have passed over my soul during these twenty-three years! One of the most blessed thoughts that ever came to me, came as I was kneeling at this old stump this last time, viz., a witness from my blessed Lord that in all these years I had not knowingly compromised along any line whatever. I have tried to know more and more about discretion and consistency all the way along, but to compromise—never! How thankful I am that a Divine-Supernatural work of grace came to my heart before our present day of awful skepticism and apostasy. "I was there when the work was done!"

This trip to the old home was just about the most pleasant I ever took. My family was with me. My oldest boy, who is 15 years of age, had never seen my old home and very few of my immediate realtives. For the first time since joining Conference we are living on the railroad that goes directly to Pontotoc. This was one cause of the visit. It had been about sixteen years since my wife had visited the old home. We were so graciously received by all! Pending the arrival of the new pastor of Pontotoc Baptist church, I accepted a cordial invitation to preach at said church on Sunday night, May 29. Several old-time friends and relatives from the town and surrounding communities were present, and I surely did enjoy seeing them and trust they were not so badly "jarred" by my kind of preaching, for I really mean good.

Yes, it has been twenty-three years! I was 23 years of age the day I preached the first sermon. So I have been on the job half of my life! Reader, you pray for me, and I'll keep in touch with headquarters, and I'll "study to show myself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth," and God, even our own God, will preserve me, spirit, soul, and body, unto the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ! Amen!

Facing ahead,

J. A. WELLS.

GOOD-BYE.

Dear Brother Carley: To you and my many friends in the Methodist Church, I must say, Good-bye! I want to thank each one of you for the many kindnesses you have bestowed upon me through these nearly twenty years. Some of the noblest of earth are among you, and I have had fellowship with the best. Many thousands of you have found Christ under my feeble efforts. I bless God for this, and you are as dear to me as Paul's spiritual children were to him. My prayers shall ever ascend for you and your welfare. I am abiding in the faith that I have preached, and to you who have found Christ under my efforts, I would say the same as is said in Galatians 1:8. I am doing what you are: following the way I think right. We are together in Christ Jesus in things heavenly. I hope to have your prayers and a continuance of your Christian love. I love you all. Good-bye! God bless you! My face is set like flint toward the city of God and I shall expect to meet you there.

Your brother in Christ,

HENRY YOUNG.

(Editor's Note: Brother Young has entered the ministry of the Baptist Church).

A CORRECTION—SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

Please note this:

The first service of Seashore Divinity School will be the lecture of Bishop W. A. Candler, LL.D., at 8 o'clock Tuesday night, June 14.

The under graduate classes will begin work at 8:15 Wednesday morning, June 15.

This is in correction of my error in the Year Book.

Come Tuesday and get the opening lecture that night.

THE EDUCATIONAL COMMISSION OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

This Commission, appointed by the last General Conference, has held two meetings the past year and will convene again in Asheville, N. C., July 5, 1927. The task laid upon us by the church is no less difficult than it is important. Among other duties the Commission is "to make a careful survey of the entire educational situation of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," reaching all the way from the local church to the universities, and "to provide for a comprehensive and unified program of education for the whole church which shall eliminate overlapping and duplication in the field of education, and which at the same time shall meet the needs of developing life from infancy to full-grown, ripe maturity."

The Commission entertains no delusion regarding the difficulties involved in this task. In addition to the twelve members appointed by the General Conference, six of the General Secretaries of the boards of the church engaged in the educational work are ex-officio members without right to vote. Our meetings thus far have encouraged us to believe that we shall have the hearty co-operation of all the existing agencies in our work and a sincere desire upon the part of all to co-operate is manifest.

The Commission has chosen to approach its work primarily from the viewpoint that a unified program of education for the church must be based upon the organization of the local church as the determining unit and that such organization should be determined by the religious needs of persons and the law of personal growth. This involves graded but continuous instruction and adequate supervision together with individual and group initiative and responsibility. With these principles as a tentative working basis the Commission hopes to make substantial progress at its July meeting.

But no single group can supply wisdom sufficient for this difficult task. We are therefore calling upon the church at large to put at the service of the Commission all available ideas, plans and suggestions. These we shall welcome with great cordiality from any source. The law requires that the report be published one year before the meeting of the next General Conference. Let us have your suggestions now in order that they may be given consideration while we are grappling with the issues involved in this significant problem. All communications should be addressed to the chairman or secretary of the Commission.

SUGGESTED REMEDIES FOR THE DIVORCE EVIL.

By Hon. D. W. Heidelberg.

In a former article on "The Alarming Increase of Divorces," I promised in a future article to suggest some remedies that would likely check this growing evil.

In my opinion, a uniform divorce law would have a wholesome effect in this direction. The several States of the Union have their own divorce laws, ranging from one to many grounds for a divorce. A person living in one State where the grounds for divorce are few and divorces difficult to procure, often moves to a State where the grounds are many and divorces easy to obtain, for the purpose of securing a divorce. In order to secure a uniform divorce law, it would be necessary to amend the Constitution of the United States so as to vest Congress alone with the power to grant divorces. Such an amendment has for many years been recommended by the American Bar Association, and during the last session of Congress a resolution providing for such an amendment was introduced and favorably reported by the committee to which it was referred, but never came up for passage.

The grounds for divorce are too numerous in many of the States, and some of them should be repealed. In Mississippi, for instance, there are thirteen grounds of divorce; and among these there are three which in the judgment of the writer should be repealed. These are the excessive use of morphine or other like drug; habitual drunkenness; and being sent to the penitentiary and not being pardoned before being sent.

In Mississippi, and probably in other States, divorces are being granted by the uncorroborated testimony of the person suing for divorce. A law should be enacted forbidding the granting of divorces unless the testimony of the complainant is corroborated by other evidence. Some of the chancellors in Mississippi now refuse to grant divorces upon the uncorroborated testmony of the complainant, and their practice should be mandatory by law.

Let our Methodist Conferences, and similar bodies of other churches, pass resolutions favoring the legislation above indicated; and committees should be appointed to attend the sittings of the legislatures, and see that bills are prepared and introduced and enacted into law lessening the number of grounds for divorce, and forbidding the granting of divorces unless the testimony of the persons applying for a divorce is supported by other testimony.

While such changes in the law would have a tendency to check the alarming increase of divorces, yet a more effectual remedy would be to remove the causes which lead to divorces. As long as husband and wife love each other, there is no danger of either of them applying for a divorce. When they cease to love each other, there is no longer any happiness in the home, and, probably, sooner or later there will be an effort to sever the relation existing between them. Every effort, therefore, should be made to make perpetual the love that usually exists between the spouses at the time they are wedded to each other. One of the greatest tragedies in life is a young married couple, after beginning their matrimonial relation together, kind and gentle and attentive and loving towards each other, and as happy as it is possible for two persons to be this side of Heaven, gradually drifting apart, and later ceasing altogether to love each other, but, instead, harboring in their breasts hatred for those whom they vowed to love, and finally applying to a court to sever the relation which began with so much love and happiness. Surely, if there is any way to avoid this great tragedy, it should be indicated, and every effort should be made to prevent it.

There is a certain line of conduct which, if pursued after marriage, will almost certainly lead to happiness and make married life enduring. There is another line of conduct which, if followed, will with equal certainty destroy the love of husband and wife for each other, without which the marital relation is a hell on earth. Love is a beautiful, tender plant, and will not grow in a sterile soil, nor without being nurtured and tenderly cared for. I firmly believe that the honeymoon, which usually ends in a few weeks after matrimony, can by proper conduct be made perpetual. It lies altogether with the parties happily wedded to make it enduring.

To perpetuate the love of husband and wife for each other, and the consequent happiness of their association together, they must be kind and gentle in their conduct towards each other. Nothing will so quickly and certainly lead to waning love of husband and wife for each other as unkind and harsh words and a censorious or complaining disposition. Such conduct should be avoided at all hazards and with untiring and unyielding effort. You will often fail, but you should never give up the effort. If in a fit of passion you yield to your temper and say unkind things to your mate, never cease your efforts to avoid it, and never fail to ask forgiveness of the offended party. It will repay your efforts with increased love and happiness. The tongue "is an unruly evil, full of deadly poison," and "is set on fire of hell." The damage which it inflicts in the home, as well as elsewhere, is incalculable. It should with infinite effort be controlled and brought under subjection. He who is able to do it multiplies his happiness many-fold and more than he who builds a palatial home and piles up his millions, or attains to the dizzy height of fame, for which so many are willing to make any sacrifice.

Husband and wife should not only be kind, gentle and uncomplaining in their association with each other, but should never discontinue their expressions of admiration and love for each other. We not only like to be loved, but we like to be told that we are; and these expressions of admiration and love have a tendency to foster it.

The affectionate kiss so often indulged in, especially at meeting and parting in the early part of married life, should never be neglected, even after the hair becomes white and the brow furrowed from age and sacrifice. How unkind it is to indulge in this token of affection in our younger days and neglect it in our declining years when the body becomes feeble and less attractive, but when we nevertheless are appreciative of such tokens of love!

The personal appearance of husband and wife after marriage should not be neglected. Before they were married and when they were sweethearts, how careful they were of their personal appearance! They recognized the fact that this was important in order to create and maintain an admiration for each other. For the same reason it is important after they become husband and wife, and it should never cease. It is inexcusable in the husband to go unshaven and to keep on his working clothes on the Sabbath, the only day which usually he is able to spend with his wife. He should never be slovenly in the home. A husband who does so, makes it difficult for the wife to admire or love him. Neither should the wife neglect to adorn her person, even when she is not expecting company. She should do so on her husband's account if for no other reason. It is easy for the husband to love and admire the wife tastily and neatly, even if plainly attired. It is difficult for him to do so if she is untidy in her dress. A beautiful flower we all admire and love. It is impossible for us not to. It is its mission in life to look pretty. It is partly, though not the exclusive, mission of a woman to look attractive. It would be unnatural in her not to want to try to do so; and it is commendable in her to make reasonable effort to make herself attractive. By so doing she makes it easy for her husband to love her, without which she cannot be happy.

The husband makes a great mistake in insisting that because he is the head of the family his will should prevail in all things connected with domestic life. He should be independent in his sphere, and she in hers. In matters directly connected with the household her will should prevail, if after free and kindly consultation they are unable to agree. In matters connected with providing for the household, his will should control if after free and kindly consultation they are unable to agree.

In times past, the will of the husband prevailed in almost everything. He was the stronger physically, and thought he was mentally. The title to much of her property upon their marriage became vested in him. She was called a fem covert because her legal existence became covered up in that of her husband. She could not sue in any court without his consent and without his joinder in the suit. In the early history of Mississippi the Supreme Court of the State decided that he had a right to whip her in extreme cases, and he had this right under the common law of England. The wise husband will recognize the fact that these things have passed away, and that upon their marriage he and she become equal partners with equal rights and privileges.

The husband should furnish his wife with a monthly allowance proportionate to his means and ability. In order that he may make the amount sufficient, both should be economical and industrious. They should steer clear of debt, for in incurring debts they are selling themselves into voluntary servitude. Has not the wise man said that the borrower is slave to the lender? The wife should have the right to spend her monthly allowance as she chooses. It is humiliating to the wife and unjust in the husband to expect the wife to go to him for the money she must have to supply her needs. The money and other property accumulated by them during their married lives is the result of their joint labors, and she is as much entitled to it as he.

If the husband and wife will heed the suggestions I have herein indicated; if they will be kind and gentle and uncomplaining in their association with each other; if they will be indulgent of each other's faults and ask each other's forgiveness for any wrong or injury done by the one to the other; if they give proper attention to their personal appearance; if they will practice those little attentions towards each other which they were scrupulous to observe when they began life together; if they will be faithful to their marriage vows, they will never cease to love each other, their married life will be happy, and there will be no danger of either wanting a divorce. If the contrary course be pursued—if they constantly complain at each other's conduct, and when an injustice is done by one to the other never ask the injured party's forgiveness; if they are careless of their personal appearance; if the husband spends his nights and the Sundays on the streets with others instead of in company with his wife; if they cease to extend those little attentions towards each other which they did in their early married life; if they are not industrious and frugal in their habits and become involved in the slavery of debt; if the husband insists that his will shall control in all things, and if they are not true to their marital vows, then the love which once burned so steadily and beautifully on the domestic altar will grow dim and finally expire, hatred will take the place of love, home will become converted into a hell, and finally in a vain attempt to end their misery one of the parties will apply for a divorce, which will scarcely ever bring the relief sought.

Let me beg my married friends to pursue at all hazards and with untiring efforts the line of conduct thus indicated, which will make their lives happy and their home a true emblem and foretaste of that eternal home beyond the grave to which the good and true will finally go.

Shubuta, Miss.

The way that parents oppose objection to their children making the glorious missionary venture is discouraging. They did not hesitate to give their sons for the country's sake in time of war; why not for the church's sake in time of peace?—Bishop Brent, in the Living Church.

The Home Circle

DO SOMETHING.

Do something to-day to bring gladness
To some one whose pleasures are few.
Do something to drive away sadness,
Or cause some one's dream to come true.
Find time for a neighborly greeting,
And time to enjoy an old friend—
Remember the years are so fleeting
That life's final day will soon end.

Do something to-day that to-morrow
Will prove to be truly worth while;
Help some one to overcome sorrow,
And greet the new dawn with a smile,
For only through kindness, and giving
Of service and friendship and cheer,
Can we learn the glory of living,
And find heaven's happiness here.

BRICK BY BRICK.

"I wish I could do something great or be a great man."

The family gathered about the library table for the evening looked up at Robert in surprise. He had laid aside "Scottish Chiefs" for the moment, and with his chin in his hands and his elbows on his knees he was gazing into the fire, dreaming of the great deeds of the heroes of ancient Scotland and wishing he might have an opportunity to imitate them.

"You can if you will," said grandma, lifting her glasses up on her forehead.

"How?" Robert straightened up at the thought.

"By building brick on brick," said grandma, "little by little, one thing at a time. That is the way most men come to do great things."

"Doesn't sound like so much," commented Robert.

"No, that's the trouble with most of us," said grandma. "We see the result, but not the cause; the great deed, but not the long preparation for it. Your book tells about the wonderful things accomplished by the Scottish war leaders, but it says little about the many years of training that they had to have before they were ready to become leaders.

"Did you ever hear the story of the humble bricklayer and Thomas Carlyle, the famous English writer? One of Carlyle's most notable books would probaly never have been given to the world had it not been for the faithfulness of a poor bricklayer who never dreamed of the great thing he did and whose name the world will never know.

"When Mr. Carlyle had finished the second volume of his famous work on the 'French Revolution,' he loaned the manuscript to a friend to read. One day a careless servant, looking for something with which to start a fire, saw the manuscript and used it for kindling. It was the only copy, and when the author heard of the accident he was in despair. So discouraged was he that for days he did not have the heart to work on anything.

"But one morning while sitting by an open window he noticed a bricklayer hard at work on a wall nearby. Brick by brick, brick by brick, with care and presicion the mason was slowly building a high, strong wall.

"'How foolish I am!' exclaimed Mr. Carlyle to himself. 'That humble workman puts me to shame.' And with fresh courage and new zeal he set to work to rewrite the book.

"That bricklayer never knew what a great deed he had done, but he did know that he was faithful in doing the thing it was his duty to do. And by doing his duty he gave inspiration to another to do a greater and more useful work."

"I never thought of it that way," said Robert as grandma ended her story. "But I am going to begin laying my bricks right away. It may be that I can do something great after all."

"I'm sure you can," said grandma, patting his arm. "I'm sure you can if you keep on trying. And don't forget that it is brick by brick, a little at a time, that the greatest lives are kindled."—William T. McElroy, in Western Recorder.

A STRANGE SCHOLAR.

By Emma Florence Bush.

Wilbur Cadman had never been marked absent or tardy since he first started in school in September, and he did so want to go through the whole year without a mark against him, that he might see his name on the Honor Roll in June, with a gold star against it.

All through the fall and winter he had trudged faithfully to school, and although many of the other children had at least one tardy mark against them, Wilbur with three others had not been either tardy or absent.

This beautiful, spring morning, however, mother had asked him to watch baby sister in her crib and amuse her, while she went across the street to borrow a cup of sugar from her friend and neighbor, Mrs. Dyke, for the grocery man had forgotten to send the sugar with the other things, and mother wanted to make cake. So Wilbur, hat in hand, and eye on the clock, watched the baby and with one hand shook her rattle, listening every minute for mother's step on the walk.

But Mrs. Cadman was hearing all about an automobile trip that Mrs. Dyke had taken the week before, and she forgot that time was passing, so five, then ten minutes went by and Wilbur saw that the clock was getting perilously near last bell time. As school was only a few doors down the street, he still could make it if mother would only come.

The face of the clock showed that he could just make it if he hurried. What should he do? He could not leave baby sister alone! He ran to the door and called, "Mother, mother, mother!" but Mrs. Cadman was at the back of Mrs. Dyke's house and did not hear him.

All at once a thought flashed into Wilbur's head. Running to the crib, he caught up the baby, quickly wrapped her in her pretty bed puff, snatched up her half-filled bottle of milk, rushed out of the house and toward the school as fast as his legs could carry him. The baby was a little mite, only two months old, while Wilbur was 7 and large for his age.

He flew in the door just as the last of the line had entered, and thrust the baby into the astonished arms of his teacher.

"I could not leave her," he gasped, "and I could not be late. Mother will come for her just as soon as she gets home and finds us gone. Baby won't be any trouble, she will go to sleep anyway."

Teacher carefully opened the puff, and the whole school saw a surprised, half-smothered little baby, still in her nightgown, one bare foot sticking out, and her little fists tightly clenched as if defying anybody to say she could not stay with Wilbur.

How the teacher laughed and the pupils, too, and they crowded close to look at the baby, just as if they had never seen one at home, and, of course, there could be no lessons, but teacher knew that the baby would not be there long.

Sure enough, in a very few minutes Wilbur's mother came hurrying in at the door.

"Why, Wilbur!" she began. Then she remembered how hard Wilbur was trying for the Honor Roll, and she just held out her arms for the baby and asked the teacher to please excuse Wilbur this time, and promised that after this she would never leave Wilbur alone with the baby when it was so near school time that if she was delayed he would be late.

Then she carried baby sister home and school really began.—Exchange.

A RURAL ROUTE.

(A Spring Story Told in Rippling Rhyme.)

Late in the winter a March hare stood beside his bungalow in a wood when suddenly on his ear there fell the fairy tones of a tiny bell. "The telephone!" he cried. "Oho!" and hopped into the bungalow.

"Hello!" he called. "Mr. Sun? You say that Miss Spring starts north to-day? And you want me to tell folks far and near that in three more weeks she will be right here? The news is welcome, I'm sure," said he. "It shall go right on the R. F. D."

As quick as a wink he was at the wheel of his red, reliable jumpmobile. He carried the news to every house—to woodchuck, squirrel, and small field-mouse; to chipmunk, porcupine, beetle, toad, he scattered the tidings as he rode. Then home he hurried to drink his tea and tell the tale to his family.

The message made a tremendous stir. Miss Pussy Willow bought a brand-new fur; the crocuses frilled their snowy laces; the poplar catkins all washed their faces. Violet put on a purple hood and nodded gaily to an elf in the wood.

Miss Hepatica down in the hollow called, "Good morning, dear Miss Marshmallow!"

That night the wind blew a fearful gale; there was rain and snow, there was sleet and hail. Buffeted, drenched, and full of fears, the poor little flowers were all in tears.

The wood folk were murmuring everywhere, "Don't ever believe a mad March hare."

But the sun came out with a will next day, the world was bright, and the wood was gay; the brave little blossoms took heart, and then the glad wood creatures were gay again.

The March hare cried when he heard them sing, "Now wasn't I right? And isn't this spring?"

Then he cut three capers and stood on his head. "My reputation is saved!" he said.—Carrie O'Neal, in the Youth's Companion.

THE DOG SAW THE DANGER.

The right kind of dog makes a splendid protector for the children. How many times does the quick-witted, four-footed playmate and guardian keep the little ones from danger and harm!

A certain gentleman has a collie dog about one year and a half old. He also has a bright little boy of three. The little boy and dog are great friends. Wherever you see one you see the other.

Some time ago the little boy came down to a drug store to pay his father a visit. Many trains pass here in the afternoon, and he asked his father to let him go outside and see them as they passed. His father gave him permission, and the boy went out and stood at the edge of the pavement for awhile, the dog keeping close to his side. Soon a fast passenger train came along—one of those that doesn't stop but rushes past at about forty miles an hour. Child-like, the little fellow left the pavement and started to go nearer the track. After going a few steps the collie took hold of the boy's arm with his teeth and wouldn't let him go one step nearer the track until the fast train had passed on. The little boy scolded the dog, and struck him with his free hand, but the collie set back and held on to him until the express had gone by.—Apples of Gold.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

The Moody Bible Institute, Chicago, has established a Jewish Mission Course, for the training of Christian workers among the Jews.

The commencement sermon of Scarritt College was preached last Sunday by Bishop Edwin H. Hughes, and the baccalaureate address was delivered on Monday by Dr. Paul B. Kern.

Rev. J. H. Jolly, pastor of the Poplar Springs Church, Meridian, Miss., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Monday of this week. He was in the city on personal business.

Dr. A. S. Lutz, pastor of the West Monroe, La., Methodist church, "plans his work and works his plan." The month of June is fillled with a program that takes in every part of the church.

Mrs. F. F. Stephens, president of the Woman's Missionary Council, sailed for Europe on Saturday, May 28. She will visit the Methodist mission stations in Europe. She will be gone about three months.

Miss Myrtle O. Ball, of Tylertown, Miss., is open for engagements to assist pastors in their revivals as pianist and vocalist during the summer. She is a graduate musician and can furnish the best of references.

Lambuth College, Jackson, Tenn., will establish a Pepper Department of Religious Education, named in honor of Mr. John R. Pepper, the famous business man and Sunday school superintendent of Memphis.

Mr. Fred Sullens, editor of the Jackson Daily News, has accepted an invitation from the pastor, Rev. Elmer C. Gunn, to deliver three addresses at Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, on Sunday, June 19.

During the recent commencement of Whitworth College, announcement was made that a friend, whose name is withheld, had just given $1,000 toward the Whitworth endowment, this being the second gift of the same amount by this friend.

Rev. H. L. Daniels writes: "Mrs. Anna Onstott, of Brookhaven, Miss., lectured at the Epworth Methodist Church, Biloxi, Miss., on Methodism, showing pictures with her lecture, which was enjoyed very much by all."

Miss Ruth R. Daniels, an A.B. graduate of Wesleyan College this year, who majored in Religious Education, is available for a position as pastor's assistant or as educational director. Her address is Macon, Ga., in care of Mrs. Reagan, 405 Macon National Bank Building.

A marker in memory of the historic Methodist Conference held in Broken-Back Church, Fluvanna County, Va., on May 18, 1779, will be unveiled on June 15. Addresses will be delivered by Bishop Collins Denny, Bishop Luther B. Wilson, Dr. W. A. Harper, Dr. Thomas H. Lewis, and Dr. Henry C. Pfeiffer.

Rev. Robert A. Cross, Jr., pastor of the Washington circuit, Louisiana Conference, accompanied by his sister Agnes, paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Wednesday of last week. He gave a good account of his work. He is carrying on a meeting at Mount Hermon, being assisted by Rev. T. G. Stamps.

ANNUITY BONDS

SAFETY is the first requisite of an investment with a view to regular income.

ANNUITY BONDS have advantage over other investments in that they provide an income that cannot shrink.

YOU may in your lifetime without loss of income or any risk pay over to the Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the amount that you had intended leaving in your will to be used in sending the Gospel "to every creature."

YOU may avoid taxes, various fees or any litigation in connection with your benevolent gifts which sometimes greatly reduce one's bequest. Annuity Bonds enable one to be the executor of his own will.

ALL THIS—and at the same time you enjoy during your lifetime an income that cannot shrink—an income that stands between you and want.

Protection Against Old Age

Chaplain and Mrs. A. F. Vaughan, of Fort Sam Houston, Tex., have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Lillian, to Mr. John Lea Wilson, Jr., on June 13. The ceremony will be performed in the post chapel. Chaplain Vaughan is a member of the Louisiana Conference. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the young couple in advance of the happy event.

A joint meeting of the Methodist and Presbyterian churches of Philadelphia, Miss., is in progress, the preaching being done by the pastors, Rev. W. H. Saunders and Rev. William Shannon. The morning services are held in the Presbyterian church and the evening services in the Methodist church. Other denominations are co-operating in the meeting, and much interest is being manifested.

"The Christ and the Creed," is the subject of Bishop W. A. Candler's latest book, which will be published during the summer. The volume is made up of the lectures delivered at Emory University in May under the A. J. Jarrell Lectureship, founded by Dr. C. C. Jarrell in honor of his father. It was Dr. Jarrell's request that Bishop Candler give the first series of lectures.

Rev. Percy Vaughan, our pastor at Ellisville, Miss., writes, under date of June 1: "Our meeting closed last Friday night at Moselle. We had quite a number of reconsecrations, and the church was revived, making our prospects good for a splendid work this year. Brother Claude Jones and party added to their list many friends, who predict success for them wherever they go."

The Minden Standard Training Schoool is in session this week at the Methodist church, Minden, La. The pastor, Rev. Leon I. McCain, is educational director. The faculty is composed of Dr. R. E. Smith, Professor J. E. Stephens, Mrs. S. W. Templeton, and Mrs. Byron Harwell. Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Minden District, is chairman of the board of managers.

Rev. R. A. Tucker, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss., is recuperating from a recent illness at Hot Springs, Ark. During his absence from his pulpit, Dr. W. M. McIntosh, general evangelist, will attend to the pastoral duties of Brother Tucker in so far as doing so will not interfere with his evangelistic work. His brethren will, we are sure, pray for the speedy restoration of Brother Tucker's health.

The commencement exercises of the one hundred and second year of Centenary College began on Friday of last week and ended on Wednesday of this week. The commmencement sermon was preached on Sunday by Dr. J. N. R. Score, of Houston, Tex., and the commencement address was delivered by Hon. R. E. L. Saner, of Dallas, Tex. The annual meeting of the board of trustees was held Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock.

The books added to the Whitworth College library during the past eighteen months are being catalogued by the college librarian, Miss Virginia Pepper, assisted by the former librarian, Miss Pearl Harris, and other helpers. There are about a thousand volumes, the gifts of friends, the largest donations having been made by Mr. George S. Weems, Mrs. W. L. Duren, Rev. W. B. Jones, Rev. George H. Jones, Rev. F. J. Jones, Rev. J. B. Cain, and Mrs. W. H. Huntley. The total number of volumes now in the Weems Library is 7,000, with the prospect that the number will soon be increased to 8,000.

Rev. H. C. Castles, of the Madison-Pocahontas charge, Mississippi Conference, has some busy days. Last Sunday he baptised Oscar Richard Rivers, preached, and married J. Horace Moore to Miss Jessie Velma Ratliff at the 11 o'clock appointment; taught a Sunday school class at 2:30 and preached again at 3 o'clock, and preached again at 8 o'clock p.m., riding sixty miles during the day. The charge is active in all good work—paid the mission special in full, raised the pastor's salary, and co-operates in all the activities of the church. Brother Castles will have Dr. Mark Terrell, general evanelist, with him for some meetings during this month.

LOUISIANA PRESIDING ELDERS ASK AID FOR PREACHERS IN OVERFLOWED SECTION OF STATE.

The presiding elders of the Louisiana Conference met at Alexandria, Friday, May 27, and carefully surveyed the conditions caused by the flood that visited our State. It was learned that thirty-four charges were affected. The people in these charges are practically homeless. Thousands are being cared for in refugee camps. When the conditions of the preachers were looked into, we ascertained that unless outside help should be given, our preachers would suffer. It was unanimously agreed that the people who were not affected by the flood be kindly requested to make an offering for the needy preachers. It was estimated that at least $1,500 would be needed for immediate relief. All moneys raised should be sent to Mr. T. W. Holloman, Treasurer of Relief Fund, Alexandria, La. The month of June was selected as the month in which to take the offering. Let us show our love and sympathy for our stricken brethren by making a generous offering in their behalf.

W. D. KLEINSCHMIDT, Secretary.

GREENWOOD DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The seventh session of the Greenwood District Conference was held in the delightful little city of Itta Bena, May 31-June 1.

Rev. J. E. Cunningham opened the conference with a short service of song, Scripture and prayer.

Roll was called, H. P. Lewis chosen as secretary, and the conference at once got down to business.

V. C. Curtis and S. A. Brown were present and submitted reports on the Orphans' Home. Drs. D. M. Key and J. R. Countiss were also introduced, and delighted the conference with fine reports from our colleges.

One young man, Earl Buford Ellington, was granted license to preach.

The conference was enlivened with some pretty warm discussions in connection with some of the reports that were made. When "Mister" Shipman and Brothers W. M. Young and J. H. Felts get kind'er warmed up in a discussion, you are pretty apt to hear some oratory. We had it.

Your writer was specially struck with the optimistic reports from all the pastors, most of whom have had large parts of their charges overflowed, either from the Mississippi or waters from the hills.

Dr. T. B. Holloman was chosen District Lay Leader, with W. J. Pettijohn, B. P. Brooks and E. L. Dukes, Associate Lay Leaders.

The laymen elected the following delegates to the Annual Conference: J. M. Foreman, A. L. Marshall, B. P. Brooks, R. L. Ward, Dr. T. B. Holloman, G. R. Stokeley, Dr. W. T. Johnson, Miss Tommie Foster, and Mrs. Dave Turner. The alternates chosen are: B. R. Kuykendall, A. A. Pogue, J. N. Worthy, and G. R. O'Donald.

Belzoni was selected as the place for the next meeting of the conference.

The spirit of the conference throughout was optimistic and brotherly. Our presiding elder has given an administration satisfactory to every one. The good people and pastor of Itta Bena gave the best entertainment imaginable, serving noonday meals to the entire conference in the church basement and opening wide their homes to those who stayed over night.

Brothers J. V. Bennett, J. D. Wroten, and W. W. Mitchell brought us the preached Word at the hours of preaching.

Twenty-two preachers and forty-one laymen were registered attendants on the conference.

H. P. LEWIS, Secretary.

PASTORS, ATTENTION!

Are you in need of a Director of Religious Education or Pastors' Assistant who has had special training in Religious Education? Below I give a brief statement indicating the qualifications of certain persons with whom I have been in correspondence, and who are desirous of entering the field of religious education as directors or pastors' assistants primarily responsible for the educational program.

Number One: A lady with ten years' experience as a deaconess and pastor's assistant. Can give splendid references. Prefers to work with young people. Is the daughter of a Methodist preacher. She is a graduate of Peabody College and with one year of specialization work in religious education, Northwestern University.

Number Two: A young lady receiving her Master's degree in Religious Education this spring at Northwestern University. Prefers a directorship in religious education. An A.B. graduate of Woman's College, Alabama. Three years' teaching experience in public schools. Similar experience in Sunday school. Splendid references.

Number Three: A young lady. A.B. graduate from Woman's College of Alabama. Will receive Master's degree in Religious Education in June from Northwestern University. This young lady prefers teaching, but would consider work as director of religious education. Has had two years' experience in public high schools. Splendid references.

Number Four: Young lady well equipped. A.B. graduate Duke University. Graduate work in Boston University in the School of Religion, holding Master's degree from that institution. Has had splendid experience in large city church, particularly with young people. Has had special training in music, dramatics, and the fine arts. Has position in northern city, but prefers to work in the South. Is now teaching in public schools and feels a definite call to return to the field of religious education. Is thoroughly familiar with our training program and has splendid references.

Any pastor desiring such persons will communicate with me and I will give names and addresses of these young ladies and put him into direct communication with them. Pastors will do well in planning their fall program to look into the qualifications of persons who have had technical training and practical experience in religious education.

CIRCUS DAY AND THE SALOON.

Circus day isn't what it used to be in the old days of the saloon. At least that is the experience of "Doc Waddell," veteran showman of this city. He declares that not only in the line of temperance, but in all others, the world is growing better.

"Not only is the world growing better, but the people are better," is Waddell's statement to the World League Against Alcoholism. "Every business is better. Elimination of the saloon turned the trick.

"I remember when a show would be so routed that its pay day would fall in a town that had the least saloons. And pay day always was on Monday, the beginning of the week, instead of Saturday, the end of the week. That was a protection against too much imbibing.

"I recall a show day in Bluefields, W. Va. The city lockup was filled with drunks. The county jail was jammed with them. And, finally, a detective agency was employed to quell the drinking and the drinkers. Vacant lots had to be used, the officers tying their inebriated to the trees and fences. That is a thing of the past. On show day there is seldom an arrest. In the past six years I haven't seen as many as a dozen drunks on show grounds, or in cities on show days.

"As to bootlegging—there isn't any more than ever—less, I think. When we had saloons we didn't notice bootlegging, for the barrooms and wine rooms formed a complete cover. But now, with the saloons gone, the cover is no more, and we clearly behold what formerly was masked and hidden. Shows have no trouble with bootleggers, except near the Canadian border. Show folks are happier. Wife beaters and down-and-outers among show people are of the past. 'Hey Rubes' and killings on show lots are no more. Canvasmen and such are sober and reliable. We do not hire groups of extra policemen to help preserve peace and good order and prevent knockdowns and dragouts. If extra cops are employed, they are used to direct and handle traffic, and keep automobiles from running over people."

Waddell's real name is W. S. Andres. He is said to be the only "circus preacher" in the world. He lives in Columbus, where he is prominently connected with Masonry and the Eastern Star. Waddell, 54 years of age, has been connected with circuses since he was 10 years old. He is chaplain of the Dodson Shows.

SETTING THE EXAMPLE.

"What were you doing to the fruit seller's little boy?" asked a mother somewhat anxiously when she had seen her own small son and two or three of his companions gathered around a little Italian. "You were not teasing him, I hope, Johnny?"

"No-o!" was the somewhat indignant answer. "We were making an American out of him. We pinned a little flag on him and showed him the salute. He liked it."

"Then I hope you will keep on teaching him," said the mother. "Teach him by the way you act that to be an American boy means to be kind, honest, truthful, and manly—to honor your country by being good."

"Yes-m," answered Johnny a trifle more slowly. He had not thought of all that in his efforts at patriotic education.—Forward.

Judge: "Are you married?"
Johnson: "Ya-as."
Judge: "Who did you marry?"
Johnson: "A vooman."
Judge: "Well, did you ever hear of any one that didn't marry a woman?"
Johnson: "Ya-as."
Judge: "Who?"
Johnson: "Mine seester."—Congregationalist.

IN MEMORY OF LURA MAE BANKS.

Lura Mae Banks, nee Spurlock, passed from this world to her heavenly reward Sept. 7, 1926, near Chatham, La. She was born March 22, 1905. Oct. 9, 1924, she was married to Henry Banks. They lived happily together until death parted them. She leaves her husband, an infant girl, mother, father, nine brothers and one sister, besides a host of other relatives and friends, to mourn her going away. Two brothers preceded her to heaven when quite young. All that loving hands could do was done to keep her with us, but God saw best and took her to live with him. She hated to leave her baby—she wanted to rear it for God. Her great desire was to erect a godly home. She read her Bible daily, and they always held family prayer night and morning. We cannot understand why such a home was broken up, but God knows, and he doeth all things for the best. His will be done, not ours. She and the writer spent many happy hours together for over a year. Several days before she died she began to sing, "Lord Jesus, I long to be perfectly whole." I never saw any brighter face than hers. Just as the day had begun, she bade loved ones, home and friends good-bye and crossed over to be with Jesus and his redeemed. She left many sad hearts, but our loss is her gain. She was a consistent member of the M. P. Church. To know her was to love her. Her life was a blessing to many, and her death, though a great loss, was a benediction to the community. Lura, you are only sleeping in your bed of clay; by the grace of God we will meet you on the resurrection day.

Her Sister-in-Law,

ESTHER.

ALICE BROWN STRICKLAND, wife of W. A. Strickland, was born June 11, 1891, at Pine Grove, La., St. Helena Parish, and died at Hotel Dieu, Beaumont, Tex., May 3, 1927. Deceased was a daughter of the late Arch and Bythella Brown. Services were conducted by Rev. W. H. Vance, pastor of Roberts Avenue Methodist Church, assisted by Rev. R. A. Halbert, Calvary Baptist church, stewards of Roberts Avenue Church, deacons of Calvary Baptist Church; stewards of Rob-Lake Arthur Dredging Company were honorary pallbearers. She was laid to rest in Magnolia cemetery, Beaumont. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband and six children—Winifred, Myrtle Elizabeth, Ruby, W. A., Jr., Owen, Nelda Mae—and three sisters, Mrs. G. W. Mack, Mrs. Dayton Pickett, of Beaumont, Tex., and Mrs. H. H. Davis, of Sibley, La.; one brother, Edward P. Brown, of Bloomington, Ind. She was a devoted wife, mother and sister, and a true Christian and faithful church worker. Our loss is Heaven's gain. And Heaven seems so much nearer when our loved ones are waiting there for us.

A devoted sister,

MRS. ELVINA DAVIS BROWN.

AN APPRECIATION.

We, the board of stewards of Amory Methodist Episcopal Church, South, take this opportunity to express our appreciation of the life and service of one of our members, our beloved brother, E. D. GILMORE, who was called to his reward on May 9, 1927.

We recognize in Brother Gilmore's life an example of that firmness of purpose, devotion to duty, that untiring energy, undaunted courage, and love of his fellow-man, his country and his God, that made him a power for good in his community and surrounding country.

He was patient, loyal, industrious and true. He was always looking up and not down, forward and not backward—continually working on some plan for the future uplift of humanity. It was his desire and purpose in life to leave the world better than he found it. To this end he used a large amount of his means to establish and endow the Gilmore Sanitarium, the net income to be used for benevolent purposes and to promote the kingdom of his Lord and Master. As long as men believe in those who are noble, kind, worthy and generous, the name of E. D. Gilmore will live.

"His day has come, not gone;
His sun has risen, not set;
His life is now beyond
The reach of death or change,
Not ended, but begun."

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

Whereas, it has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our late sister, MRS. GEORGE W. THOMAS;

Therefore, be it resolved by the Woman's Missionary Society of Shrock Methodist church, of which she was a member, That while we bow in humble submission to the will of the Most High, we do not the less mourn the loss of our sister and worker who has been taken from us.

Resolved, That in the death of Mrs. Thomas this Society laments the loss of a sister who was ever ready to cooperate. She was a friend dear to us all, a devoted mother whose sweet, gentle life was a worthy standard for all to follow.

Resolved, That the heartfelt sympathy of this Society be extended to her family in their affliction; that this resolution be spread upon the minutes of the Missionary Society, and that a copy be sent to the family of our deceased sister, and to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mrs. J. K. Shrock, Mrs. C. L. Dickerson, Committe.

Shrock, Miss.

LONNIE L. SELLERS was born Feb. 3, 1900, and died April 13, 1927. His life was one that his most intimate friends and closest associates declared to be above reproach. Possessed of a happy, cheerful, though quiet, disposition, he met his problems and discouragements as he met his friends—with a pleasant, confident smile. He never seemed to allow himself to worry over the difficulties that confronted him, but exhibited the rarest good cheer and optimism through adversity as well as prosperity. Even during the illness immediately preceding his untimely death, the spirit of hopeful optimism did not desert him. No note of complaint escaped him, though his body was racked by disease and pain. Brother Sellers is survived by his wife, Mrs. Norma Dunn Sellers; by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sellers; by a sister, Mrs. Lola Payne; by a brother, Charles L. Sellers, and by numerous relatives and friends. Though a resident of Gibsland, La., the deceased was buried at Evergreen cemetery, near the homes of his own and his wife's parents. Brother Sellers was a good man—and God dearly loves good men. We can the more cheerfully, therefore, commend the spirit of our dead into his hands. How tender are his ministrations, both to us and to those who have passed into his presence!

Mother!

Child's Best Laxative is "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry Mother! A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" now will thoroughly clean the little bowels and in a few hours you have a well, playful child again. Even if cross, feverish, bilious, constipated or full of cold, children love its pleasant taste.

Tell your druggist you want only the genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother, you must say "California." Refuse any imitation.

ZONE MEETING AT RAYMOND, MISS.

The second group meeting of this zone was held at Raymond, Miss., Jackson District, April 27, at 10:30 o'clock. The following Societies were represented: Learned, Edwards, Reeves' Chapel, Bolton, Cayuga, and Raymond, with several visitors from Jackson, Mrs. John Bush, zone leader, presiding. The devotional service was led by Rev. J. D. Ware.

Morning discussions: "Our Home Work." Mrs. J. W. Ratliff, of Edwards, read a beautiful paper on our Wesley Houses and Bethlehem Centers. I am sure when we heard the splendid report of the work these places are doing we were glad we had a part in them.

Mrs. Wood urged us to pay our pledge to the Wesley House and Scarritt fund this quarter.

Our mountain schools were very ably discussed by Mrs. Williams, of Bolton.

Miss Agnes Downing, of Reeves' Chapel, gave us a talk on the splendid work we are doing among the French people in Louisiana, especially mentioning the needs. We then had a round table discussion, conducted by Mrs. Wood, and a review of the responsibilities of the lay women of the church. Problems: "How to get the people more interested in mission and Bible study." Mrs. Orsbon, of Kentucky, was then introduced, and gave us an interesting talk on how they conduct missions and Bible study; also, Mrs. Marley, of Jackson, spoke. I believe the all-day meetings for mission study was favored.

During a delicious luncheon, served by the Raymond ladies, we were royally entertained with several solos and duets.

Our evening service was opened with devotional conducted by Rev. H. J. Moore. Then Miss Maggie M. Jones, of Jackson, gave us a very interesting talk, "Why train our young people for the church." When she finished we were all ready to return to our auxiliaries and try to do better work with our young people.

Mrs. Wood gave us some echoes from the Council meeting, mentioning several steps forward, as paying our Belle Bennett fund, and the young people's work.

Edwards was selected as our next meeting place, in July.

MRS. J. O. WARE, Secretary.

DISTRICT MEETING AT VAIDEN, MISS.

The district meeting for the southern end of Grenada District was held at Vaiden, Friday, May 13, 1927.

The morning session was opened with devotional services, conducted by Rev. W. O. Hunt, the pastor at Vaiden.

Mrs. T. C. Vaiden, a member of the Vaiden Society, gave all visitors a cordial welcome. The reports of the delegates from adult societies were given at the morning session. These reports were very encouraging, showing, as they did, that so much good work had been accomplished during the past year.

Mrs. R. P. Neblett, our beloved Conference Corresponding Secretary, gave the message from the Council. This message was so full of information and given in such an earnest, inspired way that I am sure all present felt their hearts thrilled and desires formed to do better work in our Master's kingdom.

At noon a delicious lunch was served by the members of the Vaiden Society.

The afternoon was given to the presentation of Young People's and Children's Work. The devotional service was conducted by Rev. A. W. Bailey, pastor at Duck Hill. Mrs. W. H. Ratliff, Conference Superintendent of Young People's Work, was present, and had charge of the Young People's hour. The Young People gave a most interesting and entertaining program, and Mrs. Ratliff closed the hour with a very earnest and inspiring talk.

Rev. S. A. Brown gave a most interesting talk about a work that is dear to every heart, our Orphans' Home at Jackson.

Then the children, under the direction of Mrs. Hoge, of Vaiden, gave their program, which was very fine and thoroughly enjoyed by all present. All present feel much indebted to the young people and children for the fine presentation of their work through their program and through the reports of the past year's work as given by the delegates present.

Mrs. Swetman gave a good talk on "Why Mothers Should Attend the Meetings."

The session was closed with prayer, led by Rev. E. S. Lewis, presiding elder of Grenada District.

Our sincere thanks are given to the members of Vaiden auxiliary for their gracious hospitality, for the beautiful flowers that adorned the church and for the sweet music that added so much to the pleasure of the meeting.

LUDIE STOKES,
District Secretary.

SUMMARY OF DISTRICT SECRETARY'S REPORT.

(Made by the District Secretary at the Grenada District Conference held in Oxford, May 4, 1927.)

I think the preachers and laymen composing this conference would be interested in the financial report of the treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Society of the North Mississippi Conference. This report is for 1926:

Raised for connectional work	$47,506.84
Local work	37,217.19
Supplies	8,230.37
Total	$92,954.40
Amount sent to Council treasurer, including Bennett fund	$40,046.00
Increase over 1925	$ 8,694.33

The above report is for the entire Conference. The leading districts were: Greenville, $6,982.97; Greenwood, $6,840.22; Grenada, $6,586.99.

The adult society in Grenada District giving the largest amount of money was Holly Springs, $1,173.35. The Young People's Society contributing the most was Grenada College, $86. This was not only the most given by young people in this district, but was also the second largest offering by young people in the Conference. Our Juniors at Holly Springs led all Junior Societies of the Conference in the amount of their offering, $255.50.

Shrock Juniors again won the district and Conference pennants for the highest number of points on the Standard of Excellence, 290, and Grenada Juniors came second in the district.

Durant won special mention in Bible and Mission study because all four of the societies there, two Adult, one Young People's, and one Junior, at-

QUEEN VICTORIA LYDIA E. PINKHAM

Two Famous Women Born the Same Year

In the year 1819, two babies were born whose lives were destined to have a far reaching influence. One was born in a stern castle of Old England, the other in a humble farmhouse in New England.

Queen Victoria through her wisdom and kindliness during a long and prosperous reign has become enthroned in the hearts of the British people. Lydia E. Pinkham through the merit of her Vegetable Compound has made her name a household word in many American homes.

One of the many women who praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Mrs. Adolph Bratke of 4316 South 13th St., South Omaha, Nebr., who was in a rundown condition for four years before she tried the Compound. "I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound," she writes, "and I have felt my health steadily improving." Mrs. Bratke continued to take the Compound for a year and a half and at the end of that time she found herself in excellent health. "I am feeling fine now and do all my work myself," she wrote in her most recent letter. "I am the mother of six and manage an eight-room house without anybody to help."

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

Old Folks Need a Mild Laxative —Not a "Physic"

Most men and women past fifty must give to the bowels some occasional help, else they suffer from constipation. One might as well refuse to aid weak eyes with glasses as to neglect a gentle aid to weak bowels.

Is your present laxative, in whatever form, promoting natural bowel "regularity"—or must you purge and "physic" every day or two to avoid sick headache, dizziness, biliousness, colds, or sour, gassy stomach?

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin helps to establish natural, regular bowel movement even for those chronically constipated. It never gripes, sickens or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

Sunday School

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

A child that is brought up under the best Christian instruction and religious influences has an infinitely better chance to become a strong Christian than the one brought up under the most hurtful influences. No one will deny this. There are seven under 25 years of age out of every ten who receive no kind of religious instruction in the home or in the church. This seven must be reached and taught by the church if they are saved in any sense. Our aim in training parents and teachers is that this vast number of untaught children and youth may be reached with the good news. It requires skill, wisdom, and tact, as well as a good case of religion to reach and teach this growing life. To look at this task squarely and honestly is enough to break the heart. It requires a united church, united in the truest sense of the word, to begin to tackle this job. God help us to get together and help us do something for this unreached mass of perishing humanity before we are all lost together.

Why are we having training schools and training classes? The one reason is that we may place the leaven of the gospel in the hearts of the children before the leaven of evil gets in its deadly work. We hope to have at least one teacher in every school in the Conference who has some knowledge of what ought to be done. This one teacher can help all the other teachers into a more effective way. We are anxious to help the most needy schools in the Conference. To this end we are praying and working, but we must have the full co-operation of the men in charge of the people. It requires team work of the highest order to do this work effectively. We are not asking that any one help us, but we are craving the privilege of helping those who feel the need of help. Call upon us and we will do our best to stand by you and help in every way possible.

Men wanting Cokesbury schools are expected to organize the class, entertain the instructor, and pay railroad fare. The Sunday School Board will pay for the services of the instructor. This seems to be fair to all concerned. Encourage a little, pray for us a great deal, criticise us to our face, and we will get along much faster and better.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Mr. Hull had Rev. John L. Ferguson, Jr., from Nashville with him in a series of County and Bi-County Institutes the latter part of May. He will write up these meetings or have the secretaries do so. They seemed to be greatly delighted with the work and with the results.

This has been a month of church planning for me. I am glad to render this service and know that if the consultation takes place before the plans are adopted, it will mean much more to the work than if you wait until you have bought your plans and then try to get a satisfactory building.

Many churches are planning to improve their buildings and make them over. This will help them. The better use of buildings will always mean improved work and advancement.

I wish to call attention to the July Sunday School Magazine. This one issue is worth the price of the magazine for a year. If you do not have a copy, get it and read it, especially the article by Miss Moon on recreation, and the article by Dr. Duvall on the Curriculum. You will find articles that will greatly aid you in the lessons for the month also in the magazine part of this periodical.

Sunday School Day money is coming in slowly. Your Board is counting on the observance of this day really and truly to put over the program throughout the Conference. Many of the schools have shown a most gratifying increase in their offerings this year. If you do not have the Programs, let us know and we will send them to you. We have ordered them sent out to all the pastors in the Conference, and if they do not get them we can get a refund on this if we find it out.

June will start our Vacation Schools. We have three of these scheduled. I trust they will go over in a way that will cheer us all and make progress in kingdom work. It is a new development of our work, as we have had neither the time nor the workers to assist. I am exceedingly glad that we will have both at this time.

We have had calls for more Cokesbury Schools than we could give because so many have demanded just one date and that alone. We do not complain about this, but would wish it possible to go where we ought to go, and that can only be done by shifting dates and a willingness on the part of all to accommodate ourselves to the occasions. This is written to let you know if you are willing to take perhaps a date that is not quite as suitable, we may be able to give you a school at this late date. Let us hear from you.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

ROCHE'S EMBROCATION

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

On May 26 the bids were opened for the new educational building of the First Methodist Church of Alexandria, and it is probable that the contract will be let shortly.

* * *

The presiding elders were recently in session at Alexandria in the interest of flood relief measures among our preachers. The writer had the pleasure of lunching with them.

* * *

We are in receipt of a letter from Rev. W. F. Roberts, of Ida, La., who is Educational Director of the North Caddo Standard Training School, in which he states that plans are about perfected for his school, which will open at Vivian on the 19th instant.

* * *

We are in receipt of a copy of the well-balanced program of the Elementary Council of the New Orleans District recently held at Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, with Mrs. R. H. Harper leading, and a splendid report from that district of elementary work.

* * *

The office has been deeply interested in the fine report sent out by Mr. G. A. Perkins, of the Southwestern Agency of the American Bible Society, which is located at 900 St. Charles Street, New Orleans. Mr. Perkins tells of trips to every part of the flooded territory and to every refugee camp in Louisiana and Mississippi, and of the splendid distribution of a wonderful lot of Bibles. Mr. Perkins paints a graphic picture of his visits and asks the prayers of our people in his work.

* * *

We thank Dr. Albert S. Lutz, of West Monroe, for a late bulletin of his church program. Dr. Lutz tells us that the flood conditions did not keep his people from carrying on the work of their "Forward Looking Church."

* * *

We have received from Mr. W. J. Daniel the Sunday School Day offering of his school at Angie, La., and thank him for the remittance.

* * *

We have received from Mr. A. M. Mayo, District Secretary of the Lake Charles District, a report of the District Council held in Lake Charles on May 27, at which many matters were taken under consideration in the interest of Sunday school work.

Sunday, May 29, was spent in Homer and Haynesville. The writer reached Homer on Saturday afternoon late and had a fine over-night visit with the parsonage folks. We visited several departments of the Homer Sunday school on Sunday morning, and enjoyed the Sunday School Day program. The Sunday school folks at Homer were delighted to have Mrs. W. W. Templeton, of Tennessee, with them, who took part on the program with a beautiful story. Mrs. Templeton was in the community for the Homer-Haynesville Standard Training School, which opened at Haynesville later in the day of May 29. Homer has, without a doubt, one of the finest men's Bible classes in the State. The goal of the offering for Sunday School Day was fixed by the superintendent at $50.

In the afternoon we went to Haynesville, where, at 3:30, we held a fine classification meeting for the Training School. There were about sixty interested workers present for the opening, and two members of the faculty, Mrs. Templeton and Prof. J. D. Walker, of Millsaps. Prof. Walker preached for Brother Johnson at the evening hour to a large congregation. The other two members of the faculty, Dr. R. H. Wynn and Dr. W. W. Drake, arrived on Monday, and the school went off in fine spirit, with prospects of being one of the best, with the largest number of credits ever held in North Louisiana outside of Shreveport.

MORE MONEY

If your Church, Ladies' Aid, Sunday School, Epworth League or Missionary Society needs MORE MONEY I will be glad to tell you of a successful plan of raising it. Write me today and I will send you the plan in detail. It always produces results.

GEORGE H. BARKER
1308 W. Goodale St.
COLUMBUS, OHIO

During our visit to Haynesville we had a conference with the leaders from Ruston in the interest of a Standard Training School for Ruston, which they hope to make the best in history. Brother Kleinschmidt, the presiding elder of the Ruston District, is putting a great deal of effort toward the coming District Sunday School Conference at Simsboro on July 8.

* * *

En route from Haynesville the writer had a pleasant visit with the parsonage folks at Clay, La., enjoying very much meeting with Brother Claude Mayo, his wife, and fine family of boys and girls. Brother Mayo is planning a circuit-wide Cokesbury Training School in July, which we hope will be a great success.

* * *

We acknowledge a most pleasant visit to the office from Dr. M. F. Wilson, member of the Board of Managers of the New Orleans Standard Training Schoool. Dr. Wilson was on his way to a medical meeting in North Louisiana, and although his discovery of our office was somewhat accidental, we were none the less glad to see him.

The newspapers and magazines are full of the splendid accomplishment of the youthful Captain Charles Lindbergh, and we desire to add our voice to the praises being sung for him. The country has not been so thrilled for many years, and we are proud of one who, by his own ingenuity and courage, has accomplished a feat so wonderful as to herald him as the "Viking of the Air."

But through all of this praise and glory there is one outstanding fact. Jesus said, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth," and this is certainly true of Captain Lindbergh, for it is his modesty and utter lack of braggadocio and of false pretense that has gained for him the admiration of the world. He, least of all, expected the results of his trip as he boarded his ship armed with a half dozen letters of introduction, never dreaming of the triumphant welcome that awaited him when, straight as a homing pigeon, guided by the tiniest instrument and the hand of the All Powerful, he flew to the waiting, cheering crowds. And so we see in Lindbergh's triumph a beautiful lesson of modesty that is free from the egotism that often attends our triumphs, and realize that his modesty and meekness are the parts of his trip that are winning for him the hearts of the nations.

Conference Superintendent.

A FINE REVIVAL AT JONESBORO, LA.

It gives me joy to represent the congregation of Jonesboro Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by reporting on our wonderful meeting, recently closed; indeed, to us, a true revival—and I am sure that I make no statement that any one vitally interested in the extension of Christ's kingdom will contradict, when I say that our church was surely ripe for the meeting.

The meeting was conducted by the much beloved evangelist, Rev. Dan Kelly, of Hattiesburg, Miss., assisted by Rev. Otis Spinks, of Louisiana, who had charge of the singing and the young people's services.

A deep work of spiritual grace was felt during the entire meeting, and our church reached a higher plane of religious experience and enthusiasm, under the ministry of these good men, than it has known for a long time.

The meeting started on Easter morning, April 17, and ran two weeks, all too short, closing on Sunday night, May 1. We wanted to "adopt" Brother Kelly and Brother Spinks, and make our revival "one grand sweet song."

The writer would so love to touch on every service, in detail, but am sure the memories and inspirations linger, to help us better continue the spirit of the meeting—truly another "mountain-top experience" to us all. As Brother Waltman said, "God was surely with us." He sent Brother Kelly to Jonesboro, and how grateful we feel for having had and felt his great influence. Throughout the services it seems the thought was impressed that the business of our lives is to have the love of Christ grow more and more into our characters, for "talent develops itself in solitude, but character in the stream of life."

Brother Kelly is truly a great evangelist, so easy and simple in his manner. He preaches the gospel in the convincing way of a man that knows God, believes that the Spirit will use it; and God did use it in largely convincing Jonesboro of sin, and then the duty and obligations for us to "carry on." In the beautiful messages they gave to us we were made to realize more fully that "the harvest is ready, but the laborers are few," then with new inspirations we do rejoice now, in the splendid work, the results already of the men and women of Jonesboro who have seemed really to catch the spirit in which Brother Kelly gave his messages and are taking up where he left off the work so needed, pushing on to newer and higher ground.

At the invitations given there were fifteen who answered the call, and joined the church; one by letter, fourteen by profession of faith.

I pause here to mention briefly the "Love feast" that was given by Brother Kelly on the last Sunday afternoon of the meeting held at our church at 3 o'clock. All the services were beautiful, but to me the sweetest, most touching was this love feast. It caused those who perhaps had never testified before to tell how they had been impressed by the services. It was at this service that Joe, our pastor's son, surrendered his life to God, and I shall never forget this service—it was certainly a "Love Feast." It lifted us "out of the valley to the mountain tops," and we thank Brother Kelly for what it meant to us.

It seems fitting, too, to mention the special service for the young people, conducted on the last Saturday night of the meeting by Brother Spinks. This was such a beautiful service. Especially was Brother Spinks' sermon very impressive, and much was gotten from his words. It was at this service that Brother Kelly had Brother Spinks to read to us "A Father's Tribute to His Son," written by Brother Kelly at the death, and in memory of, his son Eugene. We felt that after hearing such a beautiful tribute it was only another proof of the wonderful influence of Brother Kelly's life on his sons and of the beautiful companionship between Eugene and his mother. As I listened to that tribute it brough back to me the memories, too, of my oldest brother, who died just at Eugene's age—just out of college, a beautiful Christian character—and so I could better appreciate the meaning of Brother Kelly's tribute to Eugene.

Then came the last night of the meeting. The church was packed, and it seemed more than ever that God guided Brother Kelly's words that night. So many new promises were made, such as rededication of so much for his service.

The Sunday school, the church services, the Missionary Society, the prayer meeting especially, have all seemed to "put on new life" since the meeting. We had the pleasure of hearing Mr. Elmer Cox lead our prayer meeting the first Wednesday night after the revival closed. We only wished for Brother Kelly to be with us that night, to know what a wonderful service it really was.

The meeting having closed, we examined ourselves; humbly before God we have declared our love, and rededicated our hearts; we reaffirmed our faith, and started to our tasks. Yes, it will require united effort to succeed now. We promised Brother Kelly to do our part—and in his name. Now let us be sure it is done.

"So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him. yea, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, feed my sheep." (John 21:15.)

Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn.

YOUR GREATEST PROBLEM—THAT BOY OF YOURS.

What kind of a man will he be ten, twenty, thirty years from now. Every parent knows it depends entirely upon the training he is getting now, his associations, ideals and aspirations.

Mr. Robert K. Morgan, Principal of Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., has been training boys thirty years. He know boys. He wants your boy. He recognizes in every boy possibilities which if developed will make him a leader. He wants to develop that trait in boys. Robt. K. Morgan is a Christian gentleman of strong, wholesome inspiring personality and his school is a material projection of that character.

Write Mr. L. I. Mills, Secretary Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., to-day. He will send you a catalog and tell you about what this school can do for your boy.

SOME VERSES.

(Read at the Birthday Celebration in Honor of Rev. W. M. Williams, Magee, Miss.)

Brother Williams: To us this is the most
Auspicious occasion of the year—
The honor of congratulating you
Whose love we hold so dear.

Learning that way out West in Kansas—some seventy Mays ago,
A little child was born whose
Future none could know.

But this child has grown and grown,
Following God's wise plan,
Until to-day he's loved and honored
By woman and man.

Boys and girls—little children, too—
Delight his name to call,
Knowing that upon the least of these
His greatest favor falls.

His keeping in close touch with the Master,
Ministering to friend and foe,
Has been his highest ambition,
Seeking God's will only to know.

These long years of service!
Such a beautiful life you have given
To help struggling humanity
Find a sweet refuge in Heaven!

Then we come, Brother Williams,
Not with costly gifts so rare,
Not with trophies, garlands, or even
Beautiful flowers so fair;

But with hearts of love we gladly give,
Thou "prince among men,"
Love to you on your birthday
This day—"Seven times ten."

From the Woman's Missionary Society
Accept these little gifts of love,
And may they ever remain with you
Until God shall call you above.

The man with vision and no task is a dreamer. The man with task and no vision is a drudge. The man with both task and vision is a hero.—Dr. W. C. Poole.

I doubt whether it is good for a church to be on easy street—that is to say, to have so much wealth that funds for its current expenses, its capital outlays and its missionary enterprises roll in without effort. But it is certainly good for the spiritual life of the church to make the effort necessary to keep its finances in first-class condition, its property in good repair, and to meet promptly its obligations to the missionary enterprises of the church. —Charles S. Ward, in the Congregationalist.

A LETTER FROM MISS HOOPER AT HOUMA.

"May 23, 1927.

"The water is rising rapidly in our section of the State. We cannot tell yet how much will come to Houma, or what preparations to make. The crest is due in Morgan City just a week from to-day. The predictions are that there will be a five-foot rise in this section. As we are nine feet high, this still gives the school property a chance to escape the floods, but it is not yet certain that this will be the highest, and we have to be a little careful.

"It is quite certain that all of the towns and villages west of us will be under water. Indeed, some of them have as much as three feet already. Many refugees from these towns and the plantations around Houma will be brought in to Houma. I have written for instructions as to the use of our grounds and buildings in this time of disaster, if we ourselves escape the water, which still seems possible, though not certain.

"We are hoping to hold the school together till Friday of this week, or regular closing day. This may become impossible, but we shall wait till the last minute to disband. In the meantime we have to plan for the emergencies that are sure to come next week, if they delay that long. * * *"

Missionary women—if ever Houma Mission needed us, it is now, with her ministries of mercy and her outstretched hands toward want and devastation!

Come on with your supplies and cash donations! Help Houma Mission be the Angel of Light she longs to be and is commissioned to be. She looks to you to help her to answer this heart-breaking S. O. S.

A WORD FROM LOUISIANA RURAL WORKER.

Dear Co-Workers: Had I known that I should be able to do so little in the office to which I was assigned at Conference, I certainly should have refused to accept the honor and responsibility. Since I came West, because of father's illness, Mrs. Carre has agreed to look after the rural work in my absence, and I appreciate her kindness in undertaking this in addition to her other numerous duties.

I was delighted to turn the Baton Rouge District over to Mrs. L. A. Sims, of Hammond, who has shown her efficiency in the splendid zone work she has done during the past year.

We are distressed over the flood situation and trouble that has come to so many.

Sincerely,

MRS. H. N. BROWN.

Keep Away from Calomel!!
It is Quicksilver—Mercury

Never take calomel. It is mercury—a dangerous drug. If you are constipated, bilious, sick, headachy, stomach sour, meals don't taste right, hot days make you drowsy and lazy, take Dodson's Liver Tone. That's all you need.

Calomel salivates. That's why you have to take salts the next day to get it out of your system so it will not eat your bones. You have to stay at home a day to recuperate from the shock it gives you. No wonder Dodson's Liver Tone is so popular. All you do is take a spoonful at night. By morning you are cleaned out good, head is clear, you feel as light as a feather; you are not sick, no danger of salivation, and you can eat anything you want. Think of that.

Get the big bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone from your nearest store. They all have it. Keep it in the house so you will have it handy to take nights before going to bed.

District conference at Cleveland, July 14-15. We need a great coming together after the things we have suffered and felt in the flood. We desire very earnestly a deeply spiritual and brotherly fellowship. A strong program will be prepared and a full attendance is anxiously desired. Brother S. V. Wall, our district lay leader, is anxious for a full representation of our charges in their lay leaders. They will be given right of way in the morning session of the second day. Now, let daily prayers be made for the presence of the Divine Spirit upon our sessions.

We want live issues and vital discussions. Whatever may from time to time engage the thoughts of men, our personal relation to the issues of moral and spiritual life stand first with all deeply thinking men. All the salvation we can or shall ever know is involved in knowing that at the center and heart of all is intelligence, law and love, and these are working for man's good.

THE HEALING QUESTION.

By Dr. Charles C. Jarrell, Secretary, General Hospital Board.

"He is chastened also with pain upon his bed." Job 33:19. The human infant is born with a cry of pain upon its lips. Sickness and pain, sorrow and tears follow as the lot of the race.

There has always been a "healing question." The medicine man, the priest, the philosopher and the physician have wrestled with it. Religions have been built around attempted solutions of the problem. Healing cults have arisen from age to age. Also from early ages common sense and science have sought to relieve pain, prolong life and prevent disease.

Jesus Healed.

Orthodox Christians believe that Jesus healed all manner of sickness and disease and raised the dead. Miracles of healing took place under the preaching of the Apostles. Gifts of tongues, gifts of prophecy and gifts of healing have been claimed in every age of Christian history.

Our own denomination faces the "healing question." We must make some answer to the pain that is in the world. What shall we say?

Answer of Rome.

1. Shall we give the answer that Rome makes at the shrine of a medieval saint?

Shall we proclaim with rapturous lips, "a miracle, a miracle?" If any one thinks Rome left this behind the middle ages, let him read the story of the "Little Flower," recently canonized by Rome and idolized by millions for her beautiful work in the armies of France during the World War. The story of her life has been told in many languages, and the faithful are assured that many miracles have been performed in answer to prayers offered in her name.

Shall we then offer a miracle of healing at the shrine of a saint as our answer to the sickness of the world? I think not.

Answer of Christian Science.

2. Shall we offer a form of self-hypnosis like that offered in Christian Science? Mr. Dolly said some years ago: "Henissy, if the doctors had more Christianity and the Christian Scientist had more science you could send for either one of them with perfect safety, provided you had a good nurse." There is no indication that our church is ready to make the answer of the Christian Scientist to the sickness in the world.

Answer of Coue.

3. Shall we make the offer of the late M. Emile Coue, of France? Every one was reciting his famous formula a year ago: "Every day in every way I am growing better and better." I tried it on the toothache once; but it did not save me from the dentist's chair or the dentist's bill. I don't believe our church seriously contemplates offering that formula as an answer to the world's pain.

Faith-Healers.

4. Shall we offer the so-called "healing-gospels" of the Protestant faith-healers or healing evangelists?

Here are some headlines from the "National Labor Tribune," put out by the Bosworth Brothers as their advertising medium: Wholly Deaf, Healed. Sick twenty years; operated on fourteen times; prayed for the healed. Nervous prostration; twenty-eight doctors in twenty-one months; instantly healed. Ear Drum Gone; seventeen doctors failed; instantly healed. Born paralyzed; now well. Living without kidneys;" etc. etc.

Aimee's Answer.

Mrs. McPherson and Mr. Charles Price send out similar press matter and make similar claims.

Following the Price Campaign in Vancouver, British Columbia, acclaimed results were investigated by a large committee as follows: Eleven ministers, eight physicians (Christians), three university professors and an eminent member of the legal profession. After months of study the Committee reported as follows: Of 350 proclaimed, five were cured of functional (not organic) disorders, thirty-nine died in six months; five became insane; and the remaining 301 remained sick.

Mrs. McPherson held a monster meeting in Denver and hundreds were reported healed. Leading Christian workers asserted that not a single genuine healing had come to light. A Denver physician issued the following statement:

"A young man suffering from tuberculosis proclaimed from the platform his cure. Thirteen days later he died. A young woman with tuberculosis of the hip joint threw off her body-cast and proclaimed herself healed. Ten minutes later I saw her in the ante-room lying on a couch in a state of collapse.

"A patient of mine (locomotor ataxia) surrendered his cane amid wild cheers from the audience. Next day he returned to my office with a new cane.

"A retired pastor proclaimed he was cured of lameness. He is still drawing compensation for this disability. An old gentleman with left-side paralysis went on the platform to be healed. In his zeal he waved his right arm while the crowd cheered with great enthusiasm."

This work is often coupled with a fanatical rejection of physical means, and is thus the source of serious harm. Most of it is a mixture of fraud, fanaticism, hypnosis and self-deception.

I don't believe our Methodist Episcopal Church, South, intends to make this answer to the pain and sickness in the world.

"I Am Sorry."

5. What answer shall we make in behalf of our God to the pain of the race? What has our religion to say on this ancient problem? Pious frauds, rambling nonsense, furious fanaticism, stupid silence—all alike are out of place in this age. Some answer we must make.

Shall we confront the world's pain and simply say, "I am sorry?" Shall we just train men to sympathize, experts in consolation seeking to cover the naked wounds of the world with words—mere verbal florists and lachrymal comforters? Not in a world where preventive medicine and aseptic surgery, radium and X-Ray, helio-therapy and hospital care are adding a decade to human life. A thousand times No!

Shall we say to darkening eyes, "I am sorry," when a surgeon's knife would remove the cataract and restore the daily occupation? Shall we say, "I am sorry," to a frail woman suffering as did the Galilean who touched the hem of Jesus' garment, when radium will do for her what Jesus did for the semi-invalid two thousand years ago?

Words of sympathy fall more softly and more fragrant than rose petals on June mornings when sympathy is all we can possibly give. But when instruments of healing are lying around us, and hospital care is easily available, it is sheer mockery to substitute words of sympathy for deeds of mercy.

Answer of the Good Samaritan.

The Levite had his nose in a book, the priest had his head in the air, while the wounded traveler was bleeding to death. Both sought to substitute ritual for righteousness and sacrifices in the temple for mercies by the wayside. The Good Samaritan wrote his creed in his deed and gave a practical exhibition of Christlike religion. Jesus said, "Go and do likewise."

The operating room of a Methodist hospital has often been a shrine of Divine healing. The elevator of a Methodist hospital is the twentieth-century form of Jacob's Ladder: ascending are the feet of gifted doctors to deeds of wonder and of skill; descending are the feet of devoted nurses into the sick rooms of humanity to translate the spirit of Jesus Christ into twentieth century service to human need.

Prayer for the Sick.

On such service we have the right to call down the blessing of God. The believer will then put himself into God's hands and ask him for a speedy and full recovery. He will not reject medical counsel, but use the means which are available, praying that the Lord may use these means for his restoration to health. To know that we are in his hands, in life or death, is the blessed portion of his children."

AN EARNEST APPEAL.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

In the flooded district of Mississippi and Louisiana there are many preachers who need relief and many churches which need repair.

The people in some places have suffered so sorely that they can not give their preachers the support promised at the beginning of the year. Their pastors are willing to suffer with them, but our people and preachers in other sections ought not to allow them to suffer needlessly.

Many churches need repair in communities where the people have lost so much they are not equal to the work of repair which is called for. For this purpose a considerable sum is needed.

From reports which I have sought and obtained from every point in the field I estimate that it will require for the relief of our preachers and the repair of our churches in the flooded districts about twelve thousand dollars in Mississippi and thirteen thousand dollars in Louisiana, or a round sum of twenty-five thousand dollars.

Some of this amount I am seeking from friends outside the States of Mississippi and Louisiana; but I can not hope for much from these friends because they have already contributed largely to the funds raised by the Red Cross organization.

The Red Cross organization has done a noble work, for which it deserves all praise; but it can not relieve preachers and repair churches, such work lying quite outside the scope of its efforts and the purpose of its organization.

In view of all these facts I make earnest appeal to our preachers and people in the sections of Mississippi and Louisiana which have not suffered by the flood to make generous contributions for the purposes named and make these contributions speedily. "He helps best who helps quickly."

A NEW CANAAN?

Students come
To my classes in the University.
I have them talk. Campus topics, social life, economics, education, politics—
Many subjects.

Religion.
Ah, religion!
"I can't talk on that;
I haven't thought about religion very much."
Students eighteen, twenty, twenty-five and more years old—
Never thought about religion very much.

Boy, girls—
Men, women:
Children soon come into their lives;
In a land born of Religion's deep travail,
And nursed upon Religion's ample breast,
Taught at Religion's knee.
Are they forgetful of that mother-love and mother-heart that beats for them the while?—
"I never thought about religion much"—?

Fathers, mothers:
Parents of to-morrow.
Other generations growing up,
And going to the universities
To train the mind, to cultivate themselves
To be good citizens.
And must they say, when they are asked to talk about religion, "Oh, I can't do that;
I never thought about religion much"—?

The blame,
And if they do?
How often have they heard the Bible read or conversation made Upon religious subjects in their homes while they were growing up?
Do we think about religion very much?

People talk
About the things that interest them the most.
If it should be—town topics,
social life, art, industry, the sciences, why not Religion?

"STUDENT SUICIDE."

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Under the above caption, the Western Christian Advocate, of Cincinnati, Ohio, enforces the lesson that religion must prevail in educational institutions or the very life of the student body be imperiled.

The editor says:

"The suicide of students has become a matter of national concern. Pennsylvania, Princeton, Johns Hopkins, Michigan, Chicago, Southern California, and Leland Stanford, Jr., Universities are taking special precaution to curb this tendency. We recall that about twenty years ago Pennsylvania University suffered an epidemic of suicide. The provost at the time called the leading members of the faculty together and appointed a committee to make a special study of the subject. In their report it was claimed that the trouble was psychological; that the curriculum of the school and management thereof made no provision for the support of spiritual resources in an hour of intellectual distress, social breakdown, or moral irregularity. The significance of this at the time was regarded as a discovery, and was given considerable comment and consideration.

"In order to provide for the creation of a spiritual reserve in the student's life, it was then recommended that a place be made in the curriculum for religious and moral education. An elaborate program was produced and adopted. Meanwhile the great student body was divided into seven sections and a Y. M. C. A. organized in each.

"The entire atmosphere of the school after awhile was changed; later 'Billy' Sunday, the eminent evangelist, while in Philadelphia, had opportunity to speak to the student body of that university. Hundreds of them came to hear him. He received the most enthusiastic support ever given him by a student body. When he gave the call for decisions for Christ, hundreds came forward to take a stand with him and to pledge themselves to the Christian life.

"Now it is verily true that the leaders of our educational enterprises must recognize the place of religion in the life of the student body. Moral training is necessary as well as intellectual training. Behind both of these must be found always the spiritual life. This must be dealt with and provided for if the entire man is to receive the education that will make him a valuable servant to society and enable him to live a contented idealistic life."

Some weeks ago Dr. B. L. Wyman, a notable physician of Birmingham, published an interview upon the subject of student suicide in which he was reported as speaking as follows:

"The widespread discussion and teaching of evolution in some of the colleges and of modernism in religious belief in some pulpits and in the press has so undermined the faith and belief in immortality that the young man or young woman who has suffered some grievous disappointment or some severe trial in the loss of some loved ones, becomes so despondent that a sudden impulse, that they are unable to control, drives them to the rash act. Having no belief in immortality, the suicide, by a process of false reasoning, decides to end all of his troubles, imaginary or real, by death."

In the April number of a leading weekly magazine appeared an article by a writer who professed to have investigated with care the whole matter of student suicide, and he reaches the following conclusions:

"After talking to a score of scientists, educators, psychologists, neurologists, and others, and reading what a hundred or more of them say, I got right back to where we started by talking with the students themselves in their rooms.

"We have knocked the props of home, of religion, of faith in womandhood out from under a generation of college students, and given them no substantial foundations to replace these.

"We have shaken their faith in almost everything, even their government.

"A friend of mine who teaches in a large preparatory school in the East told me he was shocked to find that, of eighty essays written by boys in his class on the United States Constitution, every one contained sneers at our form of government and revealed cynical doubt regarding our alleged liberty.

"Another prop is being weakened."

Here are three independent witnesses speaking upon the same subject and reaching substantially the same conclusions. Whatever may be thought concerning what they say in all its details, the truth remains beyond dispute that the want of religion in education is working destruction, destroying even the bodily lives of students.

Of course, beyond the walls of educational institutions there are many suicides; but not a few of these are the result of religionless culture received in colleges and universities in years gone by.

Now, however we may magnify and laud intellectual culture, we cannot trust any formula of life which when developed results in zero. The education that ends in a formula of death, by that very fact is shown to be false in its teachings and mischievous in its spirit.

True education should prepare not only for life, but for life eternal. That is not practical education which leaves out of the account the endless years of immortality.

But our materialism dims the thought of immortality and weakens the hold of the powers of the world to come upon human hearts.

This materialism is penetrating even the region of psychology, and out of its penetration in that field is issuing ethical teachings which repudiate the existence and possibility of a moral standard. These spurious systems of moral science, if moral science they may be called, have reached the conclusion that "whatever is, is right," and that conclusion confuses all moral values. It is not strange that when such educational currents have been running twenty-five years they bring streams of despair and death.

It will be noted that the large majority of suicides among students is found in the colleges and universities of the North and Middle West. This fact is not without significance. The leading institutions located in those sections of our country are known to be permeated by all sorts of rationalism and skepticism.

A book published by a Northern man, Mr. Ernest Gordon, and entitled, "The Leaven of the Sadducees," reveals the facts concerning these institutions, and his revelations make a most alarming showing.

Doubt in these colleges and universities has become arrogant and defiant. A week or two ago the organ of a Northern college, which was originally founded by Lord Dartmouth to prepare missionaries for work among the Indians, truculently said, "We are proud of our unbelievers."

Conditions have fallen to a low level, indeed, when an institution proclaims that it indulges pride in its faithlessness.

It is not pleasant to say, but it is probably necessary, that it is no longer safe to send students from the South to the most conspicuous universities in the North. The Southern type of Christianity is distinctly evangelical, and the hope of religion in the United States is in this type of Christiianity. The Southern people cannot afford to import the evil leaven of rationalism and infidelity found in the liberalistic institutions of the North.

Moreover, it is not wise to engage teachers in our educational institutions who have been educated in the liberalistic institutions mentioned; or, at least, they ought to be engaged with the greatest caution and after the most careful investigation.

The strongest men educated in the North find employment at home, and when Southern institutions go to that quarter for men to compose their professorial staffs, they seldom get the strongest men. They obtain the second rate men who cannot find engagements in even the institutions in which they have imbibed their liberalistic sentiments.

Our colleges and universities should make more of strong personality and less of the artificial qualities marked by almost meaningless academic degrees.

The conspicuous Northern institutions to which reference has been made are manned by men far weaker than their predecessors, and these weaker men have succumbed to rationalistic teachings which were derided by such mighty men as James McCosh, Noah Porter, and Theodore Woolsey. It is hardly wise to use in our educational institutions the second rate products of second rate men.

REV. W. T. BAZZEL REPLIES TO HON. T. M. EVANS.

By Rev. W. T. Bazzel.

I do not wish to engage in a personal controversy through the columns of the Advocate, as such controversies usually become too personal to be of value to the church at large; but the Hon. T. M. Evans has an article in the issue of May 26 in which he criticizes me for taking a position which I in fact never took, and in which he asks certain questions which I would like to answer.

My article of May 5, to which Brother Evans replies, gives five reasons why I do not believe it wise to demand or pass anti-evolution laws; but he does not answer any one of the five reasons, but takes a clause from the fourth reason as a text upon which he builds a man of straw and then attacks said straw man with Quixotic gusto. The foregoing remark may sound like a schoolboy debate, but it expresses what seems to me to be true, so I will let it stand.

Permit me to repeat the sentence containing the clause which he misconstrues: "And if we have proclaimed and declared, and have written it into the laws of the State—that he who rejects our pet theory of man's origin rejects the whole Christian religion, why should we be amazed if he (the student) discards the church and turns atheist?" After quoting the paragraph containing the foregoing sentence, Brother Evans asks the following question:

"Now I would like to inquire as to where a minister ordained by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, acquired the authority to refer to the account given in the first three chapters of Genesis of the creation of man as 'our pet theory' of man's origin?"

Then, after quoting the ordination vows in full he asks this question: "Now, has the time come when the men who have taken these vows, and who have been ordained by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to read the Holy Scriptures and to preach the same dare to refer to the testimony of God contained therein as 'our pet theory' or to speak of the same in comparison with childish notions and childish delusions and old tradtions as Santa Claus, fairies, mermaids, sea serpents, and ghosts?"

A careful reading of all that I wrote will show that I did not refer to "the testimony of God" contained in the Scriptures as a "theory." I did not call the Genesis account of creation a "theory." In using the expression, "our pet theory," I referred to that particular interpretation of Genesis which teaches that God created all things, including man, within six days of twenty-four hours each. So you see I did not refer to the Bible, as a theory; I did not refer to Genesis as a theory; I did not call God's statement a theory. I referred to the literal, six-day interpretation as a theory; and it is a theory if it is disputed and debatable, is it not? Now, Brother, do all sincere Christians understand and interprete the first chapter of Genesis just alike, or do they differ? And if they differ, then somebody's interpretation must be just a theory. A theory may be false, or it may be true. By referring to a certain opinion as a "theory," I do not necessarily mean to imply by that term that said opinion is not true.

Certain brethren—millions of them possibly—hold to the theory that God created all things in six days of twenty-four hours each, forming man of the dust of the earth on the sixth day; other brethren hold the theory that the six days of creation mean six epochs, or periods, each lasting for many centuries of our time. The former theory I referred to as a pet theory because some who hold it also declare that all who reject or dispute said theory become atheists or heretics. My position was, and is, that a man may be a sincere and devout Christian even though he be an evolutionist, and believes that God made the first animals and the first man gradually, just as he makes all things gradually now.

Permit me to say here that I believe and fully accept all and every part of the Canonical Scriptures just as sincerely and devoutly as any man who ever stood before the bar of an Annual Conference to take upon himself the solemn ordination vows of the Christian ministry; but I do not consider myself as wise as the Omniscient Author of the Bible, nor do I deem myself wise enough to excommunicate all who happen to differ with me concerning the meaning of that sublime epic of Creation found in the first chapter of Genesis. I sincerely believe that intolerance will drive more young students away from Christianity than the mere teaching of the evolutionary or any other theory of man's origin can ever do. I furthermore believe that all this demand for anti-evolution laws to protect religious opinion is a manifestation of the mediaeval spirit of intolerance which will produce more harm than good to the church.

I am not surprised to find that men are intolerant; it has ever been so, that a man feels that his own particular set of opinions are absolutely true, and all contrary opinions absolutely false. But I confess that I was surprised to have Brother Evans raise a question as to my orthodoxy and insinuate that I had broken my vows on the sole ground that I used the expression "our pet theory" as has been stated. I wonder if he would have me excommunicated as a heretic just for that?

As to comparing the testimony of God contained in the Holy Scriptures with childish delusions—Santa Claus, fairies, etc.—here is exactly what I said:

"Youth is in an iconoclastic period. As the wide-awake boy pursues his studies he learns to think for himself. Above everything else he wants to do his own thinking, and form his own conclusions. He takes peculiar delight in ridding himself of childish notions and discarding childish delusions. With the zeal of a crusader he demolishes old traditions—Santa Claus, fairies, mermaids, sea serpents and ghosts.

"Then he turns a critical eye upon the doctrines of revealed religion, ready to reject whatsoever may seem superstitious or fanciful therein. This is inevitable. The only possible way to prevent it is to refuse to educate him and keep him in profound ignorance. Now, if the young student has a Christian teacher to guide him, and it is an institution of learning which has a Christian atmosphere, we may safely leave teacher and student together, free from all legislative restrictions, to pursue their researches in philosophy and science. But if we have hedged Christian teaching about with legal restrictions, and tried to protect our tenets by civil law, seeking to chain his mind to our interpretation of the first chapter of Genesis, why should we wonder if he rebels? And if we have proclaimed and declared—and have written into the laws of the State—that he who rejects our pet theory of man's origin rejects the whole Christian religion, why should we be amazed if he discards the church and turns atheist?"

So I did not speak of the testimony of God in comparison with such childish traditions as Santa Claus, etc., but tried to point out the danger that the iconoclastic student might class the truths of revealed religion with childish superstition, especially if we declare that the whole plan of salvation must stand or fall with some theory, or opinion which many scholars reject. See?

Brother Evans seeks to justify an apppeal to civil law to protect religious opinion by referring to Aaron, the priest, who made the golden calf, and Moses, the civil ruler, who intervened. But the case referred to is not at all parallel with the modern legislature that would intervene to prevent erroneous teaching in our schools.

In the first place, Moses was not a secular lawmaker, but a law-giver, who handed down God-made laws. No legislature performs a like function now. If the Mississippi Legislature speaks invariably as a mere mouthpiece for God, then I am willing for it to dictate my opinions.

Second, the Israelites had no separate secular government at that time, but church and State were one. Moses was the supreme human authority in the church as well as the State. So it was not a secular ruler that saved Israel from the idolatry instigated by the ordained priest.

When the church taught that the earth is a flat, rectangular, stationary body, and that the sun moved around it, it was "heresy" to teach that the earth is a globe revolving around the sun. So positive were churchmen that their "theory" was correct that they were ready to put men to death for teaching the contrary. According to the orthodox of that time, the testimony of God declared positively that the earth had four corners; Joshua commanded the sun to stand still; and this Scripture—"The sun also ariseth, and the sun goeth down, and hasteth to his place where he arose" (Ecc. 1:5). There was no room for theories: the Bible declared it, and to say the earth revolves was heresy and atheism! They were just as positive that they were defending the Bible and truth as our Fundamentalists are to-day. But their "pet theory" was a false one! And the entire doctrine of Christianity did not fall with it!

"BISHOP CHARLES BETTS GALLOWAY."

I have read and re-read recently with a great deal of pleasure and profit. Bishop Candler's latest book, "Bishop Charles Betts Galloway." I enjoyed and appreciate it so much that I wish the readers of the New Orleans Christian Advocate who have not done so already, may get it and read it.

I have a peculiar affection for Bishop Galloway, for he ordained me an elder at our Annual Conference in 1904, held in his native city of Kosciusko. He also preached the opening sermon for us in the new Second, now Central Church, Columbus, Miss., in 1903.

In reading his wonderful biography by his colleague and true friend, Bishop Candler, I could see again this prince of preachers, and hear his eloquent words, as in other days of his presence and power.

The author says: "In so far as the records, letters, and other material furnished made it possible, Bishop Galloway has been allowed to write his own biography in this volume, and thereby its value is greatly enhanced. His life, thus set forth in its entirety, cannot fail to inform, instruct, and inspire those who read it; for it reveals a really great man who renders to his church and country most extraordinary services during a brilliant career of forty years. It is hoped that the record of his life may show more clearly and fully how great he was, and that it may move others to emulate his manifold excellencies; for great men exist that there may be greater!"

Bishop Candler is eminently fitted to write the biography of this most distinguished preacher, brilliant orator, and matchless Christian statesman, for he can do it so understandingly and sympathetically as they both possess many similar characteristics of personality.

By all means our preachers and leading laymen should procure this really great book and read it.

A MISSIONARY AT WORK IN CUBA.

By Rev. Garfield Evans.

Instead of writing of some particular feature of the work in Cuba that is given to us to do, I think I shall call attention to some of the activities of the past month, showing a plan of work that is typical in this pioneer section of the Cuban mission.

With an entirely new charge added to our already full and overflowing program, we realized that we should have to leave something undone, and do some rearranging. We decided to move to a more strategic location. Note the distance from Moron to Ciego de Avila on the map. We found, after much searching, a house in Moron suitable for both living and holding services, in what we thought was a very desirable location. It was promised to us in a week, with all cleaning and repairs done. Accordingly, we notified the owner of our rented house in Ciego de Avila of our desire to leave, and began packing the furniture. You should know that if one cares for his furniture at all it must be packed as carefully as if it were going on a voyage around the world. When our furniture first came from the States, the piano box was rolled around as if it were a box of books or a trunk, and finally thrown off the wagon at its destination in such a way that the piano fell out loose from the box. The piano itself was not scratched, but the thanks were not due to the men who had handled it in hauling.

At the end of the promised week we found that the owner of the house had done nothing in getting it ready for occupancy. We dared not move until it was cleaned and repaired; but half or two-thirds of our furniture was already packed. We waited and waited; a month passed and the repairing that should not have taken more than two days was finally done. Then we found, when we tried to put the Ford in the garage, that the carpenter had cut down on the specifications of the door, because it happened to be a little easier for the length of boards that he had on hand. The Cuban way would be to drive the car in at the front door, for the doors are very spacious and the cement and tile floors cannot be thus harmed; but we tried to manage some other way until the owner of the house gets the garage fixed.

During the unsettled period of moving, we kept up our regular visiting, making two very interesting trips to the country. The first of these was to a country village ten miles from Ciego de Avila, where we have services occasionally. The streets of our town had been dry and dusty for several weeks, so we felt sure the effects of the long rainy season would not be felt too much for the Ford to travel over the country roads. Accordingly, a letter was sent to the family who usually took the responsibility for the services, saying that we would come to their house for services the following week if it suited their convenience. They always gladly announced to the neighbors our coming and attended to all the necessary details with pleasure.

On the day appointed we set out early in the afternoon in order to arrive in time for some neighborly pastoral visiting. Aside from the roughness of the clay mud that had hardened into lumps, the road was fairly good. But within two miles of the house we were told that the only way to arrive at our destination was to follow a detour through several cane fields. We went through field after field, counting thirteen places where the wire had been cut to allow a passageway. Twice we lost the dim trail, and were stuck in mud that covered the hubs of the car, getting out with some difficulty. Once we had to drive between two posts that scraped the sides of the car as it passed through. We finally arrived at the house about dusk, ploughing through a veritable lake of standing water that had prevented the family leaving the house for more than a month, except to send a truck to the village through the cane field trail for medicine for the family, all of whom were sick with malarial fever. Not having been to the post office for some time, they were not expecting our arrival, and it would have been almost impossible to reach the neighbors if they had received the letter. It had rained every day, and was raining when we arrived. We could not return over that uncertain road at night, and they insisted that we stay to cheer them up, so we ate a bountiful country supper, sang from the little hymnals that we always take along with us, read and explained some passages in the Bible, played a few games, and retired to the tune of the buzzing of the mosquitoes that feasted heartily without being molested by screens or mosquito-bars. We returned home as early as possible the next day and began taking quinine, but the first days of the following month are showing that the mosquitoes won, for the pastor of the "Iglesia Metodista" is fighting "malarial bugs" with a few degrees of temperature each day.

A week later we took another country trip somewhat similar. Driving fifteen miles in the car, we left it at the house of a friend at a sugar mill and went another five miles on the railroad motor, arriving in time for service which had been announced in the house of a friend. The people came from all around; some of them walking as far as three miles. It was a beautiful night; the moonlight made it easier to walk in the tall grass and the more or less muddy places. By the time for services the house was more than full. When the service was nearly over we were surprised by a hard shower of rain. After it, came another and another, until it was impossible to leave the house. We played games until midnight. Still the people could not go home, walking through the wet grass and weeds of the cane fields and country trails—at least the women could not. So quilts were spread on floors, chairs, tables, etc., and all the women and girls stayed and slept until morning, when the men could saddle horses or they could walk after the sun shone for awhile.

Thanksgiving week brought us another interesting experience. We had promised to spend that week at an American colony, the newest of our congregations, so far as our relations with it are concerned, for it is an addition to our work made recently by the necessity of one of our missionaries returning to the States.

After leaving the train at the last little Cuban town, we were told that the three miles of road leading to the colony had been impassable for more than a week. With some effort of persuasion we succeeded in obtaining one horse and found an American gentleman going to the same place, who offered to let us use his horse while he rode with his son on his larger one. Leaving our baggage, except a small bundle of the most necessary clothing, we set out over the deepest, slipperiest, muddiest country road that we had ever read about in fables or imagined could exist. Arriving, mud-covered from head to foot, we found that a telegram had been sent us not to come until a later date, as it had rained continuously for a week and did not show signs of stopping. The telegram had missed us, we were there, and as the American colony itself had good streets we need have no fear of being shut in because of the mud. We did not know then that a week of continual rain was to follow, making visiting an impossibility, because as soon as one shower was over another one began. However, in spite of the weather, we enjoyed a bountiful, real American Thanksgiving dinner at a home with eighteen other guests, and attended the Thanksgiving service in raincoats and umbrellas with very thankful hearts for many, many things that could have been a great deal worse.

After finally getting moved, our first service and others which have followed in the new home and church, have been well attended, and with more room to grow than we had before we are looking forward to greater opportunities of spreading the gospel in this town and surrounding territory.

FEWER DISTRICTS, MORE MONEY FOR MISSIONS.

By Rev. H. M. Ellis (Alabama Conference).

Instead of this article being a tirade against the presiding elder's office, as you might have judged after glancing at the title, it is only a suggestion with a view to greater efficiency in two departments of the church, viz., presiding elder's offices and missionary financing. Many things which served our fathers well in days past should be replaced by improved methods. I am sure that our dear brethren at the front have been diligent in employing the best methods known and would appreciate further suggestions that would lead to a higher efficiency.

We have more districts and presiding elders than are necessary. The work done by loyal presiding elders is valuable, but it can be done to better advantage in a different manner. When I say that it is possible for us to pay each presiding elder in nearly all of the Conferences a $4,000 salary and still have approximately $360,382 left to be applied to mission charges out of a 10 per cent assessment based on pastors' salaries, I would not miss my mark very far. I base my calculations on the current Yearbook just from the press.

Our loyal laymen who have been blessed with large means give their thousands to carry out the great commission. When we think of their diligence in practicing efficiency in their own respective lines, we should be equally diligent in seeking to employ greater efficiency in appropriating their gifts of love after they have passed into our hands. None the less should we strive for efficiency in handling small sums contributed by sacrificing poor people.

If you will turn to pages 480 and 482 in the 1927 Yearbook and make a little study of all Conferences except Arizona, California Oriental, Denver, Illinois, Indian Mission, New Mexico, Northwest, Texas Mexican Mission, Western Mexican Mission, and all of the foreign Conferences, noting present number of districts in each, amount paid to presiding elders, number of charges, etc., and then, divide the number of charges by 40, you will have revealed to you a fact that is worthy of your best consideration. As a general average, our presiding elders are serving less than twenty-four charges per elder. You will note that within the Conferences not excepted there are 268 districts. The presiding elders in the 268 districts received during the year 1926, $1,140,044. They occupy district parsonages valued at $2,503,750, averaging $7,587 each. I believe we have arrived at the point where it is no longer necessary to have the presiding elder as he is now related to the church and his present manner of functioning. Time was when many of our pastors were unlearned men and it was necessary to have better equipped men to dispatch the business of the charge. In days gone by the presiding elder exercised his evangelistic gifts diligently throughout the district and won his way into the hearts of the people and left them closer bound to the faith after he made his quarterly round. His visits usually covered from three to five days, during which time an intensive campaign for converts was carried on. I do not say that our churches are not blessed by the visits of our presiding elders now. My argument is that they would be more helpful in a different form of action.

The majority of our pastors can hold a conference as well as our presiding elders can. We have more learned men in the pastorate who understand the art of preparing sermons; we have our annual revival meetings with able evangelists or visiting pastors with evangelistic gifts to do the preaching. Many of our pastors carry out the evangelistic idea all through the year. With these facts before us, we see the presiding elder only as an official visitor on his quarterly visit to the various charges and his relation to the bishop's cabinet. I allow that he is indispensable in the latter capacity. But the present amount of assessment levied to take care of this matter is being questioned by both laymen and preachers. I am suggesting the nominal sum of 10 per cent of pastors' salaries. With that amount we can take care of presiding elders in a new and better form of action and have a large sum left over to be applied to mission charges. In my own Conference, for instance (Alabama), we would raise on this assessement according to the 1927 Yearbook, $29,967. Under the new plan we would have five presiding elders instead of the present number of eleven. Let each receive a salary of $4,000 per year. This would total $20,000 for the five. This item amounted to $49,611 last year. You may draw your own conclusion. Granting that we pay $20,000 to presiding elders on a 10 per cent assessment, we would have $9,967 over to apply to mission charges. This item amounted to $13,500 at the last Conference, only $3,533 more than would be left over after the presiding elders were paid under the new plan. You will readily see that our Conference assessments would be largely reduced, and that without injury to the work. Our people would be heartened by this action.

Under the new plan we would have 109 district parsonages vacated, valued at approximately $82,699. These could be sold and the proceeds applied to missions or the building of homes for superannuated preachers. This would restore to the pastorate 109 of our great preachers. Under the new plan our presiding elders will receive approximately $504,044 less than they received last year, more than half of the amount of the present "Special" call for missions.

Some may complain that it will be impracticable for the presiding elders to do efficient work on districts larger than they now are. But they will not make four rounds per year. They will make only one regular round. No district will have more than forty-five charges nor less than thirty-five. He is to spend not less than three days in each charge every year, preaching in one or more churches of each charge on each visit. He is not to hold conferences, but will preach on subjects of immediate need, such as, "Golden Cross," "Superannuate Endowment," "Christian Doctrine," "Church Doctrine," "Stewardship and Tithing," "Missions," "Christian Education," etc. You will readily see that I am driving at a combination man. Why may we not have a man to travel over the districts who is well acquainted with the outstanding needs of our church and present them to the people, instead of having various Conference-wide men who cannot cover the territory fully and have to resort to flooding the mails with numerous mimeographed letters, scores of which are ignored by those who receive them? Let us have the personal touch! If we could have one wide-awake, aggressive, energetic, active, forceful speaker to present the major financial claims of the church, we would make far better collections. In addition, we wuold have restored to the pastorate those who are now filling such places as Conference Missionary Secretary, Superannuate Endowment Secretary, Christian Education Secretary, and various others for whom the pastorate is now in need.

Let each presiding elder use the columns of our Conference and General organs more faithfully than at present, reporting weekly or not less than twice a month, the spiritual and financial progress of charges he has visited. This would be stimulating to all.

We cannot dispense with the clerical representative in the bishop's cabinet. But why may we not give the pew direct representation in this body? Inasmuch as finances for running the church are provided by the laymen, should they not have a more important recognition in the selection of preachers? Suppose the bishops' cabinet be made up of all presiding elders and their district lay leaders? That would afford equal representation. The district lay leader is supposed to be about as well acquainted with the affairs of the district as the presiding elder would be, and would be valuable in making suggestions, not only because of his interest in the church, but also because of his business ability.

Regarding the "round" of the presiding elder under the new arrangement—suppose he has forty charges. Let him allow a full week for each charge. Then, he will have twelve weeks open in the year for Bible schools, vacation, holidays, etc. Also, he should find it convenient to return to charges where more than one strong church is found and carry out his program. Let him endeavor to leave every charge spiritually stronger than before he went to it. His main business is the salvation of souls. This done—little trouble will be had in raising assessments. Let me insert this suggestion here: Let no presiding elder hold office longer than four years consecutively, neither on one or more districts. Let there be a rule that no presiding elder shall be reappointed to the presiding elder's office within four years next succeeding his last term. I do not believe that it is the really best policy for our bishops to transfer a presiding elder from one to another district in order to retain him in that position.

But what has become of the quarterly conference? you may ask. We will have no more of them. They are too expensive. They served well their day, but their day of usefulness is past. Let the pastor hold church conference monthly in each church, or at least every two months. Let him hold a circuit-wide conference twice a year, in the beginning and at the close. Delegates to the district conference shall be elected at the first conference. Let the church treasurer report monthly to the charge treasurer, who in turn reports to the Conference treasurer. Under the new plan the presiding elders are paid their salary by the Conference treasurer. Let the district conference be given the attention that is due it, not less than two days being used for each session. Since the districts would be larger, it will take more time. I am fully persuaded that in some instances we "skimp" with the work of the district conference and cheapen the whole program.

FLOOD RELIEF IN THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

To the preachers and people in the Mississippi Conference.

Dear Friends: At a recent meeting of the presiding elders we carefully canvassed the needs of our brother pastors and their families, and the churches within the flooded areas of the Vicksburg and Jackson District. This flood, one of the greatest disasters in the history of America, has left many of our people homeless and in poverty. Red Cross funds are not used to help support preachers or repair church buildings. We feel that those of us who have not been hurt by the flood will be glad to help in this time of great need.

The Asking. We request $6,500 for flood relief; $5,000 for the Vicksburg District and $1,500 for the Jackson District. Eight charges are affected. Most of the land in six of these are now or have been under water. The ability to pay for this Conference year has been reduced seventy-five per cent.

The Plan. Let this urgent need be presented to every congregation in the Conference and a liberal free-will offering asked for. Complete the Flood Relief Call on or before June 27.

Send Money. Collect your funds and remit them immediately to your presiding elder, who will remit to J. L. Decell, treasurer. All funds will be distributed between the two districts on percentage basis.

Praying with you that grace may abound with our people always and that we shall give liberally in this hour of distress, we are,

Your brethren and fellow-workers,

ROBERT SELBY,
W. H. LEWIS,
J. R. JONES,
J. L. DECELL,

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

"It's a mighty poor dog what bites the hand that feeds him." The language may be "sorry," but the meaning is plain. "Many men," said Bishop Charles Galloway, "had it not been for the Methodist ministry, would not have been known beyond the shadow of their daddy's smokestack." Lord deliver us from "whiners," "knockers," and "turncoats." Some men who have been brought to a "place in the sun" out of the sombre shades of obscurity will blink and squint. Charity—I mean the thirteenth of Corinthians kind—is very closely akin to faithfulness and loyalty. There may be a kind of changing, compromising weakness that some may call charity, but it sadly misses the mark.

I suppose some of these wise ones who write so learnedly concerning "complexes" mean that things are in a "wearing way" or mightily mixed. Both latitude and longitude are measured from well known meridians, but some of these changlings shift the very lines of truth, or try to do so, to the confusion of other mariners on life's sea. Some one has said these Methodists are wonderfully clannish. Once in a great while some one of them proves false to his "birth and breed," then the others feel sorry for him, knowing how much he is missing. I never did know a shifting preacher to amount to much in the end. There may be some few leading ministers who left our fold and rose to eminence, but they started young, left us about weaning time. You see, I am a Methodist, and with all her faults I love my mother church, and if I have any special grievances it will be a family affair. I feel quite sure I will find more sympathy, better understanding, and more help in my own spiritual household than abroad. I am just built this way, and rather rejoice in the fact. It may be a kind of vanity, yet it holds things together mighty well when you really have it.

"There is rest for the weary." So runs the refrain of an old hymn. Just a bit of experience if you don't mind. Maybe the personal note outsounds some others, but you and I are very personal, and the world's vision and its interest are repeatedly fixed on some daring, darling hero—one person. This A. D. I am seventy years of age. Fairly old in body, but I feel no loss, especially of mentality; at least if there is loss I do not know it. If ever I get started on what I wish to write about I wish to say—Elderly people learn the vanity and poverty of many things as the years have gone by. Now it is utterly impossible for me, par exemple, to get up a sweat over a game of golf or any other kind of ball. Card games of all kinds, even the poor imitations of the genuine King Charles kind, seem puerile and inane. I seem to have, yes I have, an absolute distaste for games and sport. I attend at times to please my friends and keep up with the procession as it sweeps onward in life's great drama. But great events, in which men are doing things worth while fascinate me. I actually followed Lindbergh with my prayer, and read carefully with unabated interest everything about the flood and the tremendous problem of taming the river. For I know from personal experience what it means to lose one's home, and even the passing to another world of a loved sister, whose grave is now under the wasting waters. Yes, I am intensely interested in the nation's greatest problem at this time. No wonder some of the ancients thought fire and water the two primal elements—man's best friends, his worst enemies. But back to where I began—this was to be personal, was it not? I like to catch fish; I will not say fishing, when I mean catching. To pull a gleaming, silvery, "sacalait" from the submerged brush of a fallen tree on the lake's banks, or feel the thrill of a humming line when the troll has been caught by voracious jaws of a two-pound black bass—just ask Crisler and Carley about that—it's life, it's fun, it's joy. Nor age, nor time, nor increasing years have diminished its virile pleasure.

I enjoy a good sermon. I heard one the other day at an old country church at which the people had gotten up a "home-coming," and the children of this church celebrated. It was an immortal sermon. At least the preacher's theme was "Immortality," and I never heard the subject better handled. Yes, life is continuous, eternal, everlasting. God's choicest gift will never wear out. My love for the church is perennial. It lasts through the years. Her interests are my interests, her welfare my welfare, her great movements, benevolent, institutional, missionary, are my study, sometimes my disappointment, often my delight. But good-bye for a while. I hope to come again soon, for a brief visit.

A POLITE LITTLE BIRD.

I watched a little bird to-day
Peck here and there upon the snow,
He raised his head as if to say,
"I'm hungry, don't you know?"

He flapped his wings and flew away,
So on the snow I threw some bread.
He came right back that very day,
And "Thank you, sir," he said.

THE STUDENT PASTOR IN RELATION TO THE WESLEY FOUNDATION.

By J. Marvin Culbreth, Religious Educational Secretary, Board of Education.

It is exceedingly gratifying that the Wesley Foundation idea has met with such widespread approval. There is scarcely an instance of opposition to the policy of the Board of Education in organizing student work in State school centers under this significant name. In many places where student work has been under way for several years the Wesley Foundation basis has been adopted as a way of escape from serious limitations and a method of realizing larger usefulness. Wherever new work is contemplated a cordial reception is given to the Foundation idea.

The individual of greatest importance in developing the Wesley Foundation is the student pastor. The purpose of this article is to show why it is desirable for the Wesley Foundations of the South to strive to develop the permanent type of student pastor.

This leads naturally to the explanation that there are at present three types of student pastor actively engaged in student work.

The first may be characterized as the pastoral-experimental type. The worker of this type is usually a young person recently graduated who is willing to undertake service among students as a temporary employment. The salary is attractive, and the incumbent feels that he will gain valuable experience which will enable him to make permanent adjustments at some later period. This type of worker rarely remains in the service longer than two or three years at the outside.

The second variety of student pastor is what may be called the pastoral-instructional type. In addition to his duties of pastoral oversight of students, the incumbent also teaches Bible, or some subject in the field of Religious Education for which credit is allowed by the institution. The attractiveness of this combination of duties makes it possible to secure maturer men for the position, who are content to remain in the service a longer time than is true of the kind of pastor first mentioned.

The third type of student pastor may be described as the pastoral-permanent variety. The terminology, as will be understood, places the emphasis primarily upon the pastoral function, but looks in the direction of permanent service. The incumbent of such a position must either be mature when he enteres upon it, or remain in it long enough to become mature. In time, he will establish relationship with the student constituency that compares favorably with the relationship of a pastor to a local congregation. He will not only be responsible for improving religious fellowship among students, but also for directing their education through class-room activities and by means of special lecture courses. In order to accomplish this result, it would be necessary for the student pastor to gather around himself a staff of competent workers. Instead of changing frequently from one kind of service to another, it is presumed that this type of student pastor would remain in a given position long enough to become a real factor in the life of the students and of the university as well.

It is reasonably clear that this permanent type of student pastor is to be preferred over either of the other type mentioned. At the present time there are in the South several instances where such a kind of service may in time be developed. There are, however, several rather serious obstacles in the way of securing this type of pastoral leadership for students.

The first one of which is the matter of support. In only a few cases has it been possible to offer a salary that would command the service for an extended time of a properly equipped person. As it is, $3,600 without house, or perquisites of any sort, is the highest salary paid any worker in the field of student activities. The first requisite to the development of the permanent type of student pastor is sufficient funds to make the salary as attractive and as certain as that which the better grade of churches pay to their pastors.

A second requisite to the development of this type of student pastor is the frank recognition on the part of the appointing power of the church that the student pastor function ranks in dignity and importance with that of other forms of ministry. Strong men who are willing to enter the student pastor field ought to be encouraged to stay in that relationship indefinitely. To advise them to leave it for the purpose of accepting settled pastorates of the usual type will surely defeat the end that we ought to have in view.

Given adequate support and the unquestioning approval of church authorities, still the student pastorate cannot be made permanently attractive to strong men unless adequate facilities are furnished with which they may undertake their task. It will be necessary for the church at large to make available resources for church buildings and church equipment in school centers which will be adequate to meet the demands of the situation. In addition to a place of worship and class rooms where instruction may be carried on, every student pastor should have a student house, or social-religious center in which an efficient program could be carried on.

The cost of this policy would in the nature of the case be considerable; but after all is said, it would prove to be one of the least expensive forms of service that the church could possibly undertake. The reason for this lies in the fact that there are more than twice as many Methodist students in State institutions than there are in colleges supported by our church. Nearly 55 per cent of the Methodist young people in the South are enrolled in State institutions. The State provides all the facilities for giving them general, as well as highly specialized education. Class rooms, laboratories, libraries with appropriate equipment, are provided by the State without a penny of direct cost to the citizen. By making an investment to provide for the specific religious needs of her students in State institutions, the church may accomplish what it would cost her millions of dollars to undertake without the aid of the State.

The Board of Education will expend on religious work among students during the year 1927-28, approximately $25,000. Demands upon the resources of the Board multiply so rapidly that it will require fine discrimination to make the money available go as far as possible in securing the best results. It is highly desirable that the church give serious thought and earnest prayer to this question in order that out of her bounty she may be led to provide generously for her students in the institutions of the State.

THE ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE—AN APPEAL.

By Rev. T. J. Bailey, D.D., Superintendent.

1. With a deep conviction that the work the League is trying to do is necessary to the fullest development and greatest efficiency of our churches, we are pressing it. The work the League is trying to do may be likened to the work of cleaning up and preparing a field for the plow. Such work is difficult and slow. The timber must be cut away, the briars and vines removed, the stones, roots and stumps must be taken away, the creeks straightened and deepened, and the low places drained. All this is dirty and laborious, but essential before the plow can be used successfully. So, clearing out the liquor business with all its concomitants of swearing, lying, cheating, stealing, fighting, killing, disturbing public worship, breaking the Sabbath and drinking up money that ought to be used for family needs and church purposes, is necessary that the gospel plow may be thrust into the fallow ground and the seed of the truth be planted in well-prepared soil, and as far as possible all hindrances to the growth of the plants of the kingdom be removed.

2. The League has not the funds with which to do this work. It is entirely dependent upon people who love God and humanity for means to do this work of drudgery, to make conditions better for pastors and churches. In the end the churches will be the beneficiaries of the League work. It is, therefore, natural as well as necessary that the League should turn to the churches and Sunday schools for help to do a work that is necessary to their well-being. It is doubly important to turn to the Sunday schools, as they will constitute the future churches. If we can so instruct and enlist our Sunday schools as to inspire in them correct principles and practices, we shall have virile and efficient churches in the future. The League must look to the churches and Sunday schools for all the help it receives. People who will not line up with the churches will not aid any agency seeking to make the world better. Therefore the Anti-Saloon League being an agency for the moral uplift of human beings must look to the best people for support; and I do not hesitate to say that the very best aggregation of people in the world are Christians.

3. There are two main reasons why our League is apppealing to the Sunday schools. First, the churches' budgets are so large that they hesitate to take on anything more, however important it may be, and the Sunday schools are not so loaded up. Second, and mainly, we turn to the Sunday schools for the good we may hope to do them and through them the churches, particularly of to-morrow. If we can firmly fix temperance principles in the minds of the young and enlist them in giving to the cause of temperance and prohibition, we shall have much stronger advocates of temperance and prohibition in our churches in the future; and that being true, much stronger churches.

A very large majority of our young people-under the age of twenty never saw a saloon and do not know the horrors of one; therefore they are not competent to compare present conditions with conditions under saloon rule. For this reason they are much more susceptible to the pernicious and false propaganda that is flooding our country. We should teach them the truth about saloon days and the great blessings of dry rule. Some thought when prohibition came, there would be perfect enforcement of it. This was a short-sighted and foolish thought. As they now hear of some whisky being sold and occasionally see a drunken man, they are disappointed and discouraged, and allow people who sympathize with the liquor business to poison their minds with declarations that there is more liquor sold and used to-day than when we had open saloons. No well-informed, thoughtful person can entertain that view for one minute. But if our young people are not taught better, they will believe this falsehood. There is no better time or place to teach them the real facts about the liquor business than in our Sunday schools right now. May the Lord lead us older people to be faithful at this point, and "serve our day and generation well."

Prayers are ascending this moment that some large-hearted persons who may read this and who have the means will send the League liberal checks, and thus become helpers in saving the youth of our country from a drunkard's career to a life of Christian service.

A CHANNEL.

By Laura M. White.

If aught of help my life has meant,
Oh, let me not the credit claim;
'Tis but a radiance through me sent
By that eternal, Living Flame.

If I may but a channel be
Through which this burning love can run,
If any in my life may see
The shining of that glorious Sun,

Then shall my life indeed have been
Worth years of striving for the right;
If age but find me more like Him
Who is the perfect Light.

GOOD COUNSEL.

Little children, always be Kind to everything you see.
Do not kick the table's legs,
Don't beat unoffending eggs.

Do not mischievously try
To poke things in a needle's eye;
Nor guilty be such a fault
As to pinch the table salt.

Do not pull a teapot's nose,
Don't ask bread what time it rose.
Little pitchers' ears don't tweak,
Nor smack the apple's rosy cheek.

But remember it is right
To all things to be polite;
Let the hay-scales have their weigh,
Wish the calendar good day.

Kiss the clock upon its face,
Return the armchair's fond embrace,
Greet the sieve in merry strain,
Ask the window how's its pane.

If you learn to show such traits
To your dumb inanimates,
Toward your playmates then you'll find
You've an amiable mind.

MARGARET MACY.

Mrs. Hall, the minister's wife, was glancing over the evening paper, when suddenly she dropped it and hurried to her husband's study, an adjoining room.

"What do you think, Robert?" she eagerly exclaimed. "Margaret Macy is one of the new teachers assigned to the high school for the coming year. Isn't that perfectly splendid? Of course, you remember her? She was at the university when we were there."

Mr. and Mrs. Hall had attended college after their marriage and the pleasant, little town of Helena was their first appointment after graduation.

"I certainly do recall Miss Macy as a very fine Christian girl. This is very fortunate, for she will be identified with our church life, and will have a wonderful influence with the young people."

The next Sunday Miss Margaret Macy was present at the Sunday school, and both church services. The pastor and wife were very happy to have her as a guest for dinner that day, and delightful college days were recalled.

The problems of the church and the general situation in Helena were reviewed. Miss Macy was so sympathetic, and almost feverish in her desire to help. She pledged herself for any kind of service.

At Sunday school and church the girls could not keep from making side glances in her direction, and they waited after service that they might be introduced to her.

"She is a peach," cooed one girl that afternoon. "I know that I shall love her."

"Didn't you think that her manner was awfully precise?" from another.

"Oh, no!" came a quick response, "school teachers must have some dignity and her smile is perfectly angelic."

It really was true that Miss Macy had a certain precision and reserve, but, as all the girls discovered, her smile won every one.

She was taken into the hearts of the girls to adore and into the hearts of the friendly church folks as a strong, womanly, Christian girl.

When Miss Macy was in college, although carrying a heavy classical course, she found time to render very practical, Christian service. Her activities were in the Sunday school and the Christian Endeavor Society. She taught a Sunday school class, and in the afternoon, with a good-sized committee, of which she was chairman, visited the sick, aged, and shut-in. They read to those lonely people and sang hymns. There were two blind people on the list, to each of whom they read regularly every week. Many times they were able to take flowers or plants, purchased from a small fund which they raised.

Margaret was never disturbed, perplexed, or tempted about how to spend Sunday, for it was one of her busiest days—but the time was almost entirely given to others.

The first year in Helena was not an easy one for Margaret. The text books were all new to the young teacher, and she found it necessary to put much time on them. Nevertheless, she was very faithful in attending all the church services.

When it was learned that this cultivated girl was very fond of visiting the sick and the poor, she was assigned the task of organizing this department in the Christian Endeavor Society. She gave most of her leisure time to this unselfish labor of love, and many a home was brightened by the radiant, young people who visited with Margaret. The praises of Miss Macy were on the lips of many. "How perfectly lovely for so busy a girl to give so much of her time to the afflicted and depressed," was the general comment. No one in the town had ever taken so much interest in the unfortunate as this college girl from a distance.

The months rolled on. The school year was near its close, and how strange it seemed—Miss Macy had lost the good-will of the people, and many hoped that she would not be returned the next year. How did it happen? Shall I tell you?

Margaret, with a kind heart, had a sharp tongue. She really seemed to enjoy making a stinging remark. She always made these remarks in a very pleasant way, but the girls declared that it did not remove the sting.

"We are always uncomfortable when Miss Margaret is around. She seems to ruin everything. We do our worst instead of our best. We know that we cannot please her."

After Margaret became well acquainted she assumed a kind of superiority among the people, many of whom, like herself, were college-bred, and many of them students of art and music in the city near by. She was hypercritical of everything. At the social gatherings, she criticized the music, although she did not know one note from another. She delighted to tell what she had seen and heard, and how very superior it was to their efforts. Then with a supercilious air, she frequently remarked how small the church was, and that the organ gave her creeps.

One day Miss Macy offered a severe criticism of a vocal solo rendered at a Christian Endeavor social gathering by a young girl with a remarkably sweet voice, but little training. After this criticism the president—a young man full of mischief—raised his voice above the social chatter and announced, "At the next meeting we will be favored with a vocal solo by Miss Macy."

For once the important young woman was abashed. She felt the rebuke and replied with flushed face. "I never sing."

The school board debated her return for the next year. They felt her usefulness as a teacher was curtailed by the unpleasant attitude of superiority, her critical spirit and sarcasm. It was suggested that it would be only fair to have a conference with her and give her another trial. This was done, but Miss Macy did not receive the proposition very cordially. She held her head very high and with all her precision minus the smile, replied, "I prefer to go elsewhere, where the people are not so critical."

Every one was so disappointed with this girl. Although she was a Christian, had a fine mental equipment, and a kind, sympathetic heart, yet she was not agreeable. She was disagreeable. The young people were really glad when she was absent from their gatherings.

Margaret Macy could have been a great help, but instead she was a great hindrance.—May G. McGee, in the Watchword.

APPLYING IT.

"Well!" Annette looked after Margaret in blank surprise. "Now, whatever made her do that? I haven't done a thing to offend her, so far as I know." She looked just ready to take offense herself at the abrupt departure of her dearest girl friend.

Usually they sat together at the young people's meeting, went out together, and walked home together in blissful harmony of word and thought. To-night, Margaret, coming in after the seats were pretty well taken, had sat down near the back of the room. When the meeting closed, instead of coming to Annette or waiting for her, Margaret had hurried out.

Annette followed slowly. In the vestibule she found Margaret, not waiting for her, but talking eagerly, charmingly, to a couple of strange, young girls.

—"And we'll love to have you come to every meeting," she was saying, as Annette came out. Then the strangers were gone, and Margaret was slipping an arm through Annette's in the old, loving way.

"Don't be jealous, dearie," she whispered, half laughingly, half in real pleading. " I see green in your eyes. But, honestly, Annette, I am glad I came near being late to-night and that I had to sit back there. It gave me a chance to catch those two strangers, talk to them, and get their promise to come again. It was my first chance to apply the advice our pastor gave us in his sermon this morning—don't you remember?" she quoted softly, as Annette shook her head:

" 'Let us be brave enough to neglect each other, whom we meet so often, while we cultivate the acquaintance of one whom we have never met. Let us study the art of making the stranger feel at home with us.' "

"You dear!" Annette gave her arm a repentant squeeze, "and I thought—"

"Stop thinking it, and help me apply the rule," laughed Margaret.

"I will," promised Annette gaily.—Cora S. Day, in the Girls' World.

"TIME OUT."

"Wanted—A boy to open oysters seventeen years old."—Exchange.

Mother: "I think we'd better call Doctor Jones. Freddy has a severe pain in the head."

Father: "Oh, pshaw! He's had that so often before."

Mother: "Yes, but not on a day when school is out."—Exchange.

He was fond of philosophizing. One day at the club, it was about the beauties of nature. "Seems to me that old Mother Nature has provided for every contingency," he said. "What prompts that reflection?" asked one of those who had the misfortune to be near him. "Why," answered Muggins, "look at the way she has placed our ears. Yet a million years ago she didn't know that we were going to hook spectacles over them."—Minneapolis Tribune.

One of the questions put to a class of rural adults was: "In the sentence, 'The bird flew over the house,' is 'flew' a regular or an irregular verb'?" This proved a sticker for the class, but finally one man ventured an answer. Said he, "If the bird that flew over the house was a wild goose, it went in a straight, regular line, so the verb is regular; but if it was a woodpecker, then it went in a crooked, zigzag line, and so the verb is irregular."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. Martin Hebert, our pastor at Morgan City, La., is continuing with church services though about half the town is under water.

Rev. H. B. Gilmore, 302 Miller Street, Hattiesburg, Miss., writes that he will be glad to assist in revival meetings.

Mrs. R. H. Harper made the address and delivered the diplomas to the large graduating class of the Capdau school, New Orleans, on Thursday evening of last week.

In renewing her subscription, Mrs. O. E. West, of Gattman, Miss., writes: "We could not do without the dear old Advocate, as it has been in our home most of the time for forty years."

Dr. and Mrs. Carley and Miss Kling Carley left on last Friday morning to drive to Atlanta, where Dr. Carley is to teach in the School of Theology of Emory University during the summer.

Dr. Mark Terrell, of Dallas, who has just assisted Rev. B. A. Watson in a great meeting at Anahuac, Texas, will be in a meeting at Madison, Miss., beginning on June 19. Prof. Charles F. Dunn, of Atlanta, Ga., will lead the music.

Miss Kling Carley, daughter of the editor, and Miss Mary Mitchell, daughter of Dr. J. B. Mitchell, pastor of Rayne Memorial Church, New Orleans, were among the graduates of the Sophie Wright High School for girls at the recent commencement.

Rev. P. H. Howse, our pastor at Avera, Miss., is at the present time conducting a meeting at Piave. Brother Claude P. Jones is doing the preaching. After the close of this meeting Brother Jones will be in a meeting with Rev. J. H. Moore, June 19-29, at Eden, Miss.

In renewing his subscription, Rev. E. D. Fayard, of Springfield, La., writes that he would be lonesome without the Advocate, having been a reader of it for about fifty years, subscribing first in Mississippi, "when Brother David Merchant was on the Whitington Circuit."

Evangelist Claude P. Jones, of Jackson, Miss., desires his brethren of the Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences to know that he will have some time open during July and August for evangelistic work. Those who desire his services should communicate with him at 103 Fourth Avenue, Hattiesburg, Miss.

Rev. J. M. Alford, of Vivian, La., is preparing to take a short vacation, and he desires through the pages of the Advocate to offer his services for a revival meeting to any pastor in the flooded districts who may be handicapped in securing help. He will be glad to give his services without remuneration, expecting only actual expenses, and will bear his own expenses if necessary.

Rev. M. M. Black, our pastor at Richton, Miss., writes that on June 1 was closed a fine meeting at Blodgett, Miss., conducted by Rev. W. J. Ferguson, our pastor at Gulfport. His soul-stirring sermons produced a profound impression. There were six additions to the church upon profession of faith and two by certificate, and the entire community received a great spiritual uplift.

A Methodist chapel of pleasing design will soon be built at Reserve, La., where the largest refinery, Godchaux Sugars, Inc., is located. This will be the only Methodist church on the east side of the river from Baton Rouge to New Orleans. Rev. R. H. Harper and Rev. Leon Picone enterprised the work there and provided for preaching services. Rev. E. C. Gunn, pastor of Carrollton Church, is assisting in this work.

ANNUITY BONDS

SAFETY is the first requisite of an investment with a view to regular income.
ANNUITY BONDS have advantage over other investments in that they provide an income that cannot shrink.
YOU may in your lifetime without loss of income or any risk pay over to the Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the amount that you had intended leaving in your will to be used in sending the Gospel "to every creature."
YOU may avoid taxes, various fees or any litigation in connection with your benevolent gifts which sometimes greatly reduce one's bequest. Annuity Bonds enable one to be the executor of his own will.
ALL THIS—and at the same time you enjoy during your lifetime an income that cannot shrink—an income that stands between you and want.

Protection Against Old Age

On Monday last the Vacation Bible School of the First Methodist church, New Orleans, began its session with a good attendance, and on next Monday St. Mark's will open a vacation Bible school. Miss Florence Dixon, principal of Capdau school, New Orleans, had made arrangements for the school at First Church but unfortunately is at present in the hospital with a broken arm. Her place for the time being is filled by Mrs. D. M. Campbell.

"Did you ever have a 'breakdown?'" This is the query that comes to us from Rev. J. M. Lewis, our pastor at Tylertown, Miss. He writes that the good people of his charge have decided that he needs a rest, though he may not be actually on the verge of a breakdown. Some thirty-five of his people got together, made up a purse and kindly asked him to leave town for a few days of rest. He is now at the White House at Biloxi, enjoying the first vacation he has had during the twenty-four years of his ministry.

Dr. J. Gresham Machen, Professor of New Testament Literature and Exegesis at Princeton Theological Seminary, will be offered the presidency of Bryan Memorial University, Dayton, Tenn., according to F. E. Robinson, of Dayton, president of the association establishing the university. Dr. Machen is an ordained Presbyterian minister and has been a member of the Princeton faculty for twenty-one years. Last summer he delivered a course of lectures at our Seashore Divinity School at Biloxi.

A complete program of all activities of the church at Natchitoches, La., during the months of June and July has been prepared by the pastor, Rev. H. L. Johns, and printed in neat form. The program shows that the church at that point is well organized and that every department will be active during the period of the year when some churches unfortunately think it is necessary to be rather inactive. One fine thing on the program is the Daily Vacation Bible School, which began on June 13 to continue three weeks. Miss Alberta Wilson, of Nashville, was secured to make the plans for this school.

Mr. John Edwin Gregory died at his home near Springville, Miss. The funeral was conducted by the Baptist pastor, assisted by Rev. James J. Baird, pastor of the Methodist church at Pontotoc, Miss. Brother Gregory was seventy-eight years of age, having been the greater part of his life a member of the Methodist Church. A few years before his death he became a member of the Baptist Church. Brother Gregory was the father of Rev. T. E. Gregory, pastor of the Methodist church at Itta Bena, Miss., and Rev. G. C. Gregory, pastor of the Methodist church at Nettleton, Miss.

Rev. A. M. Martin, pastor at St. Martinville, La., had to leave his home on account of the overflow in the Atchafalaya basin, and he is making his home for the time on the grounds of the Industrial Institute in Lafayette, La. More than half his charge is under water, and he will not be able to return to his home until two or three weeks. Meantime he is not idle. Captain Putney, who has charge of the flood relief work in Lafayette, and the Protestant pastor there have asked Brother Martin to take charge of Protestant activities in the refugee camps. The Red Cross provided a tent for headquarters and three services a week are held in the grandstand.

Mr. T. L. James, a fine layman of Ruston, La., has recently given a fine new boat for the mission work along the streams in the neighborhood of Morgan City. The boat was built at Morgan City and equipped with a 25 horsepower engine, being made ready for its service on the water just before the disastrous flood came upon the Atchafalaya and Teche country. It has had, therefore, an opportunity for an unexpected kind of usefulness in the very beginning of its career. Rev. Martin Hebert, of Morgan City, who has charge of the mission work, writes that the mission folk are all so badly scattered by the flood that he knows the whereabouts of but one family. The chapel at Bayou Shaffer has three inches of water in it.

President C. A. Bowen writes that the Executive Committee of the General Sunday School Council met recently in Nashville to make plans for the next meeting of the Council. The next session will be held in Nashville, December 12-16, 1927. The committees of the Council have been appointed and will be at work on their various problems during the intervening months. It is hoped that some very valuable information will be secured for study at the December meeting. The growth of the Council has been steady and each year finds its influence greatly increased. The approaching meeting in December gives promise of being more than usually important to those who labor at the task of our Sunday schools.

A total of 176 degrees were conferred by Southern Methodist University at its twelfth annual convocation Wedensday, June 8. Honorary degrees were conferred upon Louis Blaylock, former publisher of the Texas Christian Advocate, R. E. Saner, former president of the American Bar Association, and Jesse Jones, publisher of the Houston Chronicle. Among the students winning university honors was Miss Martha Agnes Allen, of Monroe, La. President Selecman was given a fine set of binoculars for use during his trip to Europe. The election of R. H. Shettles, Dallas, to be chairman of the Board of Trustees to succeed Judge Joseph E. Cockrell, deceased, was announced. Congressman Fritz Lanham, Fort Worth, delivered the convocation address.

"Jimmie" Smith, one of our general evangelists, is now in the closing week of a sweeping revival at Florala, Alabama. The meetings are being held under a large tabernacle which was erected specially for the Smith revival, and all the churches of the city are united in the campaign. The tabernacle seats 2500 people and has been packed every night so far. There had been one hundred and twenty professions up to June 10. The meeting will close June 19. Mr. Smith will open a Union Tabernacle Campaign in Frost, Texas, on June 26, and will go from there to Eldorado. He has been in nine great meetings since last December —three in Texas, one in Oklahoma, one in South Dakota, two in Alabama, and two in Florida. In these nine meetings approximately sixteen hundred persons have professed conversion, over two thousand have been reclaimed and led to renew their vows to God. Mr. Smith makes his home in Dallas, Texas, at 4226 West Potomac Avenue. Mr. Robert G. Fraser is associated with Mr. Smith as director of song and personal worker. Mrs. Fraser is pianist and does special work with the women and girls. They are available for engagements after September 4.

"THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF ATHEISM, INC."

By Rev. John D. Ellis.

The June number of World's Work magazine (Homer Croy's article), shows the remarkable manifestations of atheism among the high school and college students.

"The Society of the Godless is a part of the national organization known as the Junior Atheist League, which functions in the high schools and colleges in the United States," and is "inspired by the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism, Inc."

Some of the names which the students have picked for their societies, or chapters are as follows: In Philadelphia, "God's Black Sheep;" in Los Angeles, "The Devil's Angels;" in Rochester, "The Damned Souls;" in the University of Wisconsin, "The Circle of the Godless;" in the University of North Dakota, "The Legion of the Damned." (The head of the society is called "His Satanic Majesty.")

Their beliefs are summarized as follows:

"There is no God.

"The idea of the Virgin Birth is laughable.

"There is no heaven and no hell.

"Religion is worship of the supernatural, and should be abolished.

"The church is a dangerous institution."

The Junior Atheist League publishes tracts, folders, and other literature, and some of its printed matter reads as follows:

"Don't let the Bible make a fool of you. Keep this Jew scrap book out of the public schools. Free our children from Superstition, Ignorance, Bigotry, Hypocrisy, and the Mental Disease of so-called Christianity. The dirty stories in this fake Holy Word of God compiled by Bishop Eusebius are an insult to civilization."

"The Junior League is established. Godless children shall have an opportunity to emancipate their companions from unreasonable religion. The League will remove boys and girls from the evil influence of the clergy. It will encourage them to protest against Bible reading and religious worship in public schools, and agitate against religious instruction during school hours. Children shall be told the truth about the Bible and Christianity. The magical, animistic, and phallic, or sexual origins of religion will be explained in simple language. The attainment of happiness in this world rather than eternal bliss in a world to come shall be taught the rising generation as the chief end of man. Dispelling the illusion of immortality, the League will free sons and daughters from the fear of hell, and the hope of heaven. Sacrifice for postmortem considerations will be shown to be criminal folly. * * *

Stress will be laid on forming branches in high schools, as these will prepare students as organizers of Damned Souls societies during college years, and for effective work thereafter in combatting the church. * * * Picnics and outings, clean and healtful good times, will take the place of stultifying Sunday schools. * * * Morality based on the findings of modern science will supercede belief on the speculation of ancient, Asiatic theology. * * * Dues are 25 cents a year. * * * Miss Christine Walker, national secretary (Gap, Pa.), a sixten-year-old Atheist of exceptional ability, is waiting to hear from young Atheists and their parents."

Queen Silver, a seventeen-year-old girl, publishes a magazine at Hawthorne, Calif., which has a national circulation. Some quotations are as follows:

"The true religionist is a man or woman who suffers from a compound fracture of reasoning ability."

"The priest wears his collar turned backwards to show that he wishes to turn his face to the rear and allow his mind to revert to the primitive."

"Ass: Favorite means of locomotion of Jesus. He once rode into Jerusalem sitting on two of them which his disciples had previously stolen for him."

"Christ: A being, who came to save the world and died without being able to save himself."

"Prayer: Strong language which, when properly used, informs the Almighty how to run the universe. Without all this advice ascending to him in a thousand different dialects at the same time, God wouldn't know what to do next."

"Omnipotent: Another name for God. He proved his omnipotence by being unable to stop the great World War for five years, until there was no money left to fight with, and by allowing ten million innocent non-combattants to die of starvation and disease."

"The Holy Bible.

"Arrogance—forgery—lies—
Arson and rapine and fraud;
Tyranny—terror and spies—
This is the book of God."

The Vagabond, a magazine published by the students of the University of Indiana, says:

"Gods are like gowns—in style to-day, out of date to-morrow."

"If history repeats itself—and they say it does—perhaps some day the bewhiskered Jewish Jehovah will no longer be 'Big Bad Bill.'"

Some of the literature of the Junior Atheist League is in verse:

"Praise God from whom all cyclones blow,
Praise him when rivers overflow,
Praise him who whirls down house and steeple,
Who sinks the ship and drowns the people.

* * * * * * * *

"For persons who with hood and bell
Demand your cash, or threaten hell.
Praise God for war, for strife and pain,
For cheats and liars; and then,
Let all men cry aloud, Amen."

At one meeting of the Damned Souls Society, when ten boys and seven girls were present, the subject for discussion was: "Resolved, That marriage is an antiquated institution and should be abolished."

"The whole affair was conducted as a debate. * * * The popular decision was for the affirmative. Seemingly the girls were as much in favor of it as the boys."

The speaker who had the affirmative "attacked marriage as a worn-out institution. It had no logic, it wasn't good psychoanalysis, and it hadn't anything to do with morality."

"One girl, tall, and blonde, and good looking, said: 'The more you know about marriage, the less you think about it. It's like Christianity—fine in theory, but doesn't work out.'"

"Contraception was discussed freely, and without hesitation."

"Another said: 'Sex is what makes the world go round, and we've got to look it in the face as we should any other fact, and try to solve its problems.'

"Atheists believe there is only one life, and so we live to get all there is out of it, instead of being 'soft-soaped' along on the hope that there is another one off in the skies some place where everything will be perfect."

The American Association for the Advancement of Atheism claims that in the colleges there is one atheist out of every three students.

"The efforts of this organization are widespread and growing in intensity, the organizers hoping to take advantage of new tendencies of thought and action among boys and girl."

SCATTER THE SUNSHINE.

By Willie C. Page.

Children, if your heart is sad and gloomy,
Hide it—seem to be bright, happy and gay;
You owe it to yourself and others
To scatter sunshine along your way.

If sorrow and cares overtake you,
Misfortune and trial win one race,
Naught can conquer a glad, joyous spirit—
Just hold up your head and wear a bright face.

Don't hoist a flag that is dark and dreary;
Wave a banner that is cheerful and bright;
Don't weep and tell the world you are weary—
Just smile and sing, and all will be right.

Appear at your best if your heart is aching;
Don't peddle gloom and despondency;
Be merry and gay and scatter the sunshine—
Think you are happy and you surely will be.

EARL DANIEL JONES, son of Richard S. and Kate McDonald Jones, was born in Jackson, Miss., March 24, 1900, and died suddenly in the city of his birth on May 21, 1927. Earl Daniel was dedicated to Christ in baptism by his grandfather, the Rev. C. McDonald, of the Mississippi Annual Conference, in infancy, and his name entered on the Cradle Roll of the First Methodist Church, now Galloway Memorial, of Jackson, Miss. Being reared in a Christian home and brought up in the church, it was natural for him to give his heart to God and assume the church vows for himself, which he did, while quite young. His mother died in 1913 and Earl went to Rankin County to live with his aunt, Mrs. J. J. Daniels. He was educated in the public school at Brandon, and the University of Mississippi, finishing his law course at the latter place in 1924. On June 25, 1918, having heard the call of his country, he enlisted in the army, and saw a year of valiant service in France and Germany. He received an honorable discharge from the army on Aug. 5, 1919. At the time of his sudden death he was accountant for the Cumberland Telephone Company in Jackson. From a human point of view his life seems to have been all too brief. Equipped as he was for service, we can but lament his seemingly untimely death; and yet, life should never be measured by the number of years one lives, but by the service rendered and the ideals cherished. Many, indeed, were the sorrowing ones who gathered at the historic cemetery at Brandon, Miss., on the morning of May 23, where we tenderly laid away in its last resting place the body of our young friend. May the good God comfort and sustain the hearts of his loved ones.

HAL S. SPRAGINS.

Jackson, Miss.

MISS HILDA DEANE McALPINE has passed from earth to join the company of the redeemed. Her life was rich in spiritual values and radiated an influence for good that will forever abide. She was genuinely converted and joined the Methodist church at Yazoo City, Miss., when she was 11 years of age. It was her meat and drink to do her Master's will. With her, religion was more than a creed, it was a life. She loved the Lord Jesus with all her mind, heart and strength. She loved his church, and gave herself faithfully to its worship and services. It was under the shadow of the church, when she was returning from worship, that she sustained injuries from a fall that resulted in her last illness. This was as she would have planned it. During her illness she thanked God continuously for his goodness to her and that he had permitted her to worship in his sanctuary when she took the last step in life. Her life was rare and beautiful. The soul of it was immense. It was the incarnation of love and grace and all the finer virtues known to us. Frail in body and a cripple from infancy, yet what unbounding personality! She was made perfect through suffering. She was the daughter of William S. and Mary Lumbley McAlpine. She was born May 27, 1880, near Satartia, Miss. Her parents moved to Yazoo City when she was 5 years old. Here she resided until the death of her mother, 1918, when she moved to Jackson, Miss., with her father. Her father passed away in 1923. This was a sorrow from which this faithful daughter never fully recovered. Her last days were spent in the home of her sister, Mrs. C. H. Swearington, of Shreveport, La. After a ten weeks' illness she was called home on March 31, 1927. The funeral services were conducted in Shreveport by Dr. Jasper K. Smith, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, and Rev. W. C. Scott, of the Noel Memorial Methodist Church; and in Yazoo City by Rev. J. L. Neill, of the First Methodist Church, and others.

RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions of respect passed at the recent meeting of the Corinth District Conference held at Potts Camp, Miss. Accompanying these resolutions were many expressions of affection and tenderness from the members of the conference who had known and loved Dr. Carmack for many years.

Whereas, it hath pleased Almighty God in his providence to translate to glory our brother in the faith, DR. FRANK T. CARMACK, of Iuka, Miss; and,

Whereas, Dr. Carmack as a Christian exemplified in his public and private life those virtues and principles that were so glorious in the life of Jesus; and,

Whereas, as a churchman he gave to his beloved Methodism a loyalty that was as inspiring as it was beautiful; laboring faithfully and efficiently as he filled important offices in both his local church and his Conference, giving to all God's work with liberality and sacrifice; and,

Whereas, as a citizen he gave to his country and his flag a loyalty and a devotion that marked him as a true American, his love for his own county should not go unrecorded; in his long life, he never had a dream or an ambition that did not include his beloved Tishomingo; he was an authority on the mineral resources of his county, and dreamed of that glad day when industry and commerce should make available to the world the rich mineral products of the county of his nativity; and,

Whereas, as a public officer he worked faithfully and efficiently in many different capacities to advance the interests of his fellowmen and to make life about him more wholesome and attractive;

Therefore, be it resolved by the Corinth District Conference of the North Mississippi Conference, in session at Potts Camp, Miss., That we express our gratitude to Almighty God for the gift of such a life to our Mississippi Methodism.

Be it further resolved, That we spread upon our records this loving token of our esteem and appreciation of this great saint of God.

Be it further resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to his widow and children and that it be presented for publication to our Conference paper and to the Vidette at Iuka, Miss.

Done by unanimous vote of the Corinth District Conference at Potts Camp, Miss., this 1st day of June, 1927.

Signed: Rev. G. C. Schwartz, Rev. J. W. Raper, E. E. Reece, Committee.

WORK IN THE FRENCH FIELD.

Dear Advocate: I am enclosing a clipping from the local newspaper published last Saturday. In doing missionary work for the French refugees there is considerable opposition, but we will obey God rather than men. There are now over 18,000 refugees, and more coming every day. Our hearts are made to rejoice to see the Word of God receiving such profound interest among these French fellow-citizens now flood refugees. We are receiving invitations to come to their homes after the water recedes, and we are requested to hold services for them and their friends. We believe this to be the best opportunity, now and after the water recedes, for the Gospel of Christ in the history of our work for the French people in this section.

The ministers and members of the Protestant churches here are doing all that is within their power for the cause of Christ among the refugees, and in every way helping us to carry on our missionary activities.

DISTRICT MEETING AT ARCADIA, LA.

The Women's Conference of the Ruston District met at Arcadia, April 20. The meeting opened with a medley of songs. Our new District Secretary, Mrs. Carolyn Dawson, of Haynesville, presided in her usual easy manner.

Mrs. B. F. Key, of Shreveport, led the devotional. In her comments she stressed the consecration of our lives, observing "the morning watch" by a quiet hour with him; emphasized the various ways and places in which we find God; illustrated the narrow circle to which we confine our Christian activities by the "merry-go-round."

The secretary called the roll, and twelves auxiliaries responded, with a total attendance of seventy, with a number of visitors. A representative of each auxiliary present gave a report of their activities.

Our presiding elder, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, of Ruston; Rev. W. F. Roberts, of Ida; Rev. W. F. Henderson, of Calhoun, and Rev. G. A. Morgan, of Arcadia, were introduced.

Brother Kleinschmidt said it would be well if we should spiritualize our work as well as we have organized it.

The roll was called by zones, and the responses and discussions proved that they are a helpful factor in our work.

"Quiet Hour" was observed and led by our State vice president, Mrs. V. H. Spinks, of Ruston. She also gave us a lesson on consecration, using Matt. 5.

After announcements for the various committee meetings, the Arcadia ladies invited us to the basement, where a lovely luncheon was served.

The devotional of the afternoon service was led by Mrs. Hefley, of Homer.

"The Importance of Bible and Mission Study," by our State Superintendent, Mrs. Loyd, of Ida, was presented in an interesting manner. She said our first qualification is consecration; that our study gave us a world outlook, stimulated original thought, makes prayer intelligent and specific, deepens missionary motives and interest, opens pursestrings, awakens us to community interest and unites a group of people to think and pray on the deep things of God's kingdom.

"Being True to Our Task, the Children," was the next subject. The appointed leader being absent, Mrs. Dawson made fitting remarks and emphasized the importance of training our youth.

Mrs. Pipes, Superintendent of Social Service, of Arcadia auxiliary, gave an interesting account of her work. She said social service means serving society, and that the three ways to do it are through the home, the church, and the individual. She stressed interracial work and told about her Bible class of Negro women.

"Our Weak Points and How to Correct Them," was led by Mrs. Spinks, and discussed by the various presidents. Some of the weak points: lack of consecration; not willing to give time; lack of study; lack of attending conferences and zone meetings; lack of encouragement to Young People. Some strong points brought out were: Interest in programs; a willingness to serve; harmony; growing spirituality.

Our leader told about the Pauline Randle memorial stone and the Eliza Stephen Hall at Mount Sequoyah.

The conference for 1928 was invited to Jonesboro, and the invitation was accepted.

The undercurrent that ran as a golden thread through the day's service was entire consecration.

MRS. J. H. PITTMAN,
Secretary Pro Tem.

ZONE MEETING AT IUKA, MISS.

A zone meeting met at the Methodist Church in Iuka on May 31, at 10 o'clock a. m., and was called to order by the chairman, Mrs. W. H. West, of Tishomingo. Rev. L. A. McKeown, of Hollandale, led the devotional exercise. A short business period followed, in which Mrs. H. L. Hamilton, of Iuka, was elected zone chairman, and Mrs. G. T. Carmichael leader for the next meeting.

In rendering the program, Mrs. C. W. McKnight gave many good reasons in answer to "Why Have Zone Meetings?" Mrs. Pilly, of Belmont, explained social service work. Mrs. Hamilton emphasized the importance of Young People and Junior work. The duties of the various officers were read and discussed. Mrs. Downs, of Belmont, made a splendid talk on Mission and Bible study. Mrs. J. R. Brown set forth the duties of women in the election of clean and law-enforcing officers.

The program was interspersed with congregational singing and prayer. Two special musical numbers were given by local talent.

At the noon hour, automobiles were at the door to convey the delegation to the Mineral Springs Park, where a sumptuous picnic dinner was spread, everybody having brouht a well filled dish.

Tishomingo, Belmont, Golden, Burnsville, Snow Down, and Iuka were the auxiliaries represented. Meeting adjourned to meet in Golden in October.

Constipation! How to Keep Bowels Regular

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated men, women, children, and particularly old folks, had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all headaches, biliousness, indigestion and stomach misery, he did not believe that a sickening "purge" or "physic" was necessary.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to establish natural bowel "regularity" even for those chronically constipated. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but, best of all, it never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless, and so pleasant that even a cross, feverish, bilious, sick child gladly takes it.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

GRACIOUS REVIVAL AT PURVIS, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We closed here last Sunday night one of the greatest revival meetings that Purvis has ever had. I have never been in a sweeter service than the one we had Sunday afternoon, where most every family represented at the service agreed to erect a family altar. It was a great sight to see fathers and mothers, sons and daughters taking their places by each other, agreeing to have family prayer in their homes.

Rev. C. Norman Guice, of Conway, Ark., began with me Sunday, May 22, and we closed Sunday, June 5. Brother Guice is a strong, forceful preacher of the Bible doctrine. He is a fearless preacher of the truth and he knows how to run a revival meeting. I have never had better help. I learned to love him during the fifteen days that he was with me.

We received twenty-four members by baptism and vows, one by certificate, and one restored. There were numbers who are already members of the church, who came and rededicated their hearts and lives to God. There were some real conversions and shouts in the camps of Israel. There was one who came up for membership in the Presbyterian church.

We expect to see and feel the results of this revival in Purvis for many years to come. We trust that the good done will last into eternity.

Brother Guice goes from here to Petal to help Brother M. W. Porter in a two-weeks meeting. He goes from Petal to Prentiss, Miss., to help Brother A. J. Davis.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

We are in the midst of the Conference Training School at Grenada, and can give only a few facts at this writing. We have fifty preachers and eighteen of the preachers' wives are taking work with their husbands. I think not less than sixty pastoral charges are represented in the school. The work being done is the most serious and enthusiastic I have ever witnessed.

Reports from classes will be given next week from those participating in the work. These reports will be more satisfactory than anything I can give at present.

We are anxious for our people over the Conference to know the character of work these schools are doing. The results justify all the money we are spending. The truth is we are getting more for our money in the training of leaders than we can get in any other way.

Our next school is to be held at Kosciusko, June 27-July 2, with the following courses:

"The Small Sunday School," R. H. B. Gladney, instructor.

"Pupil Study," Mrs. J. B. Randloph instructor.

"Story Telling," Mrs. W. W. Adams, instructor.

"Bible" (New Testament), Rev. R. G. Moore, instructor.

"A Study of Later Adolescence," Mrs. W. N. Duncan, instructor.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, Educational Director.

Rev. R. P. Neblett, Registrar.

Let the preachers near Kosciusko work hard to have at least one hundred in this school.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE ELEMENTARY SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Two very interesting and worthwhile Sub-District Institutes have been held recently in interest of the Elementary Work of the Sunday schools. The first of these was held at Reeves' Chapel, in the Jackson District, by Miss Mamie Dietrick, District Elementary Superintendent. A devotional service, led by Rev. J. O. Ware, was followed by a beautiful solo by Miss Lucille Moore. Mr. W. A. Luster, of Edwards, led a discussion of the importance of our Sunday schools providing for the religious education of the children of elementary age. Rev. Marlin H. McCormack followed this with a discussion of the importance of giving this religious training in accordance with the Program of Work as provided by the General Sunday School Board of our church. Miss Dietrick presented the Elementary Programs, and urged the observance of Children's Week in all of the schools represented. A delightful dinner was served by the people of Reeve's Chapel to the representatives of the six schools.

As a group meeting for Elementary workers at the Newton-Jasper County Institute at Montrose, Mrs. J. E. Oakey, Newton District Elementary Superintendent, and the Conference Elementary Superintendent held a Sub-District Institute with representatives from four schools. An informal discussion on Elementary problems was held, and Mrs. Oakey presented Children's Week. The next afternoon the Elementary groups of Montrose and Bay Springs schools were checked, and found to rank well.

The Daily Vacation Bible School at Brookhaven is having a very successful session. The school began Monday morning with a very successful and interested group of students in Beginner, Primary and Junior Departments. Under the leadership of Mrs. W. D. Davis, Director of Religious Education of the Brookhaven church, a competent faculty has been secured. During the first of the two weeks of the school Mrs. R. E. McDonald, assistant in Vacation Church School Work of the General Board, is helping them in tihs work.

Several other churches of the Conference are planning vacation schools for the next few weeks.

MAGGIE MAY JONES,

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Standard Training Schools in the Louisiana Conference are going forward according to schedule in spite of the flood conditions. We are in receipt of a letter from Mr. O. W. Moerner, Assistant Director of Leadership and Teacher Training work at Nashville, commending the Louisiana Sunday school workers on their courage and determination in going ahead with the program under such trying circumstances, and offering his sympathy and prayers.

* * *

The Haynesville-Homer Standard Training School just closed was a decided success, fifty-five credits having been issued, and the spirit of the school most excellent all the way through. Dr. R. H. Wynn, Mrs. W. W. Templeton, Prof. J. D. Walker and Dr. W. W. Drake made up the faculty.

* * *

The Minden Standard Training School opened at 7:30 in the evening of June 5. This is the third Standard Training School held at Minden, and gives promise of being a fine one, with prospects of a goodly number of credits. Mrs. W. W. Templeton, Prof. J. E. Stephens of Millsaps College, Mrs. Harwell and Dean Smith compose the feculty.

* * *

On Sunday morning, the 5th instant, the writer had the pleasure of a visit to the newly erected church and Sunday school building in Pineville, and enjoyed very much being with the Men's Bible class, which is taught by the pastor, Rev. Claude K. Smith. This is a splendid building, and the people are justly proud of it. We noted the attendance record as posted on the bulletin board as 274.

In the afternoon of the 5th the writer went to Minden for the opening of the Training School.

* * *

On June 8, in company with Dr. Cleanth Brooks, of Alexandria, Prof. J. E. Stephens of Millsaps, and Rev. L. I. McCain, pastor of the Minden church, the writer went to Shreveport for the commencement exercises of the Centenary College. This marked the close of the one hundred and second year of the college, and sixty-six diplomas were presented, about equally divided between the young men and young women. Two honorary degrees were conferred, one Doctor of Law upon Hon. R. E. L. Sauer, of Dallas, and Doctor of Divinity upon Rev. G. F. Winfield, of Lon Morris College, Jacksonville, Tex.

We were glad to learn from Prof. Stephens that Millsaps College has an endowment of $125,000 for a Chair of Religious Eudcation. Centenary should have such an endowment.

We are in receipt of the program of the Leadership Schoools for 1927 to be held at Mount Sequoyah, and note the many splendid things promised in these schools. We call attention with pleasure to the fact that Miss Pauline Wynn, Director of Religious Education of the First Methodist Church at Beaumont, Tex., is to be the leader of recreation of the Young People's Conference Aug. 2-13.

* * *

We are indebted to Brother P. O. Lowrey for a recent copy of his Monthly Bulletin, which is, as usual, filled with good things.

* * *

The last school to send in its Sunday School Day offering is Epworth, and the nice amount was sent to us by Mr. O. J. Dunn.

* * *

A letter from Brother A. M. Mayo, of Lake Charles, tells us that they are seeking a fall date for a Standard Training School, and expect to have a good school.

* * *

The writer, while in Minden, had a talk with the old colored janitor of the First Methodist Church there. George West is the name of this veteran janitor, who says that he has been on the job for thirty-seven years; that he started out at a salary of $3.50 a month, and is now getting $25 a month. The old man recalled many of the old pastors of the church, detaling his impressions of each. The writer humorously asked him what church he was a member of. He said, "Zion's Rest Baptist Church."

* * *

While in Shreveport we had a conference with the leaders in regard to the Vivian Standard Training School, which will open on June 19, in the afternoon. The leaders are to be congratulated on securing a fine faculty, and will no doubt have a splendid school.

* * *

Mr. R. W. Cronin, superintendent at Barham, writes:

"I herewith enclose you check to the amount of $12.50, our Sunday School Day offering.

"We had a mighty fine time while Brother McLellan and Mrs. McLellan were with us during our Cokesbury Training Course, which Brother Mack held for us. It seemed as good to have them back with us again. We surely had a splendid attendance during this school, and I am sure much good will come from having had this course.

"Come and be with us some time, we are always anxious to have you visit our school."

* * *

Rev. Clem Baker, of Little Rock, writes: "Glad to get your card. Please let me know just when the first class week starts and where you will expect me to get off the train. Write me at once, as I am leaving for the Kentucky Pastors' School and will get back just in time to come to you." Mr. Baker is booked to teach a Conference-wide class on "Sunday School Management" in the Rochelle Standard Training School, June 26-July 1.

* * *

In this morning's mail we read this from Brother Claude Mayo, of Clay circuit: "In talking with Brother Kleinschmidt concerning our Cokesbury School, he was very much pleased, and promised to do all he could to help us make it a success. I have started advertising in the parish paper."

SUPPORT YOUR LEAGUE.

If you want to have the kind of a League
Like the kind of a League you like,
You needn't slip your clothes in a grip
And start on a long, long hike.

You'll only find what you left behind,
For there's really nothing new;
It's a knock at yourself when you knock your own League;
It isn't your League—it's you.

And if you'll make a personal stake,
Your neighbor can make one, too;
Your League will be what you want to see—
It isn't your League—it's you.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT INSTITUTE.

The all-day Institute of the Vicksburg District Epworth League, held at Hermanville, May 29, proved an inspiration to all who attended. Miss Chesley Hagan, the District Superintendent, had arranged a most interesting program around the general theme, "Leadership." Those discussing the different phases of the subject were Miss Hagan, Miss Eustace Hardin, and Mr. Carl Christmas, of Vicksburg; Mrs. T. M. Lord, of Lorman; Miss Ellis, of Fayette, and Miss Margaret Fife, of Hermanville.

Between talks Miss Hagan led an instructive open forum and question box discussion on League problems.

Mrs. T. M. Ford, who gave a helpful talk on "The Missionary Leader," had the delegates sing, to the tune of "Brighten the Corner:"

"Wake up the Leaguers where you are,
Wake up the Leaguers where you are,
Some of these Leaguers you may have to give a jar,
But—Wake up the Leaguers where you are."
Then—"Wake up the people where you are," etc.
And, "Work up the Mission class where you are."

During the devotional exercises, led by Mr. Veale Harmon, of Vicksburg, "Love Lifted Me" was sung, substituting "John 3:16" for the words "Love Lifted Me."

The Pep meeting just before closing was fully indicative of the enthusiasm and spirit of the Leaguers.

A most enjoyable feature of the day was the dinner served by the Hermnaville Leaguers, to which full justice was dine. They had fried chicken, 'n-everything.

REPORTER.

A SPLENDID REPORT OF A SPLENDID PRESIDENT.

On Tuesday at the business session the Conference President made his annual report to the Assembly. We wish it was possible to print the entire report at this time. However, we shall give certain recommendations contained in his report.

"First of all there is the question of housing our Assembly delegations, and I believe we would be unjust to our young people if we failed to consider this question. I recommend, therefore, that we request our next Conference Cabinet and Conference Epworth League Board to seriously consider this question. As you know, our present facilities provide for only one from each chapter, and our Conference is organizing new Leagues continually. I feel that each chapter should have not less than one representative for each ten members, and we ought to provide for more even than that number.

"Second, I would recommend that more stress be put upon the young people's revival and that we endeavor to take a greater interest in this feature of our program than was manifest last year. October is the month set aside this year for this work. Let us observe this throughout the Conference.

"Third. More attention should be given to reading circles and study classes under the supervision of the third department.

Fourth. After careful consideration and inquiries throughout the Conference I am of the opinion that there is a great deal of dissatisfaction within the Assembly of four days, and I recommend that we go back to the six-day Assembly.

"And now may I thank you again for your fine co-operation. May I urge you as Leaguers to make the coming year the best in the history of the Conference. Stand by the principles of your orgaization and make a personal application of your motto. May we truly be "All for Christ," presenting ourselves living sacrifices to him. My earnest prayer is that when you stand before the judgment bar to hear the "Well done thou faithful" that you will not stand there empty-handed, but that there will be a host of souls there to say "I am here because of your life and your effort to lead me in the right.

"J. H. WEEMS,
"President, Mississippi Conference Epworth League Assembly."

MISSISSIPPI EPWORTH LEAGUE NEWS.

Sixth Annual Epworth League Conference Assembly, Brookhaven, Miss., June 6-10.

The sixth annual Conference of the Epworth League opened Monday night with one hundred and ninety delegates, visitors and officers registered from the seven districts. All district secretaries were present with one exception. Newton District had the largest delegation, despite the absence of their district leader.

The first address of the Assembly was made by Rev. Robert Selby on the subject, "Life At Its Best." The Dean endeavored to get the Leaguers vitally interested in every phase of the church work, and to that end the superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage spoke briefly on the work done at the orphanage. The editor of this column represented the Methodist periodicals, substituting for Dr. Carley, who could not be present.

There were several changes made in the program due to the inability of several members of the faculty to attend. Rev. Jos. A. Smith could not attend because of the illness of his wife, and Rev. Benj. L. Sutherland was in charge of the morning watch service, and made these services of vital interest to every one present. Miss Rosa McNeil, one of our girls who attends Scarritt College, could not be with us, and Miss Helen Sells, another of our girls at Scarritt, assumed her part of the program, in addition to the supervision of the recreation of the Assembly.

Miss Sells, who arrived from Nashville on Tuesday morning, was the very able leader of the recreational activities. On Tuesday afternoon from 3 to 4 o'clock a baseball game was in progress between Seashore District and Vicksburg District, at which the Vicksburg District was the victor.

At the first business session the president made his report, and it was adopted. Committees were appointed and the members of the Electoral Commission were announced. Telegrams were sent to the Epworth League Conferences in session at present, and to Rev. and Mrs. Smith, Miss Louise Preston, Mrs. J. H. Weems and Harry.

After the business session a problem hour was conducted by Rev. J. L. Neill. This was a new part on our Assembly program for this year. Questions from a list sent out by Central Office were passed around and questions asked by members of each district. This part of the program was very creditably car-

We desire very earnestly a deeply spiritual and brotherly fellowship. A strong program will be prepared and a full attendance is anxiously desired. Brother S. V. Wall, our district lay leader, is anxious for a full representation of our charges in their lay leaders. They will be given right of way in the morning session of the second day. Now, let daily prayers be made for the presence of the Divine Spirit upon our sessions.

We want live issues and vital discussions. Whatever may from time to time engage the thoughts of men, our personal relation to the issues of moral and spiritual life stand first with all deeply thinking men. All the salvation we can or shall ever know is involved in knowing that at the center and heart of all is intelligence, law and love, and these are working for man's good.

DOING THE WILL OF GOD.

Dear Dr. Carley: "God created man in his own image." Why? We are taught in God's full revelation, Jesus Christ, that we are to do his will. The image has been marred and shattered and all but effaced by man's sin. But traces there are of the primeval plan still; fragments which may tell how beautiful and glorious the "perfect man" must be.

And our work is a work of restoration. Thank God, we are not left to put together the plan from such disjointed and disfigured fragments as we find or think we find. The Almighty Architect has set his plan before us that we may not err. He has shown us the pattern to which we are to work in our restoration. Behold "the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." As we fit our building more and more to that, we are bringing out the great design, and surely once more man is being fashioned. We have no such embodiment of the perfect state of the church as we have of the individual man. But the foundation has been laid and enough of the great purpose of the church executed to show what might be and what the Master-builder willed to be.

I think it is left for the Methodist church to complete some part of a building that was left unfinished by the builders of old. We have only to work on the old lines and to build on upon the plan begun to bring the building nearer and nearer to the mind of God. And so in truth all our work for the church of Christ—all of our endeavors to heal its breaches, to widen its borders, to strengthen its virtues, to correct its errors, to perfect its graces, to utilize its powers, to multiply its energies—all are a work of restoration.

Utilizing Its Powers: Brother E. G. Mohler and all others engaged in Teacher-Training work are doing much to utilize the power of our church. I feel called to the work of the church, and I thank God for men who are qualified to teach and help carry on the great work. Just in proportion as I give my heart to the program of our church and its working, just in that proportion do I find my Lord and Master.

We closed a Cokesbury Training School here last week, and I feel that it was the means of conserving some man-power, and that many gifts and graces were restored.

It is my deep and earnest conviction that in the system of teaching of our beloved church will be found the best helps towards that growth into the completeness of restored humanity.

I fearlessly maintain that in the broad, comprehensive, loving system of the Methodist Episcopal Church is to be found a far more harmonious, a far more duly adjusted, a far better proportioned setting forth of the truth of God than in any other system in this imperfect world. I can never cease to admire the wisdom and beauty of our Sunday school work.

The child trained in the system of the Methodist church will never be narrow in views, but broad and loving; not one-sided, but many-sided; not a party man will he be, but a simple and honest member of the church of Christ.

When I meet with the workers of our system I always feel strengthened in faith and hope and charity, and made to conform more and more to the mind of Christ and restored more and more to the image of God and rendered more and more fit for the new life in which we hope to come, in all its fullness, to the "Perfect Man." We believe that "we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is."

Yours in Him,

GUY D. BURT.

LAYMEN'S MEETING TO BE HELD AT ARTESIA, MISS.

This meeting, on the fourth Sunday in June, is to be held for the promotion and advancement of the kingdom of God in the various communities in the Columbus District. Therefore it is very necessary that all laymen of the eastern end of the district from and including Longview circuit, attend this meeting. Your name may not appear on the program, as it is impossible to assign all names to the program; however, you will be given an opportunity to bring a message during the day. Please study the program as given below and come prepared. All the ministers of the district are invited to be there and take part.

Program.

10 a. m., devotional, by J. H. McKinnon.

10:15 a. m., "The One Task of the Church," by Dr. H. H. Ellis.

10:45 a. m., "The Laymen's Responsibility to the Sunday School and Prayer Meeting," by A. S. McAlilly, A. J. Erwin, Jr.

11:15 a. m., "The Need of Laborers in Christ's Vineyard," by J. H. McKinnon.

Noon Hour.

2 p. m., "The Laymen's Work As It Relates to Winning Souls," by Dr. N. D. Guerry, Dr. James Locke.

2:45 p. m., "The Laymen's Duty and Responsibility to the Benevolences of the Church," by L. A. Sly, W. I. Campbell, A. J. S. Glenn.

3:30 p. m., "The Purpose and Value of the Wesley Brotherhood," by N. C. Oakes, B. L. Smith, Jr.

4 p. m., address by Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder of Columbus District.

I hope all the laymen of the eastern end of the district will attend this meeting. We shall be disappointed if you are not there. Let's make the day worth while.

We hope to hold a meeting of this kind in the other part of the district soon. Who wants it?

J. H. McKINNON,
District Lay Leader.

Those hours which in this age are thrown away in dress, play, visits, and the like were employed in my time in writing out receipts or working beds, chairs, and hangings for the family. It grieves my heart to see a couple of proud, idle flirts sipping their tea, for a whole afternoon, in a room hung 'round with the industry of their great-grandmother.—Quoted by George Blake from the Spectator of about 1750.

Why try to tell the Salvation Army that the parks are crowded with drunken men the same as before prohibition, when we used to gather them in and fight to save them? They are gone. The benches remain, but their occupants are not drunk. Why try to make us believe that the workingmen spend their wages before their families can get money for food, and that they beat their wives and children, as in the old days? It is simply not true.—Evangeline Booth.

I would leave the days as they are in their beautiful and endless variety, but the long, shut-in winter evenings—these I would multiply, taking them away from June to give to January, could I supply the fire and the boys and the books and the reader to go with them.—Dallas Lore Sharp.

HOW MANY WOMEN GET UP SINGING

Two Women Find Health Essential to Happiness

MRS. BELLE THOMPSON
ROUTE 2, ROSSVILLE, GEORGIA

Springtime streamed in through the open windows. The green fields of Georgia were basking in the sunshine. Somewhere a bird was trilling. It was a day to be happy.

But the pale woman at the table sighed and pushed away her plate. Nothing tasted right. She couldn't eat much. She couldn't sleep well, either. She was so weak, it was hard to do her work. When the baby cried, she wanted to cry, too.

She had not been well for four years. Her husband watched her with a man's helpless expression. But his mother knew a remedy.

"My mother-in-law," says Mrs. Belle Thompson, Route 2, Rossville, Ga., "told me of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I took six bottles of the Vegetable Compound. I could sleep and would get up in the morning singing and feeling fine. I am the mother of three children, and always after the babies came I had to take treatments, but I can truly say that this last time I have only used the Sanative Wash. It does more good than the treatments. It keeps me on my feet to care for my children and I do most of my work. I feel it my duty to let you know how both of the medicines have helped me."

Another Happy Woman

Decatur, Illinois.—"I took your medicine for weakness. I would sometimes have to hold myself up with my hands. I was this way for five years, off and on. I read in the newspapers where Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped a lot of women, and I thought I would take it. I am now getting better so fast that every month I can feel a difference. My work now is cooking. If you like, you may use these facts as a testimonial. I am willing to help you boost your medicine."—Mrs. Irene Reed, 635 Greenwood Ave., Decatur, Ill.

This dependable medicine has been in use for over fifty years.

Dried-Out Bowels Hold Malaria in Your System

If malaria is in your system, the only way to get it out without torturing and upsetting yourself is to take Dodson's Liver Tone to clean out all the hardened, dried-out accumulation of bile in the liver and bowels, and carry the germs out with it.

Never take calomel. That's wrong. Calomel is mercury—a dangerous drug. It jars the liver and cleans constipated bowels, that's true. But it salivates you—makes you sick and you lose a day from your work. It stifles the muscles of the bowels, deadens them so they can't act at all.

Dodson's Liver Tone cleans you out good so the liver is free to get the malarial germs out of your blood, and the bowels can carry them off. Before you realize it the chills and fever stop. Malaria is gone.

Get the big bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone from your nearest store. They all have it. Keep it in the house so you will have it handy to take nights before you go to bed.

FROM NATCHITOCHES, LA.

Dear Mr. Editor: Several things occurring in Natchitoches recently may be of interest to you and your readers. First of all, the State Normal College has completed another successful year of its work, graduating ninety-five with the A.B. degree and four large classes of two-year certificate teachers. Over 5,000 teachers have gone from here to the public schools of the State. Our relation to the students has always been a pleasant one, and the young people's department of our church here touches a number in a fine way.

We are planning three things between now and Conference which should be of benefit to our work. First comes the Daily Vacation Bible School, which will conduct a three weeks' session, with Miss Alberta Wilson, of Scarritt College, in charge. Then the Standard Training School, Sept. 18-23, offers an opportunity for study and training that we value. Last year our school was the third largest in the State, and we expect a better one this session. We have secured Dean Smith to teach Dr. Sledd's "Life of Jesus," Mrs. Templeton, to teach "Story Telling," and Rev. A. K. McLellan to teach "The Small Sunday School," and expect either Mrs. John A. Rice, of Tulsa, Okla., or Dr. L. W. Crawford, of Peabody, to complete our faculty. Pleasant Hill, Marthaville, Robeline, Campti, Clarence, Kurthwood and Alco and other churches will co-operate. Then, too, we will have Miss Daisy Davies, that splendid leader in the Woman's Council, with us Oct. 2 to 16 for an evangelistic campaign. These plans should do much to promote the spiritual life here.

We are losing an unusual leader among the young people this year in the going of Henry Rickey, our former pastor's son. He received his B. A. degree yesterday. He has been a faithful worker in all branches of our church. In token of our love and appreciation, a gift from the entire church was made him last Sunday evening in the form of a handsome gold watch, and the Epworth Leaguers gave him a brief case. So you see he is already equipped for the presiding eldership—but we are glad he will have three years in the Candler School of Theology before entering the Conference. Henry is a fine boy, and he will make a fine and faithful pastor, and we hope he will always be in Louisiana.

H. L. JOHNS.

GIVING THE BIBLE TO THE FLOOD SUFFERERS.

My report from the sub-depository, the Southwestern Agency of the American Bible Society, located at 900 St. Charles Steret, New Orleans, La., for the months of April and May, 1927, is as follows:

We have visited the refugee camps at New Orleans, Natchez, Vicksburg, Vidalia, Alexandria, Opelousas, and Lafayette. We went to Baton Rouge, New Iberia, Westwego, Gretna, Algiers, Myrtle Grove, Poydras and Violet.

We furnished the camps at Monroe, Baton Rouge, Harrisonburg, Eunice and New Iberia, but left the actual distribution to others.

The total distribution for April and May has been 46,747 volumes, consisting of 656 Bibles, 1,340 Testaments, 44,751 portions; 16,548 volumes have been sales; 30,199 have been donations. Total value, $1,214.83; $812.78 has been sales, $396.75 donations and discounts.

Some of these have been given to people who were working on the levees; to Coast, State and National Guards, rescue workers and others. But the most of them have been given to the flood refugees. I have had twenty or thirty hands held out to me at one time pleading for the Word of God. I have gone from tent to tent. I have stood in one place and given out 200 portions of the Scriptures. It was a surprise to me to see so many people reading these little books in the tents, on the streets, even while standing in the registration line or at the long dining tables. There were over 45,000 refugees in the camps visited.

I have been upon the battle fields in Mexico. I saw the dead and decaying bodies, and where hundreds had been piled up and burned. At the time of the death-dealing tornadoes in 1912-13, I helped to put away the dead at Snyder, Okla., and worked among the refugees at Omaha, Nebr., and distributed the Scriptures among them, but I have never seen anything so pathetic or tragic as this flood. No one will ever be able by tongue or pen to draw a true picture of this disaster. It is more tragic to me than a youth blown to fragments on the battle field.

While coming from Alexandria I saw people running with packs of bedding or a small bundle of clothes to flag the train. These people were fleeing from the raging waters. At one point we were marooned for a short time. The water was about two feet deep on the track and up to the steps of the coaches. While we were stopped I furnished the passengers with the Scriptures.

We expect to visit some of the newly established camps next week.

We received donations for this work from Mrs. H. F. Tilge, of New York, $5; Court of Esther, Westminster Presbyterian Church of New Orleans $1; Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, $4; Miss Jessie Mae Clark, of Denton, Tex., $5, making a total of $30. Don't you want a part in this work? We beg an interest in your prayers.

Yours in the name of the Master,

G. A. PERKINS.

Epworth League

ried out. All Leaguers received great benefit from the problem hour, and hope that it will be made a permanent feature of the Assembly program.

On Tuesday night Rev. J. L. Neill, of Yazoo City, made the address on the subject "What Shall We Do With Christ?" after which he left for Jackson, Tenn., where the Memphis Conference is in session, where he is to make two addresses. All of us who were present last year and heard Rev. Neill make a splendid address, were well pleased with his address. We enjoyed the association of the Assembly with this outstanding preacher, and regretted that he could not attend the entire Assembly.

Miss Irma Kyle, of Washington, D. C., former secretary of our Epworth League Conference, was a visitor at the Assembly. Miss Kyle had not attended our Asssembly for five years, and it was with great pleasure that we welcomed her to our Assembly.

Our Dean, Mrs. Hawkins, and Miss Helne Hawkins leave Friday afternoon for an extended visit to cities of the north and east, arriving at Rye Beach, N. H., for the meeting of the National Council, Junior Order United American Mechanics.

The delegates of the Assembly paid honor to our own Conference girl, Miss Helen Sells, of Scarritt College, upon her arrival at the Assembly at 7 a. m., Tuesday, by forming two files and singing their greetings to her as she passed up the walk, accompanied by her father, Dean Hawkins and President Weems.

Wednesday night at the Assembly was District Night. Just after the address of the evening, each district met for a forty-five minutes social. Thursday night a social for the entire delegation was given just after the address.

The half hour given to the discussion of "Life Problems" at the business session was conducted by Dean W. D. Hawkins. At this time questions of administration were discussed.

The Assembly pictures were taken on Wednesday immediately after dinner. One group picture was taken and another of the cabinet and those people who knew Miss Louise Preston personally. The latter to be sent to Miss Preston as a token of our love and sympathy.

And now, Leaguers who remained at home, this is all of the news of the Assembly that we can give this week. There is more to follow. Watch the next issue of the Advocate.

VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL.

One of the finest things in our church activities during recent years is the Daily Vacation Bible School. Such schools have been conducted for several summers past in New Orleans, at First Methodist Church and at St. Mark's, where schools are now in session, and at some of the other churches of the city. These vacation schools have proven to be of such value that they have become a regular part of the summer activities of the two churches named. And we are glad to note that vacation schools are being conducted at other points.

The daily vacation Bible school is of great value because it adds considerably to the hours of time given to religious instruction by the church. One great difficulty in our Sunday school work is the fact that so little time can be given to the work, as at present carried on. One hour a week for Christian education is little in comparison to the number of hours a week children spend in the secular school. The vacation Bible school will enable any church, where such a school can be conducted, to add much to the time given to religious instruction.

Another advantage of such a school is the fact that it provides for continuous instruction through a period of several weeks, usually three hours every morning. This is a great advance over the one lesson a week of the regular Sunday school.

In the schools, which the writer has had the opportunity to observe, the instruction has been of a high order, and the course well arranged, including, besides the regular Bible lessons, supervised play and patriotic exercises.

There is also a missionary value in the vacation Bible School. Many children who have not regularly attended the Sunday school have been reached by the vacation school.

Unquestionably the daily vacation Bible School has gone beyond the stage of experiment, and it deserves the serious consideration of all who are engaged in the great work of religious education.

SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The Seashore Divinity School now in session at the Camp Grounds, Biloxi, Miss., is continuing the good work which it has been doing for years past. Many young men are in the classes, taking their Conference Course under the able direction of Dean McNeil and the teaching of the instructors representing the committees of the Alabama, Louisiana and Mississippi Conferences.

Bishop Candler was at his best in his lectures during the past week, and he preached to a great congregation on last Sunday.

The Divinity School has rendered a great service to the Conferences concerned, and it should be continued, with a larger support, during the years to come. The fine courses of lectures every summer should draw a larger number of our people to this delightful spot on the coast, where pleasure can be mixed with benefit and a wholesome vacation enjoyed "where cool breezes blow."

In this connection let us hope that some plan can be formed and carried out to improve the Camp Grounds and make them the place of a great assembly on the coast, comparable to what Junaluska and Sequoyah are among the mountains, with this unique advantage—that the Camp Grounds could be used the year round.

ORTHODOXY.

We wonder if there are many really orthodox people anywhere in the whole world. We doubt if any two men of average intelligence can be found anywhere whose belief is exactly the same in all points concerning anything in the heavens above, the earth beneath, or the waters under the earth. By so much as one man differs in opinion from another man, by so much is he unorthodox according to the standards accepted by the first. The fundamental assumption of orthodoxy is that truth, or certain parts of truth, have been made accessible to the human mind in a form that is unmistakable, infallible, unchanging, imperative. Technically, the rule of orthodoxy may be applied only to a few things; actually, it extends to every detail of opinion and belief.

Rigid orthodoxy implies a closed mind and a crystallized intellect. It must be so, for to have an open mind and an active intellect is to concede the possibility if not the necessity of a constant seeking after truth. Rigid orthodoxy does not concede the possibility of error in conclusions previously reached and formally stated to which the rule is applied. Such matters have been placed beyond the pale of study and investigation. Concerning such things there is nothing further to be thought or said. To discuss them with an open mind is to become unorthodox. It must be so, or orthodoxy means nothing.

To some people the closed mind and crystallized intellect are thoroughly acceptable and perfectly comfortable. They may be right, at that, in their rigidly fixed opinions, and all who hold otherwise may be wrong. The difficulty is in securing universal acceptance of their views.

To assume that any one man has stated a truth for all time to come, or that any group of men has done so, in a form that can never be properly changed, is to attribute to the human mind a degree of infallibility that cannot be sustained by an appeal to history. It is one thing to find out exactly what a given man actually did believe; it is quite another thing to maintain that there was and could be no error in his views. John Wesley was a great and good man; but to cite his opinion as an authoritative settling of any question of belief that may be under discussion is no different from appealing to an infallible pope for the same purpose. Protestantism, somehow or other, has thus far escaped the institution of a papacy. It is to be hoped that it will always be free from it.

Of course this has nothing to do with the right of an organization, ecclesiastical or otherwise, to fix its own terms of membership. Any organization, by duly constituted processes, has the right to make its own conditions of membership what it will, and to require adherence to those conditions so long as membership is maintained. By the same token, an organization has the right to modify its conditions of membership, changing them in whatever way its wisdom may suggest.

"BISHOP SCORES EXPONENT OF FREE LOVE."

Under the above caption the paper on Friday of last week published a statement by Bishop William T. Manning, of the Episcopal diocese of New York, in which he took issue with Rev. Henry Lewis, rector of St. Andrew's Church, Ann Arbor, Michigan. While it is to be regretted that one who calls himself a minister should give to the world such views as those credited to Mr. Lewis, it is indeed a satisfaction to find such views roundly condemned in no uncertain terms by a distinguished minister of the same church.

Mr. Lewis was quoted as having inquired, at the National Congress of the Episcopal Church in session at San Francisco, whether the church "might not do better to recognize unmarried unions" among the younger generation. The Bishop's statement is worth the reading:

"I hope Mr. Lewis will disavow these views," Bishop Manning said, "for any man who defends or approves unmarried unions is out of place in the ministry of the Episcopal church or any other church.

"Unmarried unions or companionate marriages, are not new. They are high sounding phrases for age-old immorality, and modern names for free love. I am aware that these ideas are being propagated among young people by some college professors, but that any Christian minister should advocate them seems incredible.

"Such teachings from a Christian minister would be even more vicious than from a tabloid newspaper or a sex magazine. A clergyman who should advocate these views, if mentally responsible, would be a dishonor to the Christian church and a menace to the community.

"Straight thinking and true-hearted young people will resent and reject any such teaching. We have had a most striking evidence of the kind of stuff that is in our young people by the modesty, poise, clear judgment and courage exhibited by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh."

CHRISTIAN EXPERIENCE AND CHRISTIAN TRUTH.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Religious experience can not be valued too highly nor emphasized too strongly. It is a matter of the greatest importance. From the first, Methodism has insisted upon it most justly and most earnestly.

But Christian experience is surely and seriously damaged when it is misplaced with reference to its relation to Christian truth. It is not the office of experience to determine Christian truth; but it must be determined by and conformed to "the truth as it is in Jesus."

The rationalists, who elevate experience above revealed truth, are fond of saying that the Christians of the primitive church had a religious experience before they had the New Testament. But this is a shallow and misleading statement, which proves too much if it proves anything. It implies that the Christian Scriptures were not necessary in the first century and are not indispensable to the Christian Church now. Why then were they written at all?

The facts and principles embodied in the New Testament were the substance of the preaching of the Apostles; but those messengers of God, inspired by the Holy Ghost, promptly composed the Scriptures in which those facts and principles were to be transmitted to all future generations after they passed away. They knew nothing of a Christianity without a foundation in assured fact. They tolerated no notion which questioned or minified the miracles of Jesus, or which held them as unnecessary to support the Christian faith. They never dreamed that a time could ever come when men calling themselves Christians would declare that there was any ground of certitude apart from the historic facts of the life of Jesus Christ on the earth and his authoritative teachings which they took pains to record in written form as well as to proclaim orally.

St. Luke in the outset of the third Gospel makes this perfectly plain. He says, "Forasmuch as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us, even as they delivered them unto us, which from the beginning were eyewitnesses, and ministers of the word, it seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the first, to write unto thee in order most excellent Theophilus, that thou mightest know the certainty of those things wherein thou hast been instructed" (Luke I:1-4).

Herein, the evangelist shows the true basis of "certainty" in Christian faith, and discloses how that many in the primitive church felt it was most important that enduring records should be made of the facts and truths which were "most surely believed" among them.

St. John declares that his purpose in writing the Fourth Gospel was to beget experience by the declaration of truth. His words are: "But these (i.e. the facts which he records) are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing, ye might have life eternal" (John XX:31).

The beloved disciple accepted the truth that "Christianity is a life," but he taught that it is such a life as can not be experienced apart from the revealed dogma that "Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God."

In his first general epistle he brings forward the same great and decisive principle: "That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled of the Word of life; (for the life was manifested, and we have seen it, and bear witness, and shew unto you that eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us;) that which we have seen and heard declare we unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us: and truly our fellowship is with the Father, and with His Son Jesus Christ. And these things write we unto you, that your joy may be full." (I John i:1-4).

The great apostle thus rests the fellowship of faith and the joyousness of experience upon the foundation of immovable facts and fundamental truths.

In like manner St. Paul in the epistle to the Romans maintains the same order and relation between Christian experience and Christian truth. He says: "There is no difference between the Jew and the Greek: for the same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon him. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord Jesus shall be saved. How then shall they call on Him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe on Him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher and how shall they preach except they be sent? * * * So then faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the word of God." (Romans x:12-17).

Thus the apostle teaches that the Christian experience of salvation takes its rise in the word of God. He knows nothing of an "ethnic interpretation" of Christianity, but holds that both Jews and Gentiles must get their religious experience through the divine revelation.

St. Peter also utters the same truth. Speaking of the experience of regeneration he describes it as "being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever" (I Peter i:2-3). What he means by "the word of God" is made plain by the words which follow, which are, "For all flesh is as grass, and all the glory of man as the flower of grass. The grass withereth, and the flower thereof falleth away; but the Word of the Lord endureth forever. And this is the word which by the gospel is preached unto you." (I Peter i:24-25).

St. James speaks to the same purpose of "the engrafted word which is able to save your souls." (James i:21).

The disposition to substitute experience for truth, which is now quite prevalent in some quarters, arises from doubt and not from faith. Men who deny the existence of any objective and authoritative revelation of God are ready to set up what they call their "experience" in the place of "the faith once for all delivered to the saints." Having lost belief in the certitude offered by the Holy Scriptures, they would establish a source of certitude in some vague and variable state within themselves.

Real Christian experience can not rest on such shifting sands. All manner of superstition, fanaticism and obscurantism can arise from such a foundation; but genuine Christian experience has in it too much body and too much weighty substance of truth to stand on such a boggy base.

That experience which is exalted above the truth revealed in the Scriptures is not Christian experience, whatever else it may be.

Amid all these confusing voices about an experience which is unbiblical and unchristian, we do well to heed the exhortation of St. John: "Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God; because many false prophets are gone out into the world. Hereby know ye the spirit of God: Every spirit that confesseth that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is of God; and every spirit that confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, is not of God and this is that spirit of anti-Christ, whereof ye have heard that it should come; and even now is already in the world." (John iv:1-3).

St. John set forth the acceptance or rejection of the Incarnation as a testing criterion by which to determine any and all experience men might profess.

At another point in his epistle he speaks with even more positiveness, if possible, saying, "Who is a liar, but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ." (I John xi:22).

Of course, such strong language shocks the delicate sensibilities of dainty Modernists, who appraise their own experience above the revealed truth recorded by St. John. But they need not suffer protracted pain from the shock; for they can discredit the epistle as a whole, or delete whatever may be found in it that does not accord with their own moods. So did Marconi, the ancient heretic who mutilated the Gospel according to St. Luke by deleting all the chapters that concerned the supernatural entrance of the Christ into the world, especially all that referred to the virgin birth of our Lord.

Deleting the Scriptures is an easy method by which modernists are accustomed to get rid of facts that contradicts their fanciful speculations. It is a process as easy as that which a dishonest debtor practices when he denies his signature on his promisory note, or fraudulently obtains possession of the paper in order that he may destroy it. The process is as facile as it is fraudulent, as easy as it is dishonest.

It is also an easy road along which to run into the wildest fanaticism and the most amazing credulity. A case of this sort is reported in a recent press dispatch which tells of the annual meeting of Spiritualists in England at which Canon Doyle, who led "the services," called upon all who were "sure that they had been in touch with their dead, to rise and testify." In response to his call more than three thousand men and women rose to their feet.

Here was a huge bulk of "experience" and a vast volume of credulity. That fanatical multitude had turned their ears from the truth and turned to fables. So is every one who thinks he can determine Christian truth by his experience instead of testing his experience by Christian truth.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

There is profound common-sense and insight into the nature of man's being, in making faith the great condition of spiritual life. The result of faith in God on life and character is not, as some would vainly teach, consequent upon superstition or weak credulity, but rather upon a masterful convincement of truth based upon trial and experience. Conditions fulfilled, results follow, even as the glowing light of day, the advent of the sun over the eastern hills. The men of faith are the men who are repeatedly astounding the world, in accomplishing seeming impossibilities. Your mere automaton does but little, he only works in well worn grooves. Your mere military martinet is never a great general. The human element may be ignored for the time, but will as surely assert itself in the end, for it is unconquerable. Faith not only laughs at impossibilities, but meets them and flouts them. I might instance great discoverers and these new couriers of the air. But now as a preacher I have a brief sermon, and I am dogmatic because I am convinced I am right.

As citizens, as men and women with the responsibility of right influence and results therefrom, there is need of firmer, stronger, more convincing faith in the righteous principles that maintain our common life and welfare. A laissez faire, a kind of creeping paralysis of indifference, is taken by many to be the essence of Christian charity. In all the history of the world a smile never won a battle, nor a sheathed sword slew an enemy. I am no pacifist when peace must be had at the price of assassinating morals, and the wrecking of institutions that have enlightened the race and ameliorated the sufferings of helpless, impoverished humanity. King Arthur's Excalibur may only be a legendary sword, but it took the king of men to wield it, and it was a token of right against wrong. And God has divided these two as surely as he divided the land and the sea. But my sermon was promised to be brief. Here is the benediction—Blessed are the children of faith, masterful faith, reliant faith, that dares to assert itself when great issues are at stake.

I have been much helped and encouraged recently by hearing some earnest, straightforward addresses on Christian education and its intimate relation to good citizenship. Our leading speakers and writers are telling our people in no uncertain terms that the welfare, the happiness, the very life and continuance of our schools, our churches, our American institutions in general, are dependendt upon the recognition of these paramount truths. And that a passive, static condition of inaction on their part is not only dangerous, but destructive in the end. So we bid these commencement preachers and college occasion speakers God-speed. For he that sows the seed of right thinking and heeds not these modern catch cries of communism and infidelity which have brought untold suffering upon other nations is a public benefactor in the deepest sense of the word. Indulge me for the moment in the language of the ball park, "Go to it, son, and stay by it, we are backing you to the end of the game."

I see more happy, contented people about me, more comforts in their homes, more conveniences that lessen grinding toil, more opportunities for social betterment, more humanity, more good fellowship, more helpfulness, more sympathy, more of everything that makes life larger, happier, bigger than I ever saw before, or read about existing anywhere else.

So here is to our fair land, enthrone her in your hearts, arch her with rainbows of hope and faith, and courage, fling her banner to the breeze of heaven and pray to the God of our fathers to give us common sense and right judgment enough, not to be fooled by empirical jackanapes who neither fear God nor regard man.

ADDRESS OF BISHOPS CONCERNING OUR SCHOOLS OF THEOLOGY.

To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Dear Brethren: There is reason for thanksgiving that in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, there is no shortage of candidates for the ministry of the gospel. Out of God-fearing homes and from revivals of religion where the power of God is manifest, large numbers of our best and finest young men continue to offer themselves for the work of the ministry. And so long as vital godliness continues to characterize our people and the gospel of redemption from sin and the witness of the Spirit and holiness of heart and life is preached and believed in, the church will never be lacking in men who have heard the voice of God calling and who gladly and joyfully answer, "Here am I; send me."

We believe also that the men who feel called of God to preach are in larger numbers than ever seeking the best possible preparation for their high calling. The Candler School of Theology at Emory University and the School of Theology at Southern Methodist University have been giving to the church numbers of young men well trained both in heart and mind for this great work. Our colleges have been sending forth each year men determined to fit themselves fully for the highest of all callings—and this in larger numbers than ever in the history of our church. There is nowhere reason for discouragement. On the contrary, there is much reason to thank God and take courage.

However, there are other things to be said. The education of our ministers has not kept pace with the education of the people at large. Everywhere the standards of popular education have been raised. Consolidated school districts and well equipped buildings with well trained teachers are bringing educational advantages to all boys and girls throughout the country. In larger numbers than ever our young people are attending college. Ambitious young men are in the great universities seeking the best that can be had in the way of professional and business training. Everywhere eager minds are asking questions and demanding answers that satisfy the intellect as well as the heart. In times past our preachers were leaders of the people; they must not be content now to be anything less. With knowledge of the problems of the day, with a deep evangelical experience, and with a positive spiritual message, they must be prepared to give guidance to the thought and life of the rising generation. An imperfectly trained ministry can never furnish the best leadership in spiritual things.

The General Conference of our church has from time to time endeavored to raise the educational standards of the ministry. At the present time the requirements as set forth in the Discipline are as follows:

"The requirements for admission on trial into the traveling connection, as far as academic training is concerned, shall be two years of work in a standard college or its equivalent; provided that under special conditions clearly recognized as unusual, the annual conference may by a two-thirds vote admit a candidate who does not meet this academic standing."

But when we turn to the records and ask: As a matter of fact, how well educated are our Southern Methodist preachers? the answer gives reason for thought. According to a survey made by the Department of Ministerial Supply and Training, the following showing is made:

Thirty-one out of every one hundred have received only an elementary education. Twenty-two out of every one hundred have received only a high school education. Twenty-two out of every one hundred have received some college training. Only eleven out of every one hundred are graduates of colleges. And only four out of every one hundred are college and seminary graduates.

This survey reveals a situation which must be remedied if our great church is to maintain her place of leadership among the religious forces of the land.

We take it for granted that the mature judgment of the best minds in the church is expressed in the language of our Discipline, paragraph 825:

"All ministerial candidates are strongly urged before entering the traveling connection to secure, if possible, a thorough collegiate and theological training."

And further to encourage them to do so, our last General Conference provided that "A certificate of graduation with the B.D. degree or its equivalent from one of the graduate schools of theology of our church may be accepted in lieu of the course for admission and for Conference undergraduates."

It should be clearly understood that our Correspondence School for undergraduates in our Annual Conferences and our Pastors' Schools were not intended to be a substitute for theological training in our schools of theology. For this there can be no substitute. Nothing can take the place of the severe mental discipline of the seminary and daily association with teachers who are not only scholars, but men of deep piety and of successful experience in the work of the ministry.

We, therefore, direct the attention of the ministers and laymen of our church to the Schools of Theology established by the General Conference of our church. The work done at Emory University, Atlanta, Georgia; and at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Texas, has been highly satisfactory. Some of the most efficient young ministers in our church have come from these Schools of Theology. And these institutions call for our hearty and liberal support. But the work of these schools is at the present time greatly curtailed for the want of larger endowments. Most of our young preachers have to borrow money to enable them to attend college, and by the time they are ready to enter upon their graduate theological training they find themselves unable to do so unless scholarships are available to assist them in going forward with their work. The inevitable result is that they either stop short of further training or accept more liberal scholarships offered by institutions not owned by our church and in sections of the country where there are fewer men offering for the work of the ministry. And as a consequence such young men are lost entirely to Southern Methodism. This leakage was never quite so large as it is to-day. The demand, therefore, is imperative. Men of wealth who love our Methodism must establish scholarships at Emory University and at Southern Methodist University. We do not doubt that there are many loyal and liberal men who need only to have their attention directed to this matter. The endowments of these Schoools of Theology must be greatly increased. We know of no place where the investment of money will count more for the advancement of the kingdom of God than in the schools where our future leaders are to be trained. We give our full approval of the following resolution adopted by our Board of Education at its recent session:

"The Board expresses itself as being in hearty sympathy with Emory University and the Southern Methodist University in the proposal to inaugurate a concentrated effort to place upon the conscience and in the conviction of the whole church the need of a thoroughly educated ministry, and we pledge our support and co-operation."

We call upon our pastors and presiding elders everywhere to encourage our young men to go forward with their college and theological training. We urge our college presidents and professors to direct the attention of their students to our own universities. The advantage of studying under men who know Methodist doctrine and Methodist experience needs only to be mentioned to be self-evident. And the further advantage of association with the men with whom one is later to do one's lifework needs only to be suggested. To our younger brethren looking to the work of the Christian ministry, we say as St. Paul said to Timothy: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." And we add the apostle's exhortation to another young minister: "Say to Archippus, Take heed to the ministry which thou hast received in the Lord, that thou fulfill it"—that thou fill it full.

In England university football is still on an amateur basis; it is played for fun. Here an equally good game has been spoiled because it has been professionalized and commercialized until the fun has been lost for the player in a grim and grimy business.—The Nation.

CONCERNING MODERNISM.

By Hon. T. M. Evans.

In the Southern Methodist of May 25, Rev. R. C. Armstrong, an honored superannuated minister, after having spent sixty-seven years preaching the gospel in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, expressed great interest in the outcome of the controversy in the Protestant denominations, and especially in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, over the Modernism which is now disturbing the Christian denominations, but fails to suggest a remedy.

This question does not seem to be confined to any particular Protestant denomination, but threatens the harmony of every Christian denomination.

I submit that this question must be solved just as all previous controveries have been solved, in the scriptural way, that is, that the "chaff must be separated from the wheat." Division is the only method that has ever settled any controverted subject. The devil or his teaching cannot be destroyed by human agencies.

Soon after the beginning of the Christian era the Romans and the Greeks divided, each establishing an independent organization of the Christian church, then came other controversies, and Martin Luther drew out of the Roman Catholic church and established the Lutheran church or Protestant church, from which all other Protestant churches have grown up, among which was the Episcopal church. And then John Wesley began his revival work from which the twenty-five or more organizations of Methodism have developed. But never before has the Christian church divided over so vital a question as the pending question of Modernism.

All Protestant churches have co-operated in opposing Roman or Grecian Catholicism, but the difference between the Roman or Grecian Catholic church and the Protestant churches shrink into insignificance as compared to the differences that now exist between ministers and between members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and between ministers and members of most all other Protestant Christian churches.

There is no vital difference between the Roman or Greek Catholic churches, and the various organizations of Methodist churches except in church polity. The Roman and Grecian Catholic churches and the Methodist organizations have always accepted the Holy Bible as the Word of God, and as being the truth, the statement contained in Genesis as to the creation of man in the image of the triune God, the pre-existence of Christ and the Holy Ghost with the Father, and the presence of the Three in the creation, and that man was created in the likeness of the Three and indued with free moral agency, and that in the exercise of man's free moral agency he brought upon himself death and all of the troubles incident to life, and that he thereby became a fallen man imbued with the spirit of the devil, and that regeneration as the gift of God is necessary in order for man to become a moral creature.

They all agree that God covenanted with Adam to provide a Redeemer, and that Jesus Christ was the Son of God, begotten of the Holy Ghost, and not of Joseph, who made an atonement for the transgression of the world by his death upon the cross, and that by the grace of God through faith in the all-sufficency of Christ's blood shed upon the cross man may become a new creature in Christ Jesus, having a new heart created within him, and a right spirit renewed within him, and that there is no other method by which we may be saved.

But now we are confronted with a strange proposition; ministers belong to the same Annual Conference, and being sent out to different congregations of the same Methodist Episcopal Church, South, under an appointment from the same bishop and cabinet, one reading a lesson and taking a text from the Holy Bible as the word of God and preaching the doctrine as above stated, while the other reads a lesson and taxes a text from the same Book, but denying that it is the word of God, or that Christ is the Son of God, or that man was created in the image of God; but accepts a theory that a particle of vegetable matter —the creation of which is not accounted for in any authentic way—fell into water, not accounted for and in a manner, and was exposed to the heat of the sun—the creation of which has not been accounted for—produced animal life in the vegetable matter, which became what we called when I was a child a wiggle tail, and that this creature, through some unknown process, developed from one species of animal life to another until the lowest form of the human race came into existence, and that man, instead of being a fallen man, has by the environments that surround him and the light of reason developed himself into the highest species of the human family of which we have any record; and that Christ was just a human being begotten of Joseph, who became the wisest and the greatest teacher the world has ever known, an example for all men to follow, thereby teaching that purity of heart and purpose and character are purely matters of education, that may be acquired by observation and training, thereby doing away with the doctrine of regeneration and transformation through the grace of God and the influence of the Holy Ghost.

I submit that the question of the mode of baptism or any question of polity as to whether the head of the temporal church shall be the pope of Rome or some other established head acceptable to the various denominations, shrinks into insignificance compared to the question of dispute now pending in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and other denominations; therefore there must be a division, and there is no other remedy known to God or man.

I have known the worst drunkards and most profane characters and most abandoned prostitutes converted under the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ and transformed into the most devout Christian characters.

While I do not say that it is impossible, I do say that I have never known a Modernist converted and transformed, however circumspect he might be in his conduct in society personally.

Should the bishop appoint a Mohammedan or a Buddhist priest who honestly believed in the doctriune of his church for my pastor. I would have more respect for him than for a minister ordained in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, who reads a passage and takes a text from a book which he believes to be and declares to be untrue, a book of mythology which purports to be the word of God, but it is not.

We are now confronted with this proposition that a very large majority of the ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; and I am satisfied that 95 per cent of the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, believe and accept the Holy Bible as the Word of God, and that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, the doctrine of the fall of man and the redemption through Jesus Christ, and we are furnishing and maintaining the plants for the publication of our literature, and we are furnishing and maintaining the colleges and universities for the education of our children and the doctrines of our church, but by some unfortunate way the publication of our literature has largely fallen into the hands of the Modernists, who are using our plants and our papers to spread their propaganda contrary to the doctrines of our church, and our colleges and universities have fallen into the hands of Modernists, who are using them as places of propaganda for their Modernists publishing their insubordination to the church to the world, defying the church and the state who support the institutions to have anything to say as to what shall be taught therein, and thereby teaching insubordination to the young people who are attending those schools, the effect of which is to fill the minds of the rising generation with anarchy and insubordination to the government. Therefore we must either replace the editors in charge of such publications, and professors who have charge of such colleges and universities, who are insubordinate to the church and who are teaching insubordination and doctrines contrary to the doctrines of our church, with editors and professors who are loyal to our church and its doctrines, or we must abandon these institutions or let those who are not of our faith support them. We had better be without any literature, colleges or universities of any kind, than to be supporting publications of literature, colleges or universities which are under the control of those who dispute the doctrines of our church, and use these publications, colleges and universities for the propagation of the doctrine contrary to the doctrine of our church. Two cannot walk together except they be agreed.

ARE YOU INTERESTED?

Would you be interested in making your "congregation missionary?" To accomplish this, would it be worth your while, and even an effort on your part? How can it be done, and what will it take to accomplish this? These are questions more easily asked than answered; yet is it not a fact that information is very necessary if we are to have our people interested? Suppose our presiding elders, quite a number of our pastors (city and rural) and some of the leading laymen (both men and women) of the district would attend "our School of Missions" at Junaluska, July 20 to 27, would not this help very much in getting the information and inspiration back to the congregation, whom we are trying to make missionary? Why not get a number in each district to drive through in their autos, take several others with them, thus reduce the expense and enjoy the trip more, and at the same time enjoy their vacation (what better place for your vacation)? This is really worth your while.

Something About the School of Missions.

1. Leadership Schools will run conjointly with the Sunday school for twelve days, but at each Assembly the first six days will be given to a conference for the general work in each school, the topic of which will be "Making My Congregation Missionary."

2. The new mission study book, "Beginning at Jerusalem," General Work, will be taught two hours each morning and finished with regular credits in the six-day conference. The teacher will teach how to teach with reference to the use of this book in 18,000 congregations in January and February, 1928.

3. The last hour each morning will be given to a conference by the Assembly on practical methods of missionary education.

How about the evenings at Junaluska? How does a program like this appeal to you?

Opening night, Wednesday, July 20; China night, Thursday, July 21; Country Life night, Friday, July 22; Assembly night, Saturday, July 23; Sunday morning and night, July 24, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth; Stewardship night, Monday, July 25; "My Congregation" night, Tuesday, July 26; Pageant night, Wednesday, July 27.

Our missionary problem will be solved when our "Congregation is Missionary." Who is to help hasten the time when this shall be true; why not you? Remember the date and place, and plan now to be there when the school opens. Be sure to be there and watch the "Nights" and Sundays, the New Book, the Methods Conference, a Great Missionary Pageant and the People That Are Coming. Don't miss it! Glad to answer any question.

Yours for a school that will greatly help us in solving the problem of making the "congregation missionary,"

W. D. HAWKINS, Missionary Secretary,
Mississippi Conference.

ANARCHY!

By Dr. R. H. Bennett.

Patriotic Americans will agree that the highest judicial position in the world is that of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States. No other man's opinion carries such weight as his. Chief Justice Taft is reported to have said in a recent speech to the Yale Alumni in Washington, "If a man thinks that every law must suit him in order to obey it, he is not a democrat but an anarchist." Anarchy! Do we know what that means? It means no government, no police force except a Praetorian Guard of ruffians who terrorize the city and dominate the world for their own vile ends. It means no army, no navy, except a horde of outlaws with the fearful modern engines of destruction in their hands to minister to their own lawless lusts. Anarchy means your ballot as a free citizen is worthless. It means that the business you have built up with such care belongs to any one who cares to rob you of it. "Let him take who has the power and let him keep who can." It means that your bank deposits may be taken at any time by one who wishes to do so. It means no commerce, no credit, no business. It means no doctors, medicines, nurses or hospitals. It means no public schools, colleges or libraries, no Red Cross, no Y. M. C. A., no Y. W. C. A., no Travelers' Aid. It means the death of fraternal orders, and of civic and cultural clubs; no Masonic lodges, no Odd Fellows, no Kiwanis, no Rotarians, no Exchange, no Lions. Anarchy means no brotherhood anywhere, but every man's hand against every other man. Anarchy means the destruction of the church of God, with its pulpits, its worship, its teaching of gospel truth, its Sunday schools, its Rescue Missions, Orphanages, Salvation Army and Foreign Mission work. Anarchy means the blight of art, the death of music and the love of beauty, the end of the marvelous scientific discoveries of the day, and the starvation of the race for spiritual things. Anarchy means the destruction of marriage and of the home, of the sacredness of your fireside, the purity of wife, the honor of your son and the chastity of your daughter. There are hordes of starveling children in Russia to-day roaming about and feeding like alley cats on a crust from garbage and sleeping on ashpiles or where they can, who have no idea who their fathers are—for Bolsheyism abolished marriage. Anarchy is a vile retreat to the jungle where the strongest or most cunning beast ravages at his beastly will. Anarch spits upon the Holy Bible, blasphemes heaven, ridicules with horrid mockery the most sacred rights of religion by burlesque imitation in processions of the Holy Sacrament and by jeers at the Holy Ghost, and cartoons even the sacrificial suffering of our Savior upon the cross. So come the reports to us from Russia in recent years. The later reports are saying that Sovietism has failed in its attempt to destroy religion. Carried to its limit this foul spirt of resistance to all law and authority, if it could, would reach up and drag the Almighty from his throne and plunge all civilization into a bottomless abyss of insanity and chaos. Anarchy is a nation gone mad. Under its foul spell nations do not decay—go read history—they rot. They rot in a welter of shameless abandon of every true principle of life. The rallying cry of the Soviet army is: "We have abolished God!" And Lenine urged everywhere, 'Militant atheism"—that the army and navy must be used to destroy faith in God. And here is Dubosky, another of their leaders, in an article in their magazine, a journal well named, "The Godless," writing an article which labors to prove that "Religion must be destroyed." Why, that is what wretched half-crazy Nietsche, Germany's blind guide, taught that nation before it took the plunge into the unplumbed abyss of a colossal attempt at world-murder. He said that the greatest enemy of the human race was the religion of Jesus Christ—fit, he said, only for Englishmen, women and cows." And he added, "When thou goest to a woman, forget not to take thy whip." Ugh! When I read that I said to myself, "If he had ever started after one of these high spirited American women with a whip, he would have had a liberal education coming to him."

Doctor Van Ess, an able Presbyterian missionary to Arabia, tells of going to the Mission Hospital early one morning. He says, "At the door I found a leper whom some Arabs had felt there. During the night the rats had gnawed away his heels as he lay there in his helplesness. So I called the dresser, and together we began to carry him to infectious ward. The dresser put his arms around the wretched leper's knees and middle, and I put my right arm round his sholders and tried to suport his head with my left hand. As we were entering the ward I half stumbled and my left hand involuntarily clutched, and that ghastly skull gave way like a piece of rotten cardboard and the brains gushed over my fingers."

Anarch is the leprosy of government. It rots its bones and when the virus has done its work in a nation's tissue, that nation curses God and dies.

And whether he intends it or not, that is the poison that a man is putting into the views of his country, when he violates the Eighteenth Amendment and advocates nullification of that or of any other principle of law and of the Constitution. He would poison his government until it becomes a weak and despised thing to be jeered at and flouted. He is inoculating his country with the germs of leprosy. And be we men and suffer such dishonor to our motherland?

There is a verse in the Book of books that forever stands in the way of the return of the liquor traffic. You and I might not have written it so crassly. But let us take the Bible as we find it. A mighty majority of our citizens have sworn that that verse shall never be written over our country's portal, "The dog is returned to his vomit and the sow to her wallowing in the mire."

"America! America!
God shed his grace on thee,
And crown thy good with brotherhood,
From sea to shining sea."

And I said, "Watchman, what of the night?" And he said, "The morning cometh."

ELZA-STEPHENS-REMMEL MEMORIAL BUILDING ON MOUNT SEQUOYAH TO BE COMPLETED BY SEASON OF 1928.

After conference in Conway last week and with Mrs. E. R. Steel, of Monticello, Ark., and Dr. A. C. Miller, of Little Rock, and after advising with Engineer E. M. Ratliff, Assembly engineer, Superintendent James W. Workman, of Mount Sequoyah, announces that the Woman's Building on Mount Sequoyah which is being erected as a memorial to three leading missionary spirits of the southwest, will be continued under construction the latter part of the season, and will be completed for use in the season 1928. The foundation of the building is completed at present and temporary floor covering has been laid over it. Structural steel and stone is on the ground to be used in continuing the construction late this fall. In conference with Mrs. Steel at Conway it is learned that the women have approximately $8,000 in cash drawing interest for this building fund. Colonel H. L. Remmel, of Little Rock, has promised $5,000 as a memorial gift in honor of his wife. This has been secured by Mrs. Steel, president of the Little Rock Conference Woman's Missionary Society. With this $13,000 the women have the beginnings of the fund which, when it reaches $20,000, will be used to pay cash for the continuous construction of the Woman's Building. Mrs. Steel announces also that the women of the other ten Conferences supporting the Assembly are now in the midst of their financial campaigns for this memorial building on Mount Sequoyah, and Mrs. Steel believes that the results of these campaigns will bring the total of the building fund well over $20,000. The building will be completely furnished and ready for use by the season of 1928.

SANITARY REHABILITATION.

Sunshine, fresh air, soap and hot water are the best cleaners and disinfectants. Clean the home, leave the doors and windows open for sunshine and air.

Clean your well and dose it with chloride of lime as the health officer or inspector will tell you. Call on your local health officer for advice. He will furnish you chloride of lime.

The State Board of Health has five units, consisting each of a trained health officer and four inspectors. These men are loaned by various State Boards of Health through Dr. John McMullen, liason officer of the United States Public Health Service, with their expenses paid by the Red Cross. These five units will cover the flood area as rapidly as possible and assist local health boards.

Upon request, through the State Board of Health, the nursing division of the American National Red Cross will furnish public health nurses who will instruct mothers in the care of the baby, in the production and care of milk and in the selection and preparation of food, which is such an important factor in the health of the family.

On request, through the State Board of Health, the Red Cross will furnish liquid soap, crude oil, spray cans, chloride of lime, dynamite (for burial of dead animals) and quinine. A limited number of homes where known malarial carriers live will be screened.

It is important to see that your water supply is protected and made safe, that human waste is properly disposed of and that the surroundings of home and town are kept clean. It is the purpose of the State Board of Health, with the assistance of the United States Public Health Service and Red Cross, to put the home and town in as good condition as before the flood, and to continue assistance for a period of twelve months or more if plans can be matured and where parishes are interested in all time health departments.

The State Board of Health urges local health officers, other officials and other citizens to be helpful to the visiting health officers, their inspectors as well as the sanitary engineers and nurses who may visit them from time to time. They are in your parish to help you and other citizens of the State as well as the local and State Board of Health, and have no motive but to see that your home and community are made safe for you. Any assistance given them will be appreciated by them and considered a favor by the health officials.

The American National Red Cross is sending notices to the local chapters throughout the overflowed area.

THE WAY TO SUCCESS.

"The secret of success," the stamp said, "sticking to it."

"To succeed," said the knife, "be bright and sharp."

"Keep up to date," said the calendar.

"Aspire to greater things," said the nutmeg.

"Don't knock—it's old-fashioned," said the electric bell.

"Do a driving business," said the hammer.

And the barrel added, "Never lose your head."

"Make light of everything," the fire observed cynically.

"But always keep cool," said the ice.—Exchange.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE MISSION PASTORS OF THE NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Early in the year the Executive Committee of the Conference Board of Missions in conference with the Sunday School Board made plans for offering to the pastors serving mission charges a course on Rural Sunday School Management, which plan was to take the place of the annual Institute of two days. We have just finished a most profitable week of work. Thirty-two of our mission charge pastors were enrolled. In addition to the pastors, eighteen other representative men and women of our Conference and two from the Memphis Conference were enrolled in the class. The services of Dr. A. W. Martin, Extension Secretary of the North Arkansas Conference, were highly satisfactory and greatly appreciated by every one. He seemed to be at his best in the class room, and the fine spirit he showed in talking with the brethren about their individual problems will long be remembered. Well might our pastors speak in the highest terms of praise of this course and all of the work of our Conference Training School, for the whole atmosphere seemed to be surcharged with the spirit of worship and serious study on the part of all. We greatly missed the presence of the president of our Mission Board, Rev. R. A. Tucker, who, we are glad to be able to report, is improving under treatment at Hot Springs.

Space forbids my relating all of the many words of praise and expressions of appreciation from our mission pastors as to the course they took. Several of the pastors and other members of the class drew up the following resolutions which were unanimously adopted by the class:

"Whereas, the rural church presents problems peculiar to itself—and these problems have been intensified by the changing conditions of modern times; and,

"Whereas, the rural pastor faces difficulties not heretofore presented to him;

"Therefore, be it resolved by the group taking the course on Rural Church Management in the Conference Training School at Grenada, June 6-11, That we heartily endorse the action of the Conference Board of Missions in making it possible for the mission pastors to take this course, and that we express our high appreciation of the services of Dr. Martin, our very efficient instructor, and of the Sunday School Board, and the Conference Sunday School Superintendent, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, for making possible this Training School.

"Be it further resolved, That because of the information and inspiration which this course has brought to each in dealing concretely and courageously with our church problems, we recommend the continuance of a similar course for the benefit of our mission pastors."

R. G. MOORE, Vice President.

SEERS.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

Moses on Sinai begged to see God's glory; but God gave him to understand that no man could see God's glory and live (Ex. 33:18-20), but there is a very essential sense in which living men can and do see God. In I Sam. 9:9, we read: "He that is called a prophet was aforetime called a seer:" in an essential sense, though not with fleshly eyes, these olden prophets saw God. Thus there ever have been, and are yet, those who see God; and such are seers indeed. "Woe is me! for I am undone," exclaimed Isaiah in his temple vision; "because I am a man of unclean lips: and * * * mine eyes have seen the Lord of hosts." A seraph touched his lips with fire from the altar and pronounced him clean, and then he reveled in the splendor of the theophany that had come to him. Elisha and his servant were besieged at Dothan by the Syrian army. The servant was appalled; but the old prophet was entertained; for he, the pure-hearted, saw the mountains about them thronged with God's army. In the Epistle to the Hebrews, we read: "Follow holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord." On Sinai, Moses talked face to face with God, until his face caught the splendor and bore it away; but all the while the sin-blinded children of Israel saw only the lightning-wrapped mountain and cloud, the trysting place of God and Moses. John, foreseeing a higher life coming to us who trust the Christ, wrote: "We shall see him as he is." In his Patmos visions, John saw God as human eyes had never seen: John was "pure in heart." It was Christ who said: "Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God." Did Jesus mean that such should see God only in the life to come? Why not in this life also?

Tennyson, in one of his matchless Idyls of the King, retells the legend of the Search for the Holy Grail by King Arthur's Knights of the Round Table. The Holy Grail was supposed to be

"The cup from which our Lord
Drank at the last sad supper with his own,
Which, from the blessed land of Aromat—
After the day of darkness, when the dead
Went wandering o'er Moriah—the good saint,
Arimathean Joseph, journeying, brought
To Glastonbury, where the winter thorn
Blossoms at Christmas, mindful of our Lord.
And there awhile it bode; and if a man
Could touch or see it, he was healed at once
By faith of all his ills. But then the times
Grew to such evil that the holy cup
Was caught away."

For a long, long time no one had seen the Holy Grail, though many with prayers and fastings had sought to see it. At length, half a thousand having passed, a "holy maid," sister of Sir Percival, whose "heart was pure as snow," got a vison of it, and calling her brother, said:

"Sweet brother, I have seen the Holy Grail;
For waked at dead of night, I heard a sound
As of a silver horn from o'er the hills.
* * * Oh, never harp nor horn
Was like that music as it came; and then
Streamed thro' my cell a cold and silver beam,
And down the long beam stole the Holy Grail. Rose-red with beatings in it as if alive,
Till all the walls of my cell were dyed
With rosy colors leaping on the wall."

Sir Percival told the story in Arthur's Hall at Camelot; and every knight was fired with a purpose to catch at least a glimpse of the wonderful all-healing Holy Grail.

Each sought in his own way. Some rode in one direction and some in another. All rode away on the quest and resolved to give a year to it unless the Grail were sooner found.

Sir Launcelot, the most famous of all the knights, had been the strongest and the bravest, but

"The great and guilty love he bore the queen,
In battle with the love he bore his lord,
Had marred his face and mark'd it ere his time."

He confessed it:

"There is many a youth
Now crescent, who will come to all I am
And overcome it; for in me there dwells no greatness."

In his quest he had many tempestuous experiences; and all in vain until at last, brought penitently to the Christ, his great sin was pardoned and purged; and then he got a mere glimpse of the Holy Grail.

When Sir Percival started on his quest he had this experience:

"Every evil word I had spoken once,
And every evil thought I had thought of old,
Awoke and cried: 'This quest is not for thee.'"

After many disappointing visions, each leaving him "alone wearying and thirsting in a land of sand and thorns," he sought a holy hermit, who counseled:

"O Son, thou hast not true humility,
The highest virtue. * * *
Thou hast not lost thyself to save thyself."

He needed the hermit's lesson and got a glimpse of the Holy Grail.

Sir Gawain started on the quest strong in purpose and hope, but "Found a silk pavilion in a field

And merry maidens in it," and turned from his search, and never saw the Holy Grail at all.

The purest knight in Arthur's court was Sir Galahad, nicknamed "The Maiden Knight."

"God make thee good as thou art beautiful," said Arthur, when he dubbed him "knight."

Arthur's prayer was answered. Galahad caught the holy maid's spirit, and "believed in her belief;" and he saw the Holy Grail again and again. Catching the great lesson of old Merlin, he said, "If I lose myself, I save myself."

"When on a summer night it came to pass,
While the great banquet lay along the hall;
That Galahad sat down in Merlin's chair.
And all at once * * *
* * * there smote along the hall,
A beam of light seven times more clear than day;
And down the long beam there stole the Holy Grail,
All covered with a luminous cloud."

All saw the cloud, but Galahad alone saw the Grail. He later had many splendid visions of it; and he followed where the visions led until at last "One crowned him king far in the spiritual city." "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

We have this lesson in the inspired measures of old Hebrew song; in the sacred histories of Moses and Elisha, Isaiah and John; in the rich legends of a shadowy era; and in the warm, glowing melodies of a modern poet: may God help us to get all the deep meaning of the lesson. Its deepest meaning for us is this: Sin—all sin, any sin, though it be but the idling of a Gawain with innocent maidens in a silk pavilion while duty called him; though it be but the dull indifference of Elisha's servant that left him blind to God's army about him; though it be but the merest worldliness or omission of duty—any sin blinds our spiritual eyes, and we see not.

Once when the Christ was teaching, a voice out of heaven came to him with a blessed message from the Father. He heard and understood; but the Pharisees heard it only as a common peal of thunder.

To the pure in heart

"There's nothing small:
No pebble at his feet but proves a world;
No sky-lark but implies a cherub choir;
No hum of lily-muffled bee but finds
Some cupling music with the whirling stars.
Earth is crammed with heaven,
And every common bush afire with God:
But only those who see take off their shoes."

The Home Circle

THE SHINING LIGHT.

By A. Marea Othmed.

Have you but a tiny candle?
Does your light seem very small?
Is it happy shinging through you?
Have you thought of that, at all?

Have you set it on a table,
Kept it trimmed and shining there;
Or is it smothered 'neath a bushel
Crowded down by worldly care?

You could be a lighthouse beacon,
A great city on a hill,
Spreading light to many people,
Teaching them to know God's will.

You could be a mighty searchilght,
Sending rays in blackest gloom,
Lighting up earth's darkest places,
Making life a lighted room.

First then, trim your tiny candle—
Keep it glowing bright and fair;
Soon you'll find a lamp is standing,
Shining on your table there;

For from Light to lihgt is given,
Growing stronger day by day,
Till at last a mighty beacon
Grows from feeble candle's ray!

Guard your light then in its shining,
Let no evil hide its ray.
Keep your life all bright and cheery,
Yield not, for one single day,

To fretfulness and weak complaining,
Selfishness and self-conceit,
Ugly temper, foolish habits,
Tongues that lead into deceit!

Even though no harm's intended;
Yet those bushels hide the light
And the ray of love expended
Covered o'er by Satan's might.

Christian, then be up and busy,
Shine for Jesus day by day,
Lamps are not for sunny places,
Let yours shine where he shall say.

Give it but a chance to brighten,
Keep the barriers cleared away;
Who knows when its rays may lighten—
Guide one who has gone astray?

So shine on, be never fearful,
Christ's one Light supplies the flame,
Then your life will please the Master
And men may glorify his name.

THE LITTLE PIG.

In a nice, clean pen with a warm little house lived old Mrs. Pig and her little pink pig family. Every little pink pig had a little curly tail and a sharp little nose, but one little pink pig had a small black spot just back of his ear. He was called Spotty.

Mother Pig found Spotty a difficult child to manage. When she called, "Come, children, Farmer Brown is bringing the pail of nice warm milk," the four other little pigs trotted up to the trough and poked their noses in and drank as little pigs should. But Spotty pushed and shoved and squealed and put his foot in, which was very bad manners, indeed.

When dinner was over, Mrs. Pig said: "Come, children, it is time to lie down in the nice clean straw and take a nap, for little pigs grow when they are asleep." But Spotty lagged behind and was the very last one in. Then he walked over his little pig brothers and sisters to get close to his mother's big warm side.

One day he refused to take a nap at all, but went up and down beside the fence, poking his sharp little nose into cracks and holes. At last he found a place where he could see under the fence. Then he found that by pushing and scrambling he made the hole larger. He wiggled and squeezed and pushed until his fat little body slid through.

How lovely it was out in the world! The sunshine was warmer and the breezes softer than he had known. The clover blossoms were sweet along the lane, and down at the foot of the hill he saw—what did he see? It looked like a patch of the sky. He trotted right down to find out about it.

When he came to the edge he looked in and saw a little pig about his own size. He walked right in to be with that other little pig, but for some queer reason that other little pig was gone. He found himself all cool and wet, so he came out and went on up the hill. I am thinking he must have looked like a mud pie on four little fat legs.

At the top of the hill he came to another fence with a hole under it. Once more he pushed until his fat little body slid, wriggled and squeezed through.

This time he was in the orchard. The sun peeped through the wide-spreading trees, the bees hummed, and the butterflies sailed overhead. Altogether it was a wonderful place for a little pig to venture into. After a time he came to the old yellow harvest apple tree. Do you know how yellow harvest apples smell when they are just ripe enough to fall.? Anyway, it is a very special smell and very delicious. Spotty tried one. It tasted better than it smelled. He ate another and another and ever so many others.

Then he began to feel very full and very, very sleepy. "Well, I have had a beautiful time, but I think I had better go back now." When he came to the fence, he had some trouble finding the hole; and when he found it, that hole looked much smaller than it did before. He put his nose in, and he wriggled and squeezed and pushed, but his fat little body would not go through. So he squeaked and squeaked, "Wee! Wee!" until he had no breath. Then he rested some, and then he began again. So he went through the long summer afternoon.

When Farmer Brown came up from the fields at night he stood at the barn door and said: "I think I hear a pig squealing." Then he took care of the big tired horses and came out again. "I'm sure I hear a pig squealing," he said, so he visited Mother Pig and found that Spotty was missing.

When Farmer Brown found the little runaway pig squeaking and squealing under the orchard fence, he pulled him out by the tail and carried him home and dropped him into the pen. Poor Spotty was too tired to complain of his tummy ache, so he snuggled into his straw and slept till morning. When he got up he ran right out to his hole under the fence, but Farmer Brown had found it, too. He had filled it with a good-sized stone, much too hard and heavy for little pink pig noses, and Spotty had to content himself with one adventure.—Christian Observer.

EYES OPEN.

Rachie went off to school, wondering if Aunt Amy could be right.

"I will keep my eyes open," she said to herself.

She stopped a moment to watch old Mrs. Bert, who sat inside her door binding shoes. She was just now trying to thread a needle, but it was hard work for her dim eyes.

"Why, if there isn't work for me!" exclaimed Rachie. "I never should have thought of it if it hadn't been for Aunt Amy. Stop, Mrs. Bert! let me do that for you."

"Thank you, my little lassie. My poor eyes are worn out, you see. I can get along with coarse work yet, but sometimes it takes me five minutes to thread my needle. And the day will come when I can't work, and then what will become of a poor old woman?"

"Mamma would say the Lord would take care of you," said Rachie, very softly, for she felt that she was too little to be saying such things.

"And you can say it, too, dearie. Go to school now. You've given me your bit of help and your comfort, too."

But Rachie got hold of the needlebook and was bending over it with busy fingers.

"See!" she said, presently. "I've threaded six needles for you to go on with, and when I come back I'll thread some more."

"May the sunshine be bright to your eyes, little one!" said the old woman, as Rachie skipped away.

"Come and play, Rachie," cried many voices as she drew near the playground.

"Which side will you be on?"

But there was a little girl with a very downcast face sitting on the porch.

"What is the matter, Jennie?" asked Rachie.

"I can't make these add up," said Jennie, in a discouraged tone, pointing to a few smeary figures on her slate.

"Let me see; I did that sum at home last night. Oh! you forgot to carry ten—see!"

"So I did."

The example was finished, and Jennie was soon at play with the others.

"Will ye look here, Miss Rachie?"

Bridget was sitting on the porch, looking dolefully at a bit of paper which lay on the kitchen table she had carried there. "It's a letter I'm after writing to my mother, an' it's fearin' I am she'll never be able to rade it, because I can't rade it myself. Can you rade it at all, Miss Rachie? It's all the afternoon I ve been at it."

Rachie tried with all her might to read poor Bridget's queer scrawl, but she was obliged to give it up.

"I'll write one for you, Bridget," she said, and she did it. Then she went upstairs, singing—

"Our Master has taken his journey
To a country that's far away."

Miss Amy heard the cheery notes floating up the stairs, telling of the approach of the worker.

"I've been keeping my eyes open, Aunt Amy, and there's plenty and plenty to do."—Selected.

"TIME OUT."

"No, Mrs. Hanson. I never brag about my children, though they are above the average in their behavior and intelligence."—Kansas City Times.

City Urchin (in the country for the first time)—"This is just like grass ain't it?"

Little Friend—"Why, it is grass, Chimmine."

Urchin—"No, it ain't, cos yer don't have to keep off it."—Selected.

A man rushed into an old furniture store. "What do you want?" asked the proprietor.

"Is this a second-hand store?" asked the man.

"Can't you see that it's a second-hand store?"

"Well, I want a second hand for my watch."—Exchange.

George, who has charge of the chickens; "Uncle Harry, is a chicken big enough to eat when it is three weeks old?"

"I should say not," replied Uncle Harry.

Well, how does it live, then?"triumphantly inquired George.—Selected.

Baby Betty had been fretful, and Teddy had heard his mother tell several how cross baby was, but that she would be all right when she cut that first tooth.

"How's Baby Betty this morning?" a neighbor asked of Teddy one morning.

DIRECTIONS.
All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.
The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.
Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

A CRISIS REACHED.

Last year the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate put on a special campaign for subscriptions, known as the Whole Church Plan. The three Annual Conferences endorsed the Campaign at their respective sessions in the fall of 1926. The Plan provided that where a church sent in at least one-half of its membership as subscribers the price of the Advocate would be $1.25 per annum. The idea was to sell the subscriptions on a wholesale basis, thereby making it possible to reduce the price on a large volume of subscriptions which it was thought would be forthcoming. The Plan worked fairly well the first year, we having received 7,340 subscriptions at $1.25 from about 219 pastors, with 300 subscriptions of this number not yet paid for.

This year the Plan was repeated in modified form, but it was unsuccessful. Our pastors and people have not given the Advocate their hearty support. The results of this year's campaign are inadequate to maintain the paper until the Conferences meet this fall. A check-up on the subscriptions received as a result of the Special Campaign show that we received 4,524 subscriptions at $1.25, and that $4,800 was paid in cash on that number, with $850 charged on the ledger.

After a careful survey of all the resources, the Manager finds that the Advocate is being published at a financial loss, and that at the end of the next three months, or approximately, September 1, 1927, this paper will be entirely without funds and at the end of its resources, and unable to carry on.

This is due, in large measure, to the fact that the Advocate has been sent out, under the terms of the Special Campaign, at the price of $1.25 to a limited number of persons. Being a limited number instead of the large number contemplated in the campaign, every subscription at $1.25 has been a loss to the Advocate.

We have no hesitancy in speaking in the highest terms of the value of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. It goes to you every week a faithful messenger to keep you in touch with your brethren and to inform you on all the issues in the church. It advocates every activity in the church worth while and is unfailing in its loyalty to the church and all its institutions and activities. It is absolutely indispensable to the work of the church. You need the Advocate more than it needs you. Can you do without it? Are you willing for its publication to cease?

Evidently the Advocate has reached a crisis because of the poor support it has received from those it serves. It has been reduced to need in the house of its friends. After thinking upon the matter, the assistant editor—who is a member of the Publishing Committee—after consulting members of the Committee who were in attendance upon the Divinity School, decided to appeal to the pastors throughout our three Conferences to unite in securing 1200 subscriptions to the Advocate during the next three months, at the regular price of $2 per year. This number of subscriptions at the regular price would meet the present pressing financial difficulty. Many of our pastors have failed to give a very hearty support to the Advocate doubtless because of other pressing matters. It would be no great task for each pastor in our territory to secure a list of subscribers at an early date. An enterprising pastor here in New Orleans at once said, when this matter was brought to his attention, "Why, yes, I think I could secure at least fifty subscriptions in our congregation." If every pastor in the three Conferences would undertake to assist in this emergency there would be no doubt as to the outcome. And he would render his own church a great service while helping the Advocate to continue its great work.

ANNUITY BONDS

SAFETY is the first requisite of an investment with a view to regular income.

ANNUITY BONDS have advantage over other investments in that they provide an income that cannot shrink.

YOU may in your lifetime without loss of income or any risk pay over to the Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the amount that you had intended leaving in your will to be used in sending the Gospel "to every creature."

YOU may avoid taxes, various fees or any litigation in connection with your benevolent gifts which sometimes greatly reduce one's bequest. Annuity Bonds enable one to be the executor of his own will.

ALL THIS—and at the same time you enjoy during your lifetime an income that cannot shrink—an income that stands between you and want.

Protection Against Old Age

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS.

During the last 22 years we have been lenient with our subscribers, being willing to wait on them and let them pay their renewal subscriptions at their convenience. Circumstances are such at this time that we are compelled to adopt a different policy. Notice is therefore given that within the next three months we will eliminate all delinquent subscriptions from our mailing lists. The force of circumstances demands that we do it.

CONCERNING CHRISTIAN EXPERIENCE

Bishop Candler's article in this issue of the Advocate on "Christian Experience and Christian Truth" is a very sane and timely one. It is quite true that Methodists have always placed great emphasis upon Christian experience—but an experience which can be independent of any or all truths of Holy Writ, which can indeed be license to discard at will any part of the Bible is a new thing among Methodists or any other body of Christians. Yet that is the position of some of those who are stressing Christian experience today. Stressing Christian experience is by no means new, but claiming that Christian experience can at will do away with any part of the Bible is quite new.

Recently we heard an accredited Bible teacher say that there are many errors in the Bible, many things that should never have been in the Bible, and that we should exercise care in reading it—in other words, he said, "discriminate." And he did not make it clear that there should be any limit to discrimination. It it were true that we should "discriminate" in reading the Bible, it would be easy to imagine that if enough people turned their discriminating powers upon the Bible it could be discriminated out of existence, into "everlasting nothingness."

To advise every man to discriminate in reading the Bible is to put the authority for truth and righteousness in every man's conscience. And it is easy to see that, with such discrimination on the part of every man—for it would not be right under the circumstances to discriminate against any man by not allowing him to discriminate—we could esaily have fifteen hundred million standards of morality in the world.

Let not the man who would discriminate think he is getting off anything new. The idea that moral law can only be based in one's own conscience is not less than twenty-five hundred years old. If the man, who would discriminate, will accept any authority outside his own conscience, let him own Confucius as his ancient master. For Confucius said:

"However excellent a system of moral truths appealing to supernatural authority may be, it is not verifiable by experience and cannot command credence; and what cannot command credence the people will never obey. However excellent a system of moral truths appealing merely to worldly authority may be, it does not command respect; and what does not command respect cannot command credence; and what cannot command credence the people will never obey. Therefore, every system of moral laws must be based upon the man's own conscience."

This is what Confucius thought about it. And let the man who advocates discrimination in the reading of the Bible, claim Confucius as his master if he will, but let him not use Christian experience as a license to set aside the truth upon which plain saints of the days past have built their Christian experience.

HELP FOR FLOOD SUFFERERS.

Bishop Candler and presiding elders in Louisiana and Mississippi have appealed to our people in our patronizing territory to give aid to Methodist pastors in the flooded section. It is to be hoped that these appeals are meeting with a general and generous response. The whole church was appealed to in behalf of those who had suffered from the Florida storm of last year. The damage wrought by that storm was small compared to the millions of wealth washed away, hundreds of thousands made homeless, and the many lives lost by the disastrous flood in the valley of the Mississippi.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. E. R. Smoot, general evangelist, has a few open dates for the latter part of June. Brother Smoot is an able man, doing faithful work. Let the brethren keep him busy.

Rev. R. H. Harper spoke over the radio, WJBO, New Orleans, called "The Little Church Around the Corner," on last Sunday evening. Mr. C. C. Hard directed the music.

"The more association we have with our presiding elder, Rev. Robert Selby," writes Rev. John W. Ramsey, of Chunky, Miss., "the more he is appreciated and enjoyed."

Rev. J. B. Peters, Rev. J. Cude Rousseaux and Rev. R. H. Harper of New Orleans were among the attendants of the Seashore Divinity School at Biloxi last week.

Mrs. W. A. Candler accompanied Bishop Candler to Biloxi, where he delivered a course of lectures during the Divinity School on last week. After convalescing from a recent severe illness, Mrs. Candler found the coast very beneficial to her.

The editor and Mrs. Carley and Miss Kling, driving leisurely in their big Elcar, reached Atlanta on Monday of last week, and Dr. Carley has entered upon his work of teaching in the Candler School of Theology during the summer term.

A letter from Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, states that Bishop Candler has secured Rev. J. M. Johnson for the work in Cameron Parish, Louisiana. He will reside at Grand Chenier.

Ministers and church workers from more than 200 Methodist churches in Texas are attending the ten-day pastors' school at Southern Methodist University. The school began June 14 and will close June 24.

Rev. Luther A. Horn, evangelist of Mobile, Ala., has been conducting a revival at New Augusta, Miss., and much good has been done. It was expected that good delegations from Pensacola and Mobile would attend these services on last Sunday.

Miss Wynn Harrison, daughter of Rev. H. N. Harrison, one of our New Orleans pastors, was one of the graduates of the Sophie Wright High School of this city at the recent commencement of that fine institution. Her father pronounced the benediction at the close of the graduating exercises.

Rev. B. C. Taylor, pastor of Louisiana Avenue Church, New Orleans, and Rev. R. L. Armstrong, pastor of Felicity Church, New Orleans, have returned to the city after an absence of several days during which they were teaching in the Epworth League Assembly recently in session at Mansfield, La.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb has been one of our pastors to suffer greatly from the flood. Located at Waterproof, La., in the very midst of the flood in the Tensas Basin, he hurried his family away in advance of the flood to Vicksburg whence they went to relatives in Atlanta, Ga. Brother Lipscomb himself returned and remained at his post of duty.

Rev. John W. Ramsey, pastor at Chunky, Miss., writes that at the third quarterly conference for his charge finances were reported in full from all the churches with one exception, due to the continued illness of one of the best stewards. All the quarterly conferences throughout the year have been well attended. Some improvements have been made on the parsonage.

Miss Helen Sells, of Scarritt College, Nashville, Tenn., spoke on last Sunday night at our church in Pascagoula, Miss., where her brother, Rev. J. W. Sells, is pastor. Miss Sells is finishing her preparatory work for foreign mission work. She is specializing in religious education and physical education, and she spoke on the relation of these two to the gospel of Christ.

According to press dispatches, Dr. Sam Steele, who has been seriously ill in Mobile, Ala., has recovered sufficiently to be taken to his home in Mansfield, La., to the "Pelican Pines," which he has made so familiar to the readers of the Advocate and other papers in which his brilliant articles appeared. We trust Dr. Steel will be completely recovered soon.

Hon. Fred Sullins, editor of the Jackson (Miss.) Daily News, and "Layman extraordinary," spoke three times on last Sunday at the Carrollton Avenue Church of New Orleans: at 10 a.m. to the Men's Bible Class, and at the regular church service morning and evening. Rev. E. C. Gunn, pastor of this active congregation, was greatly pleased at the interest manifested in the addresses of Mr. Sullins.

We are glad to learn through the pastor at that point, Rev. T. F. King, that the levee around the town of Berwick has held and prevented that town from flood waters. Some of the Methodist people, however, who live below the town on the river front, have suffered, and some of them have moved away. Of the other points on the Patterson charge Patterson escaped the flood, and Jeanerette was only slightly affected.

Some one reported to the presiding elder of the district that the pastor at Franklin, La., had been seen recently working on the Sabbath day. But no action was taken, as Brother J. A. McCormack, our faithful pastor at Franklin, was working heroically with other citizens to throw up levees and protect the town from the flood. Surely that was legitimate Sunday labor. If the ox was not in the ditch the waters were at the door. Rev. T. F. King, our pastor on the Patterson charge, has also worked hard at the task of building levees at Berwick, La., where he resides.

Great progress has been made during the present year on the Cotton Valley charge, Louisiana Conference, under the leadership of Rev. E. L. Cargill, pastor. Three Epworth Leagues have been organized, the Sunday schools have grown in interest, the special for missions has been raised in full, and, best of all, a new church building is being completed at Cotton Valley. The new building will be equipped for departmental Sunday school work. It is expected that the first church service can be held in the building next Sunday.

SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

The Seashore Camp Meeting will begin at the Seashore Camp Ground, Biloxi, Miss., July 1, 1927. The first service will be held at 7:45 p.m. The Coast Epworth League Union will have charge of a 30 minute song service and devotional service the first two nights, before the sermon. The meeting will continue for ten days. Rev. W. M. Sullivan and Rev. W. J. Ferguson will do the preaching. Rev. W. W. Nelson will lead the singing. Every pastor and church in the Seashore District and neighboring towns are urged to attend.

JAMES L. SELLS, P. E.,
Seashore District.

BISHOP CANNON'S CONDITION IMPROVED.

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., who was reported by the ship's surgeon on the steamship Balmoral Castle on May 31 as seriously ill of fever en route from Cape Town to England, is now in London, and the fever is under control, according to a cablegram received at Mission Board headquarters at Nashville, June 17, we learn from a letter from Dr. Elmer T. Clark. The cable was signed by Bishop Cannon himself, the first to be received from him personally since his departure from Cape Town, May 27. He states that all complications are being successfully treated, and that definite information as to his illness and its developments will be obtained after a thorough examination by experts in tropical diseases in a London hospital within a few days.

In spite of his own serious illness, Bishop Cannon in his cable takes time to praise the "consecrated Congo missionaries" who daily face dangers and disease to carry the gospel into the heart of the Dark Continent. He reports that the fever to which he fell a victim developed after he was compelled by a severe and continuous tropical storm to spend the night in one of the native huts, infested with mosquitoes and vermin. His health was normal during his entire stay in the Congo, but the fever developed some two weeks after this experience.

Bishop Cannon declares his own illness but emphasizes the sacrificial spirit of the Congo missionaries, and urges that the entire church accord these consecrated men and women of the Congo Mission full support and unstinted admiration.

Bishop Cannon sailed for the Congo early in February to inspect the work in that section, which is part of his episcopal area, and to hold the annual Mission meeting. His cable reports that this Conference stands out as a delightful gathering.

Leaving Cape Town May 27 en route for England, Bishop Cannon developed malarial fever after he had been on shipboard for a few days. Grave anxiety was felt for his condition throughout the church, especially in view of the fact that his ship was out of the radio area from London for two days or more after the first message telling of his illness was received.

IN MEMORIAM.

On May 12, 1927, at about the setting of the sun, MRS. MABEL ETHEL HOLLAND looked up into the face of her nurse, smiled her sweet smile, closed her tired eyes, and was asleep in Jesus.

Whereas, God in his infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst, by death, this sweet-spirited Christian woman; and,

Whereas, by this inscrutable dispensation of Providence, her husband is bereft of a loving wife, and her children of a devoted, and considerate mother; and Fifth Street Methodist Church has lost a loyal, and consecrated member; therefore be it

Resolved, That in the passing of this godly woman, her family has been deprived of a wise, and loving counselor; and our church of a shining Christian example; be it further

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to the will of him who doeth all things well; that we earnestly commend the bereaved family to the tender mercies of Almighty God; and that we all emulate the unselfish character of our departed sister; and be it further

Resolved, That the Baraca class of Fifth Street Methodist Sunday school extend its heartfelt sympathy to the sorrowing family; that a copy of these resolutions be sent the family; that a copy be made a part of the records of our class; and that a copy be sent to the Meridian Star and the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: R. O. Dobson, G. M. Ethridge, J. M. Combs, Committee.

MRS. MATTIE HINTON.

Mrs. Mattie Hinton, whose maiden name was Davis, was born Oct. 10, 1845. Life came to a transquil close on Saturday, May 21, 1927 at 12:25 p. m., in the home of her daughter, Mrs. S. L. Broadwell, Ruston, La. She came to the dear old age of 81 years, 6 months and 20 days. More than fourscore years crowned that whitened head and honored a little frail frame. The funeral services were held Sunday at 11 a. m., May 22, 1927, at Wesley Chapel, near Clay, La. With all love and reverence she was laid away and the benediction was pronounced over that sacred spot, which was beautifully adorned with flowers. Mrs. Hinton's people moved from North Carolina to Mississippi. Her father came to this community when she was 13 years old. She and her husband were married in the New Hope church, north of Ruston. They enjoyed fifty-five years of happy married life. In 1922 Mr. Hinton passed away, leaving her to survive him five years. Eight precious children came to the home, whose names are as follows: Mrs. S. L. Broadwell, Ruston, La.; Mrs. Mattie Kavanaugh, Ruston, La.; Mrs. B. H. Jackson, Vienna, La.; Mrs. Pearl Kavanaugh, Clay, La.; Mrs. Jessie Grigsby, Clay, La.; Mr. L. M. Hinton, Ruston, La.; Mr. F. A. Hinton and Mr. Burton Hinton, Clay, La. All have lived to survive their dear old mother, except Burton, who died in 1914 at the age of 28 years. All of the living, two sons and five daughters, and their families are well known and beloved, and are taking an active and important part in the affairs of this community. Mrs. Hinton was the oldest living member of Wesley Chapel church, having joined the church at the age of 24 years at the Chapel. She was a continuous member for fifty-seven years, which is a record that few of this day and time may have the honor to claim. In his great love and will God has taken from our community one of the sweetest and most saintly lives we have ever known. Mrs. Hinton was a quiet and humble little person, with a happy smile and a pleasant voice. She had many friends and all that knew her loved her. She never saw ill in any one, but always found some good trait about everybody. She was a good neighbor and lived an example of love and thought for others. If there ever was a Christian she was one, for her life was Christ-like to the last. Her life measured up to the full conception of her church of Christianity and her Bible was her daily companion. Many relatives and friends mourn the passing away of one so beloved as Mrs. Mattie Hinton.

Her pastor,
CLAUDE H. MAYO.

WESLEY CALAWAY DAVIS was born Jan. 19, 1851, and died April 20, 1927. He was married to Miss Kathrine Atwood, who died Feb. 4, 1917, and to this union were born four sons and nine daughters. His sons are M. L., C. M., and H. F.; also one died in infancy. Daughters are Mmes. N. J. Blackman, D. A. McKinnon, C. M. Levitt, P. L. Massey, James Mallard, and Miss Ada Davis, who still live to mourn his death. Two daughters, Mrs. J. C. Smith and Mrs. A. A. Simms, died some years ago. Our Daddy was a good daddy. He was sick almost two years, and had to suffer so much pain. But would say it was all right, and in the midst of his suffering would sing such beautiful songs and say he was so happy. It was so hard to give him up, and we miss him so much. But our loss is heaven's gain. He was a consisitent member of the Methodist church. The funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. M. K. Miller, of Rose Hill charge, and his remains laid to rest in Pleasant Grove cemetery. The following verse expresses his life:

Loving and upright in all his ways,
A beautiful character to the end of his days;
Sincere and true in heart and mind,
What a loving memory he leaves behind.
As we wander around the little home
And we think of days gone by,
How we will miss the kind instruction
Of our Daddy gone on high.

By his daughter,
MRS. D. A. McKINNON.

MOTHER.

On the afternoon of June 1, 1927, the death angel came into our home and took from us our dear wife and mother—so kind, so loving and so true. She was a true Christian, and loved her church and her Lord. With this love she worshiped her family and was devoted to them. To-day we long for her sweet smiles; we listen for her kind words, so tenderly spoken, we loved her so dearly and we miss her so much. Our home is truly sad without her. But we realize that she can be with us no more on this earth. We feel that Heaven is made brighter by her entrance there, and we also feel that Heaven is nearer to us to-day because of her being there. The Lord knows best, yet it is sometimes hard for us to say, "Thy will be done." But we are submissive to the will of God, and while we cannot bring her back to us we can go to her. And Oh, how I long to be there! Yet I have my dear children—treasures God has given to me—who are to be looked after here and whom I expect to train in the path that will lead them to ther mother in Heaven, where, some day, we will be a reunited family. We wish to express our heartfelt appreciation to the doctors and nurses who so tenderly and patiently ministered to her in her suffering. My sincere prayer to God is that his richest blessings may attend you all. Our hearts are filled with appreciation to the people of Booneville, and the circuit over which I preside, for the beautiful floral offerings and tender words of sympathy so generously given. We also want to thank the brethren for remembering us financially. May God's richest blessings be bestowed upon you all.

"She is gone but not forgotten,
Our loss is Heaven's gain."

I think I hear her singing with the angels this morning, where there is no pain, no sickness, no tears; but where all is happiness—in the city of God. Pray for us, for we need your prayers. God bless you all.

NATALBANY REVIVAL.

Natalbany has just witnessed the conclusion of the most successful religious revival of some years. Starting on Sunday, May 29, the meeting lasted through Sunday, June 5, and resulted in fourteen additions to the Methodist congregation. Rev. P. D. McCullin, pastor of the Istrouma Methodist church of Baton Rouge, assisted the Rev. Royal, pastor.

Aside from the new additions, a general revivication of the church was noticeable and the entire membership brought in closer contact spiritually. Rev. McCullin delivered some highly interesting sermons during the meeting, attracting audiences that taxed the spacious church. He is considered one of the most learned members of the Methodist clergy and his services are in demand in the evangelistic field.

A laymen's Wesley Brotherhood was organized during the revival and $50 was raised to send the pastor to the Seashore Divinity School at Biloxi, Miss., which will be held this year from June 14 to June 27 inclusive. C. V. Avenius of Natalbany was elected to guide the brotherhood for the first fiscal year.

The churches of Natalbany are evincing a co-operative spirit and during the revival just closed a great number of those of other denominations were present. Next week the Baptists will start a revival and it now looks as though all sinners of Natalbany will be reached, backsliders redeemed, and Christians brought nearer the throne of grace.

Send kodak or any picture and one dollar. We will make you three genuine 5 x 7 halftone photographs, five dollar value, money back guarantee.

PRAYER.

"If Ye Ask * * * I Will Do"
(Jno. 14:14).

You can at will close your eyes and, in vision, call up before you the men and women whom you love yet know to be lost. Friend after friend has wrought with and entreated them; you yourself would almost be willing to be anathema for them, if so be they might be saved, but all has been in vain. Suppose now there came some day a message from the Lord Jesus Christ promising that if you would but ask, he himself would go to these unsaved loved ones and deal directly with them. What an unheard of privilege would you count it to have Jesus Christ himself deal with a soul you loved! To have Jesus Christ work—not indeed in the body but in the Spirit—in your home, your church, your community; to have Jesus Christ give secret messages to your lost loved ones, to have Jesus Christ speak, woo, and win, as none else could; to have Jesus Christ, with all his tact, wisdom, winsomeness, patience, gentleness, and compassion following on with unwearied zeal and tenderest love to bring back to God that soul for whom he had died—what a promise! And yet this is exactly what prayer will accomplish, for he explicitly says, "if ye ask—I will do."

Think a moment of that unsaved loved one for whom all these years you have been doing. You have pleaded, argued, and expostulated in vain. You have preached Christ, you have tried to live Christ. You have exhausted every device and means that love, faith, or hope could conceive. Now that your doing has failed how wondrous it would be into that life to bring his doing through your asking.

Hear him speak: "My child you know not how to convict of sin, but I, who work as you pray, can bow down that soul in a very agony of conviction. You know not when to woo, and when to reprove, but I, who work as you ask, know just when to pour in the balm of love, and when to let fall the sharp, quick blow of needed judgment. You cannot follow a soul in daily, unbroken pursuit, for you are finite and must eat, rest, and sleep, but I, who do as you ask, follow that soul day and night, with sleepless vigilance, through every second of his existence. Now comforting, now troubling; now giving darkness, now light; now sending prosperity, now adversity; now using the knife, now the healing balm; chastening, troubling; bereaving, blessing; bending, breaking, making, yea, I can do all things needful to be done to bring that wanderer to himself and cause him to cry, "I will arise and go unto my Father."

If ye ask—I will do.—McConkey.

JACKSON ZONE MEETING.

The second zone meeting for 1927 of the Jackson, Miss., District, met in Brandon, Friday, June 10, with a splendid attendance, Mrs. Robert Pennington, zone chairman, presiding.

The Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Koch, a representative from Grace Church, Jackson, after which Mrs. Koch sang a solo, "Have Thine Own Way, Lord." Mrs. J. C. Wood, of Jackson, our newly elected District Secretary, was then introduced.

The address of welcome, cordially expressed and beautifully said, was made by Miss Susie May Barnes, of Brandon. The response was given by Mrs. Pennington, in the absence of Mrs. Robert Wilson, of Pelahatchie.

Mrs. Wood then gave a splendid talk covering the proposed work of the Woman's Missionary Society for 1927, and calling especial attention to the Jubilee celebration in 1928. Mrs. Berry, of Pelahatchie, read a splendid paper on "Woman in the Missionary Work of the Church." Then Mrs. Avent, of Capitol Street Church, Jackson, gave a most interesting chalk talk, likening the Woman's Missionary Society, with all its various departments, to an automobile, stressing the fact that the efficiency of each is in proportion to the harmonious functioning of all the different parts.

After a song, "The Kingdom Is Coming," Mrs. Brownlee, of Capitol Street Church, Jackson, gave a most impressive talk on "Christian Stewardship of Time, Talent, Personality and Money."

A round table discussion of the problems of the Mission Study was led by Mrs. Wood, many helpful plans and suggestions being brought out.

Rev. J. D. Ellis, pastor of the Brandon-Pelahatchie charge, was then introduced, after which Mrs. W. E. Darnall, president of the Brandon Auxiliary, announced that a picnic lunch would be served to all in attendance.

After lunch a social half hour was much enjoyed, as the renewing of old friendships and the making of new, is always a happy occasion.

The afternoon session was opened by singing, "Come Almighty to Deliver," after which a Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Wood, followed by prayer by Mrs. J. M. Evans, of Pelahatchie. Mrs. J. H. Payne, of Galloway Memorial Church, Jackson, sang, "Just for ToDay," asking that it might be the prayer of every one present. Mrs. C. B. Milner, of Jackson, daughter of the late beloved Brother W. H. Huntley, gave a talk on the Wesley Houses. Mrs. J. W. Marley, of Capitol Street Church, presented the claims of "The Missionary Voice," urging that the merits of this magazine entitled it to a wider circulation. She reported that it had a 100 per cent subscription in Galloway Memorial Church, it being included in the annual budget.

Mrs. Avent gave a very comprehensive outline of the Junior Work, calling attention to the changes made in this department at the last Missionary Conference. Misses Caroline Murray and Elizabeth Wilson, Juniors from Pelahatchie, sweetly sang for us, "Jesus Loves Me."

Misses Mary Waddell and Ruby Campbell, of Brandon, kindly favored us with two violin selections.

The rearrangement of the zones of the Jackson District was then discussed. There being five zones in the district it was decided that hereafter they should be known as zones 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5. Zone No. 1 to be composed of the auxiliaries of Brandon, Pelahatchie, Galloway Memorial, Jackson; Grace Church, Jackson, and the unorganized churches of Fannin, Holly Bush, Gulde, and Drakes. Mrs. Robert Pennington, Pelahatchie, was re-elected zone chairman, with the privilege of appointing a program committee. Mrs. S. L. McLaurin, of Brandon, was elected secretary. Mrs. Koch, who was born and reared in Denmark, then sang for us one of her native hymns, which was much enjoyed.

It was decided that of the four zone meetings held during the year the two, coming during the summer when the days are long, may be afternoon meetings if preferred, this matter being entirely optional with the host auxiliary.

There being no further business the meeting adjourned, the time and place for the next meeting to be named later by the zone chairman.

A Child's Laxative which Mothers Can Rely On

To Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, it seemed cruel that so many constipated infants and children had to be kept "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

While he knew that constipation was the cause of nearly all children's little ills, he constantly advised mothers to give only a harmless laxative which would help to establish natural bowel "regularity."

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin mothers have a regulating laxative which they can depend upon whenever a child is constipated, bilious, feverish or sick from a cold, indigestion or sour stomach. All children love its pleasant taste.

Buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself how perfectly it cleanses and regulates the bowels of infants and children.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

First term of Leadership School, Lake Junaluska, N. C., July 20-Aug. 3. Second term, Aug. 4-18.

First term Leadership School, Mount Sequoyah, July 5-19. Second term, Mount Sequoyah, July 19- Aug. 2.

The trip to Lake Junaluska for two weeks costs about $75, and the trip to Mount Sequoyah about $50 if you are economical. If we expect to keep pace with the progress of the church in establishing the kingdom of God a number of our officers and teachers should attend one of these schools.

Please ask your treasurer if he has sent Sunday School Day and Missionary Day money to Rev. H. P. Lewis, treasurer, Ruleville, Miss. We are projecting a number of Cokesbury Schools in different sections of the Conference, and we need the money to pay expenses. Help us in this hour of need.

The training school held at Grenada was the best we have ever held. The students worked night and day with enthusiasm. Many said they never expect to miss another school. We enrolled 155 and issued 145 credits, including office credits. We are planning to have not less than one hundred preachers attend next June. The Conference should know something of what we are doing, to this end we are having the resolutions offered in each class published for the information of our supporters. This week we are having the papers from two classes published: Those of the class that studied "Evangelism" under Dr. E. B. Chappell, and the class that studied "Beginner Administration" under Mrs. W. W. Adams.

We, the class in "Evangelism," are pleased to present this expression of our appreciation to the church and to any whom it may concern, our convictions as to the value of the work which was done in the Conference Standard Training School held in Grenada College, June 6-11, where we sat under the instruction of E. B. Chappell, D.D., editor in chief of our Sunday school literature.

1. We are heartily in sympathy with the program of our church, and this feeling has been justified by our experience during this week.

2. We have been impressed by his mental grasp, his spiritual passion, his earnest evangelical leadership.

3. We highly appreciate the information which he gave us concerning the fundamental doctrines of our church, especially as these teachings relate to the spiritual development of child life. We feel we have a firmer grasp on the real truths in this realm than we have had before. His teachings have been thoroughly Scriptural and entirely in harmony with the doctrines of Methodism.

4. We feel that we shall go home with a more reverent appreciation of the sacredness of our task, and prepared to work more intelligently, earnestly and successfully for the building of God's kingdom. Our regret is that a larger number of our leaders did not have the privilege we have enjoyed this week. Signed, J. B. Reynolds, Rev. J. J. Garner, Mrs. F. W. Norwood.

We, the members of the "Beginner Administration" class, under the supervision of Mrs. Adams, wish to express our deep appreciation to her and to the North Mississippi Conference Training School for the wonderful benefit that we have received while at Grenada College. Since we understand the beginner child and what our work with him should be in leading him to know Jesus Christ as personal Saviour and that in him is found the fullness of all spiritual values, we are going back to our respective churches and put into practice the knowledge that we have gained. Signed by the class.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Sunday, June 12, was spent in the Shreveport District in the interest of the Standard Training School, to be held at Vivian, June 19-24. This proved to be an interesting trip, as it covered a large territory with visits to five different places. The Sunday school hour was spent at Hosston and Oil City, where the writer spoke in the interest of the work, and at eleven o'clock listened to a fine sermon at Oil City by Brother W. F. Roberts, pastor at Ida, who had exchanged pulpits with the young pastor at Oil City, Rev. David Tarver, a recent graduate of Centenary.

In the afternoon we visited Munderlyn Chapel, one of the oldest Methodist churches in north Louisiana. The writer has many friends there, as it was at one time a part of his district when he was presiding elder. This chapel for years belonged to the Arkansas Conference.

At Oil City we were royally entertained at luncheon in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Waldron, and in the afternoon at the parsonage at Ida, where we enjoyed some of the birthday refreshments of Brother Robert's son, and met the parsonage folks. Brother Roberts has a fine family of seven children. We also had the pleasure of calling in the Means' home, where during the lifetime of Brother Means, the Methodist preachers were wont to make headquarters when in the district. At Vivian the workers are exerting every effort to make the Training School a great success. The superintendent, Mr. J. M. Land, is hoping to have as many credits from Vivian as will be taken by all other co-operating schools. After the visit to Vivian we went over to Shreveport to spend the night. On Saturday night the writer enjoyed a visit out at Cedar Grove with Brother S. L. Riggs and his family, including the splendid young man of the household who will be a senior at Centenary next year.

News comes to the office of preparations for Sunday School Day program at Ethel, and we are sure this will be a success.

* * *

Lake Charles is calling attention to a revival to begin on the 19th. Another interesting item we gather from the Bulletin from Lake Charles is the dramatization of the Biblical play, Ruth, scheduled to be given on the 17th instant for the benefit of the flood sufferers.

* * *

A splendid letter has been received from Lamar & Whitmore, publishing agents, in which they offer to furnish for the quarter beginning July 1st, free literature to all schools affected by the floods. We think this is a commendable offer and the office is compiling a list of such schools. Any Sunday school in the flooded areas having been affected by the flood can send a list of literature supplies to this office and we will be glad to forward same to the publishers.

* * *

The most recent offering from Sunday School Day has been received from Lecompte, and we are grateful for the remittance. Mr. W. B. Robison is superintendent.

We are in receipt of a report sent to us by Mrs. Cora Travick Court, of the Home and Parent-Teacher Work as developed at the West End Church at Nashville. This is a most interesting report and gives a survey as made by the church relative to the co-operation of the home and Sunday schools, and shows an appalling lack of understanding on the part of the fathers in the twelve homes visited. This is the forward step that some of our schools in Louisiana have selected for their Interest in the Training School at Rochelle in July is gaining all the time, and many pastors and other leaders are planning to take the course on Sunday School Management to be taught by Rev. Clem Baker of the Little Rock Conference. A letter from Brother P. M. Caraway of Winnfield says that he is issuing invitations to every preacher he has occasion to write to. This is a good system for all of us to follow.

* * *

We also acknowledge receipt of the "program of work" sent to us by Mr. Sensabaugh of the Nashville office, which gives in detail the recent change in the score system that will benefit our schools materially, and we would be glad to have the superintendents to become interested in this matter.

The contract is to be signed this week for the beautiful new educational building of First Church at Alexandria, and the workers are enthusiastic over the prospects of having the building next year.

NOT EQUIPMENT BUT THE MAN MAKES THE DIFFERENCE.

Every great school, college or university has been built around the personality of some one man. The educated men of America can, as a rule, recall some personality in early youth who largely shaped their destinies. The dominating personality of Robert K. Morgan makes him such a man. He unmistakably impresses his personality on his students. His influence brings out the noblest, best traits in a boy. His instructors are so selected that this one idea may prevail, viz—to develop personality in a boy of the highest type.

The ideals of Morgan school are the highest, to train boys for useful citizens in the church and state, and to develop mind, soul and body alike.

Write to Mr. L. I. Mills, Sec., Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., who will send you a catalog and tell you what Morgan School can do for your boy.

Epworth League

REPORT OF THE EDITOR OF THE EPWORTH LEAGUE DEPARTMENT OF THE NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE TO THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE ASSEMBLY, JUNE 6-10.

As editor of the Epworth League Department of the New Orleans Christian Advocate I wish to submit the following report:

I have tried to keep the readers of the Advocate informed of the Epworth League work throughout the Conference by reporting every bit of news gleaned from correspondence, visits, and newspaper clippings.

I have attended and reported two meetings of the Gulf Coast Union and two meetings of the Tri-County Union. Other League Unions reported were Meridian and Pike County.

League Institutes reported were: Jackson, Meridian, Hattiesburg, and Seashore Districts.

During the month preceding Hospital Week I made an effort to enlist Leaguers in the Golden Cross Society by calling attention to it through the columns of the paper.

I have reported the organization of each new League that has come to my attention, and have sent in all announcements sent me by the president and other officers of the Conference.

In conclusion I wish to thank each officer and member of our Conference who has helped me to carry on the work of the paper. I wish also to thank Miss Louise Preston, former editor, who has been a source of help and inspiration, and to give to her the credit for whatever degree of success that the editor has been able to attain with the column.

Respectfully submitted,
FRANCES ULMER,
Editor Epworth League Department
New Orleans Christian Advocate.

COKESBURY SCHOOL AT KREOLE.

Dear Editor: We had our first Cokesbury Training School last week. Mr. O. C. Hull, Dual-Extension Secretary of the Mississippi Conference, was with us from Sunday, June 5, to Friday, June 10. He preached for us twice on Sunday and held a Sunday school institute. Sunday night he organized a class to study "The Small Sunday School," by Sensabaugh. About forty enrolled, with fourteen taking work for credit. This looks like a small number, but considering the fact that this is just a beginning, and also that it was predicted before that we could get no one to take the work, we should be well pleased.

We are greatly encouraged over the results of the school. There was much enthusiasm; good work was done; and many of our teachers and workers have caught such a vision of the work of the Sunday school that they will not be satisfied any more to go along in the old "slipshod" manner. At our first Workers' Council Monday night much constructive work was planned.

Brother Hull made many friends while among us, and already they are looking forward to the time when he can be with us again. He gave us practical instruction, but, best of all, he inspired us with new zeal for the great work of the Sunday school.

Sincerely yours,
MURRAY COX,
Pastor Kreole Charge.

RED CROSS WORK AFTER THE FLOOD.

Houses in the flooded portions of Louisiana are due for another washing after the flood recedes, the next time with soap in adidtion to water.

This is one of the details of the campaign by which community health will be protected in Louisiana in the aftermath of the flood, made public by Dr. K. E. Miller, United States Public Health Service, Director of the Bureau of Parish Health Administration for Louisana, co-operating with the Red Cross medical officer, Dr. William R. Redden.

Briefly, the general plan is for medical and sanitation experts to follow behind the receding waters, putting their precautionary measures in effect as they progress through the flood regions of the State. One force, including sanitary engineers, inspectors, and Red Cross nurses, will operate from a headquarters at Monroe, La., under direction of Dr. C. W. Armstrong, health officer of Rowan County, North Carolina, loaned for flood service, assisted by A. H. Fletcher, sanitary engineer from the Louisiana State Board of Health. Similar groups will be formed for other sections, one being in process of organization at Alexandria, under Dr. George M. Boteler, for work in central Louisiana.

Get this remedy! Guaranteed to cure Itching, Bleeding, Blind or Protruding Piles or money refunded. Get the handy tube with pile pipe, 75c; or the tin box, 60c. Ask for PAZO OINTMENT
Sufferers from PILES

It is planned to concentrate primarily on towns and villages where public meetings will be held to organize the work in each community. The program will be extended to rural sections as far as possible. It contemplates a general clean-up in the flood areas as the waters recede. Rubbish will be disposed of, animal carcasses destroyed, new sanitary provisions made, water supplies chlorinated, mosquitoes fought by oiling pools, use of paris green, and screening; while the nurses with the health forces will visit homes, interviewing parents of young children, and instructing in their care and diet, where such assistance is necessary. Inoculations will be completed where required. Special efforts will be made to combat malaria.

The novel feature of the program as explained by Dr. Miller, is the plan to literally scrub with soap and water the interiors of all houses flooded by the rivers and streams. He pointed out that aside from the depressing effect of muddied walls and floors, the waters everywhere held the possibility of all sorts of infections and diseases, and the scrubbing would be not only freshening, but really an effective safety measure.

Much of the success of the entire health plan, Dr. Miller emphasized, will depend on the people of the affected communities, who must necessarily help themselves, guided by the educational efforts of the health experts.

Health authorities of the Red Cross are seriously considering one detail already in effect at Vicksburg, Miss. At that camp, the refugees returning home are given tags marked "Vaccinated—smallpox and typhoid—Vicksburg Camp, 1927." It is thought the idea might be adopted to other points also.

Dr. Miller reported that excellent progress already is being made on the general health program, and that generally the forces are receiving satisfactory co-operation.

MARRIED.

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The third zone meeting was held at the Methodist church, Jackson, La., May 26, at 3 p. m., Mrs. I. G. Gayden, president.

There were present four members from St. Francisville, nine from Clinton, four from Ethel, five from Baton Rouge, and fifteen from Jackson; also nine Presbyterians, four Baptists, making a total of fifty.

The program was as follows:

Song, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

Prayer, Rev. J. H. Bowden.

Minutes of the preceding meeting read and approved.

Talk, by Rev. J. H. Bowden, "The Book of Jonah."

Vocal solo, "The Silent Voice," Mrs. C. S. Miller; piano accompaniment, Mrs. V. T. Broach.

Recognition service: St. Francisville, Mrs. Wadsworth; Clinton, Mrs. Irwin; Ethel, Mrs. Hawsey; Jackson, Mrs. Kit Dudley.

I am pleased to report that Ethel has organized a new Missionary Society, and the work is very gratifying. Mrs. Rayham, from St. Francisville, reported a silver tea for the benefit of Belle Bennett Memorial.

Following the reports Mrs. W. K. Rust, State Superintendent of Supplies, gave a very interesting talk.

Topics of missionary news, read by different members.

Song, "Touch of His Hand on Mine."

Collection for the expenses of rural worker.

Violin solo, "A Dream of Paradise," Mrs. I. G. Gayden; piano accompaniment, Mrs. V. T. Broach.

Vocal solo, "In the Garden," Mrs. M. V. Hubbs.

"A Study of Our Common Interests and Problems," Mrs. T. D. Dawson.

Mrs. J. H. Chambers, of Baton Rouge, gave a report of the conference and council meeting. It was very interesting and instructive.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Mrs. E. W. Chaney, Clinton, president; Mrs. M. V. Hubbs, Clinton, secretary.

Installation of officers, by Rev. J. H. Bowden.

Benediction, Rev. J. H. Bowden.

A social hour followed on the church lawn, where delicious refreshments were served.

MRS. C. S. MILLER, Secretary.

ZONE MEETING AT SUMRALL, MISS.

A meeting of zone 4, of Hattiesburg District, was held at Sumrall church on May 30, with about forty members in attendance. There were representatives from the Societies of Prentiss, Bassfield, Carson, and Sumrall, and Sumrall Juniors.

The meeting opened with the singing of "He Leadeth Me." The devotional service was led by Brother Lane, pastor at Sumrall, who brought an instructive and inspirational message from the sixth chapter of John.

Mrs. Temple, of Sumrall, extended a cordial welcome to the visiting Societies, and Mrs. Carraway, of Bassfield, graciously responded.

Mrs. Griffith, of Prentiss, showed the importance of reading the Missionary Voice, saying it is to the missionary women what the Medical Journal is to the doctor. Mrs. Gray, of Carson, discussed very ably the subject of social service, after which we stood and sang, "Jesus Calls Us."

Mrs. C. Hudson, of Sumrall, presented the necessity of definite Bible study, bringing to us the thought that it is from the Word of God that we learn his will concerning our work as missionary women.

Our District Secretary, Mrs. Walters, of Magee, being with us, was brought forward and presented to the body. Mrs. Walters spoke on what we hope to accomplish in the next year, 1928 being Jubilee year. All auxiliary women are urged to give, work and pray to the utmost, and by studying past history get a vision for future accomplishment. She urged co-operation of the following: (1) Merging of Junior Society and League; (2) ten per cent increase in memberships and organizations; (3) fifteen per cent in crease in pledge to take care of Mississippi girl, Miss McNeil; (4) training school attendance; (5) Mission and Bible study classes reported; (6) Wesley Houses and Scarritt pledges paid in full. Mrs. Walters told that our district led Conference in Honor Roll societies, having nine last year. Belle Bennett Memorial put over in our Conference through prayer by our Conference president, Mrs. Alford. Attendance at district meeting June 9 at Leakesville was urged.

We then sang, "O Zion Haste." Sister Lane gave a splendid tribute to the women of the Missionary Society as friends of the pastor's wife.

Mrs. Turnage presented the importance of Mission study, saying that it gives us the what, where, why and how of our efforts as missionary women.

Sumrall Juniors were then presented and gave their report. Earnest prayer was made for them.

Discussion of zone officers for the coming year was led by Mrs. Walters. The election resulted as follows: President, Mrs. Clyde Smith, Prentiss; vice president, Mrs. J. H. Scott, Sumrall; treasurer, Mrs. E. N. Blount, Bassfield; secretary, Mrs. W. C. Dale, Silver Creek.

A free-will offering of $1.85 was taken.

The meeting closed with song, "The Kingdom Is Coming," and prayer by Brother Lane.

All went to the basement then, where we enjoyed ice cream and cake, served by Sumrall Society.

Secretary Pro Tem.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE, WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The Meridian District Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society will meet in Waynesboro, July 7, at 10 o'clock.

THE DEPARTMENT OF ARCHITECTURE.

By Dr. T. D. Ellis, Secretary, Board of Church Extension.

For a number of years the Department has been rendering a large service to the churches of Southern Methodism. At the present time we are prepared to render even a larger service than ever before. In view of the fact that plans are to be approved by the Department of Architecture before any amount of an appropriation is paid by the Board of Church Extension, our people should know that they can secure whatever architectural service they need from their own organization.

The Department of Architecture is prepared:

1. To make working drawings, including all plans, elevations, details and specifications necessary for the erection of a building by general contract or otherwise.

2. To supervise the construction of churches for which plans have been prepared by the Department.

3. To prepare preliminary sketches that will show the advantage or disadvantage of a given site and the approximate amount of building that can be done for a given expenditure.

4. To consult with and advise building committees preparatory to launching a building enterprise.

A skilled and competent organization is maintained to assist pastors and committees with their building problems, and to place within their reach the special knowledge required to make plans for an ever expanding program of religous education.

The advice and guidance of some one thoroughly informed with technical skill and experience is needed to assist the local committee. Various sketches and approximate estimates are often needed in order to clear up all questions involved, and to bring the undertaking to the point where the committee is ready to engage an architect to prepare working drawings. As this is the formative stage of the enterprise, here is where the Department can render good service.

We can always arrange to help you if you communicate with us in time. Do not prepare to build without consulting us.

It should be remembered also that in consulting this Department you are getting the expert service and advice of the Joint Committee on Church and Sunday School Architecture, as all important questions involved are passed upon by this Committee.

Isn't it fair to suppose that they who foster the spread of God's Kingdom on earth have the "right of way" on the road to Heaven?

LIVES ON FARM IN OKLAHOMA

Happy Woman Praises Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

In a sunny pasture in Oklahoma, a herd of sleek cows was grazing. They made a pretty picture. But the thin woman in the blue checked apron sighed as she looked at them. She was tired of cows, tired of her tedious work in the dairy. She was tired of cooking for a houseful of boarders, besides caring for her own family. The burdens of life seemed too heavy for her failing health. She had lost confidence in herself.

One day she began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and her general health began to improve. She took it faithfully. Now she can do her work without any trouble, sleeps well and is no longer blue and timid.

This woman, Mrs. Cora Short, R. R. 9, Box 396, Oklahoma City, Okla., writes: "Everybody now says: 'Mrs. Short, what are you doing to yourself?' I weigh 135 and my weight before I took it was 115. I have taken seven bottles of the Vegetable Compound."

Other women who have to work hard and keep things going may find the road to better health as Mrs. Short did, through the faithful use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ask your neighbor.

NEW PARSONAGE AT MATHISTON AND MABEN.

Hurrah! for Mathiston and Maben! A brand new six-room parsonage, on the best street in town—very little indebtedness—will be clear of debt soon. Built under almost as much opposition as Oliver built that one in South McComb, but built, and preacher's family moved in and feeling like new folks in such a nice, large, clean, roomy house, with plenty of windows to get fresh air and a most delightful east front porch, where the tired preacher and family can sit in the afternoon (if they chance to have time.) Mrs. Carter has painted the furniture all so pretty in bright colors. Why, my predecessors would neve believe it was the same old junk, even the old dingy-looking safe and kitchen table are sitting up here as white as snow, looking like "a bride adorned to meet her husband." And she has begun to worry already about those preachers' folks who move about and will not take care of the parsonage and its furniture. If they all would, it wouldn't be so hard on Oliver and me and others who do want a clean, good place to live.

Things are moving forward slowly—Sunday school, Leagues, Missionary Societies, etc.

The Woman's Missionary Society contributed almost as much to missions the first quarter as the whole charge did last year.

Pray for us, Brother Carley, and may God richly bless you.

Yours for the Master,

H. E. CARTER, Pastor.

Calomel Attacks the Bones and Deadens the Bowels

Never take calomel. It is mercury—a dangerous drug. If you are constipated, bilious, sick, headachy, stomach sour, meals don't taste right, hot days make you drowsy and lazy, take Dodson's Liver Tone. That's all you need.

Calomel salivates. That's why you have to take salts the next day to get it out of your system so it will not eat your bones. You have to stay at home a day to recuperate from the shock it gives you. No wonder Dodson's Liver Tone is so popular. All you do is take a spoonful at night. By morning you are cleaned out good, head is clear, you feel as light as a feather; you are not sick, no danger of salivation, and you can eat anything you want. Think of that.

Get the big bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone from your nearest store. They all have it. Keep it in the house so you will have it handy to take nights before going to bed.

MEETING OF THE NORTHERN GROUP, BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT.

Dear Brother Carley: The second regular quarterly meeting of the northern group of the preachers of the Brookhaven District met in the pretty new parsonage home of Rev. and Mrs. J. E. J. Ferguson, pastor of Gallman charge, Gallman, Miss., on Thursday, at 2:30 p. m., June 9, 1927.

The group meeting was called to order by the wide-awake chairman, Rev. Charles W. Crisler, D.D., and the Rev. James G. Galloway led the group in earnest prayer.

The following preachers were present: Rev. W. H. Lewis, presiding elder of the Brookhaven District; Rev. James G. Galloway, of Crystal Springs; Rev. A. S. Oliver, of Wesson; Rev. Chas. W. Crisler, of Hazlehurst; Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson, of Gallman, and Rev. Hilary S. Westbrook, of Georgetown. Sorry that Brothers Hope, Baker, Grimes, Griffin, Beasley, and Parritt were not present. Hope they can meet with us next time.

The presiding elder's wife and their daughter, Miss Alice, accompanied him to Gallman, and we were delighted to have them with us.

Dr. Crisler, our efficient chairman, had prepared a thought-provoking program, which was carried out under his wise leadership in a very helpful and effective way.

The following subjects were ably discussed:

First, Pastoral Visiting, its necessity, its character, its frequency, and its place in the spiritual life of the congregation. Rev. J. E. J. Ferguson opened the discussion with a well prepared talk, his splendid talk being followed by timely remarks from Rev. W. H. Lewis and Dr. Chas. W. Crisler. These brethren in the general discussion of this potent subject gave us some clear and concise points on the vital necessity of pastoral visiting.

Second, The Church and Pastor's relation to the larger life of the community. Revs. A. S. Oliver, James G. Galloway, W. H. Lewis, and the chairman of the meeting brought us helpful messages on this worthwhile subject of to-day.

How many have taken the collection for the preachers in the overflowed territory of the Conference? The answer was: Wesson, Gallman, and Hazlehurst, and the rest who were present and had not taken the collection promised to take it at an early date and forward the money to the presiding elder.

The Copiah Epworth League Union was suggested by Brother Ferguson, and it was decided to take it up with our young people and see if it could be done.

Georgetown was chosen for the next meeting place.

After delightful refreshments were served by our hostess and her accomplished daughter, the group meeting adjourned with an earnest prayer by the Rev. W. H. Lewis.

Greatly encouraged,

HILARY S. WESTBROOK,

Georgetown, Miss. Secretary.

The Eloquence of Christian Experience

By RAYMOND CALKINS

Price, $2.00

Some Very Terse but Exceptionally Emphatic Statements of Praise

The most vital and dynamic book on preaching that I have read in many years. —Bishop E. D. Mouzon.

No finer expression has been made in the full light of the modern world of the heart of John Wesley's experience and gospel than this book.—Paul B. Kern.

The author deals with the question of certainty and finds the answer in an experience of God in and through the historic Christ.—Gilbert T. Rowe.

This is a vital book. The theme is an old one, but the treatment is unusually fresh.—Franklin N. Parker.

HENRY T. CARLEY, D.D., Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JUNE 30, 1927. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

"Is it well that while we range with Science,
glorying in the Time,
City children soak and blacken soul and sense in city slime?"

—Sixty Years After.

FROM THE ASSISTANT EDITOR.

During the period in which I shall, in connection with other duties, assist in editing the New Orleans Christian Advocate, Dr. Carley will do the most of the editorial writing. In distinction from his work, what I shall write will be indicated by my initials. Dr. Carley has not even remotely suggested any policy for me to pursue in the expression of opinion upon any subject, but, inasmuch as there might be at times divergence of views between him and me, it is only just to Dr. Carley that I should indicate the articles for which I am responsible. R. H. H.

LEST WE FORGET.

Last week we called attention to the fact that a crisis had been reached in the financial support which the New Orleans Christian Advocate is receiving throughout the bounds of the Louisiana, Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences. And, as a very practical and altogether possible way in which to meet the difficulty, it was urged that the brethren in the three Conferences undertake to secure a total of twelve hundred subscriptions during the next three months, at the regular price of $2. As mentioned last week, one enterprising pastor here in New Orleans said, when this matter was brought to his attention, "Why, yes, I think I could secure at least fifty subscriptions in our congregation." This week we can report that he has already begun work, with a good prospect of success. What he is doing, others can do, and ought to do. R. H. H.

IT IS STRANGE.

It is strange that we are reminded so often recently of the perfectly familiar fact that the church once condemned the belief that the earth is round. Such a reminder proves too much, if it proves anything—proves that the church cannot be trusted in matters of science, and that the church is always wrong. Therefore if the whole church could be brought to the right attitude toward the "proper teaching of science," the church would of course be wrong. And so the science, "properly taught," would be wrong.

* * *

It is strange that some teachers of religion seem concerned to explain all the divine out of the Bible. A scholarly man some years ago remarked, when he had read in a Sunday school text book the ingenious explanation of how a "mud bank" had fallen and stopped the flow of the Jordan, "It is interesting to note how some men seem concerned to explain all the divine out of the Bible." If they do succeed in explaining it all away, will they not explain themselves out of a job?

* * *

It is strange that some men would reduce the Bible to that minimum which is clearly intelligible to the human reason. The Bible is the revelation of an infinite Being to finite men, and we should expect to find in it some things which are beyond the perfect comprehension of men. One of the greatest preachers of our church, who had read the Bible through an amazing number of times, once said to the writer that no man should have any difficulty with the Bible if he believes the first verse in it, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth."

* * *

It is strange that some men would have God to be perfectly understood and explained and brought under the same laws which govern men. The gods of the Greeks were nothing more than apotheosized men. And those beings of man's imagination, lifted to the rank of gods, betrayed their origin and published their inventors by high carnival on Mount Olympus. But as to our God, the true God, there comes this question of his from the days of Job, "Where wast thou when I laid the foundations of the earth?"

* * *

It is strange that a man can write a book; carefully explain in the beginning of his book—to his own satisfaction—how one is at liberty to discard any part of the Bible, provided he holds on to his "Christian experience of God," and then throughout the book constantly appeal for fact, verification, quotation and illustration to the Bible.

* * *

It is strange how some men to-day would like to build a tower of vaunting knowledge to peer from its top into heaven and see how everything goes on. But such an effort results now, as in the days of Babel, in great confusion of tongues. R. H. H.

OUR THEOLOGICAL SCHOOLS.

The address of our Bishops concerning our theological schools, which we were glad to carry in the Advocate of last week, should have the careful consideration of our people.

The great advancement in education of all the people to-day is making a heavy demand upon our preachers. Too small a number of these faihtful men have had the advantages they should have had. Without discrediting any of these men who have been and are serving the church well, we should not fail to make better provision for the training of the men who are to serve in the future. And let our schools fail not to establish our young men in the "faith once delivered," and thoroughly prepare them for their high calling as preachers of Christ and him crucified. R. H. H.

STEWARDSHIP.

When David and his people brought to God what had been gathered for the building of the temple, David gave a clear expression to the great doctrine of stewardship which was afterward set forth, amplified and illustrated in the New Testament. He said, "But who am I, and what is my people, that we should be able to offer so willingly after this sort? for all things come of thee, and of thine own have we given thee."

One of the great sins condemned in the New Testament is the sin of treason to our stewardship. And its terrible results are pointed out. When Jesus drew aside the vail which separates time from eternity, whom did he show to be in perdition? A rich man who had proved untrue to his stewardship. Who went away from the Master sorrowful? A young man whom Jesus looked upon and loved; a young man who claimed that he had kept all the commandments, but a young man who was unwilling to take up his stewardship. And there is no evidence that he ever returned, inquiring the way of life. Who was cast into outer darkness where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth? An unprofitable steward. To whom did the Lord say, "Thou wicked servant?" A faithless steward. To whom did God say, "Thou fool?" A wealthy farmer who laid up treasure for himself and was not rich toward God.

According to the doctrine of stewardship, God is the owner of all we have and the Lord of all we are. He is the owner, we are the agents; all is debt, ever paying, never paid. Much preaching, we are sure, should be done upon this subject, not immediately preceding or during a "drive" or "campaign," when it is felt to be the means to an end, but at regular intervals as a part of every preacher's ministry. Much of the difficulty we find in providing for the maintenance of the church is due to the wrong attitude of the people. The most of them claim the right to do as they please with what they have and what they are. They do not seem to realize the significance of stewardship—that they are not called upon to give, but to return unto God what is his own.

We are stewards of all we are said to possess, of our time, of our talents, of the truth which has been committed to us, and we are the stewards of ourselves. Paul, in commending some ancient Christians for contributing above all that could have been expected of them, gave the potent reason and means for their doing this: he writes, "And this they did, not as we hoped, but first gave their own selves to the Lord."

Let the thought, the conscience and the love of our people be awakened to the great duty and privilege of stewardship.

PASEOS AND FIESTAS.

By Mrs. Garfield Evans.

"Paseos," artistically decorated floats, laughing Spanish beauties in costumes of distinctive charm, gay revelry and merry-making; Cuba's Carnival season has begun!

Each year, from the middle of February until after Easter, the Sundays and parts of other days are given over to the gayeties of Carnival throughout the Republic. Whatever outstanding social functions are to be given during the year are saved until this time. Weddings and dances and fiestas are the order of the day, and occupy the greater part of the nights. All this is a natural outlet of a desire for recreation and play.

Aside from the twice-a-week promenades in the park, the picture show, and an occasional public dance, the Cuban people in the interior of the island have little or no recreation. The Catholic church does not provide for the social life of its young people. In a country where every month of the year lends itself to picnicing, there seems to be little known of the joys of a day in the woods with books, nature and a lunch basket. Cuba's wonderfully rich flora and fauna should be a challenge to provide leaders of young people who will teach them to see and appreciate the beauties of God's great out-of-doors.

Only in parts of the island are children's playgrounds provided in the cities where the majority of the children have no place to play except in the streets. In some cases the government has appropriated funds for such playgrounds, and in other places the towns themselves have provided them, but seldom is there adequate supervision of the play life. A policeman guards the younger children from the other and rougher boys, but the apparatus is not used in a constructive way to teach the children the many elements of character-building that a trained playground leader might develop.

A stranger in an interior city was impressed with the gayety of the homes in the evenings. The long doors and windows are thrown open, after having been closed all day, the electric lights are turned on, and the girls and women of the home sit just inside the artistic iron-grated window or on the sidewalk, which serves as both sidewalk and porch of the Cuban home. Donned in their best and gayest, they sit until late into the night watching the passing on the street, and being admired by the passers-by. If the older daughter of the home has a "novio," the ardent admirer is a noticeable addition to the femininity of the group as he and she are accompanied by the women of the household while the men are at the clubs or on the streets. Very seldom do the families spend their evenings reading or singing. The people sing very little. The music consists of electric pianos, pianolas, victrolas, radios and the piano music of the girls, most of whom become experts only in the playing of Cuban and American syncopation.

Probably nowhere in the world do we find people so artistic in the making of fancy costumes for Carnival and fiestas. The new missionaries had quite a surprise, when, at the first attempt to prepare a Christian program with simple costumes for a short dramatization, they found the responsibility of the costuming and decorating could be left entirely to the children themselves and to their mothers, and the effect was a revelation of their distinctive ability.

The recreation programs of the Protestant churches meet with the heartiest co-operation from the young people. Epworth League socials are as successful in a Cuban church as in the States. Some of the fine Christian leaders of the church in Latin America have been led to know an abundant life in Christ through the social life of the church, for the Latin people easily respond to anything which calls forth their natural spirit of animation, gayety, optimism and pleasantry.

Moron, Cuba.

TIME TO ABOLISH CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

By Rev. W. T. Bazzel.

Few human customs have endured longer, or had more universal sanction than the custom of putting men to death for certain violations of the rules of organized society. Can we safely abolish this custom now? I believe we can. And if it can safely be done, then it surely is high time for civilized society to stop killing men in order to maintain the sacredness of human life!

We no longer impose the death penalty for every sort of crime, from petty theft to murder; we only consider two or three crimes as being worthy of death. We no longer torture a condemned man, but use some humane and "merciful" method of execution, such as the electric chair, lethal gas, or the hangman's noose. Yes, we have made some progress. Could we not take one further step and abolish this cruel relic of mediaeval barbarity altogether? I think so.

Why should we continue the policy of executing criminals? Only one sound reason can be given, namely, to protect society and prevent crime. Other reasons, which are not sound are sometimes given. For instance, it may be argued that God sanctioned and commanded it in the laws given to Moses. True, but he also sanctioned and commanded many other things which we no longer consider binding upon Christians. Moses commanded that a man be put to death for blasphemy. Also that he who cursed his father or mother be stoned. Did Jesus indorse capital punishment? A criminal who was guilty of a capital offense according to the law of Moses was once brought to Jesus and he was requested to ratify the death sentence. He said, "Go, and sin no more!"

Again, we often hear an argument like this: "Well, if some brutal fiend murdered your brother, or your daughter, you would believe in capital punishment! You would want him killed!" Quite likely I would so long as I were controlled by anger or a spirit of vengeance. But that does not make it right for society to calmly take a human life with gruesome ceremony. In fact we do not execute men now for the purpose of gratifying some one's thirst for revenge, else the law would still permit criminals to be tortured to death. We hang or electrocute murderers for the sole purpose of protecting society. We presume that we thereby uphold the majesty of the law and that enforcing the death penalty will have some influence toward preventing crime. And I am sure this can be done as effectively without capital punishment.

I have worked out a plan that will make it safe to abolish capital punishment in my State, Mississippi, and if it will work in Mississippi it will work in any other State in America.

I do not believe it would be safe to abolish the death penalty in this State unless we made certain other radical changes. Too many convicts are pardoned. Few remain in our penitentiaries more than a few years, even though they be sentenced for life.

Here is the plan: Establish a special prison for "capital offenders." Let no one be sent to it except those convicted of the crimes for which we now impose the death penalty. Let it be entirely separate and distinct from the regular penitentiary. Let it stand as our substitute for hanging.

Provide employment, make it safe and sanitary, permit no unusual cruelties. Make reasonable provision for the intellectual and religious needs of the inmates, but keep them there for life. Let this prison be beyond the reach of any pardoning power. When its grim gates close upon a guilty man let it close forever all hope of liberty. Let there be one, and only one chance for a convict to ever regain his liberty in this world when he is sentenced to this institution—and that the chance of new evidence being discovered which proves him innocent. And then require this evidence to be examined by the coourt which originally convicted him, and a new verdict rendered by due process of law before the accused can be released or his sentence altered. If an innocent man should be condemned to this prison he would have a chance and a hope. A guilty man would have neither.

This special prison would be self-supporting, and thus would cost the taxpayers no more than it costs to have a man hanged. Our present penitentiary pays a huge profit into the State treasury every year, in addition to paying all operating expenses. So our special prison would at least pay its own expenses, and if there should be a net profit arising from the labor of the convicts therein it should be paid to the family or dependents of the person killed or injured by the convict.

Would this plan be a safe one, especially in Mississippi, with our large Negro population, and the present shameful frequency of lynchings? I am sure it would. Why?

First, it would put an end to further crimes on the part of a condemned man just as effectually as hanging.

Second, potential criminals would dread a sentence to this prinson even worse than they would dread death. All eminent authorities will agree to this statement. Threrefore, in so far as the dread of the penalty deters crime, this substitute would be at least as effective as the death sentence.

Third, the majesty of the law would be sustained, even more fully than at present. It is constantly growing more difficult to get a jury to agree on a verdict that means death, even upon the most convincing testimony. Under the new system juries would be willing to impose the extreme penalty if the evidence justified it, knowing that the cases could be reopened if new evidence should ever be found showing that the sentence was unjust.

Fourth, this prison would stand as a monument reminding all of the sacredness of human life, and this would be a good influence toward preventing murder. Human life is all too lightly regarded. It is too cheap. That is one cause of so many homicides. When the State regards human life as being so sacred that it refuses to kill even the vilest murderer, surely it would have a better effect than legalized killing.

But would we not have more lyching by mobs? Surely not, for we have so many lynchings now that it has become a national disgrace. Executing men by law does not prevent mobs from lynching a person when duly aroused. One argument frequently used to persuade men to join in lynching a Negro is this: "We know he is guilty, and the State would finally hang him anyway; so why go to the expense and trouble of a trial?" This argument would have to be changed to something like this: "The State will not put the culprit to death, but the State will impose penalty that will punish him far worse than death. He will have to work during the remainder of his life, and all profits from his work will go to the family of the wronged party."

Innocent men are sometimes executed. A few cases are known, wherein the deathbed confession of the real murderer, or other proof, has established the innocence of an accused man after he had been put to death; and God only knows how many innocent men have been hanged and no proof of their innocence ever found.

Only an accident (or was it a miracle) prevented Mississippi from hanging an innocent man a few years ago. Will Purvis was convicted of assassinating Will Buckley in Marion County, in 1893, and was sentenced to be hanged. The day came and he was placed upon the scaffold, the black cap was adjusted, and the trap was sprung. He dropped—and the noose slipped over his head and he fell to the ground. The executioner was about to lead him onto the scaffold again when Purvis' lawyer interceded and persuaded the officer to take the condemned man back to jail to await further orders. Finally Governor McLaurin commuted the sentence to life imprisonment. After Purvis had been in the penitentiary several years the real murderer made a confession which fully established the fact that Purvis was absolutely innocent. The State Legislature later appropriated the sum of $5,000 and paid it to Will Purvis as part compensation for the time he served the State under the erroneous conviction. If that noose had not slipped the State would have hanged an innocent man; and possibly the real murderer would never have confessed. Buckley was murdered in 1893. The act of the Legislature which gave Purvis the money was passed in 1920. (See Miss., Laws, 1920, Page 98, Chapter 96.)

When we become truly civilized we shall abandon legal murder as a means of preventing crime. And instead of hurling the transgressor into eternity with his hands red with crime we shall give him the remainder of his natural life to labor and atone to society, and reflect upon the enormity of his offense; and, if possible, to repent and prepare his soul to meet God!

NATION'S OFFICIALS RECEIVE HERO OF THE AIR.

Background of America Revealed in "Lone Eagle."

By H. E. Woolever, Editor of National Methodist Press.

Never in peace time has the nation's capital given such enthusiastic tribute as is extended to Charles Augustus Lindbergh, the youthful aviator who pioneered the airway from continent to continent. Not even at a presidential inauguration has this federal city seen such outbursts of enthusiasm. The reception given the young air pilot was everybody's. Not as in an affair of state where officials and the favored few are privileged to participate, this was the people's reception, and no class was lacking in the make-up of the tens of thousands who greeted this mid-western lad. Neither were there geographical restrictions. In the tourist camp, cars from thirty-nine States were registered and representatives from the other nine States were in the cheering crowds. Not ever before had such a large crowd gathered in the national capital to welcome a living hero as surrounded the Washington Monument where the President of the United States received this quiet, unassuming boy and pinned the Distinguished Flying Cross upon him whom he had a few hours before commissioned a colonel in the United States Officers' Reserve Corps. The closing paragraph of this address of the Chief Executive was especially significant.

"And now, my fellow-citizens, this young man has returned. He is hero. He has brought his unsullied fame home. It is our great privilege to welcome back to his native land, on behalf of his own people, who have a deep effection for him and have been thrilledd by his splendid achievement, a colonel of the United States Officers' Reserve Corps, an illustrious citizen of our Republic, a conqueror of the air and strengthener of the ties which bind us to our sister nations across the sea, and, as President of the United States, I bestow the Distinguished Flying Cross, as a symbol of appreciation for what he is and what he has done, upon Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh."

The Deed and the Flyer.

President Coolidge, in the last phrase of his address, touched the note which prompts these lines. The daily press has carried to the people the story of Lindbergh's every hour since the day he left Roosevelt Field headed for Paris. It is "what he is" which made possible what he has done and which accounts for at least half of the enthusiasm which has been manifest in this country. The deed so notable in itself has been made a hundredfold more significant by the modest way in which the American lad has conducted himself, the character which, under most testing circumstances he has revealed. While presidents, kings, powers and principalities, prime ministers and cabinet celebrities showered praises upon an American boy in his early twenties, he did not lose his head nor assume the air of a boastful conqueror.

"If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with kings nor lose the common touch,
* * * * * * * *
Yours is the earth and everything that's in it,
And which is more, you'll be a man, my son."

A True American Type.

The Hon. Charles Evans Hughes, in presenting to Colonel Lindbergh the Cross of Honor of the United States Flag Association, declared that "in your flight you happily incarnated the spirit of America." This famous jurist and former Secretary of State referred to the fact that this country had sent many ambassadors of peace and good will to Europe, "but you were the most successful of them all. You carried healing in your wings."

No American who has visited Europe since the war has so stimulated good will and tended to change the unkind estimate which many in the old countries have regarded Americans as has this "Lone Eagle." They have claimed that we are a bragging, egotistical, self-asservative and money-grabbing people. This youth, who so significantly typifies the American people and their ideals, nullified in a day accumulated misrepresentations which have grown up in the last few years.

Charles A. Lindbergh was born of typical American parents, hardworking, purposeful and Christian. His father was born in Sweden in 1859, and the following year was brought to the United States by his parents who settled in Minnesota. He attended the rural schools, worked on the farm, in the woods and on the railroad which was being constructed through his section. He thus took his place among those who, because of honest effort and democratic ideals, are the real makers of America. He later made his way through Michigan University, receiving the degree of bachelor of laws, and married a bachelor of science graduate of the same institution. Both have made their contributions to society, one in the halls of legislation and one in the laboratory of learning. These two, endowed with high purpose and given to hard work instilled into their boy like ideals. During the ten years, 1907 to 1917, that the father served as a member of Congress, he won the reputation of being a hard worker. He was always at his office by 5 a.m., and often earlier. His principal effort in Congress had to do with curbing the money trusts. He was regarded as an "obstructionist" by his enemies and as an "idealist" by his friends. By example as well as by precept he taught his son, who was born in 1902 in Little Falls, Minnesota, the ideals of earnest and purposeful work. One of his favorite statements was, "Tireless striving stretches its arms towards perfection." The father died three years ago while a nominee for the governorship of his State.

The mother who has shared the triumph of the young aviator is one of the most queenly of American women, and her life ideals are reflected in her son. Her chosen task is that of school teaching. While her son was flying across the trackless Atlantic, she continued to teach her classes in chemistry in the Cass Technical High School of Detroit. While the millions followed every report of her son's progress toward Paris, she remained at her task, expressing confidence that he would get there.

She quietly slipped into Washington to greet her son on his return. Her coming was at the earnest invitation of the President, but she remarked, "I cannot understand why I should be needed for my son's reception." The mother of the hero became the guest of the First Lady of the Land who, like herself, once graced the teaching profession. Mrs. Lindbergh made no pretenses, and except that she was entertained at the White House and was escorted about by the reception committee, she would have been lost among the thousands of other mothers in Washington. She would have preferred to be. While waiting to board the ship to greet her son, the crowds were surging round the auto in which she sat calling for her to stand. She remarked, "I don't like all this publicity."

On Sunday, she bowed with her son in prayer, as with the President and First Lady of the Land they attended divine services. On Sunday evening she slipped away as quietly as possible from the White House to take her train to New York. The railroad insisted on adding a private car, and the White House attendants carried the luggage, which consisted, not of numerous wardrobe trunks, but of a hat box and one small suit case, which were sufficient for this typical American mother who, like her son, seemed to carry an air of "why is all this fuss necessary when one is just doing what one has set out to do?"

A Product of An American Home.

It is parents of this type who have made millions of American homes which are training grounds for heroes sung and unsung. This air pilot is indicative of the type of his home. While others talked much about the flight and quarreled over the division of the possible spoils, the quiet youth who was not known above scores of fliers six weeks ago, went quietly, ahead and did it. When he arrived in Paris, the cables carried messages offering him millions of dollars to appear upon the stage and in motion pictures. He refused to consider material fortune and will continue as a student of aviation interested in its future development.

Thus unswayed by the proffers of wealth, unspoiled by his wonderful record, untempted by the wine and frivolities of Paris, he the most conspicuous figure of the world, demonstrated the best type of American. No cigarette manufacturers could use him as a sales means, no liquor brewers or distillers could point to him as a user. Abstaining from liquor and tobacco, clean of thought and speech, this blonde youth of six feet three gave his fellows of this and other lands an example of what an American may be. President Coolidge expressed the spirit of the millions of admirers when he stated that it is what you are as well as what you have done.

Back of the boy was the father. As the youth sat on the Capitol steps watched by the tens of thousands, his mind must have gone back to the father who once served in that building. Likewise his character goes back to that Congressman parent who is described by his colleagues as exemplary. He never used liquor nor tobacco. He enjoyed toil, chose high ideals, and practiced the simple life.

Basis of a Hero's Character.

As the victor of the air was lauded and greeted by cabinet officers and senators here, repeatedly it was said, "How does the young fellow keep his poise and modesty? Will he not break under it?" However, at every turn when pressed to speak while in the national capital, he always diverted attention from himself to others—the scientists to whom he gave the credit for perfecting the art of flying, the American manufacturers who built the plane, and others.

While speaking at the National Press Club reception, he stated that when he landed in Paris it was the first time he had ever been abroad and that he wanted to stay and look around some. However, he had not been there long when the Ambassador told him that the President invited him to come back to Washington to be received by the Nation. He smilingly remarked, "The Ambassador said that it was not really an order, but that a battleship was waiting at the shore to bring me back."

The chairman of the reception committee at this same gathering, a veteran newspaper correspondent in Washington, accounted for the unprecedented newspaper space given to the achievement of this youth. "He personified to a Europe amazed at the revelation, the real spirit of America." He said the press found pride in telling the story of the carrer of an American boy which brings to the peoples of the world a new realization "that clean living, clean thinking, fair play and sportsmanship, modesty of speech and manner, and faith in a mother's prayers, are the fundamentals of success."

A Boy of Christian Training.

When the source of the qunalities which have called forth the world-wide praise of this American boy is sought, it is found in that Christian foundation which has undergirded this Nation throughout its course. The strength and character of this country have always been found in the Christian homes of America.

The mother of the young trans-Atlantic flier tells of the careful Christian training given by the father to the son. Those who saw the earnest mother, educated and refined, could not doubt her large part in training the boy for manhood's responsibilities. She, as is characteristic of her son, gives the praise to another. She tells of Congressman Lindbergh's faithfulness to the Lutheran Church of which he was a member and in which the son was brought up. The father was a regular church attendant while in Washington, and he taught his boy the catechism of the church and held up to him Christian ideals of life. The mother gives the chief credit for "clean living, deep spiritual life and that daring and persistent element in her son's character" to his Christian ancestry and to the daily lessons in Luther's catechism which it was his father's custom to teach the son.

America hails a son for his achievement and character. Out of the accomplishment may soon come trans-oceanic passenger service through the air. Important as this may be, of how much greater significance to the world will the recent flight prove if out of it comes a new regard on the part of American youth for clean living, hard work, earnest purpose and Christian character. These characteristics, accompanied by a becoming modesty, if given a new emphasis because of the achievement of this youthful air pilot, will be of incalculable value to both the Government and the homes of this Nation.

"God give us men. The time demands
Strong minds, great hearts, true faith and willing hands.
* * * * * * * * *
Tall men, sun-crowned, who live above the fog,
In public duty and in private thinking!"

KEEP THE BALL ROLLING.

By Rev. John W. Ramsey.

The Nashville Christian Advocate of May 13, and the New Orleans Christian Advocate of May 19, announce the provisional discharge of Walter A. Hearn from the China mission field because of his heretical belief, he having disclaimed belief in the bodily resurrection of Jesus Christ, and for such disbeliefs he was also refused admission into full connection at the last session of the China Annual Conference. The statement is added that the Board of Missions, on the recommendation of Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, had decided to withdraw Mr. Hearn from the mission field. The action of Bishop Ainsworth in recommending, and the action of the Board of Missions will meet with the hearty approval of all orthodox Methodists the world over.

So far, so good; but the Advocates named above have not published all the facts in connection with the case of Mr. Hearn, and these facts should be given to the membership of the Methodist church. So I have set them down here as they have come to my knowledge.

Mr. Hearn was educated in part in the United States at Columbia University, an institution shot through with modernism, and, on this account, I do not believe that Mr. Hearn is wholly to blame for his attitude of mind; but, in my humble opinion, those who have been recommending such pagan institutions of learning as suitable places for preparation for service in the Methodist church to our workers must share a large part of the responsibility when they stand before the judgment bar of God.

Another fact in connection with the sad case of Mr. Hearn is that when he presented himself for full admission into the China Conference, he was rejected by a vote of 59 to 35. The statement has been made that most of the American missionaries voted to receive Mr. Hearn and that his exclusion was carried chiefly by the votes of the Chinese members. In other words, the majority of the 35 who voted in the affirmative were American missionaries, sent out by the Board of Missions, and maintained by money contributed by orthodox Methodists; while the majority of the 59 who voted for his exclusion were converts from heathenism. What a spectacle! What a commentary on the deplorable conditions existing on our mission field in China! In view of this situation should not the Board of Missions start an investigation of the attitude of the 35 who voted for the admission of Mr. Hearn? Will not some such action be necessary to hold the confidence of Methodist people in the homeland?

Still another fact closely related to this case is that Mr. Hearn is professor of religious education in Soochow University, of which, some time ago, Dr. W. B. Nance was president, and when an enquiry was addressed to the latter asking if evolution was taught in that institution, Dr. Nance, referring to the method of creation involved in the enquiry, replied: "I am inclined to think, however, that the majority of us incline to the opinion that the method was one of evolution." So, then, we are not surprised to learn that it is reported that Dr. Nance defended Mr. Hearn on the Conference floor, contending, so it is alleged, that one's view of the bodily resurrection of Jesus should be determined by his view of the resurrection of the human body, and proceeded to ridicule the rising from the grave of the human body. If this report be true, what will the Board of Missions do with Dr. Nance's case? Should his long years of service now shield him from an impartial enquiry, while Mr. Hearn is recalled for expressing his disbelief of the very thing that Dr. Nance also declares he does not believe, viz., the bodily resurrection of our Lord? To be candid, in my humble judgment, to be impartial, if not for the sake of the fundamental teachings of the Bible, the ball, once started, should be kept rolling.

Before closing this article, while it may seem presumptious on my part, yet with my ear to the ground, listening to the voice of the membership of the church, I shall take this opportunity of offering two or three suggestions which, I think, are pertinent at this time.

1. I would suggest, first, a dependable enquiry by the Board of Missions into the beliefs of the thirty-five members of the China Annual Conference who voted to receive Mr. Hearn, and also of Dr. Nance, who is reported to have defended him. Why recall Mr. Hearn and let these others escape a fair and just investigation? Indeed, if they do not stand for the things that Mr. Hearn and Dr. Nance stand for, should they not welcome, if not invite, such an investigation?

2. After concluding a thorough investigation of all missionaries now on the field, let the Board of Missions guarantee to the church the orthodoxy of all missionaries now on the field and those that may be sent out in the future, assuring the church that they are free from the taint of modernism. This suggestion is offered because I believe it to be necessary, if the Board of Missions would secure and maintain the confidence of Methodist people in the homeland; and if I were writing on educational matters, I would recommend a similar procedure to the Board of Education in its relation to educators in our institutions of learning—and for the same reason.

This article and these suggestions may not receive even a careful reading, much less prayerful consideration, by those most nearly concerned with the highest and best interests of the church, to say nothing of the kingdom of our Lord; but perhaps these words may contribute something toward molding sentiment which in its turn, may influence those of our leaders who have in hand the tremendous responsibility of shaping the future destiny of our great church and pointing the way for the onward progress of Methodism in the world, fulfilling the purpose of her founder in "spreading spiritual holiness over these lands!"

AN APPEAL FOR THE ORPHANAGE AT JACKSON.

The Methodist Orphanage of Jackson, Miss., belonges to the Methodists of Mississippi, and as president of its Board of Directors I desire that they should know and fully understand its financial condition. The home is doing a great and noble Christian work, and unless immediate aid is given the doors of this institution will be forced to close.

Three years ago the main building of the orphanage was found unsafe and was condemned. The two Mississippi Conferences instructed its Board of Directors to erect a new building and to issue bands to the extent of $125,000.

As is often the case, the new building, including its furnishings, cost $190,000—much more than was contemplated. The debt has been reduced to $165,000. This was nearly all done the first year after the new building was erected. Of this amount $115,000 is outstanding bonded indebtedness and $50,000 floating indebtedness, secured through the Capital National Bank of Jackson, Miss., which bank has been very kind and considerate of the home.

There were some eighty children who passed through the home during the past year. They carry about 175 in the home.

The children are being well fed and clothed and taught, and, as a whole, the home and its work can be pointed to with admiration and pride, but I am sorry to say that, if its friends do not respond more liberally than they have in the past two years, its doors will be closed.

The Conferences some years ago requested its preachers to give the basket collections once each month for the support of the orphanage, and this collection has taken care of the running expenses of the home, but I regret to learn that only forty or fifty per cent of the churches observe this request.

If this request was fully observed by all the churches it would very greatly relieve our embarrassment. I would request that our preachers throughout the bounds of the two Conferences call attention of our laymen to the distressed condition into which the home has drifted and see if fifty or more, besides others, can be found in each Conference that will contribute $100 each year for five years to the home, and give the name and address to our treasurer, W. M. Buie, Jackson, Miss.

Can we, as Methodists, afford to allow the doors of this great institution to close?

JOHN H. SHERARD,
President of Board of Directors.

TRINITY CHURCH, RUSTON, LA.

The first half of the Conference year has included a busy program, and marked some progress for Trinity Church, Ruston. Early in the year we had our annual campaign of evangelism in the Sunday school, which resulted in the reception of a class of thirty-four into the church on the last Sunday in March. Our revival meeting followed, in which Rev. W. E. Thomas, general evangelist, was the preacher and leader.

Brother Thomas did excellent and acceptable work, preaching earnest and effective sermons, and winning the hearts of our people. About fifteen members were added to the church, but the meeting had to close before it had fully borne its fruit, several adverse circumstances having delayed its movement. Altogether we received during the six months ending June 1, eighty members. Our congregations have shown some growth, particularly the evening congregation.

A comparison of our Sunday school attendance during a specified period of seven Sundays in April and May with the same Sundays last year shows an average of 516 this year against 490 last year, or an increase of about 5 per cent. Two local classes in teacher training have been carried on during the spring, one taught by the pastor in the "Principles of Teaching," and the other by Mrs. Savery M. Lewis in "The Pupil." These classes have helped to stimulate interest in our Standard Training School to be held in September, for which plans are being perfected.

In the special missionary effort in February, with a suggested quota of $635, we raised over $1,300, part of which was the gift of one member, for the support of a special missionary, and directed to the support of Brother Thibodeaux in our French field. The offerings of the church besides this have been directed to the support of Brother McCoy at Houma. In addition to this one of our members contributed a mission boat to the work in South Louisiana, making a total of $2,000 for special missionary enterprises.

We have made progress toward our church building enterprise, by the raising of more than $18,000 for the purchasing of the new site, and the property has been deeded to the church; perhaps the most beautiful and suitable site for a church in the city, with sufficient space for church and parsonage.

Counting our magnificent Easter offering of nearly $3,000, we have contributed to the Orphanage since Conference about $6,600. The total amount raised during these six months, counting our regular budget collections, is in excess of $30,000.

In co-operation with the other churches, we have arranged for a union meeting, Aug. 28 to Sept. 18, to be conducted by Howard Williams, the well-known layman evangelist, and we are looking forward to a great spiritual blessing to our community.

Yours fraternally,

W. WINANS DRAKE.

MEETING OF BOARD OF TRUSTEES SEASHORE CAMP GROUND.

The Board of Trustees of Seashore Camp Ground at Biloxi, Miss., met in the tabernacle on the grounds, June 16. Twelve of the eighteen trustees were present.

Several items of business of minor importance were transacted, but the two outstanding items of business transacted were: The authorization of the reopening of the Camp Ground School, and the appointment of a committee to devise ways and means preparatory to the founding on the grounds of a junior college, and the development of the grounds into an attractive site for summer assemblies.

All present were delighted to find that Brothers Girard, Sells, Sullivan, and Saucier, who were appointed at the meeting, May 3, for that purpose, had done their work well, and the tabernacle and the grounds were looking quite attractive. The ruthless hand of time and vandalism had battered the tabernacle considerably. Some of the walls were badly battered; some of the doors were off the hinges, others were hanging awry; about two hundred panes of glass had been broken out of the windows, the wiring was in bad condition, and most of the light globes were gone, but now, through the faithfulness of this committee, who did much of the work with their own hands, showing that they are really in line of true apostolic succession, descending from the great tent-maker of Tarsus, the tabernacle is in good repair, and looks like it really has some friends, and the grounds give unmistakable evidence that the keeper is on the job.

In this connection it may not be out of place for the writer to say he had the privilege of spending some time on the Camp Ground and attending a part of the Divinity School, which was in session at the time the Trustees' meeting was held. A large number of preachers were present, a large per cent of whom are undergraduates who have the wisdom and good judgment to avail themselves of this splendid opportunity of doing their undergraduate work in the best manner available. We older men remember the battles we had studying the course without the aid of a teacher, and then going up to Conference and spending a hectic day or two being examined on six or seven books in rapid succession, and we congratulate the young men of to-day because for them has been provided a much better way.

The association with the preachers, and a goodly number of the preachers' wives, besides large numbers of the laity who were enjoying the Divinity School, was very pleasant, but the great feature of the school was the series of lectures on "A Bundle of Old Letters," delivered by that matchless orator, peerless thinker, and most powerful preacher of the present age, Bishop Warren A. Candler. The thrill which I experienced as I sat at the feet of that great teacher, and drank at the fountains of his superior wisdom dispensed by a magic voice, in convincing argumentation, and forceful illustration, beggars description. Thank God for such men.

WHITWORTH COLLEGE NOTES.

Mr. Hawkins Golden, nephew of President H. G. Hawkins, spent two days at Whitworth this week as the guest of his uncle. Mr. Golden was en route from Harvard University, where he has just received his Master's degree, to El Paso, Tex., the home of his parents, Rev. and Mrs. J. J. Golden.

The Whitworth State Normal and Summer School is ending the second week, with 140 in attendance. The students, who are chiefly teachers of the surrounding counties, are much pleased with the director, Professor E. S. Bowlus, and the other members of the faculty, who are as follows: B. Frank Brown, H. F. Stout, C. H. Lipsey, and Misses Lula Stevens, Earline Atwood, and Frances Preston.

Among the visitors who have addressed the summer school in the college chapel are Miss Minnie Austin, State Music Supervisor, and Miss Fannie Cook, who made a talk on nature and bird life. Miss Cook wrote on the blackboard the names of twenty-three different kinds of birds which she had seen that morning in Brookhaven between the hours of 8 and 9:30 o'clock. Miss Austin was quite complimentary of the work done by Whitworth Colllege during the past session in teaching Public School Music Methods.

Miss Mamie Penn, A.B., 1927, is connected with the Whitworth office force during the vacation. She will be the librarian for next session, and expects during the lattter half of the vacation to take a course in Library Methods at Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn.

Miss Wincie Carruth, who received a Physical Education diplomas from Whitworth at the recent commencement, has a private class in swimming and athletics at the Whitworth summer normal, and Miss Bernice Dupree, advanced expression student of Whitworth College, has an enthusiastic class of Whitworth Normal students in Expression and Story-Telling.

Miss Vercy Henry, of Glenmora, La., a Whitworth student, is also assisting in the office work of the college.

Miss Wei Lien Wu, of Soochow, China, Whitworth A.B., 1927, is still at the college, and expects to leave for Columbia University about July 5, where she will study to obtain a Master's degree.

There will be given in Lampton auditorium during next session, instead of the usual Artist Course, three "superior" attractions furnished by Moreland-Brown, of Steinway Hall, New York. The names of the attractions are: "Three Wise Fools," a John Golden play; DeWillo Concert Company, and the Riviera Artists.

Mrs. Kate Barlow, matron of the Copiah-Lincoln Agricultural High School, is doing efficient service as matron of the Whitworth Summer Normal.

Among the new members of the Whitworth faculty for next session are: Miss Virginia Bourne, A.M. of University of Tennessee; Miss Dorothy Warner, B. S., in Home Economics of Hood College, Maryland, and Miss Pauline Lewis, A.M. of Baylor University.

NOTICE FROM BISHOP CANDLER.

Bishop Candler announces the appointment of Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, of the Greenville District, Rev. J. E. Cunningham, of the Greenwood District, and Mr. S. V. Wall, Lay Leader of Greenville District, as a special committee to distribute funds that may be given for the relief of churches and pastors in the flooded parts of the North Mississippi Conference. Help will be given, as far as possible, in proportion to needs.

Mr. S. V. Wall, Cleveland, Miss., is secretary and treasurer of the committee. All funds should be sent to him. Communications addressed to either member of the committee will receive due consideration.

J. E. CUNNINGHAM, P. E.,
Greenwood, Miss.

CONCERNING REV. H. T. YOUNG.

As has been announced in the New Orleans Christian Advocate, Rev. H. T. Young, of De Ridder, La., under appointment as general evangelist, has withdrawn from our ministry and united with that of the Southern Baptist Church. He has surrendered to me his elder's credentials and states that he has lost his deacon's credentials.

W. L. DOSS, JR., Presiding Elder,
Lake Charles District.

STICK TO THE FINISH.

One time when Henry Ford was asked if he didn't stand to lose a great deal of money if certain things went wrong, he said one should not think about things going wrong. Things go wrong only when they are started with the wrong idea, but they'll always go right if the fundamental idea is right.

"You must never, even for a second, let yourself think that you can fail," said Mr. Ford. "Our first principle is that failure is impossible. You may not get what you're trying to do right the first time or the second time or the tenth time or the one-hundredth time, but if you shut out of your mind the possibility of being licked, then you are bound to win."

The trouble with so many people is that they are good starters, but poor finishers. They get a good idea, start working on it, encounter obstacles, fail to receive the co-operation they expected, and they abandon their original plans.

No man can let himself be defeated time after time without being weakened. Character is developed by fighting a plan through to success and triumphing over obstacles. Any one can start, but only a person with character will stick to the finish.—Exchange.

Men can be moral without religion, but it remains to be seen whether a whole people can solve the problem of living together without the help of the most powerful force.—John M. Clark, in "Social Control of Business."

LEAVING HOME—SOME MEDITATIONS.

By Dr. O. E. Goddard, Foreign Secretary of the Board of Missions.

I wonder if anybody ever got entirely ready to start on a long journey. Be he novice or veteran, young or old, cautious or impulsive—did any one ever put all the things in he wanted to put in, look after all the business affairs that should be attended to before starting, arrange all domestic matters satisfactorily, send all the farewell messages that ought to be sent, get all the vaccination certificates needed, observe all the red tape incident to passports, and sit down at the last moment and say, "All things are now ready for my departure?" If there ever was such a person, he is a "sui generis," a "rara avis," a model of perfection that ought to be preserved and set up in a museum with this inscription, "Let all travelers go and do likewise."

Saying good-bye is a trying experience. One does not want to be "gushey" or "mushey" or too emotional on the one hand, nor too nonchalant on the other. He well knows that the parting may be final for this life. If it should be, a flippant attitude would be regretted. Yet no man knows when he kisses his wife good-bye as he goes to his daily task, whether he or she will live till noon. Why then be too serious when parting for a longer period?

What do one's friends and loved ones think of him? Steerforth, one of the characters of Dickens, who had a combination of qualities both good and bad, often said that he desired to be remembered as he was at his best. Steerforth had no monopoly of this desire. This class is legion. Indeed, all of us would like to be remembered at our best. We could wish that our weaknesses, faults, foibles and sins might be forgotten, while our stregnth, our altruism, our heroism, our deeds of love and mercy might live with them forever. Of course, this cannot be. Our friends and foes will remember us as we were. The composite product of the good and the bad, the strong and the weak, the altriuistic and the selfish will write themselves indelibly on the memories of those with whom we have to do.

As I am now leaving the Grand Hotel in New York for the steamship Munargo for South America, I regret that I have ever spoken a harsh word, that I ever did a selfish deed, that I ever put a drop of bitterness in any man's cup. I could wish that every word had been kind, every deed unselfish and every act an effort to put joy into some one's heart.

This visit to Brazil is in some measure different from the regular official visit of a foreign missionary secretary to a mission field. Mine is not wholly administrative. Indeed, the major purpose is not administrative but evangelistic. The Board of Missions at its last meeting resolved to make Evangelism the dominant note in all our mission fields in 1928. The primary purpose of my visit to Brazil is to help get this movement started. If I can help some on this line, it will be a genuine joy to me.

Soul-winning has been the ever-increasing passion of my life. I began my ministry with some evangelistic zeal. My fervor did not burn out with youth. During the twenty-five years of my pastorate, there was a steady increase in the number of persons received on profession of faith from year to year. My first pastorate had the fewest number and my last the largest. As a presiding elder, I made soul-winning the chief business of the district. During the four years that I served as Home Mission Secretary I was officially chosen to conduct the Centenary revival campaign. The great ingathering from this campaign, owing to the fidelity and efficiency of the leadership of our church, was a great joy to me. Now that I have been officially sent to promote Evangelism in our foreign fields, I am hoping that I shall have that same beautiful co-operation in this campaign that I had in the Centenary revival campaign. While Evangelism has always been the final objective in all our missionary endeavor, it is the purpose of the Board to re-emphasizes this in 1928.

The united prayer of the whole church at home and abroad is requested. We need a Pentecost in every mission field. We need the conscious presence of God at all times. Let us forget a thousand non-essential things and center upon this one thing —"The conscious presence and power of God in all our work." We are planning large things for God.

ARE CHRISTIAN PEOPLE DOING THEIR DUTY TOWARD ENFORCEMENT OF PROHIBITION?

Some Bold Facts Regarding Actual Conditions in This Country As Seen by a Man from China.

That many Christian people are not doing their duty toward aiding in enforcement of the prohibition laws is evident from the fact that in many communities where Christians predominate lawbreakers are allowed to carry on their nefarious work in making and selling intoxicating liquors. Unfortunately these Christians seem to regard this matter as no business of theirs, or for fear fail to report to the federal officers information that would lead to the arrest of the offenders.

Sometimes one from the outside is better able to discern actual conditions than those who have been here all the while and have become accustomed to surroundings. One of the great surprises of my life is the indifference of Christian people to the enforcement of prohibition. Since the writer was in America eight years ago there has been great improvement in conditions as relates to the use of intoxicating liquors. Since coming from China last summer I have seen only three persons who were intoxicated. When here eight years ago this many could be seen in a week's time. Yet it must be admitted that there is still much drinking privately and in secret, and that whiskey can be had too easily. Young people are being seduced to places where whiskey can be bought, and some of these young people—even girls—think it is "smart" to drink. This is deplorable.

The wets are doing all they can to encourage violation of the prohibition laws, as is well known. They realize that the success or failure of prohibition in our country depends on whether or not the laws are ultimately enforced. But Christian people do not seem to realize this. Indications are that the prohibition forces are as a rule making a faithful effort to enforce the laws, but can they do this successfully without the earnest co-operation and support of the Christian people?

A few days ago I was in a well known town of Louisiana to speak. A young man told me of a raid that had been made the night before on a bootlegger outfit only a few miles from the town. The prohibition officers found many gallons of whiskey and wine for sale there, and broke hundreds of bottles, arresting the bootlegger and his wife. The young man followed the officers in their car and watched the proceedings. He claims that there must have been a hundred boys and girls in the woods drinking or buying drinks, when the officers appeared. He said it was generally believed that the man took in no less than a hundred dollars a night, sales being especially large on Sunday nights.

When asked how long this had been going on, the reply was: "For months." And it was not in a swamp, but in the piney woods in a dwelling not far from the highway which runs out from the town. The people of the town are largely members of Christian churches, and yet, this man claimed, the place had continued operation for months almost under their noses. He stated also that the officers had to find the place themselves, by following the young men and women who were known to drink. I said, "But surely this is an unusual case." He replied, "Not by any means. There are at least a half dezen other such places in this community." He intimated that these, too, were known to the Christian people.

This bootlegger was a Mexican. He had made good money in Texas, we are told, and when arrested there paid his fine and moved over here. For the first offense only a fine is imposed. The bootlegger moves to a new place where his record is not known, and startes over again. His profit is so large that he can well afford to pay fines. These bootleggers get rich at their job. For the first offense they should be sent to the roads. Many of these undesirable people who are violating our prohibition laws are not thorough-going Americans, and a great many are foreigners. Should you look over this list of daily offenders published in the newspapers here in New Orleans, you would note that they are foreigners almost without exception. They should be deported by the government, or their citizenship withdrawn.

At another town visited one week later on Monday morning a fellow minister stepped into a pressing club to telephone, and found the manager and others sitting around a table drinking whiskey in open daylight. The proprietor apologized, stating that had he known a minister was coming, he would have set the whiskey aside.

That afternoon we were at another town three miles distant. On our way back we were talking about the incident just related when the driver of the car spoke up and said: "Why, over at the town just visited you can buy whiskey over the counter at any time of the day or night." I asked, "Why is the law not enforced?" "It is a Catholic town," was the reply, "and it is hard to enforce such laws there." Whether this is a just criticism or not, I am unable to say. I asked: "Do you people report these facts to the prohibition officers?" "Yes, sometimes we do," he said, "but little comes of it."

The past week I was in a well known Christian community in Mississippi. We were driving through some beautiful woods to my appointment Sunday morning. I remarked: "This beautiful, clear stream reminds one of a mountain stream.' The driver, who is a deacon, replied: "Yes, and you know that it is up that stream where several bootleggers make their whiskey." I asked: "Why do you not run them out?" He answered: "We should, but just haven't done it."

The information is to the writer only second-hand, but he proposes to give these reports to the proper authorities. Mr. O. D. Jackson, who is at the head of the prohibition forces in this part of the country, has a reputation in New Orleans of enforcing the laws, and has recently been promoted. If an earnest effort is not being made to enforce the laws in every quarter, then it should be brought to the attention of members of the prohibition forces from your district. It is the will of the people that the laws be enforced. Ministers of the gospel and leaders in our business organizations should be organized by Christian people where needed to see that the law is enforced. I understand that in many other communities conditions are just as bad, or worse, than those places named. Brethren, these things should not be.

We are sending missionaries to foreign lands, as we should do; but do you know that the whole world is looking to America to see whether prohibition will, or will not, succeed? If it succeeds, other peoples will try it. If it fails, we will not only lose ourselves; but it will be a step backward for the whole world. We are spending millions of dollars for law enforcement, and yet the law cannot be enforced unless Christian people give their earnest, active support to its enforcement. For fear, or lack of interest, people fail to report bootleggers, and yet if they were aware that some one was maliciously destroying homes by fire, or even systematically robbing the neighbors of their chickens, they would not hesitate to give information to the officers of the law, and then see that the law is enforced. Why do less for the preservation of our homes, the success of prohibition, and the saving of our young people?

THE GARDEN GATE.

Early and late, early and late,
Little Boy swings on the garden gate.

"It isn't a gate; it's a motor car!
I'm traveling fast, and I'm traveling far.
I toot my horn, and I turn my wheel,
And nobody knows how grand I feel."

Early and late, early and late,
Little Boy swings on the garden gate.

"It isn't a gate; it's a great big ship!
I'm off to the pole on a 'sporting trip.
I'll ride a white bear, holding on by his hair,
And I'll hurry him up with a whale-skin whip."

Early and late, early and late,
Little Boy swings on the garden gate.

"It isn't a gate; it's a big balloon!
I'm going to sail till I reach the moon.
I'll play with the man as hard as I can,
And I'll stir up the stars with a great horn spoon."

Early and late, early and late,
Little Boy swings on the garden gate.

"It's not a gate; it's"—off runs he,
His mother is calling: "Come in to tea!"
It's a wonderful gate, but it just isn't able
To turn itself into a supper table.

MAKING THE HOME OF TO-MORROW.

This topic is one far beyond my years and one that I am unable to discuss, but as I thought the subject over my childish mind flashed to my own home. As I think of its qualities, I know of no better foundation. It is founded on love and unselfishness. Love for God, love for each other, love for peace, quietness, contentedness, and unselfishness toward each other and our fellow-man.

I can fancy no perfect home without a Christian mother; one who can smile through her tears of sorrow; one who can bear her burden of everyday life with its many struggles, its many disappointments with a smile on her face and a song on her lips. One who can devotedly sing,

"Must Jesus bear the cross alone, and all the world go free?
No, there's a cross for every one, and there's a cross for me," and feel that her life is not broken by a few hardships. A mother who by a kind word, a smile, a little pat on my childish head can drive the darkest clouds away. Nothing but a life founded on Christ Jesus can have this influence.

Then there's the good old Dad to share your sorrows, your burdens and fill the home with joy. One who by his straightforward, clean living and daily walk in life scatters nothing but the best influence in actions, words, thoughts, and manners to the higher and best standards of living.

As mother and father, so are the children. It is not hard to decide what kind of a home and how it is controlled when you are able to watch the disposition and manner of children, for all depends on their training. One can decide easily whether they are controlled and taught by kindness, or by force, by tempest or by sunshine.

Selfishness is one of the greatest destroyers of a happy home. One selfish person can disturb the quiet and contentedness of an entire household.

The word "home" suggests to our mind a haven of rest, where joy and happiness prevail, where we love and are loved and are understood, where our lives are so entwined that our hearts may beat as one. Then, let us start to-day on our homes of tomorrow. Let's make the foundation, the solid Rock, "Christ Jesus," and build each feature of his sound material, love, kindness, patience, unselfishness, charity and obedience, and, as the years roll by and the storms may come and the tempest rage, it will not be shattered, no, not even shaken, for these qualities will stand the test, even to the end of time.

"Home ain't a place that gold can buy or get up in a minute,
Before it's home there's got to be a heap of livin' in it;
You've got to weep to make it home, you've got to sit and sigh,
You've got to sing and smile for years, you've got to romp and play,
And learn to love the things you have, by usin' 'em each day.
You've got to love each brick and stone from cellar up to dome,
For it takes a heap of livin' in a house to make it home."

TOM AND HIS WISHES.

A Fairy Story by Elsie Bludworth Davis.

Once there was a boy named Tom who longed to be rich. He would play in his back yard for hours imagining that a sack of rocks was a bag of gold, or that the fine horses and coaches which sometimes drove past his humble home belonged to him.

One day while he was playing and wishing for money, he chanced to spy a strange looking egg half buried in one corner of the yard. Digging it out carefully, he found that it was of a dark green color and about the size of a big goose egg. Holding it close to his ear, Tom shook the egg to see if he could hear anything. What he heard made his eyes fly open in surprise, for a little voice cried, "Let Me Out!"

"It must be a fairy," thought Tom. He broke the shell and out jumped a little man.

"Who are you?" asked Tom.

"I am a pixie," answered the wee creature. "A wicked fairy shut me up in that egg long ago. Because you have set me free, I will let you make one wish."

"Oh!" exclaimed Tom, looking about quickly and spying the sack of rocks. "I wish to have a bag of gold."

The pixie jumped three times, and pointing to the sack said, "There is your bag of gold."

Tom looked, and sure enough the rocks had turned to pure gold.

"But beware!" cautioned the pixie. "Do not tell any one who gave you the money or it will vanish. Just tell them that your grandfather willed it to you." With these words the tiny man vanished.

Tom felt guilty about promising to tell a story, but was very glad to have the money.

Some time passed and Tom wished for a fine palace, so he went again into the back yard, thinking that perhaps there were more of the strange eggs. Sure enough he found another egg like the first. Without waiting to see if a voice would speak, he broke the egg and out stepped another pixie.

"The wicked fairy locked me up, too, but now that I am free, I shall get revenge," said the imp.

"Aren't you going to give me anything for turning you loose?" asked Tom anxiously.

"If you will promise not to tell any one where you got it and say you don't know," replied the bad little fairy.

"All right," agreed Tom, for he was eager to get the fine palace. "Give me a fine palace."

The pixie jumped like his brother had, and immediately an elegant palace of pure white marble stood gleaming in the sun where the hut had stood before.

Tom was so glad that he ran all the way to the palace and spent the rest of the day admiring its beauty.

He thought that surely now there was nothing more for him to wish for, but after a few days he decided he wanted to go riding. What he most wished for now was a grand golden coach with fine prancing white horses to draw it.

"Maybe I can find another egg," he exclaimed, and running to the green spot in the yard dug and dug until he found the last egg and heard a tiny voice crying, "Let me out!"

He quickly opened the shell and let the pixie out.

"I know that you are a pixie and that a wicked fairy shut you up in the egg. Now I have let you out and I want you to give me a golden coach and six white horses," declared Tom, all in one breath, for he was getting very greedy.

"You are in a big hurry," answered the little man, eyeing Tom impishly. "But before I give you anything you must promise to tell people that the king in the next country sent you the coach and horses."

"All right," said Tom, who was so eager to go riding.

The little pixie jumped up and down three times, and there before Tom's waiting eyes appeared the most handsome coach and six horses that he had ever seen.

While he was riding he saw one of his friends, who asked, "Where did you get the fine coach?"

"The king in the next country gave it to me. You see, I stand in great favor with kings," bragged Tom, puffing out his chest.

That night Tom tossed about on his beautiful bed for a long time before he went to sleep. Then in a dream a little fairy flew down and stood on the foot of his bed.

"Who are you?" Tom asked.

"I am Truth," she answered, looking very sad. "You don't know me any more for you have been telling so many stories since you found the green eggs which the Queen Fairy shut the imps up in."

"But if I didn't I'd lose all these fine things," answered Tom.

"Are they making you happy when you tell such falsehoods to keep them?" asked the fairy gently.

"Well, I do feel kinder 'shamed for not telling the truth," confessed Tom, hanging his head.

"It is better to be truthful than to have riches," said the fairy, and vanished.

The next morning Tom felt very dissatisfied. He could not enjoy his wealth now, for the Truth fairy's words kept ringing in his ears.

After worrying about it nearly all day, he decided what he would do. Calling his fine coach and horses he started out to visit the people to whom he had told the falsehoods. One by one as he told them the truth he saw his fine treasures change back to the old things.

That night, although he slept in his old bed between cotton covers, Tom felt better inside, and in a dream the little fairy named Truth came to him again.

"I know you this time, Truth," said Tom proudly.

"Yes," smiled the pretty little creature, and because you told the truth even though you lost all your fine things, I am going to grant you three wishes."

Tom could hardly believe his ears. He wanted to be sure to make good wishes this time, so he thought carefully for some minutes then answered: "Dear fairy, I wish to be good, strong and wise."

"Because you have made such good wishes, I will also give you back all the pretty things you had."

Tom thanked the fairy most heartily, and went to his fine palace where he grew to be a good, strong, wise man and married the most lovely lady in the land.—Texas Christian Advocate.

DIRECTIONS.
All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial

FROM NEW ORLEANS TO ATLANTA BY AUTOMOBILE.

Some facetious writer has said something like this: "Those who can, do; those who can't do, teach; those who can't teach, preach; those who can't preach, teach preachers; those who can't do, teach, preach, or teach preachers, edit religious newspapers."

The writer finds himself wholly out of harmony with the sentiments expressed in the above quotation, for he is at once the editor of a religious newspaper (the New Orleans Christian Advocate) and at the same time temporarily engaged in the work of teaching preachers. He respectfully declines to be placed "below sea level."

In order to reach the scene of his labors in trying to teach preachers, it was necessary for him to make the trip from New Orleans to Atlanta, the seat of Emory University, one of the great educational institutions of the church. Trains run regularly between these cities, on convenient schedules and with moderate charges for transportation; but when one expects to spend several weeks in a new environment, one naturally wants to have at hand a means of transportation that will enable one to see what is to be seen in such leisure hours as may be available. Hence, travel by train was voted down and the trip by automobile decided on.

The editor had planned to leave New Orleans, accompanied by his wife and daughter, early on Friday morning, June 10. All necessary preparations were made in advance, the car overhauled and thoroughly lubricated, such packing done as could be done the day and night before, and arrangements made for an early breakfast and an early start. The family were up at 5 o'clock—only to find it pouring down rain! Who can ever describe the disappointment experienced when a journey thus carefully planned is thrown out of joint at the very beginning!

There was nothing else to do but wait for a change of weather. Happily, the skies began to clear about 10 o'clock, and by 10:30 it seemed safe to start. The route chosen lay by way of the ferries across Chef Menteur and the Rigolets, through Gulfport, Mobile, Jackson, Ala., Selma, Montgomery, Auburn, La Grange, Ga., and so to Atlanta; and the trip was thus made.

We suppose the trip was made fairly well on schedule time. Not being a "speed demon," we never planned to cover the 576 miles between New Orleans and Atlanta at the rate of 50 or 60 miles an hour—though the car we drive is supposed to be able to make that and even better speed. If we had been in a big hurry, we would have traveled by train and made the trip over-night. Thirty or thirty-five miles an hour is a safe, comfortable rate of travel, giving driver as well as passengers a little chance to see something of the scenery along the way. Anyway, that was the rate we fixed upon and adhered to. We expected to reach Atlanta sometime Monday, presumably in the forenoon; the fact that we did not arrive until the early afternoon made no particular difference.

Friday night was spent at Gulfport, in the home of Geo. L. Carley, the editor's brother; the second night was spent at the Albert Hotel, Selma; the third night was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. T. Sargent, relatives of the editor's family, in Auburn, Ala. There were no serious mishaps along the way. We had planned to spend the second night in Montgomery if we were not able to make it to Auburn by that time. Upon arrival at Selma late in the afternoon, a slight attack of illness made it expedient to remain there for the night. The editor can never forget the courtesy and kindness of the pastor of the First Methodist Church, Dr. C. C. Daniels, who so graciously called at the hotel, or of the distinguished medical group at the Vaughan Memorial Hospital, who ministered so cheerfully and so efficiently to his needs. Christian gentlemen, all of them! The only car trouble that developed was between Montgomery and Auburn—over-heating, due to a loose fan belt.

Atlanta is a great city. It has miles and miles of paved streets—very crooked, most of them, to be sure, but beautiful at that. It is hard for a dweller in the lowlands to realize that houses can be built very attractively upon precipitous slopes and in—or over—deep gulches. All the houses have cellars for furnaces, and there are those who contend that a gully lot is an advantage in that the excavation for the cellar has already been made. It is a great gift to be able to turn to good account what seem to be natural hindrances. There are many beautiful homes in and around Atlanta, some of them being attractively placed in the midst of "estates," in which all the features of natnrally rugged scenery are preserved. We have an idea that the possession of an "estate" hereabouts implies the possession also of a considerable store of sheckels—land is not cheap.

ANNUITY BONDS

SAFETY is the first requisite of an investment with a view to regular income.

ANNUITY BONDS have advantage over other investments in that they provide an income that cannot shrink.

YOU may in your lifetime without loss of income or any risk pay over to the Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, the amount that you had intended leaving in your will to be used in sending the Gospel "to every creature."

YOU may avoid taxes, various fees or any litigation in connection with your benevolent gifts which sometimes greatly reduce one's bequest. Annuity Bonds enable one to be the executor of his own will.

ALL THIS—and at the same time you enjoy during your lifetime an income that cannot shrink—an income that stands between you and want.

Protection Against Old Age

The business section of the city covers a considerable area, the retail district apparently being much larger than that of New Orleans. Skyscrapers are much in evidence, a good many of them being hotels. If all the hotels and apartment houses of Atlanta are filled to capacity—and we understand that they are pretty well patronized—there is many a family here that knows little of the delights of a private home.

There are many and beautiful churches in Atlanta, with some of a different kind. We worshiped the first Sunday at St. Mark, where Dr. W. L. Duren, formerly of Rayne Memorial, New Orleans, is pastor, being preceded by Dr. J. B. Mitchell, present pastor of Rayne Memorial. We met enough people to know that both the old and the new are held in high esteem. The congregation was larger than any we are accustomed to see in New Orleans.

Emory is a great university. It is unfortunate, it seems to us, that it should be so completely hid away in thick woods that passers-by would never dream that a great educational institution was close at hand. A beautiful group of marble buildings means nothing to the public at large because of the obscure location. We understand that plans are being considered for the construction of at least one adequate driveway through the campus. It is to be hoped that the plans will materialize.

Since our work is in the Candler School of Theology, we have thus far had little opportunity of meeting those engaged in other departments of the university; if they measure up, however, to the high standard of the theological faculty, the institution is well manned. Dean Parker, greatly beloved throughout the church, and especially loved and honored in Louisiana, has associated with him a group of devout, scholarly, loyal men, who are giving themselves unstintedly to the work of training for the ministry of the church as fine a set of young men as can be found, we dare say, in any similar institution in the land. It is an inspiration to come into contact with this competent faculty and this forward-looking group of young preachers. A confirmed grouch would find it hard to maintain his spirit of pessimism in such surroundings.

The climate of Atlanta thus far has proved to be materially different from that of New Orleans. This is not surprising, since the elevation is about 1,100 feet above sea level. The first three or four days we spent here were uncomfortably cool. The weather has moderated somewhat, but the nights are still cool enough to make light cover acceptable. A long dry spell has been succeeded by daily rains, and parched lawns and gardens are beginning to put on again the luxuriant garments of summer. We have neither seen nor heard a mosquito since our arrival. We sincerely hope that we are beyond the range of that pestiferous insect's habitat.

Delightul courtesies have been shown us on all sides, and we are looking forward to a pleasant summer. We wish the same for all readers of the Advocate.

Emory University, Georgia.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. Culpepper and Mr. Robinson will begin a revival meeting in Minden, La., July 3. Rev. Leon I. McCain is the pastor at Minden.

The Methodist Messenger of the First Church, Shreveport, La., reports an attendance of 200 in the Daily Vacation Bible School at that point.

Dr. R. E. Smith, of Centenary College, preached at First Church, Shreveport, La., on the morning of June 19, and Dr. W. W. Holmes preached at the evening hour.

Rev. W. H. Saunders, of Philadelphia, Miss., preached at Pascagoula, Miss., on last Sunday morning, and Rev. J. H. Sharp, of Childress, Tex., preached at the evening hour.

Rev. H. W. Rice, pastor of the church at Demopolis, Ala., and long-time director of the Seashore Divinity School, preached at Wiggins, Miss., on last Sunday morning.

Dr. Robert E. Goodrich, pastor Frst Church, Shreveport, La., has recently been ill and was not able to occupy his pulpit on June 19. We are glad to report that he is recovering.

The property of the Texas Avenue Church, Shreveport, La., has been sold and two lots purchased on Park Avenue, where a new church will be erected. Rev. R. T. Ware is the pastor.

Dr. R. H. Wynn is in the midst of a revival at Lake Charles, La., being assisted by the lay evangelist, Brother J. V. Reid. The meeting is creating interest and the congregations are good.

Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., presiding elder of the Lake Charles District, reports that a number of good revivals have been held in his territory and that it now appears that the district will report a decided gain in membership over last year.

The choir of Second Methodist Church, New Orleans, provided the music at the annual memorial service of the Druids in this city on the evening of June 24. Rev. A. M. Serex, pastor, sang a solo. Rev. R. H. Harper delivered the memorial address.

Rev. C. J. Thibodeaux, pastor of the Lafourche circuit of the New Orleans District, has been holding a tent meeting at Griffin, six miles below Lockport, La. This is in the "French Mission" section. We have not yet learned the results of the meeting.

We learn through Rev. J. A. Alford, our pastor at Rayville, La., that Mrs. S. H. Whatley, widow of Rev. S. H. Whatley, of the Louisiana Conference, recently had a fall and sustained serious injury. She is slowly improving, though suffering great pain, and it is hoped that she will soon be completely restored.

On June 20, Rev. W. C. Childress, pastor of the church at Mansfield, La., began a meeting at that point, the meeting being held under a large tent on the campus of Mansfield College, Dr. Goodrich, if Shreveport, the preacher, and Brother Otis Spinks the leader of song. This was designed to be a parish-wide meeting, and all De Soto pastors were expected to co-operate.

This fine and courageous message comes from Rev. J. A. Alford, pastor at Rayville, one of the Louisiana towns in the path of the great flood: "We are moving along nicely since the waters have departed. Our people are courageous and hard at work. Our losses are great, but the Lord is good to us, and with favorable seasons we hope to pass muster at Conference."

At Bossier City, La., the church is growing. Twenty-nine have been received into the church to date, sixteen upon profession of faith. The membership of the Woman's Missionary Society has grown from nineteen to thirty-two. The auxiliary is paying off the debt on the parsonage. Rev. Don E. Dulaney, pastor of the charge, has just completed the fourth year of the Conference course at the Seashore Divinity School.

There has been a great increase in the interest and attendance at Keithville and Stonewall, two of the churches of the Grand Cane (La.) charge. At Keithville the inside of the church has been given a new coat of paint. At Grand Cane the finances have been put on a better basis—the salary being paid regularly now on the first of the month. This is a great improvement over the old haphazard method in vogue in so many of our churches. Rev. J. B. Grambling, the pastor, has been one of the students in the Seashore Divinity School, just closed.

The Ruston District Sunday School Conference will be held at Simsboro, La., July 8. Those who attend will enjoy "dinner on the grounds" as the guests of the Simsboro, Antioch, Hilly and Salem congregations. Meetings will be held during the morning in the Methodist and Baptist churches of the town, we learn through the fine program given us by Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, the presiding elder. Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Rev. W. W. Drake, D. D., Rev. A. K. McLellan, Mrs. W. W. Holmes, Rev. D. B. Raulins and Rev. A. S. Lutz, D.D., will be the speakers.

A new road has been graded recently from the Skyline Drive at Mount Sequoyah down to the Mount Sequoyah Club. The grading of this new road will make the Mount Sequoyah Club within easy ten minutes, reach of the Mount Sequoyah Skyline Drive. The opening of this road will also make it one of the most interesting scenic features at Mount Sequoyah. It will pass within a stone's throw of the Mount Sequoyah girls' camp and in sight of the unique rock home of Mr. Keith. It is a part of the trail and touring features of the program of Mount Sequoyah.

One hundred and seventeen athletic coaches and prospective athletic coaches, representing colleges and high schools in Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Missouri, and Louisiana, attended the two-week coaching school which closed at Southern Methodist University June 18. Knute Rockne, of Notre Dame, and Walter Meanwell, of the University of Wisconsin, conducted the school, which, according to Dr. R. N. Blackwell, business manager of S. M. U., is but the first of a series to be held annually. Five members of the S. M. U. champion football team, including Gerald Mann, John Roach, Ross Love, Stanley Dawson and Chris Cortemeglia, were used in making up a demonstration eleven.

Ministers' sons in Yale University rank highest in both class rating and mental ability, as shown by recent analysis of returns from a student personnel survey of occupations of parents, conducted in the spring of 1926. Sons of ministers made the average mark of 79.6; lawyers' sons, 77.9; the combined professions of teaching and ministry, 77.8; medicine, 77.3; business, 76.1; engineering and science, 75.8; writing and artistic professions, 74.2; all others, 75.2. The mental test ratings were: Ministry, 63; writing and art, 62; law, 57; teaching, 55; combined professions, 55; medicine, 53; engineering and science, 50; all others, 51. In the number of hours devoted to study, it was found that lawyers' sons put in the longest hours, and sons of writers the shortest.

The tourist camp at Mount Sequoyah is rebuilt. Mount Sequoyah tourists will enjoy a thoroughly model and up-to-date tourist camp this year. The kitchen has been rebuilt, with eight feet added to the roof and length of the building. The entire kitchen has been screened in and wainscoated. A new sink, with double drain boards and running water, has been installed. Electric lights have been installed also, and the sewer system in the bath houses has been worked over. Sufficient wood for the entire season has been sawed and stacked near the kitchen. New sawdust makes the carpet in the kitchen. And the stove has been rebuilt. A larger camping space is available this year than heretofore, which will be of additional room and greater privacy to the tourists. The camp is thoroughly modern. A number of reservations have already been made for the tourist camp.

Recently the Daily Corinthian carried the following item concerning the First Methodist Church at Corinth, Miss., Rev. A. T. McIlwain, pastor: "Corinth is happy in welcoming home the boys and girls who have been away the past year preparing themselves for the tasks of life. Their home-coming is always a joyous occasion. Sunday morning at the First Methodist Church the service will be dedicated to these boys and girls who are the hope and joy of the people of Corinth, and the subject will be 'Home.' Doubtless the thought of home and those back there has been a driving power to these young people on more than one occasion while pursuing their studies. This service will be for the purpose of giving them assurance of the appreciation of their efforts. Jeff Cunningham, who is a student in Millsaps College and a member of the Glee Club of that school, and Frank McAmis, a student in Branham and Hughes School at Spring Hill, Tenn., and who has sung for the Nashville radio on numerous occasions, will appear on the musical program for the morning hour, singing: 'There Will Be No Disappointment in Heaven.'" Doubtless the special service proved a great blessing to the church.

THE JUNE MEETING OF THE SUNFLOWER MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION.

The Association met in the little city of Tutwiler with Brother W. S. Shipman as pastor-host. There were present of the preachers, E. E. McKeithen, J. C. Wasson, C. T. Floyd, C. L. Oakes, C. L. Rogers, W. J. Wood, W. L. Storment, J. J. Brooks, and H. P. Lewis.

C. L. Oakes preached, using as his text I Corinthians, 9:26.

A pretty full program was given us by the committee for discussion; but the one subject that was given the most attention was, "The Pastor and the Parsonage—how Should he Keep it, and How Should he Leave it?" Every preacher present seemed to want to say something on the subject; and a lot was said. One would judge that all these preachers present always leave the parsonage home in apple-pie order, and try to do something to improve it both inside and out. Some of the sisters present put in a say, and many doleful accounts were given of carelessness and negligence on the part of some in caring for the parsonage home. When the chairman thought we had discussed the subject enough, some one remarked, "We ought to have this discussion at an Annual Conference, where some fellows would get the benefit of it." If we all follow out our expressed views, we of the Greenwood District believe in caring for and improving the homes provided for the preachers of the district.

We had with us some young people who had recently attended the Epworth League Assembly at Grenada, and when we brought up the subject, "Are the requirements for an 'A' grade Epworth League too great?" these young people told us that they did not think so.

The ladies of the church provided a bountiful dinner and served it in the Sunday school room of the church, which was greatly enjoyed by all present. One of the real attractive features of our meeting is this social hour together at the noonday meal.

Our next meeting will be at Webb, with C. L. Rogers as pastor-host, on July 12. "Mister" Shipman will preach. We are inviting some leading laymen of the district, J. H. Foreman, Dr. T. B. Holloman, R. L. Ward, and T. C. Bradford, to discuss for us, "Criticism favorable or unfavorable of modern preaching."

"What style of preaching is most effective?" will also be discussed.

Two preachers' wives, Sisters McKeithen and Floyd, graced our June meeting and added to the success of the day.

District conference at Cleveland, July 14-15. We need a great coming together after the things we have suffered and felt in the flood. We desire very earnestly a deeply spiritual and brotherly fellowship. A strong program will be prepared and a full attendance is anxiously desired. Brother S. V. Wall, our district lay leader, is anxious for a full representation of our charges in their lay leaders. They will be given right of way in the morning session of the second day. Now, let daily prayers be made for the presence of the Divine Spirit upon our sessions.

We want live issues and vital discussions. Whatever may from time to time engage the thoughts of men, our personal relation to the issues of moral and spiritual life stand first with all deeply thinking men. All the salvation we can or shall ever know is involved in knowing that at the center and heart of all is intelligence, law and love, and these are working for man's good.

Woman's Missionary Society

The sixth meeting of zone 4, Seashore District, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was held in Poplarville, Miss., in the church, with thirteen representatives from the Lumberton Auxiliary, five from Columbia, five from Picayune. The meeting was called to order at 10:30 a. m. by Mrs. Ruby Thornhill, zone chairman. Rev. Mr. O'Neal, pastor of the Poplarville church, welcomed the ladies and led the devotional. After song and prayer, he read the sixteenth chapter of the Acts of the Apostles, using as his subject, "Lydia and Woman's Opportunities of To-day." We were then given an unusual treat—a piano duet by two of Columbia's Epworth League girls, Misses Francis Austin and Sue Barns.

Our thoughts of the day were especially centered on China, and "The Obligation of Our Young People to the Youth of China" was forcibly impressed upon us both by Mrs. H. H. Hinton's paper on that subject and by Rev. Mr. O'Neal's comment on same. Having received his information from those who are making their homes in that country and giving their lives for those people, and from one of China's own young ladies, we felt as though we were receiving a message—an appeal—from the very heart of China. Mrs. Bunker and Mrs. West, new members from Picayune, sang a duet, to the delight of all. Mrs. Baugh, of Columbia, had a wealth of information on "Our Work Among the Mountaineers." This paper brought to us the realization of the fact that there is yet work to be done at home. Following a hymn the morning session was brought to a close by a chain of sentence prayers, especially remembering China, our workers there, and Mrs. Tom Ford, Conference Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society, who is at her brother's beside. The prayers were led by Mrs. Stevenson, of Lumberton, and closed by Rev. Mr. O'Neal. The meeting was then adjourned for lunch, which was so deliciously prepared and beautifully served by the Epworth League girls in their League room.

The afternoon session was called to order at 1:15 o'clock, and opened by singing a hymn. Mrs. O'Donnell, of Poplarville, read an article, "Christian Missions and China's Christ," from the Christian Herald, written by a Baptist minister. Rev. Mr. O'Neal agreed with the writer and spoke of him and the article in most complimentary terms. Before the discussion on the Seashore Camp Grounds, Mrs. Thornhill asked Rev. Mr. O'Neal to tell us something of the facts about the Seashore Camp Grounds and the opinion of the last district conference with reference to disposition of the grounds. Rev. Mr. O'Neal stated that resolutions were adopted by the Conference to the effect that all beach front property be held, but that the property north of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad be sold and the proceeds used to improve the beach front property. A round table discussion on the subject was led by Mrs. Stevenson, of Lumberton. During the course of discussion it was suggested that the auxiliaries endorse the resolutions adopted by the district conference. Mrs. Thornhill, acting on this suggestion, appoitned Mmes. Adams, Austin and R. J. Williams, with Mrs. O'Donnell as chairman of the roslutions committee.

A letter was read from Mrs. C. W. Cockron, president City Misson Board of the Meridian Wesley Community House. This letter was concerning the plans of the board to enlarge and improve the Wesley House in Meridian, and concerning the birthday party they were to have May 31, and asking that all gifts be cash offerings for the building fund. It was agreed upon that this letter be acted upon in the individual auxiliaries, as it was too late at that time to do anything for the day set. It was suggested that instead of having the next zone meeting we would all go to Biloxi and meet at the Wesley House there, one morning about the first week in August, and spend the day studying the work being done there. This to be done if the Columbia auxiliary approves, as Columbia auxiliary extended their invitation to the zone to meet with them for the third quarter meeting. We were told that the Wiggins auxiliary has expressed a desire to come into zone 4. This was generally discussed, and the desire to have Wiggins auxiliary become one of us was made known. Mrs. Thornhill asked the secretary to get Mrs. Tom Ford's opinion on the question, and the zone will be governed accordingly.

Mrs. O'Donnell, chairman resolutions committee, then read the resolutions of the committee, and they were adopted as follows:

Resolved, That we, the members of zone 4, Seashore District, Mississippi Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in conference assembled at Poplarville, Miss., May 31, 1927, do unconditionally endorse the resolutions adopted by the Seashore District Conference, held at Pascagoula, Miss, March 30 and 31, in which they placed themselves on record as being opposed to the sale or other disposition of Seashore Camp Grounds and alienating or diverting the proceeds of said ground to any purpose than that of improving and developing said Camp Grounds, and that we, with the said Conference, request the Mississippi, Alabama and Louisiana Annual Conferences, now sole owners of said grounds, to dispose to the best advantage, that part of said Camp Grounds which lies north of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad, and invest the proceeds thereof in beautifying and developing that part of the grounds lying between the Louisville and Nashville Railroad and Mississippi Sound.

Resolved further, That a copy of these resolutions be furnished the Board of Trustees of Seashore Camp Grounds, the Seashore District Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society, and a copy be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

Signed: Mrs. M. F. Adams, Mrs. W. H. Austin, Mrs. R. J. Williams, Mrs. W. H. O'Donnell, Committee.

A rising vote of thanks was then extended the Epworth League girls for the lovely luncheon. The afternoon session was then brought to a close by singing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." Rev. Mr. O'Neal pronounced the benediction.

MRS. W. S. HELMS,
Secretary, Zone 4.

A WORD FROM HOUMA MISSION.

We have twelve of the school children in the home this summer, and may find it necessary to take in a few more while the present conditions last. If we keep the children any length of time we feel that it will be best to employ a teacher and have them do more summer school work.

Next week the Vacation Bible School will open, and we expect to have a big crowd of eager, expectant children in the home for the two weeks' period. This is such a happy time for them, and mean so much to the work that we haven't the heart to call it off, unless it becomes absolutely necessary, though times have been in such an uncertain state for so many weeks that some of the older folks are lacking in freshness and enthusiasm that will have to be revived before the children come in.

ELLA K. HOOPER.

ZONE MEETING AT DERMA, MISS.

The first zone meeting of these auxiliaries of the Aberdeen District was held in the Methodist church at Derma, Thursday, June 9, 1927, with Mrs. Joe L. Davis, of Houston, presiding, the District Secretary absent on account of illness.

The meeting was opened by the song, "Blest Be the Tie."

Rev. Wallace, of Calhoun City, gave the devotional, reading the second chapter of Acts, having as a theme, "The Oneness of Spirit in Saving of Souls." After prayer led by Rev. Baird, Rev. Wallace, Mmes. Smith and Crewtherd sang, "Give Me Thine Heart."

A cordial welcome was extended by Mrs. Harden, of Derma, and responded to by Mrs. J. C. Sneed, of Pontotoc.

The readiing, "Why Have a Missionary Society," was given by Mrs. Rutledge, of Houston. She stated as its object, the training of members for service, thus raising the spiritual standard of life. With its social con-

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

"Purges" and "Physics" Bad for Old Folks

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to "regulate" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each dose helps to strengthen the bowel muscles, shortly establishing natural "regularity." It never gripes, sickens or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

If past fifty, buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE and just see for yourself.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

By Rev. C. D. Atkinson.

Rev. Clem Baker, of the Little Rock Conference, who is to teach in the Rochelle Standard Training School next week, will be in Alexandria on Sunday morning where he will visit the Sunday schools and epeak to the adult department.

* * *

We are interested to note that Mrs. W. W. Holmes, of Shreveport, has completed the requirements for her Gold Seal Certificate in Standard Training work and will soon receive her diploma.

* * *

Mrs. R. C. Culpepper, formerly State Elementary Superintendent, has offered her summer home near Camp Grant Walker to Dean and Mrs. Smith for their stay during the Training School at Rochelle, in which they will both teach, and, having accepted the hospitality of the Culpeppers, the Dean is bringing his family for a real vacation of fishing and swimming and a general good time.

* * *

The Vivian Standard Training School opened at 3 o'clock in the afternoon of last Sunday, with an attendance of more than a hundred interested workers. The following pastors were present with their co-operating leaders: J. M. Alford, Guy M. Hicks, A. M. Shaw, W. F. Roberts and David Tarver. The instructors in the school were Dr. Cleanth Brooks, Dr. W. W. Holmes, Rev. H. L. Johns, and Mrs. R. E. Smith.

After the school session we reached Shreveport in time for the evening service at First Church, where Dr. Holmes filled the pulpit, as Dr. Goodrich is on the sick list.

While in Shreveport the writer enjoyed the hospitality of the district parsonage. We recently mentioned in these columns that we gave to Brother Lee, of Homer, credit for the finest preacher's vegetable garden we had seen. We want now to credit Dr. Holmes with the finest flower garden we have seen, and this is easily understood when one finds the Doctor rising at 5 o'clock on a June morning in order to map out his fall gardens.

* * *

Rev. Robert A. Cross, the young pastor of the Washington circuit, writes as follows. "Enclosed you will find check for Sunday School Day offering from Fisher Church. * * * The program was splendid and it was a great success."

* * *

There is much interest being shown in the Standard Training School to be held at Rochelle, in which Rev. Clem Baker, of Little Rock, will teach a State-wide course on Sunday School Management. Rev. J. W. Faulk, of Bonita, writes that he is planning to take this training, as will many others interested in the Cokesbury schools.'

* * *

The writer appreciates an invitation from Rev. B. D. Watson, of Clinton, to attend the Sunday School Day program there on the 25th inst., at which time there will be a good program and good speakers.

On the 19th the writer reached Mooringsport in North Caddo Parish in time for Sunday school, and secured the hearty co-operation of the leaders there in the Standard Training School at Vivian. The parsonage folks made my stay pleasant. Brother Shaw, the pastor, is in fine favor in Mooringsport. At 11 o'clock I had the pleasure of speaking in Oil City, six miles from Mooringsport, using as a theme that faithfulness is the crowning virtue of Christianity, basing this on Revelation 11:10: "Be thou faihtful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The success of the Cokesbury work so far this summer has been most gratifying. Mr. Hull has taught two classes with unusual success. The pupils turned in good work and the influence on the school community was unusually fine. We are glad to give out this information because there are still a few communities that could get Cokesbury Schools if they would ask for them.

Mr. Branton conducted a Cokesbury School at Edwards. This class was largely attended by the workers of the Edwards school with the finest record up to now of any Cokesbury School reported. Every teacher in the school present. We are most happy to send this good news out. Mr. Branton and Miss Hattie Lewis will be in a Training School at Osyka as you read this note. Pray that their success will be just as fine here as at Edwards.

Miss Jones spent the first week in June at the Epworth League Assembly, where she had the privilege of teaching First Department work. She reports a most happy time, for which we are thankful and glad.

The next week was spent in a Cokesbury School at Port Gibson, and the rest of the month has been spent in superintending a Daily Vacation Bible School at Galloway Memorial Church at Jackson, Mississippi. This has been a full month for her.

The month of June has been spent by your superintendent in a Leadership Class at Richton, where he had a good attendance with a promise of sixteen examinations. The Richton Sunday school bids fair to be a Standard B Type Sunday school in a short time. Brother Black is going well with his people, and Brother Stevens is making a progressive superintendent. Blessings upon these workers.

A Standard Two-Teacher Cokesbury School was conducted at Port Gibson with twenty certificates delivered. Three schools were represented in this school. The work of the school was good and the interest was fine. We hope that this school will become a permanent organization. We have just closed a One-Teacher Cokesbury School at Tylertown. We had a large attendance of the workers with twelve credits issued. This is their first school and all are planning to make it permanent and plan for it a year in advance.

We have to date twenty-two names on our Sunday School Day Honor Roll and last year at this time we had twenty-three names on the Honor Roll. This is a very faborable comparison considering the difficulty through which part of our Conference has come. Still we need more money and more schools on the Honor Roll.

Please remember to pray for the work and the workers that the work may be done in a way that may be pleasing and acceptable to God.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The past week I had the joy of teaching a class of twenty-five at Bethel, on the Sardis circuit. We used "The Small Sunday School" as a text, The rains poured down, the people are in the grass, they are working from early to late, but in spite of these obstacles about twelve did the work required for credit. Rev. R. E. Woodfin is pastor. He and his wife took the work with their people. From his parsonage to the church it is close to fifty miles. We drove out in his car every evening and worked from 7 to 9 every night. The people made a partial survey. The following facts were brought out: Of 68 person, 31 attend Sunday school, 14 belong to the Methodist church, 9 to the Christian, 8 to the Baptist, 37 are not connected with the Sunday school, 20 are not members of the church. The workers agreed to complete the survey and tabulate the results, they agreed to begin the missionary program at once, they will observe Sunday School Day, and take the Program of Work as their guide. It was a wonderful week in every respect, the people are heroic, loyal and are willing to be led. They all agreed to study the Bible regularly and pray more constantly. It was a great week.

If half our Sunday schools would observe Sunday School Day and send the offering to Rev. H. P. Lewis, Ruleville, Miss., we could help the circuits in a hundred schools do the kind of work described above. It is a mystery to me why men do not care to help reach the people with the "good news" of the gospel. A large number want to do what needs to be done in establishing the kingdom of God in the community where they live, but they do not know how. May God give the courage and the strength to help us press on until the last church has been reached with the message of our Lord. I pray that the people and pastors may uphold the young men and women who are working with us in teaching the parents and teachers how to teach religion to the rising generation.

Words of appreciation by the class that studied Bible under Rev. A. B. Davidson during our Conference Training School, June 6-11.

1. "We feel that the General Sunday School Board of our church, working with our Conference Board, is doing real constructive work in providing these training schools for the better equipment of the leadership of the church. This class is very deeply appreciative of these advantages and finds these schools to be very helpful in doing the work of the kingdom of God. The Christian fellowship at this school is a real joy, inspiration and means of grace to every worker.

2. "We feel that this class in Bible Study has made a real contribution to our knowledge of God's Word as revealed in the life of Christ, and has made the will of God clearer, showing unto us the more perfect way of life.

3. "We feel deeply appreciative to our instructor, Dr. Davidson, who has so clearly presented the facts of the life of Jesus, exalting him as 'the way, the truth, the life.' We thank Dr. Davidson for his untiring labors in our behalf." Signed by the class.

EPWORTH LEAGUE, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Report of the Resolutions Committee.

Whereas, the sixth annual Assembly of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League has been such a splendid success, not only because of the fine attendance and spirit of the Leaguers, combined with the sympathetic interest of the faculty, but also because of the kindly and efficient co-operation of others; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we thank the city of Brookhaven for all courtesies shown, especially thanking Hoffman's drug store for the fine and friendly way they have favored Assembly members.

2. That we thank Dr. Henry G. Hawkins, President of Whitworth College, and the board of trustees for granting us the use of college plant for assembly purposes.

3. That we most heartily thank Mrs. H. G. Hawkins for untiring efforts in behalf of the Leaguers, and particularly for the splendid condition of the grounds and dormitories.

4. That we especially thank Rev. Robt. Selby, Rev. J. L. Neill, Rev. J. L. Decell, and Rev. B. L. Sutherland for bringing us such beautiful and inspirational messages at the platform hour.

5. That we most heartily thank Rev. B. L. Sutherland for the helpful messages brought us at morning watch.

6. That we are indebted to Miss Helen Sells for her excellent services as recreational leader of the assembly.

7. That we thank the chaperones and Conference officers in their efforts in our behalf.

8. That we wish to compliment all delegates and visitors for the wonderful co-operative spirit that has prevailed throughout the assembly.

Respectfully submitted,
W. J. DAWSON.

SIXTH ANNUAL EPWORTH LEAGUE ASSEMBLY, JUNE 6-10, 1927.

Report of the Plan of Work Committee.

We, your Committee on Plan of Work, submit the following recommendations:

1. That a meeting of the Conference officers be held early in the year 1928 at some time and place determined by the President of the assembly.

2. That we continue our efforts to raise the $1,000 of the Whitworth endowment, $273.29 of which has been paid.

3. That a District Institute be held in each district during the year, and in order that more convenient dates might be given each district, we endeavor to secure workers for these intact unsurpassed, how could the church be without a Missionary Society?

WOMAN'S MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The discussion of "Why Have We a Zone Meeting," by Mrs. J. R. Priest, of Houston, brought out the point or organizing societies where there are none, thus interesting people in the same purposes, same aims and benefiting and helping one another in wroking together.

The song, "Come Thou Almighty King," was sung by the Calhoun City Auxiliary. Advice and ideas for zone meetings were advanced by Rev. Baird, of Pontotoc. He stated that the fellowship and association of getting together as workers of God gave us a greter determination to be better workers and better women.

Mrs. Dodds, of Houston, demonstrated how every cultured, busy, rich, and poor woman and every young woman has a place in the Missionary Society.

"Stewardship of Personality," by Mrs. Jacks, of Houston, was an appeal to use our personality and talent for our God.

The Young People's department, represented by Mrs. W. Davis, illustrated, "If we tax our own luxuries we will be surprised at our revenues."

Of the eight auxiliaries five were represented: Houston, ten; Calhoun City, fifteen; Woodland, five; Pontotoc, nine; Derma's not counted.

An interesting discussion, led by the auxiliaries represented, was very helpful. Suggestions on how to improve the societies were made. Mrs. Lee Wilson, of Pontotoc, spoke on the development of leadership and the furthering of the interest of public health. After a song, Rev. Hollingsworth dismissed the morning session with prayer.

The afternoon session opened with a song, after which Rev. Hollingsworth gave the devotional, reading the sixth chapter of Galatians, theme being, "Bear Ye One Another's Burdens." Followed by prayer by Rev. Wallace.

The topic of law enforcement was ably discussed by Mmes. Kennington, Wilson and Evans, urging Christian women to vote, and vote for capable officers.

A rising vote of thanks was extended to Derma for her royal enthusiastic entertainment.

Mrs. Sneed invited the third zone meeting to Pontotoc. This invitation was accepted, the date to be announced later.

After a song, Rev. Baird pronounced the benediction.

MRS. C. W. DAVIS, Secretary.

NORTHERN END GRENADA DISTRICT.

The district missionary meeting for the northern end of the Grenada District was held in Coffeeville, Miss., Friday, May 27, 1927.

When the delegates arrived they found the church beautifully decorated with fragrant flowers and ferns and a most cordial welcome was given to all by the ladies of the Coffeeville Society. The morning devotional service was led by Rev. W. L. Robinson, pastor of Coffeeville. Mrs. E. A. Collins, president of the Society, in a few well chosen words, gave all the delegates and visitors a hearty welcome.

The morning session was given over to reports from the adult societes and the report of the District Secretary. These reports were all good, showing that much earnest work has been done during the past year. A song by Mmes. Boswell and Coleman was much enjoyed. Beautiful music always gives inspiration to a meeting.

A most delicious lunch was served at the noon hour—served to about eighty people at the church. After the lunch there was an hour of social intercourse. Then the business of the conference was resumed.

The afternoon devotional service was conducted by Mrs. Paul Sisk, of Greneda. Mrs. H. H. Boswell had charge of the children's program. A most interesting program was given by children from Holcomb, Grenada, Holly Springs and Water Valley, and the reports from these societies were fine.

Mrs. Wade Turnage, of Water Valley, had charge of the Young People. She gave a most interesting talk on the work of the young people, and the young people from Coffeeville, Grenada College, and Water Valley put on a fine program and gave splendid reports of the work done by their societies.

We were greatly indebted to the Juniors and Young People for their fine programs and splendid attendance. There were forty-three Juniors and fourteen Young People present.

Rev. S. A. Brown told of conditions at the Orphans' Home and of the fine work being done there for our boys and girls.

Mrs. Eugene Cole, of Durnat, presented Bible and Mission study.

The afternoon session was closed with prayer by the presiding elder, Rev. E. S. Lewis.

MRS. A. W. STOKES,
District Secretary.

CHILDREN'S MEETING AT SHELBY, MISS.

The Greenville District meeting of the Children's Missionary Society and Young People's Missionary Society was held at Shelby, Miss., June 16, 1927, the morning session being devoted to children's work, and the afternoon session to Young People's work.

In the absence of Mrs. J. M. Hooper, Conference Superintendent of Children's Work, Mrs. Wm. D. Smith, of Rosedale, had charge of the program.

Opening song, "Thy Kingdom Come;" welcome, Gertrude Wilkinson, Shelby; response, Kate Wells, Duncan; devotional, two Shaw Juniors; song, "We've a Story to Tell the Nations," Shelby Juniors.

The following societies gave very interesting reports: Alligator, Bobo, Boyle, Clarksdale, Cleveland, Duncan, Gunnison, Merigold, Shaw, Shelby and Rosedale. After the reports the following numbers were given:

Reading, Mildred Perry, Merigold; Daily Vacation School, Mrs. W. D. Smith, Rosedale; song, Merigold Juniors; reading, "The Challenge of Youth," Allen Wyse Burton, Alligator; song, Boyle Juniors; reading, "Just Suppose," Sylvia Baskind, Bobo; song, Gunnison Juniors; presentation of pennant to Shaw Juniors by Mrs. Campbell; reading, by Clarksdale Juniors, "Nellie's Missionary Gift."

Mrs. Campbell made a motion that we express our regret at the absence of Mrs. Hooper by a letter to her. Mrs. W. D. Smith, of Rosedale, made a few remarks to Shelby for their hospitality. After a song the meeting was dismissed for lunch, which was most graciously served by the ladies of Shelby.

The prgoram of the afternoon meeting was as follows, under direction of Mrs. W. H. Ratliff, Conference Superintendent of Young People's Work, Greenville District:

Opening song, by audience; devotional, by Rev. Mr. McCorkle, of Shelby; prayer, Mrs. Ratliff; minutes, Mrs. Perry, secretary pro tem.; welcome, Shelby; response, Shaw.

Reports were given by Clarksdale, Merigold, Pace, Rosedale, Shaw and Shelby.

Miss Julia Stevens was introduced to the audience.

Reading, "Six Love Letters," Mary Hopson, Clarksdale; song, "Japan," Alligator Young People; Young People's standard of excellence, discussed by Merigold and remarks on it; duet, Clarksdale Young People; song, Pace; "Value of Senior Camp," Rosedale; reading, "A Cluster of American Beauties," Elizabeth Burton, Alligator; solo, Clarksdale Young People; address, by Miss Julia Lake Stevens, explaining the Young People's and Epworth League's correlation, also explaining the use of the Young People's special and some of her work in Japan; hymn, "Lead on, O King Eternal," used for consecration service; dismissal, Mrs. P. W. Smith, Alligator.

MRS. P. W. SMITH,
Secretary, Pro Tem.

Read of Other Women Who Found Health

Brooklyn, New York.—Mrs. G. Hegmann of 35 Central Ave., was in a run-down condition and could not do her housework. She could not sleep at night. Her story is not an unusual one. Thousands of women find themselves in a similar condition at some time in their lives. "I found your advertisement in my letter box," wrote Mrs. Hegmann, "and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got relief." Mrs. Hegmann also took Lydia E. Pinkham's Herb Medicine and Lydia E. Pinkham's Pills for Constipation, with good results. She says, "I am recommending your medicines to all I know who have symptoms the same as mine, and to others whom I think it will help. You may use my statement as a testimonial, and I will answer any letters sent to me by women who would like information regarding your medicines."

There are women in your state—perhaps in your town—who have written letters similar to this one telling how much Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped them.

The Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass., will gladly furnish other women with these names upon request.

REVIVAL AT LUCEDALE.

We began our revival at Lucedale on the third Sunday of last month, and continued for ten days. Rev. J. L. Carter, of Mount Olive, did the preaching, to the delight of all our people. My choice this year as last was of a faithful and consecrated pastor who was doing in his own charge the things that needed to be done here. I had been with Brother Carter in meetings before, both in his charge and mine, in fact, I have known him from boyhood, and felt that he was the helper whom we needed. We were in no wise disappointed in the service that he rendered, and were pleased beyond measure in the fact that we had the sort of meeting that we had desired and prayed for before he came.

His sermons were earnest, thoughtful, spiritual, and constructive, mainly addressed to the membership of the church, which made up in this instance ninety-five per cent of the congregation, and resulted in the deepening of the spiritual life of those who heard him. We had a splendid attendance, both day and night, in spite of the fact that our farmer friends were exceedingly busy and the canning factory here was running day and night.. Five different prayer groups met each day, in which eighty per cent of those present took part in the prayers, many of them for the first time. This work still goes on, and in the Sunday school classes and the Epworth Leagues sentence prayers are had at nearly every service, participated in by most of those present. Two persons were received into the church on profession of faith.

The song services were led again this year by Mr. A. B. Goff, of Lucedale, who spared us time from his regular employment to help us in this part of the service. Singers from the whole community co-operated with him in a very helpful way. Those who have heard him sing know that there are few if any better song leaders than Alf Goff. We are indebted to him for much of the success of the meeting.

Sincerely,

J. B. CAIN.

Lucedale, Miss.

LOUISIANA COUNCIL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

The Louisiana Council of Religious Education, which is the officially accredited agency of forty Protestant denominations for the building and promoting of a co-operative program of religious education for Louisiana, announce that despite the overflow conditions that have prevailed in the State, the summer camps for boys and girls that they maintain at Forbing, La., eight miles south of Shreveport, on the Kansas City Southern Railway, will operate as usual, beginning the first part of July.

The first camp will be the Camp of the Guiding Spirit for girls 9 to 14 years of age, opening with supper Monday afternoon, July 4. Some of the outstanding leaders in this camp will be Mrs. R. T. Glassell, of Belcher, La.; Mrs. J. E. Locke, of Shreveport; Mrs. W. F. Tietje, of Roanoke; Miss Ruth Proctor, of New Orleans; Mrs. Ireta Simons, of Fort Worth, Tex.; Misses Anna Beth and Mary Brandle, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mrs. J. B. Mitchell, of Monroe; Miss Susie M. Juden, of New Orleans; Miss Fannie Norman, of Rayville; Mrs. Briscoe Carter, of Alexandria; Mrs. Peggy Garnett, of Monroe; and Miss Kathrine Robinson, of Forney, Tex.

The campers attending will, in addition to the swimming and recreational program, have courses in Morning Carols, Famous Pictures, Dramatics, Hygiene, World Friendships, Map Making in sand, drills and stories of brotherhood.

The other camps will be held as follows: The camp of the Four Life Lights for Girls 15 to 24 years of age, July 18-30; the camp of the Shining Path for boys 9 to 14 years of age, Aug. 1-13, and the camp of the Upward Trail for boys 15 to 24 years of age, Aug. 15-27. Due announcement of the leaders in each camp will be given by the Council from its headquarters at Forbing, La., as quickly as they are secured. Mr. Van Carter, the general secretary of the Council and director-in-chief of the camps, states that the indications are that the record of 250 campers in attendance at the 1926 camps will be surpassed.

Hot Weather Dries Out Your Kidneys, Liver and Bowels

Perspiration carries off body moisture and the liver and bowels become dry and constipated. Then—biliousness, headaches, sour stomach; the heat makes you drowsy and lazy, and your skin breaks out with pimples and boils.

Don't take calomel. That's wrong—calomel is mercury—a dangerous drug. It jars the liver and cleans the bowels, that's true. But the damage it does to them, ugh! It crashes into your system like a charge of dynamite and makes it numb. It stifles the muscles of the stomach and bowels, takes YOU a day to recuperate and no telling how long for your bowels.

All you need is Dodson's Liver Tone. Take a spoonful at night and you wake up feeling great. It doesn't upset you, but cleans you out good. You don't lose a day from your work and you can eat anything you want.

Get the big bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone from your nearest store. They all have it. Keep it in the house so you will have it handy to take nights before going to bed.

stitutes from within our own Conference. It is further recommended that group meetings be held wherever possible.

4. That our President represent us at the Presidents' meeting to be held in Birmingham, and in case he is unable to attend, he be empowered to name an alternate; and that our Conference Secretary-elect represent us at the Junaluska Assembly.

5. That the President of each chapter designate one person as publicity agent for the chapter, and, whenever advisable, that the Epworth Era agent be appointed to this position.

6. That we urge that the Leagues of the Conference continue to contribute $1 a month to the Back Bay Mission until the indebtedness is paid off, sending contributions through the Conference treasurer.

7. That, in view of the increased missionary budget and the condition of work in the field, we urge each chapter in the Mississippi Conference to make a pledge for missions.

8. That we request the Annual Conference to increase our appropriation.

9. That we endorse the change in name of the Intermediate League to the Epworth Hi League and urge the pastors and Leagues in attendance on this assembly to aid in putting this change into operation at once.

10. That we endorse the plan of a Conference Hi League camp and urge attendance.

11. We heartily rejoice over the completion of the consolidation of the Junior Epworth League and the Junior Missionary Society into the Epworth Junior Society. We urge the co-operation of each Leaguer in putting this plan into effect in his own church.

Respectfully submitted,
O. S. LEWIS, Chairman.
FRANCES HARRELL,
Secretary.

ELEVEN LEAGUES OF THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE RATED 100 PER CENT EFFICIENCY.

Broad Street Church, Hattiesburg, Has Three Leagues to Make the Grade.

At the assembly recently held at Whitworth College the grading committee found that eleven Leagues had rated 100 per cent efficient, and on the last night of the assembly President J. H. Weems awarded the Gold Seal to these Leagues. Those receiving the Gold Seal were: Magee, Mendenhall; First Church, Laurel; Galloway Memorial, Jackson; Capitol Street, Jackson (Senior and Intermediate); Broad Street, Hattiesburg (Senior, Intermediate and Junior); Gulfport, First Church, Scooba.

Intermediate League Name Changed to Epworth Hi League, and Junior League to Epworth Junior Society.

At the Epworth League Assembly our attention was called to the change in name of the Junior and Intermediate Epworth Leagues. With the change of names it will be necessary to organize these under new charters. The Epworth Hi League will include the girls and boys of high school age from 13 to 17 years of age. The Junior Epworth Society will include those from 7 to 13, and is under the direction of the Woman's Missionary Council. If you wish any more information about the changes made in these organizations you may write either Miss Berta Nall or Mrs. J. L. Neill for further information.

Don't forget the Epworth Hi League camp to be held at Camp Dantzler, Aug. 28 to Sept. 3.

Gulf Coast Union Meets at Main Street Church, Biloxi.

On Friday night the Gulf Coast Union met at the Community House opposite the Main Street Church at Biloxi. Wesley Memorial League was awarded the banner because they had six of their nine members present at the meeting and had paid their mission pledge.

L. C. Corban, of the Main Street League, led the devotional exercise and took for the basis of his talk the parable of the talents, and made an application of it to the League officers and members. Glenn Rutledge led in prayer, and all joined in singing, "Help Somebody To-day."

At the business session that followed Glenn Rutledge presided. The Handsboro Leaguers were introduced to the Union, as it was their first time to attend meetings. A report of the League work was given by a member from each League represented. Of especial interest was the report of Dana King, who called to our attention the fact that Gulfport League had done "something big." This was the wedding of two members of their cabinet, Mr. Anderson Netterville and Miss Anna Gould Rhodes, to be solemnized on Wednesday, June 29.

The Union decided to comply with the request of Rev. Mr. Sells to take charge of two of the services to be held during the Seashore Camp meeting. The president to have charge of one, and L. C. Corban. The District Secretary was present and presented certificates of efficiency to three Leagues: Ocean Springs, 80 per cent; Wesley Memorial, 90 per cent, and Gulfport, 100 per cent. He also extended an invitation to the Union to meet for a picnic with the Tri-County Union on the Fourth of July. This invitation was accepted and a committee appointed to meet with a committee from the other Union and arrange the details of the picnic.

At the conclusion of the business session Miss Rush directed several interesting games, after which delicious refreshments of sherbet and wafers were served to the hungry young people present.

The next meeting of the Union will be held at Wesley Memorial Church, Biloxi.

Moselle League Gives Splendid Program—"The Essential of the Sabbath."

The editor of this column was fortunate indeed in being able to attend a meeting of the Moselle League Sunday. The subject was "The Essential of the Sabbath." Miss Hardis Grayson was leader. Miss Marie Grayson led in prayer. Those discussing the essentials of a Christian Sabbath were Misses Inez Porter and Marion Grayson and Mrs. Carr. After the program the leader led a discussion on questions pertaining to the right observance of the Sabbath. After this the editor told about the recent assembly at Brookhaven.

This League is small, but we appreciate the privilege that was ours in attending this devotional program.

OBITUARY.

In the town of Simsboro, La., Oct. 14, 1899, a baby girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. E. Ledbetter. They named her Ruth. She was their first child. She lived until May 8, 1927. She is survived by her parents, one brother and three sisters. She was a double cousin to my children, so I was with her often and knew her well. She was a rare person in that she was good, so good that I do not remember ever seeing an unpleasant look on her face, or hear her speak an unkind word. Her voice was sweet and winsome. She joined the Methodist church in Ruston in childhood. She loved the good and pure. She knew but little of the wrongs of this world. She associated with the pure and good. If one had thoughts or words that were otherwise they were not for Ruth. She was an invalid for several months before her death. She loved prayer and often had her mother read the Bible to her. She was a person of wonder but of faith. She rendered no complaints. All was done for her that human hands and medical skill could do. So sweet a flower could not endure here long. She has been transplanted to the garden more beautiful to make the home-coming sweet for her loved ones. "She knew whom she had believed."

Some Very Terse but Exceptionally Emphatic Statements of Praise

The most vital and dynamic book on preaching that I have read in many years. —Bishop E. D. Mouzon.

No finer expression has been made in the full light of the modern world of the heart of John Wesley's experience and gospel than this book.—Paul B. Kern.

The author deals with the question of certainty and finds the answer in an experience of God in and through the historic Christ.—Gilbert T. Rowe.

This is a vital book. The theme is an old one, but the treatment is unusually fresh.—Franklin N. Parker.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

THE BAPTISTS HAVE THE RIGHT IDEA.

However much we may differ from our Baptist brethren as to doctrine and polity, we must give them credit for a most forward-looking effort to make more effective among their members the great program of church work they have undertaken.

We have had occasion once or twice to call attention to the fine circulation the Baptist Message, the official organ of the Baptists in Louisiana, has throughout the State. Recently the denominational authorities have launched a larger move to increase the circulation of all their papers throughout the South. They have set as a goal the securing of at least sixty per cent of their membership as subscribers to an official Baptist paper, realizing that this is one of the best ways known of developing an intelligent, active, and loyal constituency.

We think the Baptists have the right idea about the matter—and we have the idea, too, that they will put it into effect. We wish the Methodist church would become possessed of the same notion.

THE EXTRAORDINARY AND THE COMMONPLACE.
